TRINITY CHURCH NOTES

(Too late for last issue)

The A.Y.P.A. met on Monday evening, Dec. 28th, for the purpose of the election of officers for the coming year. After all business was transacted, Arthur Arch took charge of the nomination. The election resulted as follows:—

President—Albert Lovatt.
Vice-Pres.—Arthur Arch.
Secretary—Ruby Sheppard.
Treasurer—Hilda Haddon.
Local Council Representative—Len Lee.

After the election, progressive court-whist was played, and the winners were Mrs. Brighty, Hec Wright and Mary Crozier. With the presenting of the prizes, and the serving of lunch, a pleasant evening was brought to a close. Don't forget the next meeting, January 11th, 1937.

On Tuesday evening, Dec. 29th the officers, teachers and scholars of the Sunday School enjoyed the annual Christmas gathering. The hall was appropriately decorated for the occasion. At 6.30 the members sat down to a lovely hot supper, after which a short programme was put on by the children, including recitations and solos. Singing and games were conducted by Arthur Arch after which candy and oranges were distributed to the children.

A happy and prosperous New Year is extended to all the members of Trinity Church and it is hoped that as many as possible be out on the first Sunday of the new year to partake of the Holy Communion and to give their thanks for the many blessings given them during the past year, and for a continuance of them during the coming year, which we are about to begin. We hope to see you out on Sunday morning, January 3rd.

The Open Column

The scribe of the Open Column takes a great deal of pleasure, this week, in offering congratulations to the Review on its golden anniversary. More than a few humans drop off the mortal coil before their fiftieth birthday, and the task of keeping a newspaper alive is fraught with more difficulty and annoyance than that of having to raise even the quintuplets. What with debtors who won't pay, and creditors who make the editors pay, and the awful indifference of the public to efforts on its behalf, there is little, if any thanks, in being an editor.

If the editor insists that his subscribers pay for their paper, the subscribers rise in arms and cancel their subscriptions. If he doesn't, he may starve to death, and nobody, save his wife and the people to whom he owed more money than he could pay, gives a hoot.

If he puts a piece in the paper about Mr. Jones, Mr. Jones doesn't like it because the editor failed to give him about five dollars worth of free advertising. If he doesn't put the piece in the paper, Mr. Jones is hurt. If the paper fails to carry an item concerning Mr. Smith, Mr. Smith says that the editor doesn't know how to run a paper, and has no news instinct. Would Mr. Smith call the paper and give details of the item in question? He would not. He isn't paid to do it.

The job of being editor of a country newspaper has so many angles that an ordinary man, with an average intelligence, could spend his whole life trying to be a good editor, and still not make the grade. He would get no credit from his reading public for his efforts, either. The semi-rural editor must know all the gossip about everyone in his township. If he doesn't, he won't know just which subjects to avoid in writing up his constituents. And if he does mention something that might be construed as a guarded reference to a scandal 'way back in 1869, another subscription goes phut.

The editor of a big city daily can slam anyone he wants in his editorials. He knows very well that if the person slammed comes 'round to the office to raise a dust, the injured party will never, never in a hundred years, penetrate to the editorial sanctum. And if an irate person did break through the guard that surrounds the holy of holies where the city editor takes his pen in hand, the editor can always duck out the back way, and have the irate person referred to a sub-editor.

But in the country, most editorial sanctums consist of an untidy desk jammed into the space between the press and the type rack. A disgruntled customer can shoot in the front door, tear into the print shop, and collar his man before anyone has a chance to ask his business or his intentions. Editors probably owe their existence to a certain fleetness of foot and tongue.

And even the friends of the country editor inflict a certain amount of care on the toil-worn editor. They remind him that they are friends, then casually suggest that he run a five-dollar ad for them this week on the strength of their lifelong friendship. The editor, being a man of dauntless patience, runs a dollar ad, and charges the thing up to profit and loss. He is much too wise to take the friendship down to the grocery store, and charge five dollars' worth of groceries, just for friendship. Friendship doesn't work both ways, for an editor.

And then there is the other friend who has nothing to do, and does it with a pen, writing long screeds for the local paper, using a poor grade of paper and ink, and using both sides of the paper. If he were told that a bare, blank space would look better in the newspaper than his effusion, he would renounce his friendship at once. So the editor goes on, year after year, printing bilge (including this column) that has no business to appear in his sheet, with the only hope in sight the possibility that he may outlive the writer, and write the wasteful scribe's obituary.

Now, when a paper can outlive fifty years of that sort of thing, there must be something to it. And there is, every 31st of November, or thereabouts, a bright spot in the life of the editor; when someone comes into the office and out of a blue sky, throws off an unbiased unsolicited compliment. This is what wills off most editors, because it happens so seldom they are not used to it, and the shock is apt to prove fatal.

JUVENILE HOCKEY

(By Simpson and Sampson)

At a meeting of Streetsville Juvenile Hockey Club it was decided that they would enter the Toronto Hockey league. A dance and a concert will be held in the near future. These functions will provide plenty of good entertainment and at the same time you will be helping the Hockey Club in its campaign for funds. The entry fee will be raised by donations as it has to be paid at once.

The following committee were appointed, for dance, Mr. Arch, Mr. Lee, Mr. Evans; for orchestra, Mr. Potts, Rev. Jones, Mr. McArthur.

St. Andrew's S. S. Observe 102 Years

For one hundred and two years the Anniversary Services of St. Andrew's S.S. were held, when the old year was leaving, and the new year beginning.

What changes there have been. But the Willing Workers were never weary. Whenever anyone was called away from their work in the Church there were always recruits from the Sunday School to take their places. The elders were always graduates from the Sunday School.

One of the pleasantest things to remember in the Anniversary Services is how the two churches joined together, and on Sunday night, Jan. 3rd, 1937, to see the minister, Rev. Mr. Fraser, and Rev. Mr. Jones, United Church minister, conducting this Anniversary Service.

Blest be the tie that binds, our hearts in purest love,
The fellowship of kindred minds is like to that above.

It was a blessed service that never will be forgotten. Mrs. Greig sang a solo, "The Gift."

On Monday, Jan. 4th, the annual hot supper was served, which everyone enjoyed.

Then a delightful program was given by the following talent: Mr. and Mrs. Kilgour, Port Credit; Mrs. Drummond, pianist, delighted the audience with solos and duets; Miss Ward, Brampton, elocutionist, charmed both old and young, every selection was full of humor and so well rendered. Then came the play in one act: "Let There Be Light." Introduced by Miss Reba Weylie in the following words: Ladies and gentlemen, this play, which we now present, was first produced at Greenwich Village theatre, N.Y. city. The setting of the play is in a poor peasant's cottage high up on the mountain side. 'Tis Christmas Eve, and according to an age-old village tradition, candles shining from all the windows save this one cottage on the hillside. Within the darkened room brooding before the fire-place sits a lonely and embittered old man. He has lost his wife, his little crippled daughter, Nellie, and his soldier son, David, does not return from the war. And what is more he has lost his faith in God. Father Ambrose, the village priest, visits him. Azariah tells him that unless God sends his children back he cannot believe in a Heavenly Father. Father Ambrose leaves Azariah to his bitter thoughts.

A knock is heard at the door; first Nellie and then David returns. And this fact we want you to remember, Nellie and David are missionary characters. Our one wish, that we may interpret to you the value of this truly beautiful play.

The members of the caste are:
Azariah—Floyd Marlatt.
Father Ambrose—Rev. J. Y. Fraser.
Nellie—Cora M. Woodruff.
David—Orval Schnick.
The Waits.

The Play

Azariah—Fools, fools, fools, with their prayers and their incense and their God. If I could I would silence their big mouth bell forever. Candles burning in all the windows, in the valley. Two windows shall be dark tonight, mine. Curse those bells, curse them, curse them.

Then a step is heard crunching through the snow, then a knock, and stamping snow off his feet. 'Tis Father Ambrose, saying, will you let me in? Azariah, what do you want of me? Ambrose, a little warmth and just a word or two

Azariah I do not care for words from anyone— I have no warmth to spare

Ambrose, let me in for old time's sake, when we were boys together. Azariah—I know what it is you want with me, but I want to tell you frankly, no words of yours can change me. Ambrose, God be with you. Azariah, do not call on the blessing of God in this house. Ambrose, though you deny him, my brother, still he is here near you. Azariah—not here, not any place, there is no God. Ambrose, still embittered, how I hoped the days as they lessened your first sorrow, would bring a healing to your stricken heart. Your old belief is only stunned by sorrow, brother, it will some day reawaken. Azariah, you, a man of reason, you who should be so wise, do you still believe in a divinity, in an Almighty Father? Ambrose, I never doubted. Azariah, you well know how grimly brother slaughtered brother, staining the earth with innocent young blood. You who watched our boys march by in pride and strength, never to return, you who have seen the enemy's stout of triumph and seen the women starved to death, you who know the unspeakable side of war. Can you still think there is a Father in Heaven? Would you or I treat our children the same; if there is a God in Heaven his heart is made of stone. But I prefer to think there is no God. Ambrose, I know how deeply you have suffered. I know that one by one your dearest have been taken, but still I reckon your greatest loss, the loss of your belief. I cannot bring you

Our Golden Jubilee Year

The Review has Completed Fifty Years of Continuous Publication—Changes that Have Taken Place in the Village Since 1887.

With this issue The Streetsville Review completes fifty years of continuous publication. The paper was started in January, 1887, by Messrs. Bell and Watson, who brought the plant here from Dundas, Ont. After three years, A. R. Fawcett of Flesherton, bought the business and ran it until January, 1894, when V. A. Statia and O. R. Church took it over. After five years of this partnership, Mr. Statia left town and O. R. Church has been sole editor and proprietor since 1899, nearly 38 years. He was apprenticed to A. R. Fawcett in 1893, which means that he has been connected with The Review for nearly 44 years.

The first editor of the paper was Mr. J. B. Mack, and later Mr. F. B. Cummer.

The Review was first printed in Frank Morgan's storehouse, which stood at the rear of what is today the Carload Groceteria. Then the plant was moved to a small brick building on the corner of Queen and Tannery Streets. Its next home was one block farther south, the corner of Queen and William Streets, now W. E. Watson's store and telephone central. In June, 1896, just 40 years ago, Statia and Church bought the property where the paper is now published and the plant was moved again.

We have enjoyed the respect and patronage of the people of Streetsville and district as well as that of our many readers at a distance, all through the years, and hope to continue to merit the same for many years to come.

Prior to 1887, Streetsville had a paper known as The Weekly Review, which was issued from 1846 to 1866, by the late Solomon Barnhart. It was the first weekly newspaper printed in Ontario between Toronto and Windsor. The editor was the Rev. R. J. Macgeorge, Rector of Trinity Anglican Church.

Weekly Papers Disappearing

During the past fifty years, many weekly papers have ceased publication in the district round about, as follows: Brampton, The Times and The Peel Banner; Oakville, The Star, when A. S. Forster, publisher, died. Later, this paper was started up again, but last week it ceased, and was taken over by The Oakville Record, which is now known as The Record-Star. Gerald Mitchell started a weekly in Oakville, but after a precarious existence, it too, passed the way of all papers which do not receive the support of the locality in which they are published. The Milton Reformer passed with the passing of its publisher, the late Richard White. Orangeville used to have three weeklies, now only one—The Banner.

Oakville, Orangeville and Milton are now one-newspaper towns, and this is what one big weekly has to say about present conditions: "Where a few years ago, two papers could prosper in a small community, to-day only one can exist, and in many instances the single newspaper is having a hard time to exist."

During those fifty years, every business in town has changed hands, except one, the only person living here now, who was in business in Streetsville in 1887, being Mr. William Couse, who came to the village in 1882, when he started to deal in coal, bees and honey, later going into grain and seeds, and finally giving up the coal business. The next oldest business man is the publisher of The Review, who has been a resident of Streetsville 54 years.

Streetsville was incorporated in 1858, fifteen years before the Town of Brampton, and Streetsville had a weekly newspaper 27 years before the Brampton Conservator turned out its first issue. One way that Brampton got ahead of Streetsville was that it was chosen as the County Town, when Streetsville should have had that honor.

Churches

There have been many other changes in the half century of Streetsville's history. During that time, Trinity Anglican Church has had nine Rectors, from Rev. William Fletcher, in 1887, to Rev. R. J. W. Perry, recently resigned. St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church has had ten pastors, from Rev. James Murray, in 1887, to Rev. J. Y. Fraser. The Methodist Church has had fourteen pastors, with many college students assisting, from the time of Rev. W. R. Barker, in 1887, to July, 1925, when the United Church came into existence. Rev. T. D. Jones is the present pastor, and the charge includes Eden Church. Until a few years ago, Meadowvale and Britannia Churches were part of the Streetsville circuit.

St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church was in charge of Rev. Dr. J. P. Treacy, of Dixie, for a number of years and now Rev. James Egan of Brampton is the Parish Priest.

Sports

There has always been plenty of sport in Streetsville, namely, lacrosse, football, baseball, indoor and outdoor bowling, and we even had a golf club in 1907, when Frank Morgan was president. Cricket, lawn tennis, hockey, horseshoes, etc., have also been indulged in.

Fifty years ago, Robert Graydon was postmaster and he held the office forty years. He passed on in 1920, and H. F. Staley has been Postmaster several years.

Notes From The First Issue of The Review

Streetsville had a municipal contest on Monday, John Graydon was elected Reeve by a majority of 36 over Wm. Webb. On election night a procession was formed, headed by our brass band, and a bonfire on a sleigh. The participants serenaded the Reeve at his home and were treated to an oyster supper. Mr. Graydon made a speech and the procession was reformed. It passed through the streets and halted in front of Tom Campbell's hotel, where the Reeve again addressed the assembly. The councillors for 1887 were: J. G. Beaty, Thos. Goodison, Jos. Brookbank and Wm. Taylor.

The wedding is announced on Dec. 29th, 1886 of Milly, daughter of Mrs. James Williamson, Trafalgar, to Mr. John Teskey, of Medonte. The minister was Rev. William McConnell, of Craigvale.

Following are trustees for Streetsville Public School for 1887: R. G. Brown, G. H. Falconer, J. B. Beynon, W. Taylor, T. K. Beaty and John Graydon.

Music

Streetsville had a good Brass Band in 1887. The first issue of The Review says, "Streetsville Band is probably the best band in Canada. Its members are all good musicians and their prize trophies are numerous. On New Year's Day they serenaded The Review both at the office and the editor's residence."

Village Council

Twelve men have filled the office of Reeve since 1887. The usual length of time served was one year. Those who served longer terms were: R. H. Greig, three years; W. Andrew, three: F. W. Morgan, three; W. Taylar, five; Dr. Bowie, five; C. H. Falconer, five; John Graydon, seven; and O. R. Church, ten.

Societies

During the past fifty years, many fraternal societies were organized; some blossomed for awhile and then faded away. Those societies which had insurance in connection, were short-lived, for when rates were raised, the members started to drop off, and eventually the lodge disbanded.

Those which have withstood the test of time are: Independent Oddfellows, since 1873; River Park Masonic Lodge, since 1877; Loyal Orange Lodge, No. 263, one hundred years, being organized in 1837. In 1916 L.O.L. No. 290 was amalgamated with No. 263. The Orange Young Britons are still in existence. The first lodge was organized in 1878. Peel Chapter No. 96, Order of Eastern Star, was organized in June, 1922, and is still going well.

Streetsville had a troop of Boy Scouts and also the Girl Guides, but neither are active now.

Streetsville Overseas Veterans Club was organized Dec. 20th, 1928, and is going strong. This year they have erected a fine new hall on Church street.

Streetsville Public Cemetery was started in 1891 and all protestants have a right to bury there.

Jeanie Gordon Lodge No. 464, L.O.B.A., was organized in April, 1922, and is still full of life.

The Junior Farmers and Junior Institute are very active, and we also have a young Hy-Landers' Club.

Streetsville also has a Branch of the Women's Institute; a Reading Club, a Branch of the Upper Canada Bible Society; Bridge, Euchre and Whist Clubs; Conservative, Reform, and U.F.O. Clubs; Men's and Women's Lawn Bowling Clubs, and besides the numerous social events the time of the ladies and gentlemen is pretty well occupied.

Oh, yes, and we must not forget to mention the Toronto Township Agricultural Society, which has held its annual fall fair in Streetsville every year for the past forty years.

Taken altogether, Streetsville has over forty organizations of different kinds.

High School

Since 1887, nine gentlemen have been headmaster of our High School, from A. B. Cook, B.A., to C. P. McArthur, B.A., at present time. During those 50 years, only one lady has been principal namely, Miss M. M. Lang, 1916-1919.

Older Families

Among the names of the families who flourished here fifty years ago are: Allen, Atkinson, Beatty, Brookbanks, Brown, Caslor, Cook, Davidson, Dracass, Falconer, Fulton, Gardhouse, Gill, Glendinning, Goodison, Graydon, Irvine, Lealie, Jones, Morgan, McClintock, McKeig, Owen, Rich, Redding, Robinson, Rutledge, Scruton, Sterling, Street, Taylor, Wilson, Wright, and many others. Descendants of some of these families still reside in the village.

STAR RUBY

By Louise Jerrold

Synopsis of Story so Far:—
Albertine Tevans, alone in the world, works in a department store. She meets Dennis Maxwell, young jewelry salesman, who shows her considerable attention. One of Albertine's fellow workers says she has heard that Dennis got into some sort of trouble with his firm, and Albertine notices that he behaves very mysteriously. He speaks one night of being on the lookout for a sandy-haired man with a drooping eyelid. Out of a clear sky, Albertine's rich great-Aunt Celia, whom she has never seen, writes to her, asking her to visit her. The night before she is to leave, Dennis slips something into her hand to keep for him, then dashes away. It is a ruby!

CHAPTER III.

Albertine gasped. The jewel in her hand must be worth a small fortune! She had read about star ruble, and she knew that she was looking at one now. How had Dennis happened to be carrying anything of such value? In terms of his little car and his scale of living, it didn't make sense.

And why had he asked her to take care of it? Why hadn't he put it in the vault at his store for safe-keeping? Unless — Albertine inhaled sharply—unless the stone didn't belong to him! She discarded the thought immediately. But of what was he afraid? Of what was he always so watchful?

She stared nervously as the lowered blind of her open window flapped in the July breeze. Ridiculously enough, the night seemed of a sudden to be full of peering eyes. She dropped down on her bed and tried to think of a hiding place for the ruby where it would be safe until morning.

For, of course, she simply could not keep it after that. She would ask Dennis to come and get it before her train left tomorrow. She would tell him that the responsibility was too great.

She tilted her hand so that the light fell on the smooth, rounded surface of the ruby, in the heart of which was a star. It was lovely. It was fit for a queen. It must be very valuable. Was there some connection between this gem and the secret something that had been worrying Denny?

She stood up slowly. She would have to find a hiding place. On the dresser was a powder puff. Slitting it an inch, she dropped the jewel inside, then sewed the puff up again, and put it under her pillow. The ruby would be secure until morning.

She spent a restless night. She dreamed of Dennis—that he was in danger. In the dream, there was a man with sandy hair and a drooping eyelid, like the person Dennis had thought he had seen. And there was a girl—Carrie Williams—who kept saying, "Watch your step with that guy . . . He got into trouble . . . trouble. . . trouble."

Albertine awake, trembling, her heart pounding. She slipped her hand under her pillow for the powder puff. The ruby in its covering seemed to burn in her hand like a live coal.

After that, she slept only fitfully, until seven, which was her customary rising hour. She thought, with a wry smile, how she had looked forward to the luxury of sleeping past that time this first morning away from the store. And now—she could not. She was too nervous and worried.

At eight-thirty she telephoned Tanman-Roan, but only the janitor answered. At nine o'clock, she tried again. This time, the switchboard girl took her call. No, Mr. Maxwell was not in . . . No, he wasn't expected . . . He had taken the midnight plane to New York.

Albertine hung up slowly. Denny had said that he might have to go to New York, so that news wasn't surprising. What she could not understand was why he hadn't told her that he was leaving last night. It could only be because, for some mysterious reason, he hadn't wanted her to know. He hadn't, of course, anticipated that she would try to reach him at the office.

And the ruby—she would have to keep it now.

Her train left at ten o'clock. She had bought a seat in the chair car, and settled down to a magazine. But she stared unseeingly at the printed page.

Where, she thought miserably, had her thrill of anticipation gone? She had looked forward so eagerly and excitedly to this trip. But now, the thrill had disappeared. It had vanished, she decided, with the knowledge that Dennis had flown to New York without letting her know. Dennis was in trouble. She was sure of it. That was why she was hating the extra miles the train was putting between them.

Denny. Just saying the name to herself made her heart beat faster. Oh, she loved him! And in his arms, with his lips pressed hard against hers, she had believed that he loved her, too. It was all so confusing. She leaned her head against the back of her chair and closed her eyes. What had he meant when he had said he hadn't the right to kiss her?

Would he write to her? She hoped so. She recalled momentarily how startled he had seemed, how queerly he had spoken, when she had told him where she would be. She laid her hand over the powder puff which was pinned beneath her dress. He would have to write to her about the ruby, anyway.

She wondered about Aunt Celia. Her letter, with its invitation to come to Tevansville, had seemed cordial, but Albertine remembered that her mother had said that Celia Tevans was a tyrannical old woman. Still, it was more than twenty years since she had disinherited her nephew, Albertine's father. Maybe she had changed. Maybe she was lonely now. And being lonely was a desperate, lost sort of feeling. Albertine knew.

Albertine was the only passenger to get off the train at Tevansville, and there was apparently no one to meet her. She waited a minute uncertainly, then walked to the end of the platform to make sure.

She saw a young man in shirt sleeves with a police star pinned to his shirt, sitting astride a motorcycle, one foot on the ground. He tossed away the cigarette he had been smoking as she approached.

"Looking for someone, Sister?"

"Miss Tevans," she said. "I—well, I thought she'd send a car——"

"Her car's probably acting up. It's about twelve years old." The young man grinned, then went on talking, with a glance at the shabby bag at Albertine's feet. "You'll find the old girl all right to work for, but she's bossy and likes her own way pretty much. I guess she runs her house like she runs this town. But all you've got to do is humor her. A Russian duke or something and his sister are staying with her now. They came back with her from New York a couple of days ago."

"Oh," said Albertine faintly. A Russian duke and his sister! Aunt Celia alone was terrifying enough.

"Looks like her old hearse coming now." The man pointed across the railway tracks. "Well, don't let her put anything over on you, sister. And" he added, with another grin, "maybe I'll be seeing you one of these nights."

A large limousine drew up to the platform and stopped. A man in a chauffeur's cap and dark glasses got out.

"Miss Tevans?" he inquired smoothly. "Sorry to be late. There was a little trouble."

It seemed to Albertine that his lips twisted derisively as he put her shabby bag in the car. Self-consciously, she got into the back seat. This was her first ride in a limousine, with a chauffeur and everything. She supposed that she should be thrilled, but she wasn't. Only a curious feeling of dread persisted.

$1,500 was buried ten years ago by William Felty, a farmer of Pennsylvania, who did not trust banks. Then he forgot the hiding place. Every square foot of his holding has been dug, and at last the treasure has been found under a fence on the very edge of his land.

OLD PEOPLE FEEL YOUNG

"I WAS ALL NERVES"

FOR young girls growing into womanhood, for women in middle life going through the "change," or those who suffer from headache, weakening drains, backache and nervousness, Dr Pierce's Favorite Prescription is just the vegetable tonic needed. Read this: Mrs. William Roy of 18 Pelham Road, St. Catharines, Ont., said: "I was all rundown and seemed to be 'all nerves.' I did not feel at all well. I could not do a day's housework without feeling tired to death. Headaches also sapped my strength. I decided to use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it strengthened me and rid me of that run-down, upset condition." Buy now!

The Royal Bank of Canada Shows Increased Profits

Total Assets Up $55,000,000 — Deposits by the Public Increased $71,000,000 — Liquid Assets 66-07% of Liabilities to the Public.

The Annual Balance Sheet and Profit and Loss Account for the year ending November 30, 1936, issued by the Royal Bank of Canada to its shareholders, reflects a very substantial growth in practically all departments of the bank's business. Features of the statement are improved earnings, and striking increases in deposits and liquid assets. Total assets are shown at $855,588,457, an increase of approximately $55,000,000 during the year.

Public Deposits Increase $71,000,000

Shareholders will doubtless note with satisfaction the high esteem in which the bank is held as evidenced by the unusually large increase in deposits by the public, the total now being $726,548,253, an increase during the year of $71,000,000. It is interesting to note that deposits are higher than in any previous Annual Balance Sheet, with the exception of that for November 30, 1929. Deposits by Dominion and Provincial Governments are down $14,000,000. A noteworthy development is the increase in non-interest bearing deposits from $194,000,000 to $310,000,000. This is, of course, accounted for mainly by the discontinuance of interest on Current Accounts, which also explains the reduction in interest-bearing accounts of $45,000,000.

Current Loans Reduced

Ordinary loans show a reduction of $32,000,000. Current loans in Canada are shown at $175,872,378, a decrease of $41,000,000, while advances outside of Canada increased by $7,000,000. It is understood that the decrease in Canada is due principally to the liquidation of wheat loans, brought about by the sale and export of the large carryover which had accumulated during the last few years.

Call and short loans in Canada are practically unchanged at $26,154,218. Call loans outside of Canada decreased $5,000,000 and are now $14,624,255.

Strong Liquid Position

As might be expected under existing conditions, the liquid position is exceptionally strong, total liquid assets being $513,230,273, an increase during the year of $90,000,000. Of this amount $179,280,978 is represented by cash on hand or on deposit with the Bank of Canada and other banks, while $241,639,440 is represented by Dominion and Provincial Government securities. The outstanding change in liquid assets is an increase in the holdings of Government securities of $53,000,000 and an increase of $18,000,000 in other bonds, debentures and stocks. The increase under this heading is understood to be represented altogether in short-term, high-grade corporation bonds. Total liquid assets are 66.07 per cent of liabilities to the public, which is, of course, a reflection of present monetary conditions rather than of deliberate policy.

Profits Show Healthy Increase

Lower yields on Government securities and the smaller volume of commercial loans have naturally had an adverse effect on income, but this has apparently been more than offset by the reduction in interest paid on deposits, increased operating efficiency, and improved earnings in other directions. Profits in previous years have been shown before the deduction of Dominion and Provincial taxes. This year, for the sake of uniformity in bank statements, net profits are shown after taxes have been deducted. Net profits amount to $3,531,241.84 and on a comparable basis with last year show an increase of $202,000.

Dividends paid absorbed $2,800,000; $200,000 was appropriated to Bank Premises and $200,000 contributed to Officer's Pension Fund, leaving a balance in Profit and Loss Account of $1,913,796, an increase of $304,000 as compared with the previous year.

Annual Balance Sheets issued to date show that the Canadian banks have never been in as strong a position as they are at present to meet any commercial demands that may arise.

The Annual General Meeting of the Shareholders will be held at the Head Office of the bank at 11 a.m. on January 14th, 1937.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Stains and Their Removal

Washday brings the usual number of articles which have been stained or spotted in some manner. Most common household stains are easily removed if promptly treated— and the majority of these stains require only a 10-minute soak in cool or lukewarm water, followed by a hot suds bath. There are, however, the old stains, or those which have been "set" by improper treatment, which frequently present quite a problem.

As a general rule:

(a) Grease stains are removed by a solvent or an absorbent.

(b) Coloring matter requires a bleach.

(c) Sugar and syrup are effectively removed by warm water.

(d) Resinous (gummy) substances may be cut with a solvent like alcohol or turpentine.

One stain may fall in two or more classifications, and in such a case, several different treatments might be necessary for thorough removal. An ice cream spot for instance, would leave sugar, grease, and coloring matter and might require the use of a solvent, a bleach and perhaps an absorbent for thorough removal.

Bleaches that are very effective for stain removal are: Ammonia (a 10 per cent solution, purchasable at your drug store is best); hydrogen peroxide, borax, javelle water, oxalic acid (dissolve 1 lb. of oxalic acid crystals in a cup of warm water and label it poison); lemon juice.

Solvents commonly used are: Water, chloroform, carbon tetrachloride, which may be purchased from your druggist; turpentine, lard. Some solvents are inflammable or explosive and should be used with much caution. The use of gasolene, benzine, or naptha is not recommended because of this danger.

Method of Application: — The method of application must be regulated to a certain extent by the type of material to which it is applied, but here are some general suggestions:

1. Place fabric on a flat surface, over a protecting surface.

2. If the spot is moist, apply the absorbent until it has taken up all the excess moisture, then shake or brush off.

3. Follow with an application of the absorbent rubbed in gently to avoid injuring the fibres.

4. Allow to stand two hours, or over night. Brush off.

5. Apply a warm iron to wrapping paper or white blotting paper placed above and below the fabric.

Bleaches:— Bleaches will remove the dye from colored fabrics and unless carefully rinsed out, will weaken the fabric.

2. Apply the bleach with a medicine dropper.

3. Rinse at once by pouring lukewarm water through the cloth.

Never allow a bleach to dry on the fabric. Ammonia is one of the few bleaches which may be used on silk and wool. Hydrogen peroxide and borax are also suitable.

Solvents:

1. May be used on silk and wool. Water—warm, especially good for syrups and sugary substances.

Chloroform—fats, greases, oils.

Turpentine—paints.

Lard—black grease stains, like road oil. Rub into stain until lard discolors. Rub excess lard off with a cloth and follow with carbon tetrachloride.

Bread As Energy Food In Demand in The Army

That bread is our best energy food is evidently recognized by the army, judging from the amounts of it their dietetic experts prescribe, and the tons of it vidly consumed by cadets and soldiers. There seems to be a lesson here for the rest of us.

The kitchens of West Point daily turn out a variety of bread and rolls for the three whopper meals served the cadets every day. These energetic students who perform mental and physical tasks all day long and must be in the pink of condition to do it consume large amounts of breads with other foods.

Actual figures on the amount of bread needed for soldiers have just been released in the Middle West, where about 25,000 of the young men are gathering for a week's camp in Southern Michigan, during the maneuvers of the Second Army. Members of the National Guard of two States and two divisions of the regular army are included.

From the 47 different foods which the army authorities have prepared for the encampment, the following list will give some idea of the appetites to be appeased, and the proportion of foods to be used. Bread heads the list, followed by potatoes and good red beef. These figures for the week are in pounds:

Bread	172,026
Potatoes	159,903
Beef	105,337
Butter	32,840
Chicken	17,530
Bacon	15,418
Eggs, doz.	20,870
Pies	78,502
Ice cream, gals.	3,131

That should give us some idea of the values fixed by the army authorities, who must get the most energy possible into the diets, keep the soldiers in the peak of good health, and at the same time watch the costs. Doesn't that sound like the family budget problem?

Higher Living Costs Likely For Next Year

WASHINGTON — Smart shopping by the purchaser of the family's food supplies is advised by United States Government experts with a warning food costs will go higher.

After a nationwide study the consumer guide, published at the Agriculture Department, said 'careful buying will be necessary during the first half of 1937, when the full price raising effects of the drought will be felt."

Retail food prices in recent weeks were said to have reached the "highest level since 1930" but the price study added they were "still 29 per cent. below" 1929 peak in recent years.

They said it has required $10 in recent months to buy the same amount of food that a dollar bill purchased in March 1933.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, but make the bile flow freely. They do the trick. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

Canada's Gold

Hon. T. A. Crerar, minister of mines and natural resources, expects that within five years Canada's gold production will reach at least $200,000,000 annually and perhaps $225,000,000. Apparently good progress is being made in discovering that pot of gold at the end of the rainbow.—Kitchener Record.

It's a Moot Question

Chang has kidnapped Chiang in China, and it is feared Chang may hang Chiang if Chiang does not choose to join Chang and bang the Japs in China. The question is:—will Chang hang Chiang or will Chiang chip in with Chang and drive the Japs out of China?— Stratford Beacon-Herald.

Handy Stuff to Have

Canada has rounded the corner, and, having set the course, has but to continue. Trade is growing; earnings of the people are increasing and the rich mineral heritage is being revealed as vaster than the most optimistic imagined. It is not gold alone. Total mineral production will exceed that of last year, when it was valued at $312,000,000. But gold pays bills anywhere, provides currency backing, whether we believe it or not, and is a handy commodity to have in the public vaults for future stability. Other nations are increasing their resources. Canada manifestly is reaching a position where it will be possible to do the same.—Toronto Globe and Mail.

New Breed of Sheep

The successful crossing of a limited stock of Russian caracul sheep, from which fashionable furs are obtained, with other more common breeds is reported by United States Agriculture Department experts. As a result, they said, farmers soon may produce considerable broadtail, Persian lamb and caracul fur. Importations of the three mounted to about $3,000,000 in the last five years.—Montreal Star.

Colonies Are Expensive

Judging from the demands of certain countries for colonies, the impression is given that such territories are sources of wealth, but that has not been the experience of the great holders of colonies. Indeed, according to figures compiled to the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Germany and Italy have spent far more than their total colonial trade on their colonies, instead of showing a profit. Japan also has spent far more on her colonies than she received. Britain and France also spend more on colonies than they collect. The fact is that more often than not, colonies produce deficit rather than surpluses.—Niagara Falls Review.

Dim Those Headlights!

If only one out of three motorists are courteous enough to dim their headlights when approaching another car, it is high time the other two-thirds were made to realize the error of their ways. An Edmonton motorist, struck by the number of night traffic accidents blamed on glaring headlights, made four 80-mile trips at night over highways around this city. He found on one drive that one-third of the drivers he met dimmed their lights voluntarily or in response to a "wig-wag" signal. On the other three drives, the proportion of courteous drivers was even less.—Edmonton Journal.

Sitting on the Lid

Lethbridge has sat on the lid of its strong box for six long years of the depression. The result is that we have accumulated sufficient funds to pay more than 65 cents on the dollar of all our bonded indebtedness. Our financial standing is the best of any city of its size in Western Canada.—Lethbridge Herald.

A New Idea

Czecho-Slovakian authorities have an idea of their own about promoting traffic safety. "Directions for finding the nearest doctor are being added to all permanent traffic signs near dangerous curves and traffic intersections" in that country, reports an American commercial attache from Prague.—Brandon Sun.

Huge!

The Union of Soviet Republics, or shorter, Russia, is a country of immense size and potentialities. It stretches from Poland to Behring Strait. It occupies a seventh of the land surface of the earth. A speaker in Halifax in order to make his audience appreciate its great extent, once said: "We sitting here in this room today are nearer Moscow than a Soviet citizen at the other end of Russia, say Vladivostok." Which statement is exactly true as anyone may ascertain by consulting the distances in a map.—Halifax Chronicle.

It Hits the Spot

Russell T. Kelly, who is one of the most astute advertising and merchandising men in Ontario, in a recent address before the Midland Chamber of Commerce, urged that local business men should cultivate the surrounding trading areas. He declared: "Every advertisement, whether of a local or outside firm, is an invitation to these people to buy there. While a large number of outside newspapers come into a town each day, it is the local newspaper which governs purchasing locally."—Simcoe Reformer.

Youth

Youth is prone to protest against restraint, but without restraint it is certain that society cannot long endure.—Hamilton Spectator.

Old Order Changes

In the old days, the Fergus voters' lists used to be full of "Spinsters." They have nearly all disappeared, having turned into Stenogs, Students, Clerks, Teachers, Nurses, Maids, Musicians, Tel. Ops.—Fergus News-Record.

Submarine Safeguards

Italy and France have joined Britain, United States and Japan in humanizing submarine warfare by undertaking that before an enemy merchant ship is sunk, its crew, passengers and papers must be put in a place of safety, and open boats are not to be so regarded unless near a shore or a rescue ship. Unfortunately these arrangements do not seem to stand up under actual test.— The Moncton Transcript.

Danish Settlers

At least the consul general for Denmark was in Western Australia during the first two weeks of October examining the possibility of group settlement areas being taken over by Danish immigrants. In Denmark, he said, a special government department concerned with emigration had asked Danish diplomatic and consular representatives to study the immigration position in the countries in which they lived. The farms on the group settlements, he said, were good if worked properly, and would be satisfactory if the conditions offered by the government were such that they could be profitably taken over for dairying by the Danes.—Brandon Sun.

THE EMPIRE

Empire Migration

It is more than 20 years ago since the steady and uninterrupted flow of migration from Great Britain to the Dominions and Colonies ceased to be a regular feature of the Empire's corporate life. It is true that various specialized efforts have been made in the meantime—in South Africa, for example, by the 1820 Memorial Settlers' Association—with varying degrees of success, to establish British emigrants in the Commonwealth overseas. But unless what we have termed "the steady uninterrupted flow of migration" from Great Britain can be resumed and maintained on the old pre-War level, nothing is more certain than that some of the outstanding qualities of the British race will be lost for ever, both in Britain itself and in the Dominions, Colonies and dependencies. —Johannesburg Times

Disease Found Among Lobsters

But No Danger In Eating the Meat

HALIFAX — Believed to be the first time chitinovorous bacteria have been reported to attack the shells of living animals, an "epidemic" among lobsters kept in close confinement for a considerable tme, has been discovered by Dr. Ernest Hess of the Dominion Fisheries Experimental Station.

A few isolated lobsters landed directly from the fishing grounds and affected by the same shell disease have been observed in different parts of the Maritimes during the past Summer, he said, in a paper read before the Nova Scotia Institute of Science. The scarcity of these cases showed that "the disease is of no alarming nature except when the lobsters are kept in large numbers in pounds or floats," the scientist assured his listeners.

Some tissues of plants and animals particularly the shells of crabs, lobsters, shrimp, the wings of some insects and the cell walls of some molds contained a substance called chitin a horny covering. Bacteriological examination of the affected parts yielded cultures of bacteria which were able, in the laboratory, to digest pure chitin. They were called chitinovorous for this reason, Dr. Hess explained.

During the past five years microorganisms which are able to attack and decompose such chitin have received increasing attention. These organisms are quite common in nature, such as the bottom mud of the fresh water lakes, sea bottoms, soil, compost heaps decaying crabs and even in the intestines of living birds, bats, frogs and fishes.

The scientist emphasized the fact that the shells only are affected and the meat is in no way injured. No danger exists, in any case, to the consumers of lobster meat whether this be canned or freshly boiled lobsters, he declared.

Realize War's Costs Now

The Toronto Globe and Mail comments:— It is after wars are over that the cost must be counted. The trouble does not end with victory. There are the bills to be paid; but more important than these is the continued toll on human life that is levied during the years of peace. From Vienna comes a dispatch discussing this subject, based on figures said to have been collected from official sources. These statistics indicate what has been going on throughout the world in hospitals and homes where men are gradually succumbing to war injuries.

It is stated that, among all nation combatants in the great war, 8,538,000 men were killed or died of wounds during the campaigns; also that of 19,000,000 wounded who were treated after the Armistice more than 15,000,000 have passed away as a consequence of war service, and that there still are living 4,237,000 men carrying through the years wounds received in action.

Thus more men died of wounds after the war was over than were killed in action. As the years pass and these wounded veterans are weakened by age, the peacetime casualties become more numerous. These figures illustrate the staggering price humanity must pay for military operations. Yet the voice of many Old World countries appears to be "still for war." Britain alone of these nations realizes the meaning of martial conflict, and that is one reason why she continues a powerful influence in efforts to preserve world peace.

History of King Names Set Forth

Latest King Albert Died In 860 A.D.—Origin of "George"

If the Duke of York had not preferred to inherit his father's prestige as George VI., instead of becoming Albert I., he would have been—the New York Herald-Tribune points out—"the first King Albert to reign in England since 860 A.D.

SOME WILL OBJECT

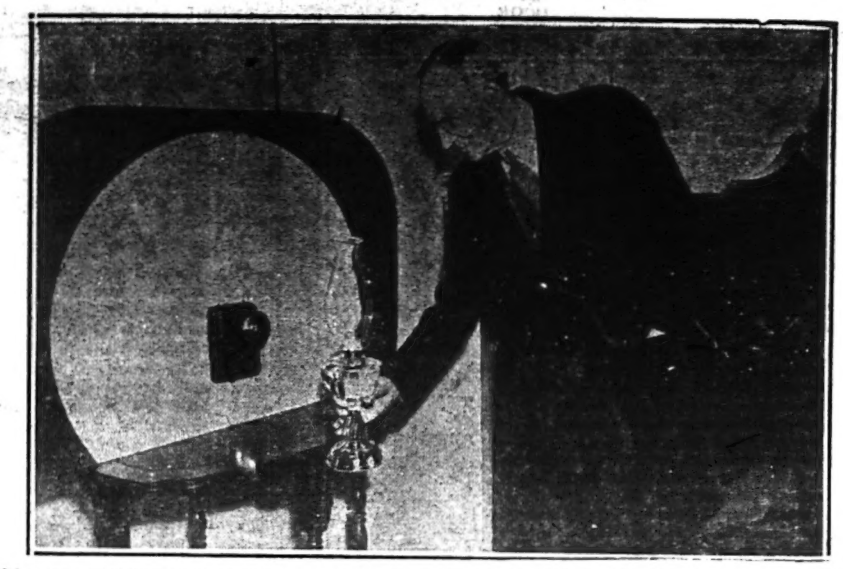
To this statement some persons who are familiar with the line of England's early kings are not unlikely to object that there has never been an English King Albert at any time in the past. But they will be overlooking the fact that Albert, like Elbert, is simply short for Ethelbert, (which appears in the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle as Aethelbriht, Aethelberht and Aethelbryht), and that Alfred the Great had an elder brother who ruled England for five years and died 1,076 years ago.

"The fuller form of the name Ethelbert is commonly but not too satisfactorily translated 'noble-bright.' In the early Anglo-Saxon days (and the name is a very old one) the title 'aetheling' was given to none but scions of the several royal or heroic lines that are traced in the old genealogies to Wuotan (Odin), and even to his divine forebears. 'Atheling,' therefore, seems to have meant 'of divine stock' rather than simply noble. So in an age when the bestowal of a name upon a child was an invocation of good fortune upon him, to call him Ethelbert would be much like saying: 'May he shine like the gods.' This is not a mean ambition for a prospective King, and the name is certainly more appropriate to the office than George, which is derived from the Greek for 'peasant.'

TEUTONIC NAMES

"It may be interesting to note in this connection that, apart from Georges, the Jameses, Stephen and John, no King of England from Alfred's time to the present has had any but an ancient Teutonic name, redolent of heathen aspirations. Alfred means the wisdom or counsel of the elves, the spirit of light. Ethelred is noble-wisdom, or more likely divine wisdom. Edward means guardian of wealth, or as it seems to have implied in rougher times, guardian of the spoils, meaning the leader of a raiding party who distributed the loot. Harold is Norse, the Anglo-Saxon equivalent being Herewealdt, meaning the power of the army, or, at an earlier time, of the raiding party.

"Walter (Wealdhere) is the same name with the same meaning, turned end for end. William, or Wilhelm, which some translate pompously, 'the helm of resolution,' is in reference to ancient myths of a magic 'wishing helmet,' the 'wishing cap' of later fairy stories.



ONE OF OLDEST

"Henry is one of the oldest of all being one of the appellations of Tiu (Zeus), most ancient and obscure of the Indo-Germanic gods, meaning probably ruler of the clan or patriarch (if the German Heinrich should be Heimreich). It invokes upon a child the care of the old heathen god. Richard appears to mean simply firm ruler. Least pretentious of all is Charles, or Carl, since cerol in Anglo-Saxon meant man, or man-at-arms, then servant, and finally churl."

At New Peak

88,000,000 Total —Amherstburg Has Record Navigation Season

AMHERSTBURG. — Eighty-eight million tons of freight, with a value of nearly $1,300,000,000, a new high, passed the port of Amherstburg during the 1936 navigation season.

The number of vessels to pass Amherstburg this year exclusive of passenger steamers and pleasure craft was 21,747. Of these 10,922 were upbound and 10,825 down bound. The vessel passages in 1935 were 18,179. The principal cargoes carried were coal, ore, automobiles and grain.

Prior to the opening of the new Ingstona channel early in September, both up and down bound vessels used the new channel after its completion. During the last week of navigation, many upbound vessels used the new channel because the lights along the Amherstburg waterway had been stored in winter quarters and ice floes were forming in the eastern channel.

SPORT HOT SHOTS

By KEN. EDWARDS

Mr. Sportsman! Do you thrill to the tug of a fighting fish on the line? A small warrior the size of a bass or something as large as a cow? If so, let us talk it over a bit.

Down in Nova Scotia the big-game fish is the Tuna. There, every year they harpoon them weighing as high as three-quarters of a ton. No other sea fish possesses more spunk and fighting spirit than this living thunderbolt of stream-lined fighting fish.

The capture of a 792-pound Tuna in 62 hours of continuous struggle in 1934 was the longest battle known.

The files tell us that Michael Leiner, of New York, holds the record for quick kills in Nova Scotia waters. He caught 21 tuna fish for eight days in 1935, the largest, a 450-pounder, was boated in 46 minutes and the smallest, 95 lbs. in 3½ minutes.

You all know of the famous novelist, Zane Grey, maybe so, but, did you know too, that in 1924 he caught a 758 pound Tuna, that remained a world record for rod and line angling until 1933 when Michell Henry captured one 857 pounds? It was Thomas Howell, of Chicago, who captured the largest Tuna ever taken on rod and line. The giant fish tipped the scales at 956 pounds.

The heart of the Tuna is considered a very great delicacy, and is said to be nearly as big as a basket-ball.

Look us up next week, Mr. Sportsman, we're going swordfishing . . . . happy angling!

World's Arms Trade $43,600,000 In 1935

GENEVA. — The total known trade in arms and war materials during 1935 amounted to $43,600,000, the League of Nations announced recently. The League said it would be rash to accept the figure as covering world-wide trading in armaments.

The figures were contained in the 12th edition of the "statistical year book on the trade in arms and ammunition." They include only arms and materials manufactured for war purposes, excluding sporting arms and ammunition.

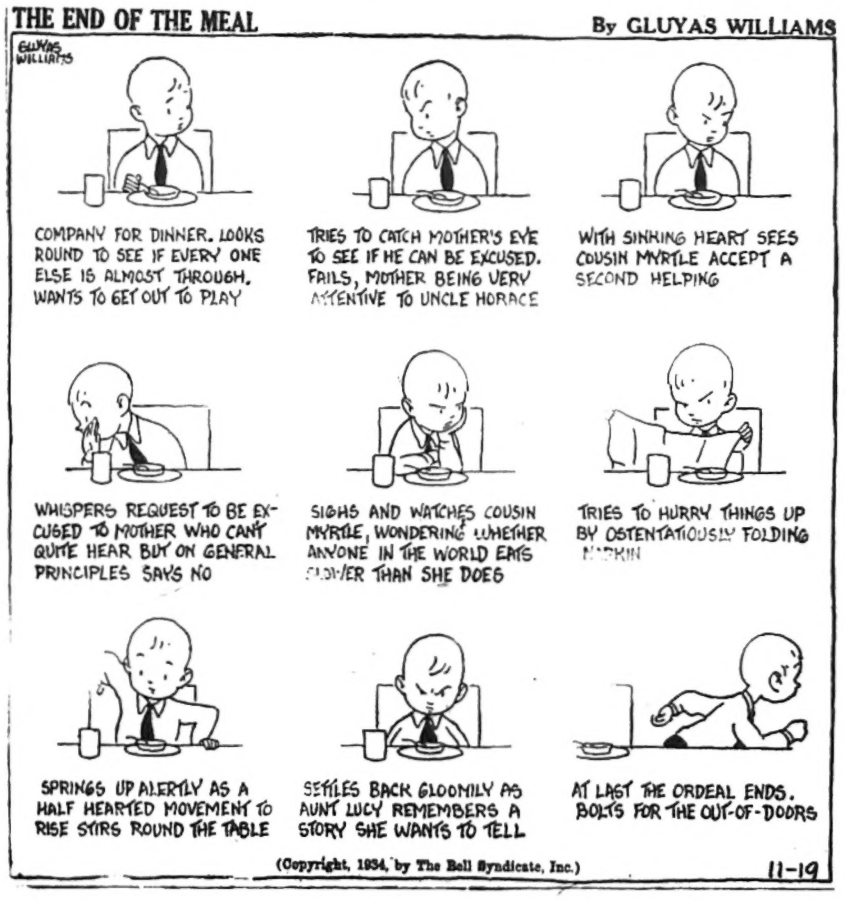
The highest point in the past ten years was reached in 1929, the League declared, when exports were valued at $71,200,000. The lowest was in 1932 when, in the period of the world conference for reduction of armaments, it was $37,700,000.

After the conference disbanded, conflicts in several sections of the world resulted in an increase in exports of arms and munitions which prevailed through the next three years.

"Tables show the general world economic depression that set in in 1929—1930 had a much lesser effect on exports of arms than on commodities in general," the Year Book commented.

"The latter fell off considerably from 1930 but a decrease in arms exports between 1930 and 1932 inclusive, was relatively much smaller while since 1923 there has been an increase which has not been observed in trade as a whole."

Analyzing exports, the Year Book cited these figures:



Great Britain headed all other arms exporters up to 1933 inclusive, but the British position in 1934 was taken by Czechoslovakia whose exports were 21.1 per cent. of the world's total compared to 20.6 for Great Britain.

Exports from France also decreased. In 1935 the French shipments were about 14 per cent. of the total as against 26 per cent. in 1932.

"In the days of Queen Anne the newspapers had great writers and small circulations. Now we have large circulations. I am not quite sure how to finish that remark."
—Winston Churchill

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

Snapshooting and Sharpshooting

Here we see how a sharp picture was spoiled because the snapshooter tripped the shutter release violently.

HAVE you ever watched a sharpshooter in the act of pulling the trigger of his gun? If you have, you will agree that there would be little excuse for blurred pictures, if the snapshooter, in pushing the shutter release of his camera, would emulate the sharpshooter's technique.

When the sharpshooter gets a bead on the bull's-eye he does not pull the trigger with a jerk. He exerts a slow, steady pressure. The reason is that, if he does not pull the trigger in this fashion, his aim will be jerked off the bull's-eye. He probably will hit the target somewhere, but not ring the bell for a perfect shot. So, with a camera, violent pressure on the shutter release jerks the camera and spoils the shot. There will be a picture on the film all right, but not with the sharp outlines that make a perfect snapshot, because a camera in motion while the lens is open is like a machine-gun sweeping its fire across the whole target. The result is blur. Just as the sharpshooter practices pulling the trigger, it is a good thing for the snapshooter to practice pressing the shutter release.

The longer the exposure time the more important it is that the camera be stationary. An exposure of one twenty-fifth of a second seems to most of us such an infinitesimally brief instant that it is difficult to imagine that any motion of the camera could make any difference, but that is a long time in terms of the speed at which light travels. Some persons can successfully hold a camera still for an exposure of 1/10 second, but they are taking a chance every time. For this exposure or any longer one a tripod or other firm support should always be used.

Another thing the sharpshooter does is to use the right grip on his gun, the one best enabling him to hold the gun steady as he pulls the trigger. So, in shooting with a camera, find the grip that is safest (the manual that came with the camera will tell you) and practice it so that it will become a habit.

In other words, brother snapshooter, follow the technique of the sharpshooter, if you want to hit the pictorial bull's-eye every time. Sharpshooting, sharp pictures!

SPORTING COMMENTS

News and Views

By AL. RYCKMAN

ALL IN A DAY

Snoring Sam was late getting to work this morning since holidays and celebrations are upsetting to routine, stomach and temper, etc., but reported they had such a crowd at the New Year's Eve party that the traps player sat in one room and the drum in another. Nevertheless things must be improving. The only people Sam heard whining were the trumpet players in the band.

Meanwhile we have some sport fashes for you. One of our young brownies, Minnie McFinney by name, wandered into Ravina rink where they play triple headers for fifteen cents (or some such amount) and announced that the old arena will not hold any Dinnerware nights or give away free bags of sugar. It seems Lambton defeated the Port Credit Pirates 3-2 in said ice palace the other day.

Softball officials have decided to hold their meeting in Port Credit either the first or second week in March. At this so-called convention the organization of a girls' loop will be discussed and also new rules for the boys' circuit put forth.

Now, if some fair lady (one from each town, village, hamlet or four corners), would kindly drop us a line stating that they would like to enter a team, we earnestly promise that if we can obtain at least three clubs the Highway moguls will operate a girls' section.

All-Request Program

The following is reprinted from one of our former columns (at the request of one A.R.)

In the ambitious city the secondary schools operate a water polo league. The school sport officials thought up the idea and considered it a splashing good game.

Six men constitute a team and a contest provides two eight-minute periods of action with five minutes of rest between the halves. The goals are at each end of the pool. There are rules and a referee in charge.

The idea is to grab the little inflated ball, swim to the enemy goal, touch it with the ball and that's a point for your side. But when you do cluth the oval about four husky opponents realizing the easiest way to make you release the ball, drag you under. You either pass it to a teammate or pass out (optional).

This game is so rough that during the intermission period the drowned stars are carried off. When the final whistle does blow the balance of the players are put on stretchers while surviving relatives pen notices for the obituary sections in the home town papers (We still like "College Holiday" with Jack Benny better).

Local Notes

What a day to work! People running around the office with headaches and sore throats. (Good old New Year's Eve). To add to our worries it's even raining in 1937. But are we discouraged because of a little rain?

Are we kept from writing a sports column of up-to-minute events because of a few harmless raindrops?

We certainly are. We turn right over and sleep until high noon. There are other angles to be considered to this so-called "off week" in local sports. But if you don't mind not just now. Next week perhaps.

BOOK REVIEWS

The Birds of Peel County

That indefatigable recorder of Peel County's history, Mr. William Perkins Bull, adds another to his list of books dealing with the district, this one entitled, "From Humming Bird to Eagle." The work involved in collection of the data in this handsome volume must have been enormous, but the product is worthy of it. There are about 200 beautifully reproduced pictures of birds, the majority of which are to be found in the county, Mr. Bull loves so well. As he says, "Save for some Western and Maritime species, almost all Canadian birds, native and transient, have been found somewhere in Peel at one time or another. Many simply pause in migration, but about 100 species nest habitually or occasionally in the county."

Earlier chapters in the book discuss "Birds of Pioneer Days," "Birds and Their Habits," and "The Economic Value of Birds," while later sections deal in illuminating fashion with individual specimens. These are listed in the order used for "The Check List of North American Birds," therefore the volume will be important further afield than Canada.

The value of "From Humming Bird to Eagle" is well indicated in a letter of appreciation by Mr. Jack Miner of the Kingsville Sanctuary, thus: "I feel happy to think that such a man as Mr. William Perkins Bull, K.C., is giving to the world a bird book in such an interesting, readable form, full of old-time stories and traditions about birds, and telling his own observations and what he learned from the dozens of ornithologists he has been in contact with."

Legion Had Big Night

The Local Branch of Canadian Legion scored another big success on New Years Eve with their dance Frolic, and Floor show. The Dug out was filled and allenjoyed dancing to music by Buddy Walsh and his serenaders. There were Zylophone selections, Fast stepping Dancers. a blue singer who made you feel so much younger, favors and fun for all present, also deafening noises that helped you to enjoy the evening.

The Legion will throw another big evening the end of January

Synopsis Radio Address Gordon Graydon, M.P.

Gordon Graydon, M.P., for Peel, delivered a splendid address on the afternoon of New Year's Day, over Station C.F.R.B., Toronto. In his address he dealt with the products of our County, the world's largest cut flower producing houses of Brampton, containing forty acres under glass, the beauty spots of the Caledon Mountains and the fishing and winter sports of Northern Peel, as well as the production of potatoes, the stone quarries, its beef cattle, etc. Then there are the whole-milk producing areas of the central and southern townships of Chinguacousy, Toronto Gore and Toronto Township. Peel produces yearly 87 million pounds of milk. Its cattle have won numerous awards in Canada and the United States, and many red ribbons have been won by its horses. There is a great demand for Peel eggs and poultry. Sheep and fox farming is carried on extensively and there are many beds of ginseng plant. Clover, alfalfa and alsike are grown to a large extent, and fruit and vegetables are produced in large quantities. We also have flour mills, creameries, radio and rubber works, sash and door factories, brick plants, woollen mills and fireworks factories, and other industries of importance, mineral wells, textile and shoe factories, furnace foundry, planing mills, paper and leather works, jam factory, oil refining plant, starch works, etc., etc.

Mr. Graydon expressed his thanks for helpfulness, co-operation, and kindness of all sections of the people he is proud to represent.

He sees great possibilities ahead and thinks we should pause and analyse our conduct in the preceding period—to take an inventory of the present and plan our course for the period which lies directly ahead.

He also dealt with affairs in Great Britain and Europe and hopes that we will never be pulled into another world war.

He sees better times ahead and is very optimistic that Canada will share in the prosperity that is surely coming in the immediate future.

WEDDINGS

Dohler—Stevenson

On Wednesday, Dec. 23, Mr. Carl Dohler, Streetsville, and Miss Willma Stevenson of Toronto were married by Rev. Ernest Hahn at St. John's Lutheran Church, Concord Ave., Toronto.

Mr. Dohler was born in Saxon, Germany, and when he came to Canada he settled at Clarkson. Four years ago he came to Streetsville and started a market garden, at which he has been very successful. He is a member of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association, at Ottawa. He is a plant breeder and seed grower and was complimented by the Seed Growers' Association on the quality of his products, which are a great credit to him. He is now a naturalized Canadian, having received his papers from the government.

The bride is a talented musician, having lived in Toronto for the past six years and has filled many engagements at Massey Hall. She will remain in the city until spring. Her parents reside at Waterdown, on Dundas Highway.

In reporting a recital at Conservatory Concert Hall, Toronto, recently The Evening Telegram said: Miss Wilma Stevenson, Toronto pianist, was heard in Galuppi's D Major Sonata, Beethoven's E Major Sonata, Medtner numbers and Chopin's Sonata and encore. Piano music sounds far nobler under Wilma Stevenson's hands than it generally does in concert halls. She has a splendid technique, a right hand that does astonishing things in scale and arpeggio and leaping chords and lightning octaves. But the left hand is even more remarkable. Her playing is masterly—sure — definitely beautiful, and the secret is in that same left hand. It is never at fault. Its strength, delicacy, courage and flexilibility are matched by uncanny certainty in shade and balance. There is never an overstressed note or rhythm—and never one drowned out in harmonic confusion. The listener has a feeling that whatever happens in the music is born of the left hand—which, of course, is sober fact. Harmonic authority like this gives her playing real nobility—sympathetic and expressive without emotional irresponsibility. Delightful music—happiest mixture of classic and romantic—and Miss Stevenson made it sound as fresh as though it wasn't anything like 200 years old.

BRAMPTON

The mild weather and heavy rains this winter were seen as a boon to farmers in this county by C. D. Graham, Peel County Agricultural Representative.

"As far as the crops are concerned, the value of this weather will depend largely on the weather that follows it," Mr. Graham explained. "It certainly will do a lot, however, to alleviate conditions in certain districts of the county where water shortages have occurred this year. In many parts, farmers have had to draw their water, and well levels have been the lowest in years. This condition will certainly be improved."

For the benefit of those want to know—the Editor of The Review was born in Brampton, Ontario, about 25 years before the late great Queen Victoria passed away, and has lived during the reign of five British Sovereigns.

back your dead, but I must try and bring you back your faith. I know you have walked the path of sorrow alone. You stumble down the darkened way. I offer you a light, my friend. I want to stand beside you, but I do not mean tonight to awaken grief. I have come to ask help for the living. It is a simple thing that I ask. You know of the time-honored custom of our valley, that from each window, a bright star of candle-light shall make a pathway in the snow, on the eve of Nativity. Will you not light your windows? Azariah—After all I have said you still ask me that. Ambrose, your little cottage stands alone, and candles in your windows would guide the waits who pass tonight across the hill. Surely for humanity's sake, if for no other, you'll light these candles. They are from my own dipping and places them on the table.

Azariah—No lights shall glow from my house tongiht.

Ambrose—Yours will be the only darkened panes in all the countryside. Azariah—Let them be dark for in my soul there is not any light at all. Ambrose—The waits may not come to warm themselves. Yours is the last house, and the wind is cold. Azariah—Neither the Waits nor yet your great Je ovah are welcome tonight.

Voices of the Waits are heard in the distance. They grow louder. Will you not let them in? Azariah—They may not enter here. Ambrose—My heart bleeds for you, my brother. May God bring you light. Azariah—There is no God and there shall be no light. Lame Girl—Oh, let me in, please let me in. I am so lame and they walk so fast my one poor crutch caught in the snow, and broke in bits and I am afraid I shall not find my friends again, and I so long to join in their glad songs tonight. Azariah—You too are lame. Do you suffer much? Lame Girl—Oh, yes, but I try to forget and tonight I quite forgot even my lameness. Azariah—You are lame and suffer cruelly, even as my little daughter suffered, but still you think there is a God. Lame Girl—It is because I suffer that I know there is a God. I think a person who has never suffered, has not truly lived. It is through suffering we learn the warmth of pity, the touch of ministering fingers. Azariah—He makes our souls strong through suffering, if I only dare believe it. Lame Girl—You must believe it, for it is true. My life has proven it, but now I am rested I must go, but how shall I find my way. Your trees are shadowy. I can not see the path. May I light this candle and put it in this window by the door? Now I can see the path quite well, and it will guide me on the way to the open.

Azariah—You are so like my little girl. Your lameness is so like. It makes a bond between us. You say you broke your crutch. Here take this, it is my little daughter's crutch. If you can use it you are welcome. Lame Girl—It is just right. God bless you and good-night. Soldier—from without, a bit of warmth and a light. I am on my way to join a caroling party. I have not been back since the war. I am not as strong as I hoped; this wound is my difficulty. I lost my way out there among your trees and stumbled, and my Croix-de-Guerre fell in the deep snow. If I may have a light, I can find it and go across the hill. I am so loth to loose the caroling tonight. Azariah—You wish to join the caroling. You have come from the war. That is just the reason why I long to sing tonight. I learned the companionship of song out there. Azariah—Do you believe in God? You, whose eyes have seen the horrors and the wreck of war. How can it be where brother slaughters brother, where mothers' sons are slain by mothers' sons, but let us talk no more of war for I forgot the time, and I will be too late to lift my voice in praise tonight. May I put this light in the other window?

Azariah—No, do not touch it. It is to guide a lame girl. Take this one. Azariah takes the candle and places it in the candle stick, lights it and hands it to the soldier.

Soldier—God bless you, my friend, and puts it in the other window. Thank you and good-night. I found the cross, thank you, he calls from a distance, and once more, good-night. Azariah—Strange, strange. I feel a sudden glow within my heart, my lighted windows first, and now my heart is alright. Caroling is heard at a distance. It comes nearer. He jumps to his feet, puts another log on the fire, more light, more warmth. He goes to the door, throws it wide open and calls, "Come in, come in to light and warmth. Ambrose and Waits enter. Ambrose looks curiously at the changed Azariah. The Waits stand around the fire warming their hands. Ambrose beckons the Waits to the door and they tiptoe out as he closes the door. The caroling bursts forth in a joyous song, "Come All Faithful." Slowly Azariah goes to the door, opens it and stands listening as the caroling dies away in the distance.

EDEN

The Christmas supper and concert held at Eden Wed., Dec. 30, was a well planned and arranged event but the best plans of men sometimes are badly damaged by weather conditions and the pouring rain certainly interfered with the attendance, for people who delight to come from far to the Eden events were discouraged by the stormy night. However, the Church was about two-thirds full, and all present had a grand time together as well as they ought, for the ladies provided a supper fit for a king, and the concert was of the best.

The program was as follows —— Chorus—'Christmas'

The Trafalgar Y P U held their first meeting for the New Year on Monday at Wesley Church with Miss Gladys Savage in charge. The subject of 'Books and Reading" was taken up in a novel manner by Mrs C W Wilson, who gave a menu of a balanced diet for a book dinner for our minds. For the appetizer (first course) she recommended poetry: for the entree, books on hobbies and recreations: the main course, biography, science, history, Bible study and heavy fiction: salad, books of adventure and travel ; dessert, light fiction : romance, etc. In the menu for our physical body, we always find bread, therefore in the menu for the mind we find spiritual bread throughout in the reading of the Bible. ..... Allan Hall rendered guitar solos, and Grace Fish and Dorothy Hall assisted with readings. Evelyn Savage conducted a recreational period

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON II.
NEW LIFE IN CHRIST.
John 3: 1-17.

GOLDEST TEXT — Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except one be born anew, he cannot see the kingdom of God. John 3:3.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

TIME.—The miracle at Cana occurred in February, A.D., 27. The rest of the events recorded in these two chapters took place at the passover season April 11-17, of the same year.

PLACE.—Cana was a town in Galilee, several miles from Nazareth. The events recorded from 2:13 through 3:21 took place in Jerusalem. The events of the remaining verses of Chapter 3 occurred at Aelon on the west side of the Jordan, the exact location of which is not known.

"Now there was a man of the Pharises, named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews." None of the contents of th third chapter of John are to be found in any of the other Gospels, and even the name of Nicodemus does not appear anywhere in the Bible outside of this Gospel (7: 50, 51 19:30). We know that Nicodemus was a Pharisee, and thus a strict observer of the law, a ritualist, whose life was made up, for the most part, of prayers, washings, fastings, sacrifices, legal observances.

"The same came unto him by night, and said to him, Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God, for no one can do these signs that thou doest, except God be with him." While Nicodemus's confession of what he believed concerning Christ cannot be compared in fullness with the later confession of Simon Peter, or of Thomas, yet it is one of the greatest acknowledgments of Christ's absolute supremacy to be found in the New Testament.

"Jesus answered and said unto him Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except one be born anew, he cannot see the Kingdom of God." The word here translated "anew" might also be translated, as the margin indicates, "from above."

"Nicodemus saith unto him, How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter a second time into his mother's womb, and be born?" The question of Nicodemus is perfectly natural. It is not the result of unbelief so much as of astonishment. Christ's words are meant to rouse men out of their spiritual security and to strip from them every illusion behind which conscience can shelter.

"Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except one be born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God." To enter into the Kingdom of God is simply to become a citizen of that realm in which God is sovereign.

"That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit." (See John 1: 13; I. Cor. 15: 47-49.) What a man receives from his parents is a body with animal life and passions; what h receives from above is a spiritual nature with heavenly aspirations and capacities

"Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born anew." Here we have the first of six "musts" in the Gospel of John (3:14; 4:24; 9:4; 10: 16; 12:34).

"The wind bloweth where it will, and thou hearest the voice thereof, but knowest not whence it cometh, and whither it goeth; so is every one that is born of the Spirit." The Greek word translated spirit (pneuma), is exactly the same word here translated wind. Man does not control the wind as he does not control the Holy Spirit.

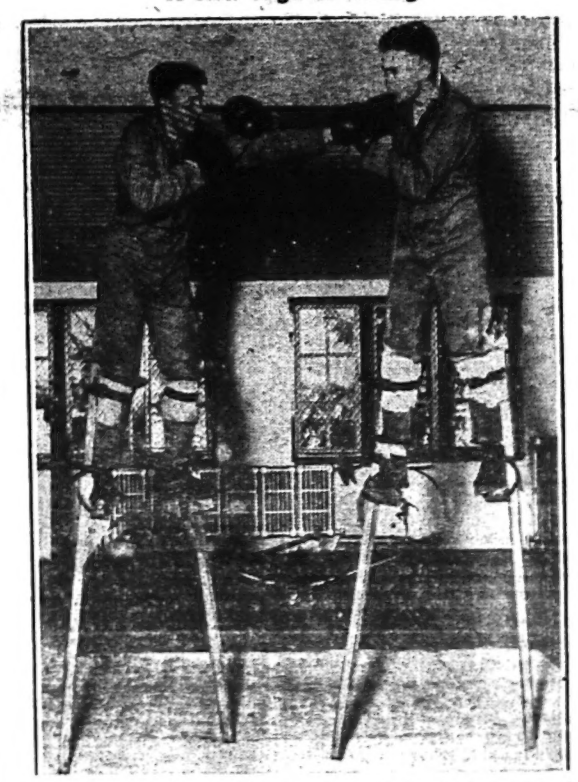
"Nicodemus answered and said unto him, How can these things be?" The emphasis should be on the word how. No one will ever be able to fully, absolutely answer that question except by referring such things to God.

"Jesus answered and said unto him, Art thou the teacher of Israel, and understandest not these things? The Old Testament often spoke of the work of the Holy Spirit, and Christ shows his astonishment that one learned in the Old Testament should find this fundamental teaching concerning the necessity for the Holy Spirit's work so amazingly new.

"Verily, verily, I say unto thee, We speak that which we know, and bear witness of that which we have seen; and ye receive not our witness." The plurals of this verse are probably rhetorical. Christ knew the Father and testified to him. He came to bear witness of the Father and of all the great spiritual truths that relate to God.

"If I told you earthly things." Those facts and phenomena of the higher life as a class which have their seat and manifestation on earth: which belong in their realization to our present existence, which are seen in their consequences like the issues of birth which are sensible in their effects like the action of the wind. "And ye believe not, how shall ye believe if I tell you heavenly things?" Those truths which belong to a higher order, which are in heaven, and are brought down thence to earth as they can become to man.

"And n one hath ascended into heaven, but he that descended out of heaven, even the Son of man, who is in heaven." Such a statement as this from the lips of our Lord lifts him high above every other being who ever lived upon this earth. That came down from heaven is often repeated in this Gospel.



"And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up. (See Num. 21 8ff.) The brazen serpent was lifted up before the dying people of Israel that they might simply look on it and be saved. They were not saved by anything in themselves, but by simply doing what the Lord said, looking at that which he had lifted up before them, a type of their sin.

"That whosoever believeth may in him have eternal life." Eternal life is God's life, the fullest life possible, a life of holiness, a life of peace and joy, a life that has no end.

"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have eternal life." This is, without a doubt, the greatest single verse in all the Bible, and we could dwell on it for hours.

"For God sent not the Son into the world to judge the world; but that the world should be saved through him." The world should have been judged and deserved to be judged, but, before that judgment should ever take place, God first sent his Son to save the world. There is no such thing as salvation for man from sin, or deliverance from the wrath of God, except it is found in Jesus Christ, whom God sent for that one explicit purpose. He is the Saviour of the world and without him the world is neve. saved.

There's still a lot of argument going on about Leslie Howard's performance in "Hamlet" on the New York Stage. Hollywood stars arriving in New York make a bee-line for the theater; whether it's good or bad, they want to see it for themselves. The general public seems to feel the same way.

The dramatic critics, with a few exceptions, have taken their axes to the Howard "Hamlet". They feel that it's pretty bad, and have not hesitated to say so. Mr. Howard has been moved to defend himself in curtain speeches. This "Hamlet" production has been dear to his heart for a long, long time, you know. Apparently he was not prepared for the roasting the critics gave him.

Screen idols, undaunted by what happened to them the last time they spent a vacation in New York, plan other ones there in the immediate future. Their principal hazard is autograph hunters. It's a curious thing about autograph hunters; they seem to have a sixth sense that tells them when a celebrity is in the vicinity. It's hard on the celebrities, of course, but take it from me it's harder on the friends or relatives of the famous ones, who have to stand by and wait while the signing goes on. The fans just elbow them out of the way. The expression on Mrs. Gary Cooper's face while her husband obliges the fans is something to remember!

Farm Problems

Conducted by
PROFESSOR HENRY G. BELL
with the co-operation of the various departments of Ontario Agricultural College

Question 1—(a) "Should you apply fertilizer in the fall for spring crops, what would be the result?"

(b) "What kind of fertilizer would you use on a lawn and how should it be used?" — J. M. Wentworth Co.

Answer: (a) It is common practice in Ontario to apply fertilizer for spring crops at the same time as the spring grains are sown. This is accomplished through the combination fertilizer-grain drill. If a fertilizer carrying nitrogen were applied in the fall for spring crops, it is likely that much of the soluble nitrogen would be wasted by leaching. Phosphoric acid would be held in the soil in combinations with lime, and Potash would form combinations which would prevent much of its loss. It is claimed by some that by fall application the fertilizer becomes more available to the crop. This has not been proven experimentally, especially at the rate at which fertilizers are applied to Canadian crops. The big advantage of spring application through the fertilizer-grain drill is that fertilizer is deposited fairly near the grain seed. This results in the fertilizer giving the grain a rapid start. If the fertilizer were applied in the fall, it is not likely that when the grain is sown in the spring that the grain rows would follow near where the fertilizer had been sown, hence the grain on fall-sown fertilizer may not get the early start that would result where fertilizer is sown in the spring. Separate application of fertilizer and grain also increases the cost of seeding.

(b) It is difficult to answer this question without more information regarding the type of soil, the reaction of the soil, and the drainage of the land, but in general good results should be obtained from applying a top-dressing of such fertilizer as 3-10-5 or 4-12-6 at the rate of 1-8 lb. per square yard. This should be scattered on evenly as soon as the grass begins to turn green in the spring.

Question 2—(a) "What is the best kind of fertilizer to use for malting barley? Will it improve the quality as well as the yield?

(b) "Will fertilizer applied to oats which are to be seeded down have any beneficial effect on the new seeding? My neighbor claims that the fertilizer will increase the growth of the oat crop so that the oats will smother the new seeding. Is this set?" G. M., Wellington Co.

Answer: (a) Our experiments indicate that 2-12-10 fertilizer gives the largest yields of high quality barley. Malsters report that such barley is preferred.

(b) Fertilizer applied to oats will certainly help the stand of grass and legumes mixture seeded with the oats. This has been reported in a large number of our experiments and is well substantiated. It is true that the fertilizer also increases the growth of the oats, but the fertilizer is also of decided benefit to the seeding.

Took His Leave

Marine Editor of the New York Sun writes:—From the Bremen we dropped down to the Aurania for the express purpose of talking with Cosmo Hamilton, who was sailing, and to ask him what he thought about Edward's abdication. Contrary to the opinion expressed by most Britishers, Mr. Hamilton didn't seem to feel that the ruler's act was a crack in the solid front of British Government. It was his opinion that good English conservatism had been buttressed. All of which reminded us of a story.

With considerable pomp and ceremony the king was taken aboard the Queen Mary for an inspection trip prior to her maiden voyage. Somehow or another the affair didn't go off as hoped. Edward walked about the deck, murmuring: "Very nice — very handsome," and then abruptly took his leave, going directly to the slum sections of Southampton where to the extreme embarrassment of the line's officials he said:

"It doesn't seem possible that the same minds which can conceive of a $30,000,000 vessel like the Queen Mary can tolerate such conditions as these."

"A polar expedition moves forward and survives mostly by brute force and by its capacity for punishment."

CRAWLED UPSTAIRS ON ALL FOURS

Owing to Rheumatism in Her Knees

It was not a very dignified way of going upstairs, but she had rheumatism in her knees, and it was the best she could do, at the time. Since then, she has been taking Kruschen Salts, and now feels much better. Read her letter:—

"I had very painful gout in my big toe and could only get upstairs on all fours owing to rheumatism in my knees. It is over three years ago since I commenced taking Kruschen Salts. I must say on damp days I do still have a little gout, but my knees are quite better. I am over 60 years of age, have a complexion like a girl's and feel very fit. I am fully repaid for taking a half teaspoonful of Salts each morning in a cup of hot water." — (Mrs.) A. W.

The pains and stiffness of rheumatism are frequently caused by deposits of uric acid in the muscles and joints. The numerous salts in Kruschen assist in stimulating your liver and kidneys to healthy, regular action, and help them to get rid of the excess uric acid which is the cause of so much suffering.

MINING NEWS

Clark Gold Mines, Kenora mining district, completed its new power house early in December and the 200 horsepower steam plant is now in operation. Additional equipment including mine cars, assay plant, hoists, compressors, etc, have been taken into the property. Diamond drilling commenced in October and by the end of November two holes had been completed. One hole 900 feet east of the shaft was put down to 230 feet, and interserted the porphyry as well as two veins which are regarded as the continuation of the veins known in the mine workings. A second hole 150 feet west and 185 feet south of the shaft was drilled to 255 feet and established the continuation of the porphyry and south vein to the west. The assay plant is nearing completion when drill cores will be assayed.

The new ore section on the third level at God's Lake Gold Mines to the west of the shaft, which two weeks ago had attained a length of 119 feet, has been extended by subsequent drifting to 195 feet, according to latest report received from the mine. For the above length the ore grades .30 oz. or $10.50 across an average width of 4.8 feet. As a combined ore length of 659 feet had already been reported on this level west of the shaft, the total is now increased to 854 feet, all but 141.6 feet of which stands to the credit of the current year's work.

The main shaft at Sladen Malartic Mines has been completed to a depth of 500 feet where a station is being cut. Extensive lateral development is reported to have been completed on the first level at 200 feet disclosing important ore structure. Drifting westward from the shaft, located approximately 500 feet from the Canadian Malartic boundary, has disclosed ore structure for a length of over 800 feet. Widths of ore exceed 60 ft. with values up to $10.50 per ton. An average width of 40 ft. running about $8.25 is reported as indicated

Diamond drill hole No. 37 at the Beardmore property of Wilport Gold Mines has encountered a value of $38 50 across 18 inches at a depth of 161.5 to 163 feet, with the next 12 inches yielding $6.50. At 179 feet 12 inches returned $11.20 while at 190 feet a value of $5.25 was secured across 12 inches. W. B. Airth, consulting engineer has recommended that a shaft be sunk at a point 800 ft east of the Leitch Gold Mines boundary, where the oreshoot has been proven by trenching and drilling for a length of 275 feet. Holes Nos. 3, 4 11 and 12 were drilled along this section and values as computed by J. D. Addison, show $13.33 for a width of 2.1 ft. Drilling is being continued, with the gap from Leitch boundary to the nearest hole to be tested. The

Writes Backwards Due to Odd Quirk

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va. — A "mirror-boy" whose mind forces his fingers to write figures and letters backwards, is puzzling physicians of this town.

The youngster is 11-year-old Harold Elliott, unable to advance beyond the second grade in school. His teacher, Miss Eleanor Mengert, discovered the queer quirk in his mental make-up which reverses objects he sees.

She told of unsuccessful efforts to teach him to accomplish the simple tasks of the second grade.

Calling Harold to her desk after school hours she gave him a list of numbers to copy and watched closely. He started with the figure nine—last figure on the list — and wrote it backward. Told to copy a word he started at the end.

"But when I held a large mirror to the word and told him to copy from the mirror," Miss Mengert said "he started with the first letter just as any child would."

brimmed with wonders
Too deep for fathoming by mind or

Is there more marvel in the cloud

Or opalescent splendor of a fly?
Who can believe all that his eyes are

Are you as fair as eyes have said you are?
For we are overwhelmed in gulfs of being
That pour in on us from the last

So do not hold me to the earth forever;

The earth a pin-point to his high endeavor
To look on life and see it face to face
For we are only atoms merged in being,

Consolidated Mining & Smelting Co. has renewed the option on the Ritchie Gold Mines property, east of the main Kirkland Lake camp. The large smelting company relinquished the option on December 15th last and it is understood that a portion of the equipment has been removed from the property when the last drill hole cut something of importance. It is understood that Smelters will carry through its agreement and form a new company to further explore the ground. Some $60,000 has been expended on the Ritchie property by Smelters.

A report from officials of the Bren gold Mines, Ltd., states that in drifting southeast on the No. 2 vein on the 200-foot level, which was recently intersected by a crosscut, five face samples gave an average width of 17 inches and an average value of $46.06 gold per ton. The last sample reported is stated to have been fifteen inches wide and assayed 4.16 ounces.

The first gold brick poured on December 21st at Morris Kirkland Gold Mines and representing about a month's run of the new 100-ton mill consisted of approximately 509 ozs. gold and 1,000 ozs. silver having a total value of $17,000, official report. The circuit at present contains approximately $8,000 in solutions and it would appear that it has not ceased to absorb considerable values. The next brick is expected to be poured January 20th. Progress of opening the mine at depth is proceeding normally. The orebody on the 1,125 ft. level at the shaft which is proved for 190 ft. length 8.2 ft. width of over $6.50 grade, is being extended to the east where last values were $11.20 in a drill hole, it is stated. The north crosscut on the 1,250-ft. level has reached a wide mineralized zone about 250 feet from the shaft where visible gold was found and high grade samples obtained

BRITAIN ACCUSTOMED TO CRISES

(From the Ottawa Journal)

Under this caption, "The Empire Creaks—and Rolls Steadily Onward," the New York Times prints a remarkably understanding despatch from its London correspondent, the brilliant Frederick T Birchall. "Bircha" asks the question: "Where do these events of the past week leave the British Constitution? and What has been their effect on the British Empire?" and his answer, a compound of comprehension and frank admiration, is a notable thing.

Birchall's article, one of those closely-woven things for which he is famous, forbids interference with its context, but one quotation may be made from it. Thus:

"In the British case, who can explain thoroughgoing democracy, wedded to monarchial pageantry, reveling in the past, quarreling fiercely and not always politely in its own political ranks, yet co-operating whole-heartedly, regardless of quarrels, in time of stress? What can you do about a people who appreciate most a joke on themselves and if one is not forthcoming invent it? What other government or people, for instance, would enjoy and appreciate Low's biting cartoons except the British—or Americans? Who loves a lord and laughs at him when he is foolish—more than a Britisher, or again an American? And who is a more genuine democrat and individualist? It is hard to determine.

"Crises are no new experience to the British. They face them, come through them and go steadily on. This particular crisis is no exception. That strange contraption, dream or reality, whichever it is, the British Empire, has rolled through this one and lumbers clumsily onward.

"Nobody understands it. Nobody satisfactorily explains it, because it is not understandable, and is inexplicable.

"It is an interesting fact and incidentally another anomaly that all the best jests about this highly disagreeable business are British."

Reading Birchall, one recalls Emerson's famous phrase about the people "who see more clearly on a cloudy day." Yet there was one other British characteristic that came out in this crisis. It was the characteristic of humor, of capacity to not take things too tragically; the sort of characteristic one sees revealed in a people who can go in hundreds of thousands to the Derby when all Europe is in ferment, who in the midst of crisis can write letters to the Times on the authorship of some anonymous couplet.

That was the great gift—the gift of humor and of a sense of proportion—which gained British conquest in this last crisis. Mr Britling not only saw it through; more than that, and more important, Mr. Britling saw through it.

New Kind of Oat

An absolutely new kind of oat has been grown by a Mr. W. Barker of Babingley Hall, King's Lynn. It has the advantage of possessing no husk, so that its yield is approximately double hat of the present English product. The straw has an excellent nutritional value, too, being rich in albuminoids, carbo-hydrates, and oil. This type of oat is grown at 45 lb. per acre and yields 24 cwts., while the ordinary variety is grown at 168 lbs. per acre and yields the same quantity. When one considers the saving in labor, it will be realized what an advantage this has over the average good pedigree grain.

Court Evidence

A Mennonite was in court at Hamilton because the family car had been driven by his wife, and she did not possess a permit. When it was asked that the oath be taken in court the Mennonite explained that his religious training led him to believe the Word of God was too sacred to swear upon. He assured the court he would speak only the truth. There was nothing much to the case; the wife will get a permit and the costs of $1 were paid. We are quite certain the Mennonite would speak the truth and nothing but the truth in court. In that way they are a great people and they can be trusted. In districts where hey live they also add a touch to the Saturday markets in cities which is distinctive. Their produce is always as clean as it is different. Apart from that, we believe it is a fact that the word of an honest man in court is worth more than the oath of a good many other people. Taking an oath on the Bible does not prevent perjury. Any magistrate of the primary court will admit there is perjured witness offered before him many times a year; and yet it is all on oath. — Peterboro Examiner.

Public Schools

Streetsville has a four-room Public School. Six men have been principal, from Thomas Hassard, in 1887, to the present incumbent of the position, Russell Langmaid, who took charge in 1923. Miss Eliza Lawson was principal for eight years and Miss Ada Cook, five. During Miss Lawson's term, three of her pupils passed highest in the county in the Entrance Exams, and received medals from the Warden of Peel. There have been many competent assistant teachers during that time, as well.

Soldiers' Memorial

During the Great World War 1914-18, many Streetsville boys enlisted and served their country well. Sixteen out of sixty made the supreme sacrifice, and their names are recorded on the memorial, which was erected at the corner of Queen and Main streets, and unveiled with proper ceremony on July 1st, 1926. To Rev. Frank Vipond must go the credit for taking the initiative to make this Memorial possible.

Fifty Years Ago

There are those living in Streetsville today who can recall what the village was like 50 years ago. The population was about the same, in fact, the place does not grow much. Coal oil lamps were in use on the streets. Concrete walks were unknown. Automobiles and aeroplanes were unheard of. The town had no waterworks, no chartered bank, no radio factory, and no paved roadway.

Today, it is the prettiest village in Ontario, a healthy place in which to live, and everybody is happy—or should be.

Streetsville has had a public library for well over fifty years, which is patronized largely by the reading public and is a valuable asset to the town.

INJUSTICE

"An unjust acquisition is like a barbed arrow, which must be drawn backward with horrible anguish or else will be your destruction."—Jeremy Taylor.

"He who commits injustice is over made more wretched than he who suffers it."—Plato.

"Justice is the moral signification of law. Injustice declares the absence of law."—Mary Baker Eddy.

"No one will dare maintain that it is better to do injustice than to bear it."—Aristotle.

"If thou suffer injustice console thyself; the true unhappiness is in doing it."—Democritus.

"Whatever is unjust is contrary to the divine will; and from this it follows that no true and abiding happiness can be gained by those who are unjust."—Stretch.

REACHING THE GOAL

Consumption, as tuberculosis of the lungs is commonly called, is a wasting ailment; stubborn to master, requiring treatment and care over a long period of time. It can seldom be cured at home. Then, too, it is a communicable disease, especially dangerous to young children.

This was fully realized by the founders of the National Sanitarium Association, when forty years ago they erected the first hospital in Canada for the treatment of this disease.

This venture met with much opposition and even ridicule, for at that time it was firmly believed that tuberculosis was incurable. It was just one of those things which had to be, so why bother about it.

However, it was not long before the regimen of this small hospital began to show results—people were actually being cured—going home and talking about it.

Such was the small beginning of the Muskoka, the Toronto and the Queen Mary Hospitals for Consumptives, which now provide for more than one thousand patients.

The progress made and the change in outlook is reflected by these and the many other fine sanatoria throughout the Dominion, and by the large number of public and private organizations which to-day are sparing no effort to overcome tuberculosis.

The results have been that thousands upon thousands have been given a chance to get well, who but for hospital treatment, would have been left without hope, and the mortality from this disease has been reduced by 75%.

With tuberculosis ousted from the premier position to seventh place as the cause of death, there is cause for congratulation, but there is also the danger of the feeling of self complacency and the slackening of effort. With the goal in sight, this would indeed be a calamity, for tuberculosis will not halt its advance unless it is forced to do so. This can only be accomplished with the continued co-operation of the public as large.

The Trustees of the Muskoka, the Toronto and the Queen Mary Hospitals for Consumptives are determined that, so far as lies within their power, no one who suffers from tuberculosis shall be denied a chance to get well. If you would help in this great life saving work, please send a gift to National Sanitarium Association, 223 College Street, Toronto.

ADVERTIZING PAYS—TRY IT!

AN APPRECIATION

In the passing of Howard Purchase The Streetsville Review loses a valuable assistant in editorial work and a valued personal friend of the Editor.

For nearly two years under the pen-name of Cecil Parker, he wrote the familiar editorials in this paper entitled, "The Friendly Road." Later for about a year in the column, "The World in a Week" he summarized for Review readers the current events of the week. He was also a wonderful help to the Editor in soliciting and composing advertising, besides reporting social events in connection with the United Church of both Streetsville and Eden.

The Editor feels he cannot express too strongly his gratitude and appreciation for all this assistance which Howard gave so generously, so joyfully, almost as though in doing it he considered he was receiving rather than bestowing a favour.

Howard was an exceptionally fine young man, and all who knew him, loved him. He took a great interest in literary work and was ever ready to lend assistance to those who needed his help. He had a bright future before him, but why he was removed from our midst, in early manhood, will only be known to the Almighty. To his sorrowing father and grandmother, we extend our sincere sympathy.

EDEN

The Social evening held Monday evening to provide an opportunity to hear from Mr Sam Cordingly an account of his recent trip through the West and South proved a great success An interesting program of well prepared items of music and readings was thoroughly enjoyed. These items consisted of numbers by Joe and Kirby Burns with Piano Accordion & SpanishGuitar; solo and recitation by Ann Sinclair. Duett by Misses A. Sinclair and D Waite; readings by Joe Lyons; Solo by Bea Jones and the descriptive address by Mr Sam Cordingly. With humor and comment the speaker carried his hearers across Canada and through the West, through Mexico, Arizona and other points, making clear the wonders seen and remembered by an observant traveller. After the program, lunch was served and the group spent a social hour together in the basement

HOWARD G. PURCHASE

AN APPRECIATION

"At the Parsonage, Elmvale, Ontario, Friday, January 8, Howard Grant Purchase, beloved son of the Reverend George H. Purchase, in his twenty-fifth year."

These quietly dignified words sank deeply into the hearts of Howard's many friends as they read them. But it was not with a sense of bitter grief that those who knew and loved him accepted this—God's will. No! They had instead a feeling of thankfulness and wonder. Thankfulness that they had been privileged to share the loving interest which he so joyfully gave to all; wonder at the Christ-like beauty of his character, strong in selflessness, gentleness and cheerful courage.

In all his life Howard could never bear to hurt anyone. He never refused his help. If ever hurt by others he was silent. If anyone was being criticized he firmly turned the conversation into happier channels.

In his school and college days, Howard, an outstanding athlete, led his teams to victory as much by his kindness as by his great skill. His old schoolmates say of him, "He is a Prince."

He was a young man whose life gave great promise but it does not seem true to compare it with a sapling, snapped before its time, for Howard had grown to manhood and in his twenty-four years of life has perhaps spread abroad more loving kindness than many of us at thirty-four and forty-four and fifty-four. His life work has been done and well done.

Dr. Charles Bishop, ex-Principal of Albert College, says of him, "His years with us at Albert College revealed to us the finest qualities of Christian character I have seen in youth. Though brief in years his life has been long in deeds and influence."

Howard himself held that, "To me there can be no defeat, no failure, no loss. He is never defeated who wins the life he has elected to live. He knows no failure who gains the richer life from every experience. He knows no loss who ascends to the greater whenever the lesser seems to pass away". And so we can imagine how bravely, even gladly he turned to meet his Saviour and his Mother, as he set forth on his shining adventures in the Great Beyond.

ROUNDING A NEW YEAR

(By Howard G. Purchase)

Before the coming of the trade route to India and near places through the convenient Suez Canal, all European merchant ships, bound for the East, had to ply their way down the long west African coast, round the continent's southerly cape and then sail out across the fresh blue waters of the Indian Ocean to the far-away ports of the fabulous Orient.

I have been trying to imagine the feelings of that first crew of adventurous navigators who set out to establish "This route to the East." In their journey as far as the Cape they did not likely encounter any difficulty, as they would, no doubt, have a knowledge of the best course to follow gathered from local coastal traders who covered those parts constantly. However, after circling the Cape their route lay over an uncharted sea because no vessel had been that way before them. Still they did not hesitate to set forth across that strange and trackless body of water. They knew that they had their trusted compass and they carried also the knowledge of navigation principles which had stood the tests of years of successful sea-faring. They realized that if they obeyed these laws they would be taken even over that unknown ocean to a safe destination. These men were not mistaken.

At this season we all round a New Year and set across the unexplored sea of 1937. We have not been this way before. What experiences lie ahead we do not know. Nevertheless we should approach the New Year with confidence because we go forward fortified with a knowledge of Life's true and basic principles which have proven their worth through the ages and which, if we follow with faith and a supreme effort, will mark for us a course of happiness and success throughout all its days. And then at its close we shall steer into some golden port, where deeply anchored, each one of us may say, "I have arrived; I have achieved; for me truly 1937 has been a worth-while year."

"I know not where His islands lift
Their fronded palms in air
I only know I cannot drift
Beyond His love and care."

DRUMQUIN

The old year has passed away. Everywhere there has been very many changes, but such is the experience of our sojourn here. Yet we have much to be thankful for in this fair land of ours. Look at Europe and the far East with the unrest. They lack very much the spirit of peace and goodwill toward men. Let us, one and all, commence 1937 on a clear sheet or even better with a new book, and may we be able to look at the old year with few regrets within its pages. And may our new King and Queen receive the guidance and blessing of the Most High.

The Bethel Sunday School concert was a real success, the best for many years. All taking part are to be applauded. Rev. Mr. Eyre occupied the chair, and Leonard Lyster played the role of Old Nicholas, distributing the gifts from the tree.

The church lighting system has been very much improved.

Some of our dairymen lost some valuable cows in the recent T.B. test. These herds have been clean for years. Some are from newly-purchased stock.

The annual school concert at No. 9 school was, as usual, a real success. Practically all the scholars are very much juniors, but they all performed their parts admirably, considering the limited time they had for preparations. Much credit is due their teacher, Miss Peddie. Messrs. Bock and Roche of Toronto, ably filled in with songs and music. These opportunities for the pupils are a wonderful education.

Arrangements have been made by the leaders of St. John's Men's Club to have Rt. Rev. A. R. Beverly, Suffragan Bishop of Toronto, as the guest speaker at the regular meeting of the club Thursday, Jan. 21. Col. T. L. Kennedy, president, will be in charge of the meeting.

Miss V. L. Hollingshead has returned home from a Toronto hospital after three months' treatment, and is feeling much better.

THE FUNERAL SERVICE

The Church at Elmvale was crowded on Friday morning, at eleven o'clock for the funeral service of Howard Purchase, the loved son of the minister. There were relatives and friends who had travelled far to show their love and respect for Howard and their sympathy for his bereaved father and grandmother. There were brother ministers who know well what it means to live lives of sympathy and comfort and strengthening to others and then suddenly to stand in the place where sympathy and comfort and strengthening are so badly needed by themselves. And there were the friends young and old of the congregation and community, who, by their presence sought to surround their minister and friend with the upholding of their love and friendship.

But it was not a sad service it was beautiful—in keeping with the life it commemorated. Rev. Dr. Mark of the Presbyterian Church, who has been an intimate friend of Howards since he went to Elmvale six months ago, conducted the service, took for his text parts of the second and eleventh verses of the third chapter of Ecclesiastes, "A time to die" and "He hath made everything beautiful in his time." If Dr. Mark had known Howard six years instead of six months, he could not have spoken more truly of him. His life was beautiful, and his death was beautiful "With a smile for his Daddy he was away." The service at Park Lawn Cemetery was also impressive. In the sunshine of the bright winter afternoon, and the silence of the throng of friends who had gathered there, while the service was read and the prayers offered, we said Good-bye to Howard who is just "away for a little while." He is not even "away" to his friends for he will live in their hearts till they meet him again in the Wonderful Beyond.

THE THREE EX'S

By Spectator

In sacred lore we learn of The Three Wise Men, and in modern literature we read of The Three Musketeers. Half-a-century ago when "lickin and larnin" were close companions, an allround education consisted in mastering the "Three R's"—reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic. But the Three Ex's of our title are more modern, having been honours won in the recent municipal elections. Three gentlemen share these honours, and they have had many things in common. They have all been life-long friends; they were mixed up as schoolboys; all three are Tories. Then all three ran in three-cornered contests in adjoining municipalities, and all three attempted to step up municipally but were not high enough steppers. As a result the trio are now Ex's—one an ex-deputy-reeve and two are ex-councillors.

Now to unravel the mystery. George Bonham, deputy-reeve of Toronto Township ran for reeve, and Councillor Tom Rogers of Streetsville, contested the reeveship, while Councillor Jim Beamish of Etobicoke took a try for deputy-reeve. Now for a moment we revert to ancient history. When Jim Beamish started to school at Springfield (now Erindale), Tom Rogers was about to graduate and later when J. H. passed the Entrance at No. 10 Trafalgar to Streetsville High School, George Bonham was at No. 10 with a year or two still to go.

After an election of any kind it is interesting to listen to the comments and wise cracks emanating from the general public as to why some were elected, and what the others should have done to be elected. Space will permit us to quote only three, which are really sympathetic classics.

Mr. John Dunn, of Streetsville, a close student of Canadian history and an able authority on constitutional matters says, by way of worthwhile encouragement, "Sir John A. McDonald, Right Hon. Mackenzie King and many other great men went down to defeat, but they staged a real come back. So it's no disgrace to be defeated, and cheerio George, Jim and Tom."

Mr. Jim Steen, a successful Toronto Township farmer, and a man well versed in agricultural and municipal affairs says, "You three Tories should now join the Grits". While James D. is generally credited with giving good advice on matters political, we'll wager a dollar to a doughnut that not one of these Ex's will seriously consider his latest admonition.

Col. Streight, M.P., for West York, says he believes the Islingtonian, in a two-man contest, would have easily won out for deputy-reeve in Etobicoke. The same might have been true in Toronto Township and Streetsville had the third man kept out of it. This scribe, personally doesn't like triangular contests. It would appear that these three old friends have had more nice things said to, and about, them than if they had been elected. This year, as back-seat drivers, they will be in a position to give plenty of advice to front-seaters and prospective steppers-up. In signing off we would advise tuning in a year from now to hear our broadcast.

ISLINGTON

The annual meeting of Islington public school was held last Wednesday evening, when W. W. Jackson was elected trustee for a three-year term to replace Norman MacDonald, who declined re-election.

The Islington Home and School club held a well attended meeting Tuesday evening of last week. Miss Margaret Gould of Toronto, secretary of the Child Welfare section of the Education Department, gave an excellent address on the proper care of children during their early years. The five periods stressed were pre-natal, first year, pre-school, six to ten years and ten years to adolescence. She also gave a brief talk on Russia, which she visited last year.

The inaugural meeting of Etobicoke Township council was held in the town hall on Monday at 11 a.m. Mr. W. L. Stephens and his newly elected council took the statuory oath of office. Rev. Mr. Greenslade of East Queen St. United church conducted the devotional exercises, and gave timely advice to the 1937 law-makers. Col. Streight, M.P., W. J. Gardhouse, M.L.A. and Dr. Bull, M.O.H. also addressed the gathering.

At the council meeting which followed at 2 p.m. the council introduced some innovations. Among these are the holding of regular meetings at 7.30 p.m. instead of 7 p.m. as heretofore. The whole council will act as a finance committee this year and likewise as a welfare board.

The Etobicoke branch of the Canadian Legion No. 210, which meets regularly in Islington school held their annual elections last week, conducted by Mr. L. M. Menzies provincial secretary of the organization. Officers are: H. Hawkrigg, president; S. Manser and A. McLean, vice-presidents; A. Stafford, secretary-treasurer. Officers of the Women's branch are Mrs. H. Hawkrigg, president; Mrs. S. Evans and Mrs. S. Manser, vice-presidents; Mrs. A. Keary, secretary; Mrs. G. James, treasurer.

This scribe welcomes the opportunity of congratulating you Mr. Editor on the Review having attained its golden Jubilee. Much success on the next fifty years!

SNIDER'S

"SALADA" TEA

STAR RUBY

By Louise Jerrold

Synopsis of Story so Far:—

Albertine Tevans, alone in the world, works in a departmental store. She falls in love with Dennis Maxwell, young jewelry salesman, but is worried by a rumor that he has got into some sort of trouble with his firm. Out of a clear sky, her rich great-Aunt Celia, whom she has never seen, invites her for a visit. The night before she is to leave, Dennis acts very mysteriously, then thrusts a star ruby into her hand and bolts. She later hears that he took a plane to New York. The next day, when she reaches the little town near which her aunt lives, she is met at the station by her aunt's chauffeur — sinister-looking man in dark glasses.

CHAPTER IV.

The car crossed the railroad tracks, rattled noisily over a bridge and followed a course over a series of small hills that reminded Albertine of a roller coaster.

The chauffeur was sitting very erect seemingly intent on the rough road before him, but Albertine had a creepy feeling that, behind his dark glasses, he was watching her in the little rear-view mirror.

It was, she found, less than a thirty-minute drive from the station to her aunt's estate. This was surrounded by a high wall, and there were impressive iron gates, which the chauffeur unlocked and then locked again when they had passed through. A driveway made a graceful ascent between beds of flowers and sloping lawns.

As they neared the house, a great castle-like pile of grey stone, Albertine forgot her feeling of fear. She was excited, thrilled now.

The car stopped and she saw, on the wide steps of the house, a tiny old lady with snow-white hair. Albertine did not wait for the chauffeur to open the door or her. She flung it open herself, leaped out, and flew into the arms outstretched to welcome her.

"Albert's little girl! Albert's," Aunt Celia was saying.

"I—I hope you'll like me," Albertine's voice trembled. After all, there was nothing overpowering about Aunt Celia. She was simply a lonely old lady, now weeping quite openly.

The chauffeur, with Albertine's suit case stood awaiting instructions.

"Take it to the blue room, Bates," Aun Celia said, a bit sharply.

She stumbled as she started up the steps with her niece.

"I'm near-sighed," she explained, "but I won't wear glasses. I hate them! Bates makes me so nervous with his."

"Does he wear those awful dark glasses all the time?"

Aunt Celia nodded. "Some temporary eye trouble. But I needed a new houseman and he had such excellent references. I brought him with me from New York."

Albertine stopped short. "From New York? Oh, yes—the policeman at the depot said——"

"Policeman? Oh, you mean Bob Fletcher of the State Police."

"He said," Albertine continued, "that you have some other guests. If I'd known, I could have come later."

"Poppycock! I invited them to come back from New York with me partly to help entertain you. They are charming young Russians—Count Michael Loupakoff and his sister, Yelena. We'll go into the drawing room now so that you can meet them."

The drawing room was a little overwhelming. It was large and high-ceilinged, with richly colored Persian rugs, elaborately carved antique furniture, and enormous mirrors in heavy gold frames.

At the far end of the room, a man was softly playing a lovely old concert-grand piano. His smooth black head was bent so that Albertine could not see his face. Nearby stood a breath-taking beautiful young woman, who lifted languorous brown eyes and smiled faintly as Albertine and her aunt approached. She said something in an undertone to the man who instantly dropped his hands from the keyboard, and rose.

"Countess Yelena and Count Michael, may I present my great-niece?" Aunt Celia said, with old-fashioned formality.

The Count, whom Albertine guessed to be around thirty, bowed low over her hand and kissed it. Countess Yelena smiled graciously enough, but her eyes were cold.

"So this," she said in a throaty voice, "is Albertine, of whom we have heard so much!" There was a slight, foreign accent to her words. "Lovely, isn't she, Michael?"

"Very lovely." The Count was handsome, with dark eyes and a wisp of a mustache.

It was exactly like a movie, Albertine thought.

"So warm on the train," she heard herself saying. "And I'm, awfully rumpled. I think I'd better go to my room and change."

Yelena turned to Aunt Celia. "Let me go with her. Stairs are so bad for your heart."

The two girls passed Bates in the hall. He had exchanged his chauffeur's coat for one of white linen, but he still wore the colored glasses.

The Countess sighed. "He is such a perfect servant. I was loath to let him go. He was with us for the first two years we were in America. But with times as they are——" She made a vague, fluttering gesture.

Albertine said, "I can't get used to those colored glasses of his. They are so queer. But then, everything is so queer."

"What is queer?" Yelena asked quickly.

"Visiting Aunt Celia—and meeting you. Would—would I be impertinent if I said that you're more beautiful than anyone I've ever seen?"

The Countess' laugh was low and musical. "Of course not. I should bless you for the compliment, because you're such a child, you make me feel very old."

They had reached the door of the blue room. Albertine flushed as she saw the Countess glance at the shabby suitcase, which Bates had placed on a luggage rack.

"I don't know whether Aunt Celia told you," she said, lifting her chin a trifle, "But I work for my living. I'm not apologizing—I only want you to know why I haven't got a lot of pretty things."

"The American girl is so clever," Yelena drawled. "And so pretty. Michael, my brother, is very susceptible to beauty."

Was that a warning, Albertine wondered, when the Countess had gone.

When she had changed, she slipped downstairs again, and found the others still in the drawing room. Yelena, who was moving restlessly about the room, turned as Albertine entered.

"Ah, Albertine is with us again," and Albertine saw her exchange a swift look with Michael over Aunt Celia's head.

Michael rose and came to meet her. "I have been waiting to sing to you. One is permitted to say — certain things—when one's words are set to music."

He seated her near the piano. Then softly, in Russian, he began a song with a poignantly sweet melody.

When he had finished, Yelena said, a trifle sharply, "Miss Tevans is waiting to hear her favorite — the one about the little red boots."

Michael laughed. "My sister," he told Albertine, "doesn't care for 'The Kiss'—the one I just sang. It brings back memories of an old love affair, I imagine."

Yelena whirled, her eye flashing. "As a matter of fact, the last time heard it, you——"

"Yes, yes," Michael interrupted placatingly "I remember. Now for our hostess' favorite."

Albertine felt embarrassed. She glanced at Aunt Celia, but the old lady seemed serenely unconscious of the tension in the air.

Ontario Town Blames It On Leap Year

KIRKLAND LAKE, Ont.—Maybe it was the leap year influence that made marriage figures the only section of the vital statistics department to show increase last year over 1935. Twenty-three more couples were married to reach a total of 236. Natural increase in population was 391 against 409 in 1935.

A FLUFFY CAKE

At this season of the year, everyone is just a little tired of the richness of holiday food. What is left of the Christmas cake can be carefully stored and used at another date, but now is the time to serve something a little less heavy and sweet. A light, fluffy, sponge cake is just the thing. For the bridge, tea, for Sunday night suppers with ice cream or for practically any occasion, this cake will be a credit to the hostess and a joy to the guests.

Sponge cakes depend on air for their fluffy, light perfection. The air may be beaten into the egg whites or yolks, or sifted into the flour and held there by the light, deft folding of the ingredients. Of course, the ingredients must be the finest and particularly the flour. Specially milled, soft winter wheat which has been sifted and re-sifted till it is as fine as the millers can make it, is the first step towards cake successes.

A sponge cake is not necessarily expensive. Even if only one or two eggs are used—it can taste like a luxury cake when made with the right kind of flour.

ORANGE CAKE

(P. 20—Latest Cake Secrets)

1¼ cups sifted cake flour.
1¼ teaspoons baking powder.
¼ teaspoon salt.
1 cup sugar.
1 tablespoon grated orange rind.
2 eggs and 1 egg yolk.
¼ cup orange juice.
¼ cup water.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift together three times. Add ½ cup sugar and orange rind to eggs, and beat with rotary egg beater until thick and lemon-colored; add remaining sugar gradually, beating very thoroughly; then orange juice and water. Add flour gradually, beating with rotary egg beater until smooth. Turn into greased tube pan and bake in moderate oven (350 D. F.) 55 minutes, or until done. Remove from oven and invert pan one hour, or until cold.

EMERGENCY SHELF

Home-made pickles and preserves, olives, canned fruits, meats, soups and fish go a long way in helping the woman who has to entertain be ready and able to meet emergencies easily and graciously. The popular home is always the one in which the guests do not feel they are disrupting the entire household by their presence, the one in which everything appears to run easily and without effort.

The modern emergency shelf is different from that of our mother's because it is not a supply of seldom-used provisions for special occasions only. Although it may include a few specials, it is, for the most part, simply a generous supply of the semi-perishable staples which are always on hand for family use.

In order to help your meals on their merry way to satisfying the purse, the appetite, as well as the body needs, you will find it well worth your while to follow these recipes and use them often:

BARBECUED BEEF

One and a half pounds of round steak or braising beef (three-quarters of an inch thick); salt and pepper and flour.

Method: Pound the meat thoroughly with a wooden beater. Rub with salt and pepper and flour well on both sides. Brown quickly on both sides in a small amount of shortening. Add following sauce:

Sauce: One and one-half cups hot water, 1 tablespoon butter, ¼ teaspoon tobasco sauce, ½ cup tomato catsup, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire Sauce, 1 lemon, juice.

Method: Bring to a boil and pour over the meat. Cover closely and cook slowly over fire for two hours. Garnish with slices of sour pickle and lightly sauted green pepper slices.

MUTTON ROWLETTE

One and a half slice mutton (forequarter), mustard, 2 cups of bread crumbs, ½ cup butter or drippings, 2-3 cup hot water, 1 teaspoon poultry seasoning, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper.

Method: Rub meat with mustard, salt and pepper to taste. Prepare a dressing of the remaining ingredients and place over the meat. Roll meat and dressing and tie or skewer fast. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and dredge with flour. Brown well over in hot shortening. Make a brown gravy by adding two tablespoons of flour and two cups hot water. Pour over meat roll and simmer on top of stove or in a moderate oven, 350 degrees F., until very tender—about three hours.

ORANGE PRUNE SALAD

18-24 prunes, cooked, 1 pkg. cream cheese, 1 tablespoon nuts, chopped, 2 tablespoons top milk, salt and paprika, 2 oranges.

Method: Remove stones from the prunes. Mix cheese, nuts, salt, milk and seasonings and stuff the prunes. Arrange attractively on a lettuce leaf with slices or sections of orange. Serve with a tasty French dressing. Garnish with paprika and serve icy cold.

BAKED BEAN CROQUETTES

Two cups baked beans, salt and pepper, minced onion.

Method: Drain and mash beans into a smooth paste. Season with salt, pepper, onion. Shape into cutlets or roquettes, dip in beaten egg and crumbs and deep fry in shortening at 380 D. F. Serve with tomato catsup.

Serve croquettes with a baked potato. A crisp green salad will complete the meal.

Another Liner Is Contemplated

Cunard-White Star Plans 30,000-Ton Ship

GLASGOW — The Cunard White Star Steamship Line announced last week a contract for construction of another passenger liner for the Atlantic trade is under negotiation. The new vessel will have a tonnage of 30,000 to 40,000 and a speed of 22 or 23 knots. She will be approximately half as large as the Queen Mary.

The keel of "No. 552," sister ship of the Queen Mary, now under construction at the John Brown Company shipyards, has been almost completed, it was announced. When finished, the liner is expected to be the world's largest with a total tonnage of almost 90,000.

Shipyard workers' hopes for the New Year are centred upon the possibility the same company may soon obtain a £7,500,000 ($37,500,000) contract for the construction of one of Britain's new battleships. Some 1,000 are already employed on the "552," and the number is increasing as the work progresses.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

"Proud" In Scotland

A rather significant aspect of the accession of King George VI and the Queen Consort Elizabeth is the sentimental effect that it will have in Scotland. The fact that the Queen is a descendant of an ancient Scottish family should bind the northern part of the United Kingdom to the Monarchy. A good deal of humor has clustered around the remark of an old Scottish woman when she heard that the Princess Louise, the daughter of Queen Victoria, had married the Marquis of Lorne, a scion of the illustrious House of Argyll. "The Queen will be a proud woman this day," she said, "with her daughter marrying an Argyll."—Brantford Expositor.

Safety on the Roads

More strict regulations governing the issuance of drivers' permits, stiffer penalties for violations of traffic laws and stern treatment of those convicted of driving while under the influence of alcoholic beverages would do more to reduce motor accidents than any speed-limit law could do.— The St. Thomas Times-Journal.

A feminine stenographer, employed by a United States railway, has just been retired after 47 years of continuous service and that must be regarded as a pretty long spell. — Brantford Expositor.

A Good Sign

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police can be depended on to know what they are talking about when discussing bad men, what they do and with what weapons. It is therefore all the more encouraging that they have words of praise for the recent legislation requiring the registration of firearms of the revolver type with the police authorities. Certain crimes have been either solved or their solution has been materially helped by the fact that the revolver or pistol used could be traced through records.—Montreal Star.

Wheat Picture Improves

The world's wheat picture grows steadily better for Canada. At the end of 1932 the world's surplus was 625 million bushels; at the end of 1934 it was 375 million bushels; at the end of 1937 (according to estimates) it will be but 125 million bushels. This is what is behind the recent sensational rise in wheat prices, which mean so much for Canada.—Ottawa Journal.

Learn of the North

The year 1936 has been a noteworthy one for Northern Ontario in that an exceptionally large number of Cabinet members and other government luminaries have seen fit to pay this section of the province a visit.

There was a time when it was a rarity indeed for a Minister of the government to venture into the North country, but all that is now passed. During the year just concluding, scarcely a month passed when some important government official did not visit the North. The latest visitor in this respect was Hon. Norman Rogers, Dominion Minister of Labor.—The North Bay Nugget.

More Farms in West

Here is some interesting and rather astonishing news from the West. Despite the drought, the depression and a cessation of immigration during the past five years, there has been an increase of nearly 12,400 farms in the Prairie Provinces, bringing the total up to 300,462 in 1936 compared with 288,079 in 1931.—London Free Press.

The Nightshirt's Appeal

The Charlottetown Guardian points out one peculiarity of the nightshirt which should appeal to every Scottish heart. It is a one-piece item at the laundry, while pyjamas "is" two. Or should we say "are"?

Historic researches conducted by the International Night Shirt Club have disclosed evidence that some of the greatest men in history from Nero to Napoleon, and from Gladstone to Lincoln, wore nightshirts.—St. Mary's Journal-Argus.

Thornton Memorials

The late Sir Henry Thornton could have wished no finer monument than the respect and honor in which his memory is now held by thousands of employees of the Canadian National Railway. That has just been attested by the placing of a memorial plaque in the rotunda of the Union Station in Winnipeg and the placing of similar plaques in fourteen other cities across the Dominion.

The men will never forget the sincere and friendly interest which the late president took in their welfare. He also sought their co-operation. Hence the institution of the joint boards in certain departments of the system, where the men had a voice, along with the management, in settling differences and dealing with problems of various kinds.

The way in which Sir Henry took the men into his confidence, and the considerate and friendly spirit in which he always met them, is now recalled with deep appreciation, and a genuine desire was felt to erect memorials at all the main points on the Canadian National.

Sir Henry Thornton was not only a great railway executive, he was a big man. He showed it in strong human qualities and real concern for the well-being of the large Canadian National family who were making possible the vast improvements of the railway and the high status which it ultimately reached.—Winnipeg Free Press.

For Two-Cent Postage

It would be a commendable idea if the reign of King George VI brought back "penny postage." Canadians would welcome the two cent letter rate warmly. If a two-cent commemorative George VI stamp came with the rate it would give a happy touch to postal reform. — Brandon Sun.

Joyful News

Hint that Ontario may abolish all speed limits will be joyful news, particularly to the chap who's always in a hurry though he can never remember where he wanted to go in the first place.—Windsor Star.

THE EMPIRE

Empire Migration

It is more than 20 years since the steady and uninterrupted flow of migration from Great Britain to the Dominions and Colonies ceased to be a regular feature of the Empire's corporate life. It is true that various specialized efforts have been made in the meantime — in South Africa, for example, by the 1820 Memorial Settlers' Association—with varying degrees of success, to establish British emigrants in the Commonwealth overseas. But unless what we have termed "the steady uninterrupted flow of migration" from Great Britain can be resumed and maintained on the old pre-War level, nothing is more certain than that some of the outstanding qualities of the British race will be lost forever, both in Britain itself and in the Dominions, Colonies and dependencies.—Johannesburg, S.A., Times.

Live on $6 a Week

Somebody said that it was impossible for a girl to live in London on 30s. a week. Somebody replied that thousands of typists and shopgirls were doing it. A woman's magazine trying to discover how the feat was done, has found a girl who pays 12s. 6d. for her bedroom which she lets during the day for 7s. 6d. She spends her evenings at the public library, acquiring knowledge that may enable her to earn more money. Evidently it is just possible, but only for a girl who can be happy without lipstick, new frocks, cinemas, and dances. Could you? Could your daughter?—Manchester Sunday Chronicle.

HOUSES OF OLD CANADA BUILT TO ENDURE FOR CENTURIES

Pioneer Carpenters Took The Place of Masons in Early Days; Stone and Wood Combined

MONTREAL — An old building that was being pulled down by a gang of professional wreckers in the eastern section of the city, revealed strikingly how the pioneers planned, in addition to offering hints for current construction practice. There is only one way to see how a house is really built, and that is when it is going up or coming down, a wrecker observed.

Buildings and homes built more than a century ago are especially interesting, for during that period things were just as experimental as in the present era. Houses of the same period built by different men often show very striking variations in material and structure.

The first homes in Canada were of wood, built by carpenters developed during early colonization days when skilled woodworkers were as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth. Since there were few mansions in the colonies, the first stone houses were built by carpenters, which accounts for the composite type of construction in which wood is used with stone — showing that the workman was more familiar with framework than stone construction.

Big Stone Lacking

It is quite possible that colonial builders used wood in their stone houses often for the good reason that they lacked stone in the larger sizes. Wood lintels over doors and windows are the weakest part in most old houses. Had the houses been built by stone masons instead of carpenters, there would have been arches where long stones were not available.

A survey of old houses in some localities show that stone additions to a home were not bonded with it. The new wall was an entirely independent piece of masonry with no attempt to tooth the new into the old. Early builders realized the danger of disturbing a dry well. They further realized the possibility of the new wall shifting before it came to rest. Almost invariably a series of additions represented individual houses, one built against the other.

The best example of this type of building is the old Wall of London, originally built by the Romans. Bastions uncovered from time to time, along along the walls were not bonded to it. They were built later, and probably in places where the original wall had fallen. These little fortresses rather leaned towards the wall, acting as buttresses. The builders of both the Wall of London and the colonial stone houses foresaw the impossibility of preventing a long wall from cracking and so they made joints without bond at intervals.

Square-Shaped Nails

The tearing down of very old buildings and houses reveals how old-time builders kept their heavy and wide plank floors in place. The boards quite often were face-nailed with iron nails from four inches long, square-shaped and tapered. When these boards are pulled off by the wreckers, the nails are invariably found bent—most of them had turned in the floor joists. Where a nail had hit a hard knot, it curled up in much the same way that a dandelion stem curls up when split.

Anyone planning a heavy colonial floor might draw a lesson from the things exposed by the wreckers and use few nails but the right kind, and large enough to do the job.

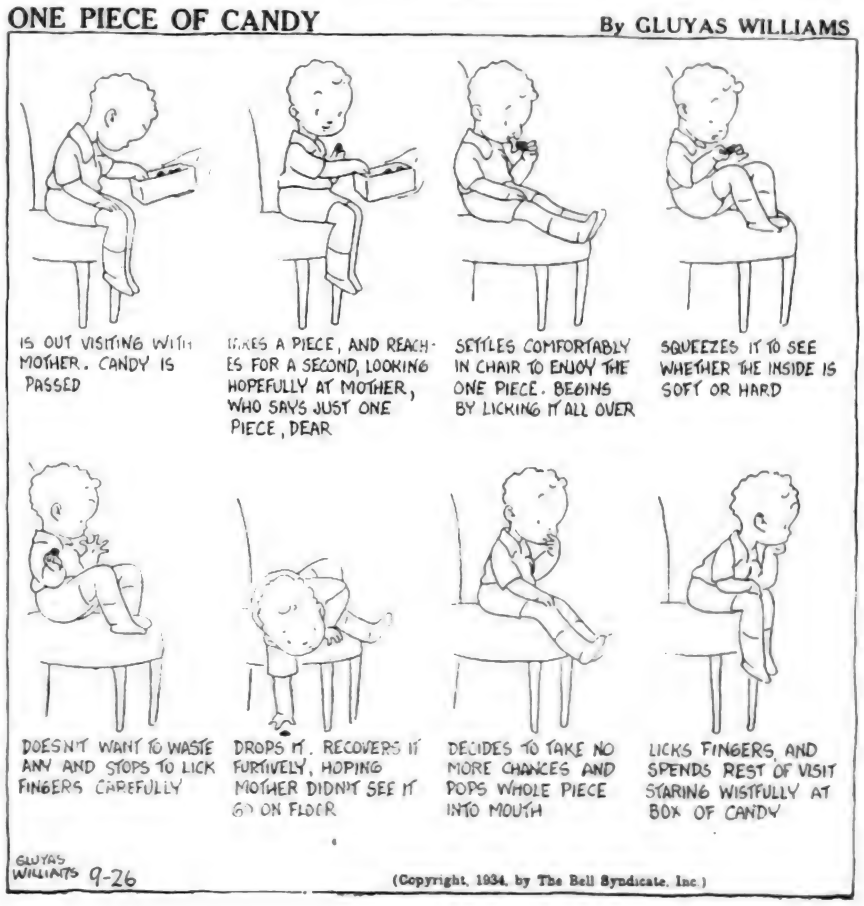
World Output Of Gold High

Big Increase by Russia Is Largely Responsible For New Peak

WASHINGTON — United States treasury experts recently calculated the world's 1936 crop of gold at a new peak and pondered its effect on international money markets.

Production estimates for the world including Russia, suggested the total output of gold this year might approximate 40,000,000 ounces, as compared with a previous peak of 30,000,000 in 1935.

Estimates for the first 10 months of 1936 showed Russia alone mined 4,500,000 ounces more than during the corresponding period last year, and that world production outside Russia had been stepped up 2,500,000 ounces.



Normally, experts said such a large amount of new gold would tend to lower the value of money. The tight grip governments now have on their monetary structures, however, makes it difficult to predict how the outpouring will be reflected in money markets.

SPORT HOT SHOTS

By KEN EDWARDS

Last week we talked about tuna, this week it's swordfish. The new and popular sport is angling for swordfish. This is carried on extensively off the coast of New Zealand and Catalina Island, California.

The first swordfish taken on rod and line off the Atlantic coast weighed 193 pounds; that was in 1927. The mouth of a swordfish is much softer than that of a tuna, therefore it may shake the bait more readily.

If we say that the tuna fish is a terror to fight then the swordfish is a rip snortin' demon when he has been hooked.

Sometimes, when he is harpooned, the free end of the rope is tied to a keg and thrown into the water allowing the big brute to tow it around until exhausted. It may be an hour or more before he is able to be gaffed by the dory-men.

Sometimes the powerfully driven sword has been known to pierce a two-inch plank. The greatest Nova Scotia swordfish catch in its history was 2,229,000 pounds in the year 1935. In 1928 the world's record swordfish was caught on rod and line in New Zealand. It weighed 673 pounds.

A Tribute To Spinach

Writes the Stratford Beacon-Herald — A six days bicycle ride was completed at Madison Gardens the other night, and the cook for these men who pedal night and day for a week (with brief rests) without going anywhere in particular reveals that they consumed half a ton of spinach. String beans came second with 988 pounds. Each man downed seven small steaks per diem, eight quarts of water and a gallon of coffee in the same time. When one is engaged in such strenuous physical tasks it is necessary to "stoke" pretty heavily.

It is rather significant that spinach was the largest item in their diet. This vegetable which is supposed to be so rich in iron has its detractors who say the mineral is not in an assimilable form. But the fact that experienced six-day bicycle riders place such faith in it is evidence that they have found it valuable.

However, if we ever enter a race of that kind we're going to choose Popeye as our partner. He can eat our share as well as his own and do most of the pedalling while we sit gracefully on the back seat and we wave our hand prettily in acknowledgment of the plaudits of the spectators.

Swing Music

HOUSTON, Texas — The popularity of "swing" music will likely wane within a few months, Mrs. Montie Beach, president of the Dancing Masters of America, says, but the tricky tunes may have a lasting influence upon ballroom dancing. "It seems that swing dance music, an apparent novelty which probably will begin to lose its popularity within a few months, may have some influence on the manner of dancing the waltz and fox trots," she says.

Mrs. Beach, first woman president of the dancing masters and only person ever elected to that office four consecutive terms, said laymen, college youth and motion pictures had originated most of the dancing steps in recent years.

"Most steps originate with laymen and are perfected by the masters," she says.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

SNATCHING THE SUNBEAMS

HAVE you ever tried to photograph sunbeams? They make beautiful pictures and are witness to your photographic skill.

Summer and autumn months are especially good for sunbeam pictures. Often when the weather is threatening rain or has just cleared from a shower you will see these bands of light streaming down from the sky through openings in the clouds. You see them too in country roads shaded by tall trees that spread a canopy of leaves over the roadway. The beams come down through the openings in the canopy and when the background of the scene is dark in tone they will be conspicuously outlined. Again in the city streets where there are elevated railroad structures, you often see shafts of light coming down through the trestles. Sometimes, too, they appear in ravines where a waterfall gives off mist.

In each case it means that the air is filled with vapor or dust particles, "the gay motes that people the sunbeams," as a poet called them, doubtless without thinking that it is these motes that are chiefly responsible for making the sunbeams visible.

Of course, for a good picture, sunbeams need a frame or setting, clouds, trees, some of the landscape, objects in the city streets. For this it is usually necessary to expose longer than you would if the sunbeams were not present. This means in most instances a time exposure of about one second and a small stop opening, although a snapshot may do for bands of light sharply outlined against dark clouds, or other dark background. Sometimes these light paths appear during a summer shower, and, if pictured thus, the longer exposure is advisable.

However, to give specific instructions for catching sunbeams on your film is really futile, considering the varying light conditions under which they appear. The safest way is to make several shots of the scene at different exposures, remembering that the experience is that in most instances the exposure needs to be longer than as if you were taking the same picture without the sunbeams. But when you have captured these elusive but beautiful phenomena of nature in the midst of a setting that is also beautiful, you will have a picture that you will be as proud of as any you have ever taken.

Sunbeams of the early morning. A simple box camera caught them.

SPORTING COMMENTS

News and Views

By AL. RYCKMAN

The T.D.I.A.A. basketball season is picking up speed and to-morrow when the Port Credit High teams (senior and junior) invade the Etobicoke gym, we hope the blue and gold tornado will pick up a few baskets, points or something. So far the Seniors have been shooting as though the hoop was the size of the grand canyon, whereas the juniors, freshmen, young rookies, lower school grads or whatever you desire to call them, have mastered the art of control, perfect target tossing and top-notch team work.

The Seniors and their rivals (oddly enough, the other schools) are in a four-team group this season, while the battling juniors are in a five-team circuit. The reason for this strange state of affairs is that Mimico has no senior cage squad.

The other three teams in the senior section are Brampton, Long Branch and Etobicoke. The Etobicoke Flashes (that's what we'll call them) are supposed to be the class of the league. They defeated Long Branch 51-8 last Friday (via superior shooting and accurate passing route). The winner of this group, which is the western division of the T.D.I.A.A., meets the eastern champions for the title of the Toronto District (all prizes, no blanks); so we may have both our seniors and juniors parked in the finals yet.

Speaking of our two squads, the seniors bowed to Brampton last Friday 21-15, while the juniors defeated the northern crew 19-7.

HERE THEY ARE

In every organization there are a few persons who seem to be continually before the public eye and the Highway Inter-Church Softball League is no exception. To begin with there are the managers (and who isn't during softball debates).

McElhinney (St. Andrew's) — Old enough to stay up after nine—Favourite expression, "As manager of this team."

George Izatt (Clarkson) — The silent type who always agrees with everybody—"Where's the batting order?"

Charles Fulardeau (Trinity) — At the serious age—always claims "We should have won."

Frank Perluisi (St. Mary's) — Known as partner—"No, No. Umpire!"

Bill Kennedy (Lakeview) — Idol of the baseball team—"Let's replay the game."

Donald Woodall (Cooksville)—Just about the right age—"When's the meeting?"

Mister Vaughan (Lorne Park)—Player-manager superb—"Well I think myself."

The following is the executive of which we are a member:

Mister McEachern—Very quiet—"According to the rules."

Selwyn Adamson — The gentleman behind the pipe—likes to hear about everything—"I suggest."

The old maestro (that's us)—Usually has a headache—"What, another protest?"

Thank you dear people for reading our pen portraits. The applause meter shows that we have won 50 pieces of string and a week's engagement at the Psychopathic Hospital.

HOCKEY HIGHLIGHTS AND SUCH

It's a long time since there has been so much hockey in this section of the county, as is being stirred up by the Streetsville juvenile and the Port Credit juniors in the T.H.L. tournament series.

According to little Oscar (no relation to the sardines) last Friday was a great day in the ice circles at Ravina rink. The millers from Lambton Mills took it on the chin as the lad in the Streetsville nets (incidentally we would like to know this chap's name) hung up a well deserved shut out 1-0. On the same evening, the Credit Pirates were almost scalped by Davey's Indians but managed to wind up the fixture with a draw 1-1.

When the maestro lived in Hamilton, hockey had a lot to do with stirring up that desire to write about what we saw. At that time your correspondent (that's us) was chief time-keeper in the Barton Street Arena for a city league.

We remember the meeting of two teams in particular (that we witnessed in the old ice palace) to be one of the hottest games of amateur hockey that we have ever seen. The only score was a shot from the face-off that landed in the nets. From then on it was a great old battle. One lad rushed right through the entire team and with only the goalie to beat, shot the puck up into the sixty-cent seats and crashed into the net. (If it had been vice versa, the laddie would have tied up the contest). This said player was going so fast that if the exit door had been left open we're sure he would have gone half way up the ambitious city mountain.

MUSHBALL NOTES

To get back to the softball executive, the league schedule will start earlier this year and a champion declared by August 15th, in order to qualify for provincial honours.

Any team (girls or boys) desiring to enter the Highway loop for 1937, drop us a line as soon as possible for negotiations with the O.A.S.A. are already under way.

Flash, Flash, Flash—the league last year operated a juvenile series for those interested (Lakeview won it). And so now that the story is back in a flash with another flash, we take pleasure in announcing another juvenile section will probably be the order of the season for 1937.

Having exhausted our million dollar material, we now predict that this year will be the best year since the calendar was invented or maybe it was the showboat.

Sister Mrs. James E. Spence and Sister Miss Mary Spence also attended the regular monthly meeting of Jeanie Gordon Ladies' Orange Benevolent Association, No. 464, on the same evening in the Orange Hall, at Streetsville, of which they are members.

Mr. Millar, the new mail carrier of Hornby, R.R. No. 2 (8th and 9th lines) Trafalgar Township, is giving very good satisfaction at the present time. We wish him success in the future. He started his new work on Jan. 1st, 1937.

DRUMQUIN

Jan. 11th, 1937.

The annual congregational meeting of the Bethel United church will be held in the church on Thursday evening, Jan. 21st, 1937. A general attendance of the congregation is requested at this important meeting.

The Bethel Sabbath school, under the superintendency of Mr. Emerson Ford, is in a prosperous condition at the present time.

The many friends of Mrs. Chester Featherston, will regret hearing of her continued illness. It is hoped that she may gain speedy recovery.

The recent rains gave the farmers and others a smiling face, as to getting a supply of water for the farm stock and house cisterns, etc.

TRINITY CHURCH NOTES

On Monday evening last the A.Y.P.A. held its first meeting of the New Year. Reports were given, and the Treasurer's report showed a substantial balance. After the business, Rev. G. F. Banks, of Erindale, installed the new officers for the ensuing year, and presented them with their badge of office. Mr. Banks then spoke to the members, and stressed the importance of an A.Y.P.A. group in any Church. It is only by co-operation from all the members that a group can attain success; and we are looking forward for such co-operation this year. Mr. Banks wished the Executive and members much success in their work. The remainder of the evening was spent in playing progressive games, and the winners were Mrs. Bonham and Dick Dadd. Lunch was served and the meeting closed with prayer.

Next Monday evening, January 18, the Girls' Auxiliary meet in the Parish Hall. Mrs. Waglano, of Toronto, a leader of Girls' work in this diocese, will be present to speak to the girls. We hope all the girls will be present and others who might be interested.

The Annual Vestry meeting takes place next Tuesday evening, January 19th, in the Parish Hall at 8 p.m. Reports from all departments will be given, and it is expected that all the congregation will be present at this very important meeting. Lunch will be served at the conclusion of the meeting. Don't forget the date, Tuesday, January 19th.

By press reports the Coyne estate has been sold to a Brantford man, Mr. Larkin. This is the second farm sold on the Seventh Line within the last few months. It looks like the trend from the city to the country.

BOOK REVIEWS

A Happy New Year to the Editor and family and the many readers of your paper, is the wish of your scribe.

One of the less well known but by no means least endearing characteristics of the Right Honourable W. L. Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada, is his affection for and knowledge of birds. Of the latest volume in the Perkins Bull Historical Series he says appreciatively:

"At my country home in Kingsmere, I expect to derive much pleasure from the pages of From Humming-bird to Eagle. Each summer I have seen humming-birds on my front verandah. One summer, the pigeons I had were carried off by hawks, the size of eagles. In between, we have many of the varieties of the birds mentioned in your book. I shall seek to gain a more intimate acquaintance with them through its pages."

PRESENTATION TO JAMES SPENCE

Trafalgar People Celebrate In Streetsville

The most important and most looked for man in this part of the community, Hornby Centre, for the past twelve years, was Mr. James Spence. With a large budget of news some of joy, some of sorrow, and of daily happenings, the world over, he would start from Hornby across the base line, to 9th line, down this line to the base line, between the old and new Survey, to the 8th line, and up this line to the starting point, distributing the news in sixty boxes and collecting the outgoing mail.

Mr. Spence is a middle aged man, active in mind and body, with only one fault we know of—he is a Tory—but he was always just as obliging to a Grit as to a Tory. And the Grits were always pleased to see him get the weather reports, and the world's transactions out of the headlines of Grit papers, when putting them in the mail box. And after twelve years of mail service "Lest we might forget," and he would fold his tent like the Arabs, and as silently glide away." Three of the box holders started the ball rolling to give honour to one who was faithful and obliging to everyone.

Then all of Mr. Spence's customers joined in with the leaders to give Mr. Spence a good send off, and in the Orange Hall, Streetsville, last night, a large crowd assembled to celebrate with him in his favorite sport, dancing and euchre. The tables of euchre were kept busy.

Then Mr. Spence was called to the platform, and the following address was read, and part of it sung by Mrs. Cliff May. The presentation of a beautiful rocking chair, bridge lamp and smoker was made by Mrs. Will Leslie. Mr. Spence said, "The years I spent carrying the mail was one of the pleasantest chapters in my life. And I cannot find words to express the great pleasure it has given me to be here to-night and hear these kind words and receive these beautiful gifts." The music for the dance was furnished by a first class orchesra. Mr. Spence was really the belle of the ball and enjoyed it very much. A lovely lunch was served.

SANDY

THE ADDRESS

DEAR MR. SPENCE

The reason why we gathered together here to-night and invited you to be with us, is, we want to repeat to you some of the things we often said behind your back.

We always found you so courteous and obliging. You were ever willing and ready to do something for your friends, any day and every day. Looking back over the past twelve years, when you took the outgoing mail and put the daily mail in sixty boxes on your route you seldom (if ever) made a mistake. Six days every week, fifty two weeks in the year, for twelve years, meant a great deal of hard labor

Tune—Happy Day

In Summer, Autumn, Winter, Spring
What joy and sorrow you would bring
In spring when trees were not in bud,
And rain and thaw would bring us mud.
Then we were happy every day.
To see our mail man on his way.

If it would rain, or snow, or blow,
That didn't matter, you would go,
In snowbanks higher than the fence,
That wouldn't hold back Jimmy Spence,
We often heard the people say
How Jimmy loves a stormy day.

This address we now present to you
Will be in this week's Streetsville Review
Then in the future history's tale
We'll be how Jimmy brought our mail.
Then what a pleasant thing to say
You never missed a single day.

And now, we ask you to accept this gift to keep your memory fresh as a memorial token of the happy past spent together.

And may Heaven's richest blessing be with you, your wife and daughter, Mary, now and through all your life, is the sincere wish of all the box-holders of R. R. 2, Hornby, Ont.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON III.

JESUS THE WATER OF LIFE
(John 4: 1—54.)
Printed Text John 4: 7—26

Golden Text—Whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst. John 4:14.

The Lesson in Its Setting

Time.—December, A.D. 27.

Place.—The discourse with the Samaritan woman took place at Sychar in Central Palestine between Mt. Gerizim and Mount Ebal. The rest of the chapter narrates events occurring in Galilee, especially at Cana and Capernaum.

7. There cometh a woman of Samaria to draw water. "A woman, and as such, lightly regarded by the popular doctors (cf. v. 27): a Samaritan, and as such, despised by the Jews.

Jesus said unto her, Give me a drink. "He opened the conversation with a request on the human level, the level of His own human necessity.

8. For His disciples were gone away into the city to buy food. It is possible that one of the disciples carried a vessel for drawing water up from the well, and that, because they were absent, a stranger had to be asked to draw water up for the Lord.

9. The Samaritan woman therefore saith unto him, How is it that thou, being a Jew, askest drink of me? The word here translated "askest" is a word of petition, as from an inferior to a superior; but when Christ refers to that request of hers, He does not take up and allow her word, but uses the phrase, "who is it that saith to thee." Who am a Samaritan woman. (For Jews have no dealings with Samaritans.) "Rabbinis precept forbade Jews to eat bread or drink wine with the Samaritans. The Jews despised them as a mongrel people with nondescript faith (2 Kings 17: 24 ff.)."

10. Jesus answered and said unto her, If thou knewest the gift of God. As far as we know, the water was not drawn up for the quenching of Jesus' thirst. He drops the matter of his need for literal water, and He turns the attention of the woman from things physical to things spiritual.

And who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink. Two things then this woman did not know, the gift of God, and the identity of the person who stood before her. Thou wouldest have asked of him, and he would have given thee living water. God's greatest gifts are available to His children, whatever their merits, simply by asking (Matt. 7: 7, 8). "a common expression for running spring water of a cistern or reservoir, and used as a symbol of spiritual blessings with great frequency in the Old Testament."

11. The woman saith unto Him, Sir, Thou hast nothing to draw with, and the well is deep: whence then hast Thou that living water? The woman finds it impossible to comprehend the spiritual aspects of our Lord's statement, and, for the most part, confines her attention to the matter of drawing literal water from the well immediately before them; yet, in her question, "Whence, then, hast Thou living water?"

12. Art Thou greater than our father Jacob, who gave us the well, and drank thereof himself, and his sons, and his cattle? There is nothing in the Bible to substantiate the claim of the Samaritans that they descended from Joseph, and hence could call Jacob their father. "When the Samaritans asked Alexander the Great to excuse them from tribute in the sabbatical year because, as true sons of Joseph they did not till their land that year, he pronounced their claim an imposture and destroyed Samaria."

13. Jesus answered and said unto her, Every one that drinketh of his water shall thirst again. The Lord Jesus does not stop to compare Himself with Jacob, but He does state a truism which she could not deny, namely, that the water in this well could only temporarily quench the thirst of any who drink of it.

14. But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst. (Cf. 6: 35; Rev. 7: 16; 21: 6) Here Christ gathers to a head innumerable promises of the Old Testament, and thus claims them as fulfilled in Himself; e.g., Isa. 41: 18; 48:21; 49: 10; 55:1. See also Psalm 36:9; Jer. 2: 13; 17:13. But the water I shall give him shall become in him a well of water springing up unto eternal life. Christ received into the heart by a believer imparts eternal life. The spiritual life which we have from Christ can never dry up. It goes on and on for all eternity.

15. The woman saith unto Him, Sir, give me this water, that I thirst not, neither come all the way hither to draw. Not only has the curiosity of the women been aroused, but Christ has stirred up within her heart a deep longing for this living water of which He is speaking, though she does not fully comprehend what He has been saying.

Jesus saith unto her, Go, call thy husband, and come hither. One is surprised at the sudden change in the line of Jesus' conversation. At the moment when she asked the Lord for this living water, He told her to go back to the city. He did not bestow upon this woman the gift of eternal life when she was keeping buried out of His sight, and probably out of serious consideration, the shameful sin in which she was living. Christ must bring her to an acknowledgment and a confession of this sin first.

17. The woman answered and said unto Him, I have no husband. Apparently this was an attempt to evade an examination of which she was afraid. "She would rather have these pages unturned. Jesus saith unto her, Thou saidst well, I have no husband: 18. For thou hast had five husbands; and he whom thou now hast is not thy husband; this hast thou said truly. We must not forget that this terrible resume of this woman's life was not something which she confessed, but was something which He had knowledge of and reminded her of.

19. The woman saith unto Him, Sir, I perceive that thou art a prophet. The word here translated "perceive" "marks contemplation, not immediate perception."

20. Our fathers worshipped in this domain; and ye say, that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship. The mountain to which this woman referred is Mount Gerizim, which was for the Samaritans the holy mountain of the world.

21. Jesus saith unto her, Woman believe me, the hour cometh when neither in this mountain, nor in Jerusalem, shall ye worship the Father. Our Lord does not decide the question as to the superiority of one location over another, though, of course, if He had spoken about it, He would have exposed the fradulent claims of the Samaritans; but He simply announces to her that the time would come when the worship of the Father would be determined no longer by some geographical limitation.

22. Ye worship that which ye know not: we worship that which we know; for salvation is from the Jews. The Samaritan religion had only the Pentateuch for its Bible: it repudiated the Psalms and the writings of the prophets. Furthermore, it had added many idolatrous practices and pagan superstitions, so that the God whom they worshipped was not the true Jehovah of the Old Testament.

23. But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth. True worshippers here are contrasted not so much with the insincere as with those who worship imperfectly. That which is imperfect can never be finally true. To worship "in spirit" is to commune with God in one's spirit, for the preposition "in" has reference to the sphere in which worship moves.

For such doth the Father seek to be His worshippers. "The Father is seeking in the Son for true worshippers, and therefore men are encouraged and enabled to seek Him in spirit and truth (John 1: 17)."

24. God is a Spirit. By saying tha God is a Spirit, Christ means that God has no bodily form. On the other hand, God does have substance or essence. God is not a mere idea, or a construction of the mind, like a mathematical formula.

And they that worship Him must worship in spirit and truth. Worship of God which is not in accordance with Gods nature is not true worship.

25. The woman saith unto Him, I know that Messiah cometh (he that is called Christ): when He is come, He will declare unto us all things. This is the only place in the New Testament where Christ is referred to as the Messiah, with the single exception of a proceding notice in this same Gospel (1:41). The word "Messiah means the Anointed One.

26. Jesus saith unto her, I that speak unto thee am He. These words probably did not express a surprising truth to the women, who had been led to see so many great spiritual truths this hour. It is an undeniable acknowledgment, on the part of Christ, that He believed Himself to be the Messiah sent from God. If we do not accept His verdict about Himself, we characterize His as one who spoke falsely, or one who was under a delusion.

Farm Problems

Conducted by
PROFESSOR HENRY G. BELL
with the co-operation of the various departments of Ontario Agricultural College

Question:— (a) "Has there been very much experimental work carried on in Ontario to determine if the use of fertilizer in this province is profitable? Will it pay me to use fertilizer wth my spring grain crop?

(b) I intend to grow 10 acres of table turnips (Rutabagas) on a clay loam soil which will receive eight loads of barnyard manure per acre. What kind of fertilizer would be suitable for these conditions and how should it be sown?"—T. B., Waterloo County.

Answer:—(a) The Ontario Agricultural College has been carrying on fertilizer experiments in various parts of the province for several year. During the last seven years, a very definite campaign of testing the suitability of various fertilizers on the farmers' own farms has been in progress. Over 6500 plots have been conducted on a total of over 1300 farms. This work has proven quite definitely that profit is to be gained by wise use of fertilizers in supplementing the fertility of the soil and of manure which has accumulated on the farm. The average gain in cereals that has been obtained is from 10 to 15 bushels per acre. Fertilizers on potatoes, over a six-year period have given an average increase of 55 bushels per acre. Fertilizers on alfalfa have produced an average increase of almost two tons per acre. All these increases and similar improvement in other crops have been obtained from moderate application of such as 250 lbs. per acre on cereals, 375 lbs. per acre on alfalfa and 750 lbs. per acre on potatoes. At prices which have prevailed for fertilizers and for crops, exceeding good interest on money invested in fertilizer has been realized. (b) On turnips, 2-12-10 fertilizer has given largest yields, at the rate of 200 to 250 lbs. per acre. This is a fairly heavy application to make through the fertilizer dropper attached to the turnip drill. It has been found better practice to drill the fertilizer over the turnip area before the land is ridged for seeding.

Question: (a) "I grow cabbage and cauliflower for early market. My soil is a light sandy loam and I would like to know what fertilizer and the quantity per acre should be used to give the earliest results.

(b) I have an eight-year-old asparagus bed which produces an excellent yield so far as quantity is concerned, but after about the third cutting, the tips become stringy. Can this be corrected by the use of a balanced fertilizer and what analysis would you recommend? Also, please give me any other information which you think would benefit the crop. Up until now this asparagus bed has never received anything but barnyard manure.

(c) Do I need to use fertilizer when I follow a rotation in which a green crop, usually alfalfa, is plowed under every four years and the land receives a good application of manure every four to five years."—W. S. S., Essex.

Answer:—(a) For cabbage and cauliflower, good results have been obtained from use of a 4-8-10 fertilizer at the rate of 1500-2000 lbs. per acre. This should be worked into the soil along the rows, before the plants are transplanted. Particularly good results are obtained also from an additional light application of nitrate of soda around the plants, but not touching them, about two weeks after the plants have been set out and sometimes again at a period of another two weeks. Do not apply more than 10 lbs. per acre in one application.

(b) Asparagus can be helped materially by the addition of fertilizer in spring. We would not advise a mixed fertilizer, but an application of 100-200 lbs. per acre of nitrate of soda, or cyanamid, should give good results. This should be scattered along the asparagus rows before the tips begin to show and worked into the soil by light harrowing. After the asparagus is cut, the application of such fertilizer as 4-8-10 gives great strength to the crop for the next year.

(c) The rotation of crops which includes legumes such as alfalfa and sweet clover or common clover, adds organic matter to the soil and makes some addition of nitrogen. Other crops take out nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash, and of course legumes remove considerable potash and phosphoric acid from the soil. If manure is added, quite a bit of nitrogen will be supplied, a small amount of phosphoric acid and a valuable amount of potash, so that for general cropping systems with good rotation of crops, there is necessity for addition of more phosphoric acid and potash than is returned in manure. Whether or not there is need of more nitrogen will depend entirely on the type of farming and the soil type.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif., — The bride-training is something more than teaching the art of home-making, the Santa Barbara State College has decided. A girl also should know how to make a living, as well as how to run a home.

The bride-training course at the college has been expanded to prepare graduates not only for marriage but for careers as teachers, dieticians, journalists, equipment specialists and clothing and furnishing specialists.

In the Day's News

A newspaperman who works at the copy desk of one of the big dailies reports that one of the items passing through his hands from the Associated Press wire read in part, "A. W. Tillinghast, noted golf architect and P.G.A. consultant, will inspect each of the proposed sites, and left today for Starving Mother Park, Va., for his first assignment." Half an hour later a correction came hustling along. Make read 'left today for Hungry Mother Park, Va., (Not [illegible] Ed."

To Ease a Headache Fast

Get Real Quick-Acting, Quick-Dissolving "ASPIRIN"

See How "ASPIRIN" Tablets Work

In 2 seconds by stop watch, an "Aspirin" tablet starts to disintegrate and go to work. Drop an "Aspirin" tablet into a glass of water. By the time it hits the bottom of the glass it is disintegrating. What happens in this glass . . . happens in your stomach.

For QUICK Relief

If you suffer from headaches what you want is quick relief.

"Aspirin" tablets give quick relief, for one reason, because they dissolve or disintegrate almost instantly they touch moisture. (Note illustration above.)

Hence—when you take an "Aspirin" tablet it starts to dissolve almost as quickly as you swallow it. And thus is ready to start working almost instantly . . . headaches, neuralgia and neuritis pains start easing almost at once.

● "Aspirin" tablets are made in Canada. "Aspirin" is the registered trade-mark of the Bayer Company, Limited, of Windsor, Ontario. Look for the name Bayer in the form of a cross on every tablet.

MINING FLASHES

The No. 1 diamond drill hole at the Kenora property of Kenecho Gold Mines has reached a depth of 52[illegible] feet, and has intersected 16 feet of mineralization, including three feet of quartz believed to be a new vein, according to a wire received at the head office from Chas. Young, managing director. The quartz contains pyrite and fine sulphides, while the wall rock is also mineralized for some distance on either side, it is stated.

Heva Cadillac Gold Mines is preparing to speed up work on its property located 1½ miles south and slightly east of the O'Brien in Cadillac Township, Quebec, officials report. At present, the company is building a permanent set of camps and a large crew of men will be put to work to open up a shear zone which was discovered some time ago, which consists of a sheared porphyry with narrow blue quartz veins. The transmission line from Northern Canada Power is about one mile distant from the northern boundary of the property and the property is less than a mile from the new C.N.R. line from Senneterre to Amos.

Production at Shawkey Gold Mining Company for December was the best month in the mine's history, with output valued at $41,000, according to V. M. Ryan, mine manager. For the first ten months of 1936 output totalled $267,558, with $10,000 to tailings and a general overall extraction of 96.5%. There is a considerable tie up in the mill circuit due to the unusually large percentage of free gold in the ore. Drilling continues from underground, with success having been met with, while a programme of drilling on surface is to be carried on in an effort to disclose the extensions of the veins encountered on an adjoining property to the west. Drilling is also to be done to establish the No. 1 vein at a depth of 250 feet below the 575-foot level.

In a communication to Empress Consolidated Gold Mines the General Engineering Company reports that in accordance with the agreement between the two companies, the latter undertook to act as technical superintendent of the property. Correlation of all available sampling, drilling and assay data has been the primary objective and this work has been actively prosecuted under their direction since Dec. 15th. Most of the assaying since Dec. 15th has been of sections of drill core and work is proceeding of sampling the adit, surface exposures, and additional drill core. R. W. Howe, consulting engineer of the company, reports rapid progress being made in re-check work. Decision to re-sample all work to date has made it necessary to run an unusually large number of assays. The assay plant is being operated two shifts a day. Two drills are engaged in a series recommended by engineers in the locality of Trench E, west of the lower adit, and Trench F east of the adit, in both of which considerable free gold was exposed in previous work.

Doreva Gold Mines has made important additions to its already large holdings in Bousquet Township, Quebec, during the last few days. The acquisitions comprise the south half of the Vaughan claims lying to the north; claims owned by Engineers Exploration the east; the Gravelle group of claims adjoining the Engineers Exploration on the north, and the Ash group adjoining the Gravelle to the east. The company now holds a total contiguous area in excess of 4,200 acres extending a great distance along the strike of the Cadillac ore zone. Development is being advanced with drills and surface crews with portable compressors engaged in operations. The work is a formulation of a definite program of underground development after determining the best location with a working shaft. A prospect shaft is now being sunk at one of the important showings. A crew of 42 men are employed.

Underground work on the 200-foot level at the Sturgeon River property of Brengold Mines indicates a possibility that No. 2 and No. 7 veins will intersect at a point below the 200-foot level, officials report. To explore the possibilities at greater depth as indicated by underground work already completed, as rapidly as possible, a diamond drill contract has been let and the drills will be working underground within the next few days. A very comprehensive underground diamond drill program has been laid out and the area to the south and west of the present underground workings will also be explored by a number of long flat holes. Lateral work continues on the 100 and 200-foot levels, with veins Nos. 2 and 7 being opened on the former horizon. Drifting on No. 2 vein is also underway on the 200-foot level, while a crosscut is being driven to the southwest to explore the downward continuation of No. 7 vein.

The Machine

"It is said that machinery manufactures unemployment, and the machine has been cursed as something which takes work from men. This is a superficial point of view which cannot be justified except in a very narrow segment of production. If the machine creates unemployment in one industry, it causes other industries to arise. It puts at the disposition of the masses articles formerly reserved to the aristocracy. It gives birth to new needs, new trades, and new opportunities for profit. Did the linotype create unemployment in the printing industry? For a few months, perhaps. After that time, it inspired periodicals by the hundreds and books by the thousand. The machine killed the stagecoach but it gave birth to the automobile.

"It is impossible to demonstrate whether the loss or the gain is the greater. In very truth, the only irrefutable proof would be to show that unemployment made its appearance with the machine. But that is impossible. There were unemployed before the eighteenth century. The only difference is that they were called the poor, or beggars, or vagabonds. It will be sufficient to consult the arsenal of laws against begging in France and England to realize that unemployment is a hereditary plague, far antedating the utilization of steam or coal."—Je Sui. Partout, Paris, France.

Junior Farmers Visit International Harvester Plant

When prize-winning boys and girls, 75 in number, members of Junior Farm Clubs, representing the different provinces, visited Hamilton a short time ago, one of the most interesting interludes was a trip to the Hamilton works of the International Harvester Company and the picture shown above was taken after a trip through the large plant. F. M. Morton, vice-president, who is also honorary president of the Canadian Council on Girls' and Boys' work, received the group and conducted them on a trip through the farm implement factory and binder mill. Mr. Morton is seen in the centre of the second row. At noon there was a tasty luncheon served, at which J. G. Rayner, president of the Canadian Council, extended a generous word of praise to the Harvester company for its courtesy and contribution to the pleasant associations to be carried away by each visitor as a life-time memory of the trip. Among other tributes, Mr. Rayner explained that a part of the funds necessary to carry on club work accrued from the proceeds of a gift made years ago by the International Harvester Company. Among those in the group are the following Ontario Club Members:— W. W. Werry, Hampton, Ont.; G. F. Robson, Denfield, Ont.; Frank J. Giffen, Creemore, Ont.; Mac Walker, Campbellcroft, Ont.; Floyd Metcalf, Bowmanville, Ont.; Beverley Shouldice, Shallow Lake, Ont.; Carrol Nicholls, Port Hope, Ont.; Arthur Banting, Aliston, Ont.

Like King George V., the new King has associated himself with Scouting in various ways. He attended the great London gathering of Wolf Cubs held at Hyde Park in 1921, the Imperial Jamboree at Wembley in 1924 and the London Cup "Palava" of 1926.

A photograph of the new King, when the Duke of York, shows him in full Scout kit and wearing the Silver Wolf, Scouting's highest honorary award. The decoration was presented by Lord Baden-Powell in 1926, in recognition of the Prince's service to the Movement as President of the Boy Scouts Association of Yorkshire and of London.

His ideas on the responsibilities of citizenship were thus outlined to a gathering of youth by the King when Duke of York and President of the London Boy Scouts Association:

"I want you to realize that you have a great responsibility to take up with the duties of citizenship that lie before you. You may think these problems have nothing to do with you; that it is other people who have them to solve. But don't believe that. It is only when every man and woman realize their responsibilities to their country in general that a happy country can result, because not one of us is put into this world for himself alone. Make yourself effective in your job, and do it with all your might, because dishonest and ineffective work is wrong to your fellows and to your country. Therefore we must all do the best we can."

Prince Gustaf Adolf of Sweden will be a personal page of the contingent of Boy Scouts representing that country next Summer at the 5th International Scout Jamboree to be held in Holland. His staff of assistants will include Count Folke Bernadotte.

Accident Prevention

More protective equipment is being issued to Britain's pitmen, states the Safety in Mines Research Board. The result is a decline in colliery accident rates, particularly those relative to head injuries. In 1933, miners in one South Wales pit, unprotected by hats, suffered from head wounds at the rate of 0.79 per 1,000 man shifts worked. But last year when eighty five per cent of the men that worked underground wore hats, the rate dropped to 0.075 per 1,000 man shifts. Altogether 140,000 of these hard, strongly-built hats were supplied to miners in 1935.

Other accident risks have been minimized by the adoption of safety boots with reinforced toes and instep. More conveyor-belt workers are now wearing gloves. But it is insisted the glove habit, once adopted, should not suddenly be discarded, hands becoming soft under its influence. Knee and elbow pads proved successful in forestalling beat-knee and beat-elbow. Of non-fatal accidents, eye injuries exact the severest toll. Here goggles are a reliable precaution.

At Steetley Colliery, where research workers tested an experimental lighting installation at the coal face, greater safety, it was found, occurred with increased illumination. Unfortunately, the Board's invaluable investigations are hampered by lack of funds.

New Breed of Sheep for Canadian Farmers

Shown above on their arrival in Canada in the Canadian Pacific Steamships freighter Beaverbrae are several sheep that will mean a great deal to Canadian farmers in the future. They are a gift to the Province of Ontario from the Kerry Hill Flock Book Society in North Wales and are an outstanding breed of general utility sheep, which, due to their adaptability to any environment, are expected to gain rapid favor in this country.

The gift of the pen of ten ewes and one ram was arranged through the good offices of W. Rupert Davies, president and editor of the Kingston, Ont., Whig-Standard. These prize winners, products of generations of breeding with the most careful methods of selection being exercised, are destined for the Ontario Agricultural Society at Guelph, from where the strain is expected to spread to other parts of the country.

An idea of the economic and eugenic value of the gift pen may be derived from the fact that the eleven animals took first prize at the annual Kerry Hill Sheep Fair where some 10,000 to 15,000 sheep were shown. Besides being able to withstand bleak weather, these sheep are handsome and symmetrical, and will, it is felt, prove of great value to Canadian farmers.

TOWN AND PROVINCE .....

Trafalgar Twp

As a result of the recent changes in the policy of the provincial government affecting the income tax, old age pensions and mothers' allowance, taxpayers in Trafalgar township will have to absorb an increase in the tax-rate of approximately one mill unless other adjustments are made, according to E. K. James, township clerk.

Mr. James explained that in 1936 the township received a rebate of $7,265 from the province for the income tax collected in the area and turned over to the government. Under the new arrangement there will be no rebate of course, he said.

"It has been estimated that Halton county will save $10,000 because the government is paying the pensions and allowances," Mr. James continued. "Our share of this saving would be about 27 per cent., or $2,700, so that the difference to the township between the rebate and the saving will mean a loss of approximately $4,500."

The loss of the rebate would mean an increase in the Trafalgar township tax rate of one and a half mills. Because the government is taking over payment of the pensions and allowances, the Halton county rate will benefit by half a mill, so that ultimately the change means an increase of one mill to the Trafalgar taxpayer, Mr. James declared.

PEEL COUNTY HAS A SURPLUS

Ending 1936 with a surplus of $5,877, Peel county will be in a position this year to cut expenditures by between $40,000 and $45,000 according to county officials.

Approximately $43,000 collected from Peel taxpayers will not have to be levied for this year. The largest item will be the assumption of old age pension and mother's allowance costs by the province, which last year cost the county $19,258. Another $14,848, levied for debentures in 1936, will be dropped because the debentures have expired. Last year, the county had to levy for a $700 deficit from the preceding year, which will not be necessary in 1937. Other savings to the county are in highway maintenance and interest, as well as this year's surplus.

LET US SMILE

Customer (in drug store): "I want to buy a plow."

Clerk: "I'm sorry, sir, but we don't carry plows."

Customer: "This is a heck of a drug store."

The Open Column

The Globe and Mail reminds us a lot of this game "Monopoly" that has become so popular around Peel County lately. Now that George McCullagh has the two morning papers cornered, he is trying to boost the price. But George may be sadly surprised by the results of his little jiggle. Quite a number of us don't like the new paper, and, after all, we don't have to buy it.

Municipalities in Peel are all bragging about how little money they spent last year, and how little they intend to spend this year. We advise councillors to remember that one reason they have had to economize so stringently during the past few years is that previous councils ran up debts for public works which were not desperately needed at the time, and which would provide ample work for relief recipients today, and which, incidentally, could be built much more cheaply at present.

And, incidentally, we would like to point out that, from a sound financial viewpoint, the legal restrictions against the creation of a surplus of municipal funds have worked more than a little hardship on taxpayers who have had to dig deep to pay off debenture debts. If municipalities were allowed to accumulate reasonable surpluses, they could pay cash for pavements, waterworks, and so forth, and taxation would be reduced by the very considerable amount of interest which has to be paid on loans for the construction of public works.

Georgetown's hockey club made a tactical error in engaging Acton on wet ice last Friday night. The Acton team is too rugged for the paper boys unless the latter can outskate the tannery town. And Friday night, players were adding the Australian crawl to their hockey tactics. Goalkeepers were standing in an inch of water, and had to dodge several gallons of aqua not to pura when an opposing player let go with a shot.

The inception of a parking by-law in Brampton, which would provide some parking space for rural customers who do their weekly shopping Saturday night, has been held up, and will be held up, by members of the council who like to take their cars down town, and leave them parked where they feel like parking for as long as they like.

EDEN W.A.

The Eden Women's Association held the first meeting of this year on Wednesday, Jan. 6, at the home of Mrs. Elmer May, Mrs. E. Waite presiding.

Rev. T. D. Jones gave a very helpful introductory talk on a series of studies on the subject, "Faith," closing with prayer.

A paper on "The New Year" was given by Mrs. E. Waite, followed with a poem "A Prayer for the New Year" read by Mrs. A. May.

It was arranged to hold a social evening at the church on Monday eve, Jan. 11th at which Mr. S. Cordingley will give his talk on his recent trip "Around the Continent".

Plans were made to have Mr. Aiken of Canada Starch Co. Ltd., hold "A Cooking School" in Streetsville on Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 10th.

The February meeting in the form of a "Quilting Bee" will be held at the home of Mrs. Waite.

"Matte" Is Beverage of Some Distant Countries

"Matte" is to Chili, Paraguay, Brazil, Uruguay and Argentina what tea is to European countries, being drunk even more than coffee. The tree or bush grows exclusively in the temperate region, from 1,500 to 3,000 feet above sea level. It is from 12 to 20 feet in height and belongs to the hollies, but is without spinous leaves. In the state of Parana alone, it covers an area of about 140,000 square kilometers.

The leaves are prepared in two distinct ways, according to a writer in the Indianapolis News: (1) Ground into powder to be used in the curi (or gourd) and the decoction, made with boiling water, is sucked up through a perforated tube; (2) prepared as a sort of tea in flakes, with some fine stalks, and taken in cups. The infusion is of a green color. When brewed in a pot, a Brazilian custom is to put a piece of glowing chrcoal in it, which turns it to a dark, brownish green, and makes it stronger. It improves also by boiling. Unlike tea, two brewings may be made of the same handful of leaves, with the scond often stronger than the first. It is said to have no aftermath, no injurious influence on the digestive organs. It has been reported that, during a Paraguayan war, soldiers marched and fought for days with no other sustenance than matte. Taken in native fashion, without sugar, it is said to be a blood purifier.

Madstones Are Believed to Prevent Hydrophobia

Madstone is the name of certain objects believed to have the power of drawing poison from wounds made by mad dogs and venomous snakes. They are supposed to be especially efficacious in preventing hydrophobia or rabies. The United States Department of Agriculture speaks of them as mythical stones, and says their alleged virtues have no scientific foundation, unless it is merely psychological effect.

The bezoar stone, which is a biliary calculus from the gall-bladder of an animal, is a common form of madstone, according to a writer in the Indianapolis News. Another form is composed of halloysite, which absorbs moisture with avidity and adheres to a moist surface until nearly saturated.

Those who believe in the madstone, test it for genuineness by placing it against the roof of the mouth. If it adheres it is genuine, they say; if it drops, it is not.

A pebble of carbonate of lime found in the stomach of a deer was once sent to the National museum as a genuine madstone. On another occasion two hair balls from a buffalo's stomach were presented with the statement that one of them had been "successfully used in two cases of dog-bite." To the same institution was offered a madstone of "proven efficiency" for the sum of $1,000. It proved to be merely a polished seed of Kentucky coffee tree.

The Semaphore

In 1793, Claude Chappe, a young French engineer, established between Paris and Lille an experimental line of semaphore telegraph stations. The essential features of his apparatus were an upright post on the top of which was pivoted a movable beam or cross arm carrying, at each end, another movable arm. The apparatus was so arranged that the positions of these three movable units could be changed, as desired, from within the tower on which the semaphore was mounted. Various combinations or sequences of these positions could be used, either for code phrase or alphabetical communication. Carlyle's "The French Revolution" gives a dramatic account of the telegraphing to Paris, by means of a line of Chappe semaphores, of the news of the surrender of the town of Conde. Chappe's system was widely used in France and similar systems were adopted in practically all European countries and in the United States.

Pitcairn Island

Pitcairn Island is a solitary island in the Pacific ocean, between Australia and South America, in 25 degrees 3 minutes south latitude and 130 degrees 8 minutes west longitude. It is about 2 miles long and 1 mile broad. It was discovered by Carteret in 1767. In 1790 it was taken possession of by nine of the mutineers of H. M. S. Bounty with six Tahitian men and a dozen women, the ring-leader being called Christian. Of nine British sailors, only one, Adams, was left in 1800. The island was annexed to Britain in 1839. Nearly 200 of the islanders were transferred to Norfolk island in 1856, but a number of them afterward returned.

The West Indies

The West Indies are a loose chain of tropical islands expanding in a great curve from Florida south and east to South America. They are otherwise known as the Greater Antilles and Lesser Antilles and include among the larger islands, Cuba, Haiti, Porto Rico, Jamaica and many others. They were called West Indies by the Spaniards who thought them to lie off the coast of India.

Third of Life Passed Asleep

The person who lives to be seventy years old passes 23 years asleep. That is the estimate of a scientific committee set at Nice, France, to inquire how persons occupy their lives. Apart from sleep, the committee's report says, the average person talks for 13 years, eats for six years, passes 23 years in pleasure and washes for 18 months.

The Open Column

There is always someone who has reasons to offer why a good movement cannot succeed and will in the long run, turn out to be a bad thing for somebody. Always, some bright person has to throw a monkey-wrench into the works just when they seem to be revolving to the best advantage. At Georgetown, just now, some expert monkey-wrench hurlers are tuning up their arms for the midget N.H.L. which has been organized to teach youngsters of the town to play good hockey and cultivate healthy habits.

One of the chief groups of squawkers is the arena board of the town. Last Saturday, the kids were playing a double header, with Charlie Conacher as the guest official. The arena company had been making, according to reports current in Georgetown, all of eight or nine dollars of a Saturday afternoon, from pleasure skating.

The midget N.H.L. officials guaranteed $15 for the afternoon, then arranged to have free skating for all persons attending the games. About 400 people turned out to see the games. Yet the treasurer of the arena, at the ticket wicket, was very unhappy when he learned that the players of the league were also to have free skating.

This little peanut league is one of the best moves made in Georgetown for many a moon. The kids get a great kick out of it, and play a brand of hockey that is considerably better than that exhibited by intermediate teams of the town, up to the current season, in comparison of ages and sizes. The youngsters are kept off the streets at night by their contracts with the league, and the townsfolk get a lot of real amusement from watching the games. Yet, on Saturday afternoon, the officials in charge of the arena switched off more than half the lights, leaving the rink too [illegible] for comfortable vision, before [illegible] of the two games was much more than half over.

The same arena board is anxious to install artificial ice machinery in their rink, so that hockey and skating will be real drawing cards in the town. But, from past performances, the writer judges it unlikely that Georgetown could weld together a good team from local material unless something more is done to develop material than had been done in the town prior to the current season.

At the same time that the arena company is bemoaning its mythical losses, the intermediate and junior hockey teams are bewailing the use of the ice for midget hockey because they, the intermediate and junior teams, do not get sufficient opportunity to practice. They have some reason to bewail, in a way, for no one who has seen the two teams play will deny that they need practice, and plenty of it. The intermediate team, which, it must be admitted, has improved greatly this year, is the chief bewailing unit, but the junior team, which needs practice the most, has also a few choice groans to utter.

The writer, however, would suggest that the players of the two big teams might learn a thing or so if they would drop down to the rink when the kids are playing, and watch how the youngsters pass the puck and follow the instruction that have been given them by hockey experts, of whom "King" Clancy of the Toronto Maple Leafs was one. A youngster, apparently, needs to be told just once. Some of the big guns of the Georgetown O.H.A. teams were told many times about their hockey faults, but they kept right on making the same mistakes.

If the Georgetown kids are given a break, and their league carried on from year to year, the town should become one of the most noted hockey centres of the province. Given a good ice surface, Georgetown should, within from ten to fifteen years, become as well known in hockey as New Hamburg or Grimsby. But let the bewailers and bemoaners and monkey-wrench heavers get in their bit of work, and the value of the whole scheme will go pfft, and Georgetown can sink back to a comfortable cellar position, as far as hockey is concerned.

STAR RUBY

By Louise Jerrold

Albertine Tevans, a department store salesgirl, falls in love with Dennis Maxwell, jewelry salesman, but is worried by a rumor that he has got into some sort of trouble with his firm. Out of a clear sky, her rich great-aunt Celia Tevans, whom she has never seen, invites her for a visit. The night before she is to leave, Dennis acts very mysteriously, then thrusts a star ruby into her hand, and bolts. The next day she arrives at her aunt's estate to find two other guests—Countess Yelena Loupakoff and her brother, Count Michael. There seems to be tension in the air, and Aunt Celia's houseman and chauffeur, Bates, who always wears dark glasses, gives Albertine the creeps.

CHAPTER V.

At four o'clock, Bates served tea. And shortly afterwards, Aunt Ceila took Albertine off to rest before dinner.

Too excited to sleep, Albertine curled up on her bed and reviewed the past few hours. Michael was fascinating, but not so nice as Denny, she thought loyally. Yelena was only pretending to like her. Well, she could live happily without the Countess liking her, she decided. Aunt Ceila was an old darling. How silly it had been to be afraid of her!

She dressed leisurely for dinner. A rose-colored chiffon with a softly blurred pattern of flowers was vastly becoming. She studied her reflection in the mirror. She would wear it again some time for Denny . . . .

A knock at the door startled her. Aunt Ceila entered, rustling in black silk. A choker of diamonds and emeralds replaced the white net, boned collar that she had worn during the day. She was holding a short pearl necklace, and Albertine noticed that more diamonds and emeralds flashed from her thin fingers.

"I want you to have these pearls" she said abruptly.

Albertine was amazed. "Oh—you shouldn't—"

"Pearls," Aunt Ceila interrupted, "should be worn only while one's skin is smooth and white. What good are they to me, now that I'm wrinkled as an old apple?"

She fastened them about her niece's throat. Albertine looked at them in the mirror.

"Pearls," she breathed. "Real pearls!"

She turned, threw her arms about her aunt, and kissed her.

"I love you, Aunt Ceila," she whispered.

Three softly struck gongs sounded from below. "Dinner," said Aunt Celia, wiping her eyes vigorously.

* * *

They found Yelena and Michael already in the drawing room, Yelena in blue satin, with a necklace of large sapphires sparkling from her white throat. Michael looked handsomer than ever in dinner clothes.

The Countess seemed to have regained her good humor. She was very gay during dinner. It was Michael who spoke in sad reminiscence, of their childhood days in Russia, of their lost estates. They were fortunate not to be penniless, as were so many of the Russian nobility.

"And things wouldn't be so bad with us as they are if I hadn't been reckless," Yelena admitted charmingly. "Your American stock market seemed such a good place to recoup our fortune. And we has so many—what you call tips—from our friends in Paris."

"Well," Aunt Ceila contributed with satisfaction, "as I told you in New York, stock market crashes and bank failures can never affect my investments. Jewels are the only safe investment."

"You are so very, very wise, my friend," Yelena purred. "And Albertine here is so clever, too. Imagine, Michael, this child has been supporting herself. What is it that you do?"

"I stand behind a counter from 9 in the morning until 5.30 at night, selling hosiery," Albertine said.

"But Albertine's working days are over," Aunt Celia remarked. "Everything I possess will be hers—probably shortly. And until then, she will make her home with me."

Albertine's eyes misted. She reached out and laid a hand on her aunt's but said nothing.

* * *

After coffee in the drawing-room, Yelena said she had letters to write, and Aunt Celia left Michael to amuse himself while she took Albertine up to her suite, saying she had something to show her.

She led the girl into the bedroom and opened a small wall safe. Her hands, with the flashing jewels, trembled as she took out a leather case and laid it on the bed.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

DEVIL'S FOOD CAKE ALWAYS A FAVORITE

According to movie titles "The Devil Is A Sissy" and according to recipe titles, he is a "cake eater" All of which would lend us to believe that he is not the rough, tough and nasty guy we have always thought. However, we heartily approve of his taste in cake because there are few humans who don't love Devil's Food Cake.

This is a particularly good family cake because children love the flavour and it is really good for them. It is not too heavy and besides the nourishing ingredients such as butter, sugar and eggs which go into it, there is rich, energy-building chocolate which every child loves.

There is one very important point about making this cake and it should be considered first of all. That is the kind of cake flour to be used. Just any flour will not turn out the kind of Devil's Food Cake you dream about. Nor will the addition of corn starch or potato flour do the trick. Your cake is a success or failure when you purchase the flour. And to make it a success — use only the finest cake flour on the market. Years have been spent to perfect it—it has been ground and re ground to just the right texture for use in cake making.

1¾ teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
2-3 cups butter or other shortening
1½ cups sugar
3 eggs, well beaten
3 squares unsweetened chocolate melted
¾ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla

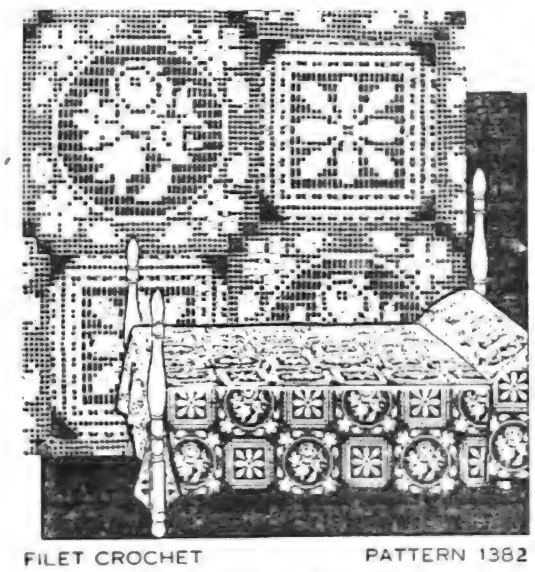
Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs and beat well; then chocolate and beat until smooth. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla. Bake in two greased 9-inch layer pans in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 30 minutes, or until done.

If you want a plain frosting, spread Seven Minute frosting between layers and on top and sides of cake. To dress up the frosting a bit, fold in 1 cup quartered marshmallows Seven Minute frosting before spreading, or sprinkle 1 can cocoanut, southern style, over the plain frosting while it is still soft.

There is a grand filling for Devil's Food Cake, which further makes it even more popular than before. Try this Raisin Nut Filling and note the fast disappearance of the cake.

¾ cup brown sugar firmly packed
2 tablespoons butter
¼ cup water
¾ cup broken walnut meats, toasted
¾ cup cup seeded raisins
2 tablespoons cream or rich milk (about)

Heat sugar, butter and water in skillet, and cook until a small amount of mixture forms a soft ball in cold water (326 degrees F.) Remove from fire, add nuts and raisins. Add cream until of right consistency to spread. Makes enough filling to spread between two 9-inch layers.



A FISH TIP

Good-sized fish that is, fish weighing four to five pounds, are usually baked. The secret of baking fish so it is tasty lies in getting the fish done. Actually the same rules apply to baking fish as to roasting meat. The fish may be spread out in the pan, flesh side up and baked in a very hot oven with sufficient fat to flavor well. A fish of large size, however, is especially delicious if its cavity is filled with a stuffing before it is baked.

Whether the fish is stuffed or not, the same principles apply in its baking as in the roasting of meat; that is, the heat of a quick, hot oven sears the flesh, keeps in the juices, and prevents the loss of flavor. Often in the baking of fish it is necessary to add fat. This may be done by putting fat of some kind into the pan with the fish, by spreading strips of bacon over the fish, or by larding it.

Clean the fish thoroughly, bone if desired, and sprinkle it inside and out with salt. If stuffing is to be used fill with desired stuffing and sew up. Place in a dripping pan and add some bacon fat or a piece of salt pork, or place several slices of bacon around it. Bake in a hot oven for about one hour. After it has been in the oven for about 15 minutes baste with the fat that will be found in the bottom of the pan and continue to baste every 10 minutes until the fish is well done. Remove from the pan to platter, garnish with parsley and slices of lemon and serve plain, or with any desired sauce.

Women and Newspapers

Observes the Sudbury Star — Recently a Florida newspaper offered a year's subscription for the best answer to the question: "Why is a woman like a newspaper?" Here are a few of the answers that were sent in:

"Because you can't believe anything they say."

"Because they are thinner now than they used to be."

"Because they are easy to read."

"Because they are well worth looking over."

"Because back numbers are not usually worth what they cost."

"Because they always have the last word."

But the one that copped the subscription was: "Because every man should have one of his own and not run after his neighbour's."

The Oil Lantern Goes

The Illinois commerce commission has ordered the railroads to abolish the old oil-burning lanterns which, for nearly a century, have been carried by railway trainmen. In their stead the railways must supply battery-operated electric lanterns.

The old lanterns were inefficient and unreliable. The flame might be extinguished by a high wind. In extremely cold weather the wick refused to draw. Smoke and soot would darken the globe. A dropped lantern might start a fire. Trainmen had to run the risk of using them around tank cars and other cars containing highly volatile fluids.—Chicago Daily News.

Notable Food Discovery Results From Husband's Concern

Custard Powder and Baking Powder Invented 100 Years Ago

In 1837, the year of Queen Victoria's Accession, a young English Scientist, Mr Alfred Bird F.C.S., successfully carried out a period of study and experimentation, culminating with his discovery of the first Custard Powder. About the same time he further revolutionized the World of Cooking by creating a Baking Powder. It is a matter of record that both of these developments sprang from Mr Bird's anxiety to apply his knowledge and skill for the benefit of his delicate wife, who could not digest certain foods.

Now after 100 years the grandson of that young inventor heads the largest undertaking of its kind in the World, and Products bearing the famous family name are now sold throughout the civilized world.

It is a striking and happy coincidence that Sir Robert Bird, Bart. M.P., should celebrate in this Coronation year the Centenary of a family concern which was founded in the first year of Queen Victoria's reign.

Need Great Men

There never was a time in the world's history, probably, when there was a graver need fo. great men, than there is today. Important events are transpiring today which will shape the destinies of every nation on earth. New thought in the matter of government, economic control, religion and most other departments of human activity, are appearing on the horizon, demanding the judgment of the best minds that the world can produce. The masses look to their leaders for competent guidance, and this is the task of great men.

Which recalls the words of Matthew Arnold, who in defining the great men of culture stated they are "those who have a passion for diffusing, for making prevail, for carrying from one end of society to the other, the best knowledge, the best ideas of their time; who have labored to divest knowledge of all that was harsh, uncouth, difficult, abstract, professional exclusive; to humanize it, to make it efficient outside the clique of the cultivated and learned, yet still remaining the best knowledge and thought of the time."—Chatham News.

Cost of Carelessness

In the first eleven months of this year, statistics show, the use of motor vehicles in this province increased 7.6 per cent., the number of traffic accidents increased 10 per cent., the number of persons injured in accidents increased 27.5 per cent. and the property damage was up 33.3 per cent. Eighty-four persons were killed in these eleven months, against eighty-two in the same period in 1935, and the record of death has been at least maintained in December. Accident, injury damage are up far out of proportion to the increase in motor traffic.—Vancouver Province.

Mrs. Simpson

No matter what turn events may take, Mrs. Wallis Simpson remains a public figure for life. Down the years she is bound to crop up in the news and is almost certain to find a place in history. Future historians may appraise this place, future novelists and playwrights may clothe her as a romantic figure ranking with the glamorous women of the ages for whom men laid down their worldly possessions if not their souls. Most of us in Canada know little about Mrs. Simpson except what we have found out from reading. Reports from across the Atlantic suggest an intense hatred for her on the part of certain people there who feel that she has been a siren who has lured a king from his duty and carried a throne close to the rocks. But one hears little of that in Western Canada. After all, what woman might not have her head turned by attention that appears to run to adoration from one who was the most popular king and one of the most popular and sought-after men in the world?—Regina Leader-Post.

The Good They Do

Cost of maintaining legations abroad is negligible compared to the benefits which can be achieved. They are well worth the expenditures, if only to promote more friendly relations; but there are also the concrete benefits in the way of increased trade to be considered. For some time there has been talk of a trade agreement between Canada and Belgium, and setting up a legation at Ottawa should help to pave the way.—Windsor Star.

"What Is Needed"

. . . The truth is that the authorities, sometimes with the connivance of the courts, are themselves to blame in large part for the added dangers to highway travel in Ontario. They are today reaping the harvest of light sentences and reduced charges and unless they change their ways, there is little possibility of the situation being improved.

What is needed more than anything else in dealing with the minority that persists in conducting itself without regard to the safety of others on the road is not further education, because that has been tried and found wanting, but fearless enforcement of the laws that are already embodied in the highway code and an end of all the evasions that have been practised by the Crown authorities and the courts.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

Indians

The Federal efforts to better the position of the Indians have had good results in the dominion as well as in the United States. But it is felt that much more could be accomplished for them and an enlarged program was announced at Ottawa the other day. The department will devote particular attention to improving their skill as trappers and to helping them to take better care of furs before these are marketed.

There are many other ways in which they can be given assistance that will enable them to reach a higher economic plane. The working out of the plans will be followed with keen interest, as the national responsibility for the welfare of the Indian population is widely recognized.—Edmonton Journal.

Jingle In The Pocket

The year end brought with it more tangible evidences of progress in Nova Scotia than for many dreary years. There have been the additional car order at Trenton and the prospect of more to follow; the order for steel rails at Sydney and the prospect of more yet to come; and all time record shipment of coal up the St. Lawrence and the anticipated continuing demand; the seven and a half percent. wage increase in steel and subsidiary plants, the doubled Christmas bonus in the pay envelope at Westville; and now another may be added to these with the extra week's wages found in the pay envelope of the employees of the Oxford Foundry and Machine Company.

Laurier once said, folk did not need to be told when prosperity existed, they knew it by the jingle in their pockets. It would be far from the truth to say that everybody is prosperous, but this at least is true, that many have felt more of a jingle in their pockets than they have known for a long while.—Halifax Chronicle.

Ignorant Females

—I have been warned by three different feminine friends that if I take any more cracks at them about not knowing what drafts on a stove are there for, the said friendships will come to a sudden end. In a humble and apologetic tone of voice I could remark (couldn't I now?) if the cap fits, wear it!

How about trying to catch them young by teaching it in the schools. They could have toy stoves and the little darlings could learn, at an early age, to shut the drafts. No more foolish than lots of the rubbish taught to the sons and daughters of the hard-working and hard-up) parents at the present time.—Kamloops Sentinel.

Candid Admission

"There is nothing connected with the Press that has ever got me into such great trouble as the accuracy of the reports of what I have said," confides Lord Derby. And such admirable honest and candor is worthy of a place in the records.—St. Catharines Standard.

THE EMPIRE

When War Comes

As long as Hitler and Mussolini continue to get their way without war, Europe is in no immediate danger of conflict. But this is merely another way of saying that when war comes it will be at the time and under the conditions most favorable to the Fascist cause. Peace on these terms can offer no security.—The Nation, London.

"Mickle Maks Muckle"

The moderate investments of our thrifty classes have piled up Britain's principal assets. Well over £1,000,000,000 is invested in the Post Office Savings Banks and National Savings Certificates, and there are many hundreds of millions more in life assurance policies and in the keeping of building societies. Analysis has shown that the average holdings of stocks and shares in the railway companies, the big banks, and many of our great industries do not exceed a few hundred pounds. Like the army of workmen which reared the pyramids, the hosts of the "small men" have reared the great edifice of British wealth.—London Daily Mail.

Kind Word

Observes the New York Sun — A great many girls and boys have been encouraged in politeness by a little reward from a relative or an intimate friend of the family.

"You've been very nice to me Mary," says Aunt Almira as she departs after a visit, "and here's something to put in your bank." "Now, Mira," says mother, "you must not spoil the child; she only does as she should." "Well," says Almira, "this ain't agoin' to spoil her, and she is a nice girl."

"Tommy," says Uncle Bill, "you took good care of me; don't spend all this in one place." "Shucks, uncle, I liked to do it," says Tommy. "Bill," says father, "I won't have you giving money to Tommy; it'll teach him bad habits; it'll make a beggar out of him." "Now Pete, you keep still," says Bill, "or I'll tell Tommy some things about you."

And Pete keeps still, the children are not spoiled, and if they think that perhaps good manners are not penalized they will help to make a pleasanter world.

Baby Weighs Nineteen Pounds at Birth

When the eleventh child of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Brigner, of Waverley, Ohio, was born, he weighed nineteen pounds — only two pounds less than a year-old normal child. Two years ago Mrs. Brigner gave birth to twins, weighing a total of twenty pounds. She weighs 135.

Income is $452,000,000 Higher Than Last Year

All Classes of Nation's Business Did Better — Manufacturing Takes Precedence of Agriculture

OTTAWA— Canada's national income from all sources for 1936 was estimated recently by the Canadian Press at $4,545,000,000, which was $452,000,000 greater than in 1935 and $1,351,700,000 greater than the low year of 1933.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics has records of the values created covering a considerable portion of the year for five-eights of all persons in Canada gainfully employed. With these figures as a basis and assuming the remaining three-eights of those actually working are equally productive of national wealth the national income for the 12 months was estimated.

Manufacturers produced the greatest wealth with agriculture second mining third, tourist traffic fourth, and forestry fourth. Everyone of the big industries showed increases.

Percentage increase for industries in 1936 over 1935 were as follows:—Agriculture 10.6, forestry 19.0, fisheries 3.0, trapping 9.0, mining, 20.4, electric power 9.4, construction, 8.5, repairs 8.6, manufactures, 6.

The tourist traffic is among the industries unreported by the Bureau of Statistics. Estimates from other sources, however, place the value of this industry at $250,000,000 in 1936, compared with $202,000,000 in 1935 and $117,000,000 in 1933.

At $4,545,000,000 the 1936 grand total is 11 per cent above $4,093,926,000 in 1935. The figure for 1933 was $3,193,000,000.

After eliminating the value of materials consumed in the production process and making allowance for some duplication in reports under different headings, the estimate of commodity production in Canada for 1936 was about $2,841,000,000, an increase of 42.5 per cent above $1,996,000,000 in 1933 and 11 per cent higher than $2,559,000,000 in 1935.

Weather Handicapped Crops

Partly owing to crop reduction due to adverse weather conditions in recent years, manufacturers now definitely take precedence over agriculture in net value of production. Since 1933, however, agriculture has shown an annual increase in value.

Based on 29 factors, the index of manufacturing production in the first nine months of 1936 had risen to 107.8 compared with 97.6 in the same period of 1935. The price index, on the base of 1926 equals 100, was 75.5 in November against 72.9 in November, 1935.

Employment in manufacturing was up to 103.1 for the 10 months compared with 96.7 last year.

Among factors showing heavy increases were raw cotton imports, up 31.5 per cent at 129,445,000 pounds in 11 months, and steel ingot production up 20.8 per cent at 1,010,598 long tons in the same comparison. Pig iron production showed a 15.3 per cent advance at 610,000 long tons.

Acreage of wheat planted in 1936 was up 4.9 per cent at 25,289,000 acres, but yield fell 20 per cent and the production of 233,500,000 bushels was 15.8 per cent below 277,339,000 bushels in 1935.

Higher Farm Prices

Wheat prices mounted, however, with the result that the value of production was placed at $200,085,000, which is 17.5 per cent higher than $170,333,000 last year.

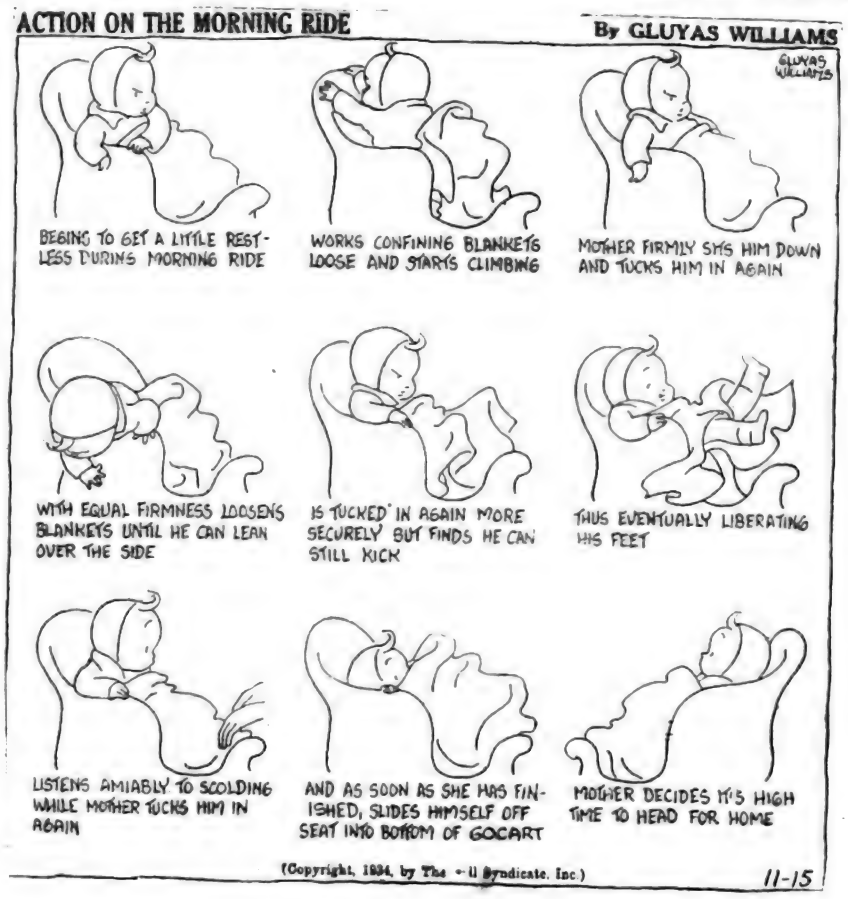
All field crops had a value of $594,000,000, a gain of 16.7 per cent over $509,000,000.

During the 11 months creamery butter production increased 3.4 per cent at 238,266,000 pounds, and factory cheese output was up 15.5 per cent at 114,375,000 pounds.

Contributing to the spectacular improvement in mining, every branch of the industry except copper showed production increases in comparison. Gold was up 15.2 per cent at 2, 746,531 fine ounces, silver 9.6 per cent at 18,110,327 fine ounces, and nickel 6.2 per cent at 123,569,125 pounds. Highest percentage increases were gypsum, 44.4 per cent at 568,138 tons, and asbestos, 44.1 per cent at 204,235 tons.

An increase of 6.3 per cent in the wholesale price index of the wood and paper group to 69.4 had substantial effect on the value of forestry products. Newsprint production was up 15.2 per cent at 2,890,000 tons for the first 11 months of 1936. Exports of planks and boards for the same period were 1,565,756,000 board feet, an improvement of 47.8 per cent. Employment in logging was 3.7 per cent better, bringing the index to 127 at the end of November.

New Clipper To Have 2 Floors, Stairway



SPOKANE, Wash.. — A 40 passenger Clipper ship with two floors and a circular stairway is the latest idea in gigantic airplane designing.

C. N. Monteith, of Seattle, executive vice-president of Boeing Aircraft Company, told the Chamber of Commerce his firm is building the air giant for Pan-American Airways.

Monteith said the Clipper would have a top speed of 200 miles an hour from four 1,500-horsepower motors, a wingspread of 152 feet, an over-all length of 109 feet. The 82,000 pound plane will be designed to leave the water in 50 seconds, fully loaded.

And With Many Acres Idle in U.S.!

"With an eye to the large and the growing market in the United States for perilla oil a drying agent now being used extensively by manufacturers of paint products the Manchurian government plans to extend its perilla seed crop to approximately 600,000 tons per annum during the next five years, according to cable reports reaching C. C. Concannon, the Chief of the Commerce Department's Chemical Division."

Perilla seed can be grown in the United States, particularly in the South. In the Orient the seed yields twenty to thirty bushels an acre. The yield is 400 to 700 pounds, worth 8 to 10 cents a pound. The cake is valued highly in Japan as a nitrogen fertilized source, worth probably $20 a ton. The oil is an indispensable supplement to our soybean industry. Mixed with soy oil, it cuts the drying time down to as low as twenty-five per cent.

The Manchurian government esteems our perilla oil market so highly as to take steps expanded planting. Our government takes the trouble to get a cabled report about that. Why shouldn't our government also take every practicable step toward hastening perilla production by American farmers? So far as we know, it has done nothing whatever. More statesmanlike than public officials, the paint and varnish industry, interested in having an American supply, has conducted tests that show the crop will grow here.—The Country Home Magazine.

Doesn't Say It

Christopher Billopp writing in the Baltimore Sun observes:

Smith meets Jones and says "Hello, Jones, how are you?"

To which Jones might, with perfect justice reply:

"I am beginning to feel my age. I have several teeth that are giving me trouble, and there are unmistakable evidences that I am on the verge of a cold. There is a shooting pain that runs up my right leg and ends in the small of the back.

"My right elbow is sore. It feels as if a tendon had been strained. My eyes are tired from having used them so much and I suspect that I do need to have my glasses changed. A callous place on my left foot is giving me trouble.

"I was nervous last night and unable to immediately drop off to sleep and this morning I awoke ahead of the alarm clock. My digestion is not what it was, and at the noon hour I did not eat my pie a la mode with the customary relish. I think I am getting a little deaf in one ear.

"I find that I am rather short-winded and I am a little disturbed about my heart. On the other hand, I am conscious of other symptoms that lead me to suspect that there is something radically wrong with my liver, appendix, gall-bladder and other internal organs. Sometimes I've buzzings in my head that lead me to suspect the beginning of some mental disorder. If I were the kind of man who easily grows alarmed about himself I would go at once to a doctor and have him look me over. In fact I'm just terrible."

But, instead, he replies, "I'm feeling fine, Smith. And I hope you are the same."

To A Pekinese

Paul Rayson in the New York Sun

Smug and imperious little beast,
A canine caricature, no less,
Your self-assurance is at least
More than a lot of us possess.

With perfect poise and sober tread,
You join the afternoon parade.
Which is the leader, which the led?
It's hard to answer, I'm afraid.

Your knitted jacket has a trim
And tailored elegance. No doubt
They humour every foolish whim
A dog can think of, walking out.

Well, it's no wonder you've begun
To have delusions. I admit
That lording it is lots of fun—
Who wouldn't make the most of it?

Stationed at the apartment door,
You bark and bark with all your might,
A midget Cerberus whose roar
Is more disarming than his bite!

Cows Demonstrate Music Appreciation

GREENFIELD, Ind.—Almon Wickard installed a radio in his cowshed a week ago so he could listen to his favorite programs while milking.

It didn't occur to him, he said, that the cows would pay any attention to the contraption, but it had some surprising results. Before the installation a three-gallon bucket would hold all the milk his two cows gave, Wickard said, but now their lacteal output shows a daily increase of two gallons.

And the farmer finds that while turning away from the feed box the cows eat only about half as much as they used to.

WHEEL PICTURES

The motion of the ferris wheel was stopped at 1/100 second at f.8. The exposure of the still locomotive wheel was 1/10 second at f.16. The wheel of the barrow was taken at f.8, exposure 1/25 second, after a long study of lights and shadows and much changing of camera position.

WHEELS—man's first invention—make photographic subjects of absorbing interest. There is a lot of fun in making a hobby of wheel pictures.

There are so many kinds of wheels — wagon wheels, spinning wheels, automobile wheels, locomotive wheels, water wheels, steering wheels, cog wheels and the thousand and one other sorts and sizes used in machinery. And every one of them, when pictured in a photograph, tells some kind of story of human interest.

Wheels tell you tales of speed and power; they are witnesses to man's inventiveness and ingenuity; from the wheels of the ox-cart to the landing wheels of an airplane, they symbolize the history of man's progress; new wheels tell of life and activity; old wheels, broken and abandoned, spell obsolescence, decay and the end of things. What a stimulus to philosophic reflection are pictures of wheels!

Wheels to photograph may be found everywhere—in junk heaps and farmyards, in streets, in factories, in your own home. Photographically, their many patterns and the shadows of their patterns offer a variety of fascinating studies. Wheels are easy to photograph. You can be leisurely in your preparations, unless, of course, they are wheels on a moving vehicle. As still subjects, you have an opportunity to use time exposures on them if needed, not forgetting a small stop opening for sharp detail, particularly for shadows. Wheels provide subjects for striking angle shots, especially when they form a part of masses of machinery in factory or engine room.

Pictures of wheels call for close-ups. They should fill the view finder. Often when the impression of size and strength is desirable, the print may be trimmed so that the wheel crowds the picture space to the limit.

When wheels are in revolution, don't think you should always use a fast shutter speed. Blurred spokes in the photograph will give the sense of motion just as they do to the eye.

Try some pictures of this intriguing subject; and may the wheel of fortune favor you.

SPORTING COMMENTS

News and Views

By AL. RYCKMAN

Any fellow who has turned out a newspaper column for some time becomes overjoyed when a new journal picks up his humble writing and places it in said paper. Thus to-day we have that happy feeling since the Porcupine Advance of Timmins (way up north) adds one of our many columns to its sport section.

Things to Come, and Go

The weather having been somewhat mild, we should be able to get through the rest of the winter without that extra shovel of coal each evening. At any rate the sporting events on the menu pick up pace from here in to the happy-go-lucky Springtime, when the robin (not an import) returns from the South.

The Port Credit Hockey Pirates should pick up some valuable points this week as the Toronto Hockey league swings into action. If the buccaneers can concentrate on team-work instead of solo rushing honours, we're sure the Ports will be right in the play-offs—otherwise we would rather dance with Myrna Loy.

And while the stickhandlers are holding us in suspense for a few weeks, a very interesting development to watch will be the "putting over" of the girls' community club movement within the southern section of dear old Peel.

It is no secret that those behind the young ladies' club are out to establish a real live-wire organization. However negotiations for a Queen city backer have been under way for some time. Even girls' softball uniforms may be tossed into the arms of the hustling organizers in the very near future. With all this excitement in the air, the old maestro is likely to wander out and buy Teddy Oke's Parkesides right from the Sunnyside circuit—who knows?

As this takes place, the Port Credit High basketball squads invade Long Branch Friday to see if the blue and gold seniors can bring home a victory. Then later on the Lakeshore Baseball League will hold a meeting to see what's what and which team has decided to take up table tennis instead.

And for us who cheer the baseball Leafs in the International, may we say right here and now, that the new owners of the club will do all in their power to draw fans to the games but beer will not be sold with the hot-dogs. We thank you.

That Certain System

Meanwhile we have amazing news for you. Our ace brownie, Minnie McFinney, the girl with the dreamy eyes, dived deeply into the Northern Ontario Hockey record books, and has either solved the mystery standing of the Gold Belt League, or at least has enough clues to lead to the situation being cleaned up without calling in Sherlock Holmes or Charlie Chan. It goes like this. (Organ grinder's swing):

	W.	L.	Pts.
Lake Shore	4	1	12
Tekimas	3	1	9
Porkies	6	2	8½
Timmins	2	6	6
Noranda	2	3	4½
Hargreaves	1	2	3
Toburn	1	4	3

The key to the above code lies in the fact that the Gold Belt group have their own point system, as follows: When Timmins and the Porkies are playing with each other, they will count one point for a win and half a point for a tie. When Timmins and the Porkies (reminds us of the farm or something) are playing with Noranda, they will all three count one and one-half points for a win and three-quarters of a point for a tie. All other games will be three points for a win and one and one-half points for a tie. There are other angles to this new "improved" point system. In the evenings after a game, we guess the fans go home and sit up all night figuring out who's leading the league.

The Morning Mail

Well here we are just catching up with the mail—so let's go!

To B.W.: You can tell when a movie's going to end. Women begin to put their shoes on.

To Miss Tommey: Thanks for the letter. We will write you in a few days.

To "Jimmy": Thanks for the clippings. Will use them in a future column.

We hear that the World's Softball Tourney may be held in the Queen city next September. Where's that bat we put away last Fall?

United Church Had Good Year

The United Church, Streetsville, finished a very successful year in its annual meeting held last Wednesday evening and the reports must have been gratifying to all whose work made possible the vigour and strength of the Church.

The minister, the Rev. T. D. Jones, presided, and Mr. Chas. Falconer acted as Secretary of the meeting. The night was wet but the attendance was remarkably good and the spirit of the meeting warm and full of hope for the future. The Sunday School reported an increase in membership of nearly forty and every department operating at full strength. Mr. J. K. Featherstone reported that from the Sunday School there had come 21 into full membership with the Church during the year and asked for the support of all the Church members in the Sunday School program.

The Y.P. Society reported increases also and an average attendance at regular meetings of 45. There is a balance on hand of $10.23.

The Mission Band reported 27 annual members and 12 life members with the splendid offering of $42.17 sent to headquarters for the past year. 3 girls have been made life members during the year.

The Board of Stewards reported through the Treasurer, Mr. Falconer, that all obligations had been met and after refunding the sum of $125 borrowed from the W.A., there would be a balance on hand of $52.

The W.M.S., reported an average attendance at the meetings of 20, not counting special meeting attendances when the number was 65. Miss Bessie Steen had been designated during the year and the sum of $219 had been sent to headquarters.

The Adult Bible Class reported a successful year and the treasurer a balance on hand of $16.28.

From the reports of the M. and M. fund it seems as if, with special effort, the increased objective for the year may be raised. The sum sent in to the Treasurer is $365, amount in bank $104 and the objective $531. Collectors are busy trying to reach a number who usually subscribe and by the end of the month it is hoped the objective will have been topped. The objective is $105 higher than last year.

The Women's Association reported through its treasurer, called "The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mrs. Caslor, that the grand sum of $695.95 had been raised during the year, and of this sum $150 had been placed to the credit of the building fund, which now amounts to $826.

The Ladies take care of the buildings, repairs and renewals and do a thorough job of their work, making it a fellowship and a joy.

The Choir also had a fine year and report a balance on hand of $21.40.

The Session reported an increase in membership of 25, a present membership of 328.

The fine spirit which has been a characteristic of this ancient Church has been well maintained and a most hearty vote of appreciation to the Minister and his wife was adopted with applause.

The Ladies of the W.A., served a dainty lunch at the close of the meeting.

The Cooksville Junior Choir, under the baton of Mr. E. M. Dillon, with Miss Eleanor Dillon at the piano, gave a very fine concert in the Streetsville United Church, Thursday, January 14. The choir is very responsive and the numbers demonstrating responsiveness was very well received. Selections from the masters, such as Mendelssohn, Beethoven, Sibelius, Moscheles, Liszt, Knyvett and native folk song material, proved the versatility of the choir. The alto came out firmly and with good voice to the joy of the large audience. The local choir served the visitors with refreshments at the close of the excellent program.

True, the radio gives you certain cold figures but it's indirect and impersonal and at best only a general indication, compared to actual telephone talks to a number of buyers. In conversations, you get the actual feel of the market; you know what's going on; where and when to sell; what grades are going best; what the picture promises; and all those other intimate details, the knowledge of which puts dollars in your pocket. The telephone, as a business agent, is truly irreplacable.

Century Plant Believed to Be Oddest Ice House

The maguey or century plant is used in making ice at Durango City, Mexico, and is said to be the only icehouse of the kind in the world, notes a writer in the Indianapolis News.

When the century plant is about eight years old the leaves, from which the pulque has been taken, are spread out on straw in the plaza, in the public gardens and other open spaces, with the concave sides of the leaves uppermost. Then about two quarts of water is poured into each leaf and while freezing is unknown in the city, under any other natural conditions, the water freezes in the maguey leaves and in the morning hundreds of chunks of ice are gathered and put in adobe ice-holders, each about 20 feet deep and 20 feet square. The supply usually lasts until the middle of July or the first of August and is large enough to be a commercial factor in the ice market of the region of more than 30,000 persons.

Durango City is about 6,000 feet above sea level and at this altitude there is rapid cooling, after evaporation, to which the water is exposed by the broad, shallow surface of the leaves. This is believed to be the scientific explanation of the odd ice plant. There is a legend that the method was learned in the Seventeenth century by Father Jose Lopez, an elderly priest, who also was a scientist.

Measurement of Time Is as Old as Time Itself

Time's mensurement goes back to the beginning of time itself. As for modern time measurement, its beginnings are considered to be tangled up in the mysticism, superstition and sun worship of the Chaldeans, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. This ancient people originated the week of seven days from the sun and moon and the five planets: Venus, Mars, Mercury, Jupiter and Saturn. These were their gods and they worshiped them. So they set aside one day each week for the worship of the sun, another for the moon and so on. The sun was their most important god and its day of worship was called sun day from which we get Sunday. The moon was the next important god and its worship day was called moon day or Monday.

The Chaldeans divided the time required for the sun to traverse its path through the belt of the ecliptic into the 12 constellations of the Zodiac. In this way they evolved the 12 months of the year. They also divided the day into 12 hours and then the hour into smaller units.

The Junior League

The Junior league originated among a small group of young women in New York city who in 1900 sent a large number of roses from a party to a hospital. Later they and others banded together "for mutual benefit and the good of the community." From giving entertainments for the benefit of a college settlement they extended their activities to many other forms of social aid. Similar organizations of young women were formed in other cities out of which grew a national association of leagues, each interested in its particular ways in the educational, cultured and civic conditions of its community and in volunteer charitable and other service.

Appointment of Notary Public

A notary public is a public officer who takes acknowledgement of, or otherwise attests or certifies, deeds and other writings, or copies of them, usually under his official seal, to make them authentic, and takes affidavits, depositions, and protests of negotiable paper. In the United States appointments are made by the governors of the states. The oath is as follows: "I do solemnly swear that I will support the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the state of ——, and that I will faithfully and impartially discharge the duty of notary public for —— county, according to the best of my skill and ability; so help me God."

Names of Streets in Brussels

The names of the streets in Brussels speak of everday life and everyday things. There are Fish street, Poultry street, Butter street and the Street of the Lost Bread. Another of Brussels' streets, that of the Six Young Men, tells of tragedy—of six youths who were out playing jokes one night and by accident smeared the face of an agent of the country's foreign ruler with tar. They were caught and hanged, and later the street in which they lived was named the Street of the Six Young Men in their memory.

Heresy in 1635

Roger Williams, founder of the Baptist Church in America, went on trial for heresy in Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1635 because he opposed persecution of Quakers. Four years before, Massachusetts had decreed that suffrage should be limited to church members. He was found guilty and banished, and the hanging or whipping of Quakers continued.

Twenty Years, Average Reign

A study of the lives of several hundred kings, emperors, czars and other monarchs who have ruled during the past 800 years reveals that their average reign was 20 years, an astonishingly long period considering the fact that the majority lived in constant danger and that about one third met violent deaths.—Collier's Weekly.

Memorial Service for Howard G. Purchase

The memorial service for Howard Grant Purchase held last Sunday morning in the United Church, here was a beautiful and impressive service. Everyone felt the presence of the spirit of God, from the moment the minister, the Rev. T. D. Jones opened the service to the end. The hymns were favorites of Howard's, —"From Every Stormy Wind,"—"Breathe on Me, Breath of God" and "I Know Not What the Future Hath." Allie Sinclair and Doris Waite sang the hymn that was sung at the funeral service at Elmvale, —"Some day the Silver Cord Will Break"

Mr Jones had asked the Sunday before, that any friends who would like to send in tributes to Howard to be read at this service, should do so and many tributes to the beauty and strength and influence of Howard's character and life were read. Mr Jones' text was "And Enoch Walked with God, and was not, for God took him," and the sermon surely gripped the large congregation and inspired all, no matter what the past had been with a new desire to "walk with God" and live a life of truth and beauty and goodness and helpfulnes .... Altogether, the service was one that will never be forgotten.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Sunday School Lesson (Willard) Jan 8
LESSON VI.
Two Miracles of Mercy.
(John 5: 1—6: 71
Printed Text John 5: 2—9; 6: 8—15.
Golden Text— The very works that I do, bear witness of me, that the Father hath sent me. John 5: 36.

The Lesson in Its Setting

Time—The events recorded in the sixth chapter took place in April, A.D. 29.

Place—The events in the fifth chapter all occurred in Jerusalem. The feeding of the five thousand took place at Bethsaida. Christ's walking on the sea, of course, occurred at the Sea of Galilee. The discourses that followed were all given in the synagogue at Capernaum.

1 Now there is in Jerusalem by the sheep gate a pool, which is called in Hebrew Bethesda, having five porches. The sheep gate repeatedly referred to in the Old Testament (Neh 3: 1, 32; 12: 39) is known to have been north of the temple, corresponding with the modern St. Stephen's gate, which "is the gate through which the Bedawins still lead the flocks to Jerusalem for sale."

2. In these lay a multitude of them that were sick, blind, halt. The word "halt" simply means crippled. Withered. That is, "dried up." (Cf. Matt. 12: 10; Luke 6: 6-8.)

4. And a certain man was there, who had been thirty and eight years in his infirmity. The word translated "infirmity" is a word literally meaning "weakness," and all of us must confess that we are subject to infirmities of one kind and another. However, our Lord Himself, "took our infirmities" (Matt 8: 17) and the Spirit also "helpeth our infirmity" (Rom 8: 26; Heb. 4: 15).

5. When Jesus saw him lying, and knew that he had been now a long time in that case: When our Lord came to Jerusalem, His eye rested with pity and sympathy upon those who needed help, and here the most hopless case of all the invalid multitude about this pool. He saith unto him: Wouldest thou be made whole? "This poor man probably had waited so long, and long waited in vain, that hope was dead or well-nigh dead within him, and the question is asked to awaken in him anew a yearning after the benefit which the Saviour was about to impart.

6. The sick man answered Him, Sir, I have no man, when the water is troubled to put me into the pool: but while I am coming, another steppeth down before me. The answer of this man shows how absolutely necessary our Lord's question really was, for it reveals utter hopelessness. He did not even say that he wanted to be made whole.

7 Jesus saith unto him, Arise, take up thy bed, and walk. It is significant that our Lord did not tell the man he was healed. He commanded him to do something that would prove he was healed of his infirmity.

7. And straightway the man was made whole, and took up his bed and walked. Christ did not half save this man from his terrible infirmity. —the man did not crawl away from the pool; he did not hobble out on crutches; he did not have to be carried out as he was carried in. When the Lord Jesus Christ saves us, He saves us from our own individual sins, as well as from sin. Now it was the sabbath on that day. The Jewish leaders immediately told the healed man that he had violated the Sabbath day because, in taking up his bed, he had broken the law which commanded men not to work on the Sabbath (Ex. 20: 10; Jer. 17: 21). The man's courageous answer is a thrilling one, namely, that the one who healed him had commanded him to do what he did.

8. One of his disciples, Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, saith unto him: There is a lad here. The word "lad" in the original, means "a little boy," and this is the only little boy who actually takes any part in the Gospel history. Who hath five barley loaves. Barley was the ordinary coarse food of the poorer people. It is not mentioned in any of the Gospels except here. And two fishes. Literally this should read "two small fishes," a word used only by the apostle John, here and in 21: 9, 10, 13. Originally the word meant "anything eaten with bread or other food: and, as salt fish was most commonly used for this purpose, the word came gradually to mean 'fish' in particular." But what are these among so many? This is a perfectly natural question, for the loaves and the fishes together were no more than enough to satisfy the appetite of one hungry person. And yet here were five thousand men, besides women and children.

9. Jesus said, Make the people sit down. It would be much easier to distribute food mong this vast multitude if they were distributed in groups of hundreds and fifties, reclining on the grass (Mark 6: 39, 40). The absolute confidence of Jesus in His ability to satisfy this great multitude is revealed in every line of this narrative. Now there was much grass in the place: As there would be early in April. So the men sat down, in number about five thousand. "The men alone were arranged in companies, or alone arranged so that any account was taken of them: the women and children being served promiscuously; who indeed, if the multitude were a paschal caravan, or parts of many such, would not be likely to be very numerous."

10 Jesus therefore took the loaves. It is not so said, but certainly it must be assumed that the little boy here offered these loaves to Jesus, or at least to Andrew. Andrew would not have known that the boy even had these loaves and fishes unless the little fellow had come down near where Jesus and His disciples were standing. Jesus never takes and uses anything of ours unless we willingly allow Him to. And having given thanks: Suppose every prayer of ours were offered invariably with thanksgiving, how many more of our prayers would be answered! (Phil. 4: 6)" He distributed to them that were set down. Of course He distributed through the ministry of the disciples to whom He gave the broken loaves. Likewise also of the fishes as much as they would. That is, as much as the people needed for the satisfaction of their hunger.

11. And when they were filled, He saith unto His disciples, Gather up the broken pieces which remain over, that nothing be lost. Thus with the Lord of nature, as with nature herself, the most prodigal bounty goes hand in hand with the nicest and exactest economy; and he who had but now shown himself God, again submits Himself to the laws and proprieties of His earthly condition, so that, as in the miracle itself His power, in this command His humility, shines eminently forth."

12. So they gathered them up, and filled 12 baskets with broken pieces from the five barley loaves, which remained over unto them that had eaten. These baskets were the stout wicker baskets as distinguished from the soft flexible "frails," mentioned in Matt. 15: 37 and Mark 8:8.

13. When therefore the people saw the sign which He did, they said, This is of a truth the prophet that cometh into the world. This is the second time that Christ has been recognized as a prophet sent from God (4: 19; 7: 40; 9: 17; Deut. 18: 15). All attempts to escape the miraculous nature of this event violate all the canons of historical evidence, and are, on the face of them, irrational and foolish. John was there and John knew what happened.

14. Jesus therefore perceiving that they were about to come and take Him by force, to make Him king, withdrew again into the mountain Himself alone. (See Matt. 11: 12; Acts 23: 10.) This multitude only wanted to crown Him as king because they were conscious that here was one possessing supernatural power, and that, if He could perform such a miracle as they had just witnessed, He could also deliver them from the yoke of the Roman Government. They were not accepting Him as their Messiah and Saviour. (Contra, Luke 19: 14.).

Oddities of Brisbane

Most of Arthur Brisbane's working day was usually devoted to executive detail. For twenty-five years he was editor of the Evening Journal, notes the New York Herald Tribune. In 1934 Mr. Hearst assigned to him the task of building up the circulation of the Daily Mirror. In his spare time he attended to large real estate holdings, the income from which was believed to exceed the $265,000 annual salary paid to him by Mr. Hearst. His net income from all sources, was reported in 1935 to be $1,070,000.

Although in his hard-working youth he chose to rise at 4.30 and 5 a.m., his habits gradually became retarded until he found himself retiring at dawn and rising at noon.

This tendency to hoard became manifest most curiously at mealtimes. Sometimes when dining at fine restaurants and hotels he would find himself unable to finish all the food on his plate. On such occasions he would summon the waiter and ask him if his left-over morsels would be wasted. If the waiter said that the odds and ends of food would be given to the dog pound or some other worthy charity, Mr. Brisbane would permit his plate to be removed. But if the waiter replied the food was headed for the garbage pail, Mr. Brisbane would clean his plate.

Question 1:— "Please give me information concerning the best method of applying fertilizer for canning tomatoes." — E. G., Wellington County.

Answer:— Two methods of application of fertilizer for canning tomatoes have given good results. First, where field is checked off by the marker, a handful of fertilizer is dropped at the cross checks, and is thoroughly worked into the soil before the plant is set. The second method is, after the plant is set a funnel is placed upside down over the plant and fertilizer is dropped around the edge of the funnel. This is known as ring application. The fertilizer is then worked into the soil. This has given good results in experimental tests. Planting machines are built to work the fertilizer into the soil at the same time as they set the plants. The one principle to remember is to keep the plant roots from coming immediately in contact with too concentrated a solution of plant food.

Question 2 — (a) "How should fertilizer be used with strawberries and what is the best analysis to use?"

(b) "What is the best fertilizer to use in a garden when all kinds of vegetables are to be grown? How much should be used and how should it be applied?" J. O. T., Wellington County.

Answer:— When strawberries are set out, excellent results are obtained by working into the soil, 4-8-10 fertilizer. This should be applied and worked into the soil where the row is to be set before the plants are transplanted. Where the strawberries are allowed to stand more than two years, good results have been obtained by top dressing the strawberries with about 500 lbs. per acre of 4-8-10 after the berries have been picked. In the spring, frequently good results are obtained by top dressing the strawberry bed with Nitrate of Soda using about 100 lbs per acre. Scatter this over the plants after the dew and other moisture has dried off. This salt is very soluble and a little rain will quickly wash it into the soil where plants will use it.

(b). One of the best fertilizers to use in the garden for green vegetable crops is 4-8-10. This should be applied at the rate of little less than 1-4 lb. per square yard. Frequently it is best applied in two quantities; about 2-3 scattered on top the dug or plowed garden soil and worked into the soil by discing, harrowing and raking; the other 1-3 should be worked into the soil at the time the seed is sown or plants are set. When the holes are made for transplanting the plants such as tomatoes, cabbage and the like, have a little fertilizer dropped into the hole and soil mixed with it before the plant is set, or better still have the fertilizer worked in along the row where the plant is to be set before the transplanting is done.

Question 3 (a) :— "I intend to seed down a field next year with oats as a nurse crop and this field is to be left for permanent pasture. The field is in fairly good shape now and it will receive a light application of manure during the Winter. What fertilizer practice should follow and how often will it be necessary to fertilize when we start pasturing it with dairy cattle?

(b). If I buy fertilizer with a stated analysis such as 2-12-6, how do I know that the fertilizer conforms to the guarantee and am I as a consumer, in any way protected against fraud"? I have never used fertilizer, but intend to do so next spring and would like to know that I am purchasing a reputable brand." G.R.S., Kent County.

Answer :— I would advise your using 3-10-5 fertilizer or 2-12-6 at the rate of three bags per acre. If you get a good stand of grass, you should not have to repeat the fertilizing for at least two or three years, unless the soil is very sandy. A top dressing of manure on the standing pasture will be particularly good if you alternate this with fertilizer since I assume one of your problems will be to keep up the organic matter. Have you tested the soil for the acidity? In laying down permanent pasture, it is particularly desirable that the soil be neutral or alkaline, so that you will get a good percentage of legume growth such as clover or alfalfa. If you have not tested your soil, the Ridgetown Experiment Station will be willing to do so, or you can send a sample to the Department of Chemistry, Ontario Agricultural College.

(b). All fertilizer in Canada is sold under the Fertilizers Act which makes specific provision for examining the products of the various companies selling fertilizer in Canada. This Act provides that all fertilizer must be sold under guarantee of analysis and must come up to the percentage guaranteed, otherwise, penalties are provided. A corps of inspectors under the direction of the Dominion Department of Agriculture are constantly on the road examing fertilizer stocks at the factories, en route to farmers, and on the farms. This means that fertilizer wares are constantly open to inspection. These provisions of control along with the much more important fact that fertilizer companies can stay in business and increase their trade only by rendering services as guaranteed.

Movie-radio gossip

By DOROTHY

Monte Blue, a favorite with film fans for many years, plays the lead in a picture that rekindles the pioneer agricultural west of a century ago. He has the role of John Deere, in "The Blacksmith's Gift," a story which recounts the life and times of the man who gave to the world the steel plow. The action takes place in 1937 in the Illinois of Abraham Lincoln's day.

Mary Rogers, daughter of the beloved Will, has gone to work at the Twentieth Century-Fox studios where her father made pictures, and has the bungalow dressingroom which he used and which no one else has had since his death.

The beautiful Mary deserves a lot of credit. Her father's influence would have helped with a movie career, but she went out and got theatrical experience instead.

When you see "White Hunter," sympathize with Warner Baxter and June Lang in the scenes where they battle against a tropical hurricane. The hurricane was made right in the studio, of course, but was none the less violent because of that. Baxter and Miss Lang spent a whole day with that storm, what with rehearsals and retakes and one thing and another, and were black and blue when it was over, where they had been bruised by objects blown against them by the wind.

CHANGED HER SHOES FIVE TIMES A DAY

Suffered for 20 Years with Rheumatism

Try and picture the life this woman led for twenty years—changing her shoes several times a day in a vain endeavor to attain some relief from the rheumatic pains that were constantly troubling her. Then imagine her joy when she found that Kruschen was driving away the rheumatism. This is what she writes:—

"I have been using Kruschen Salts for four years. For twenty years previously I had suffered with my feet, sometimes changing my shoes five times a day, and frequently sitting without any as the pain was so great. Now I can wear the same pair of shoes all day with comfort. I cannot speak too highly of Kruschen Salts. Only those who had been in constant pain with their feet for years can realize what it is to be free."—(Mrs.) E. A.

It is deposits of excess uric acid, lodging between the joints, which are frequently the cause of rheumatism. Kruschen Salts contain two ingredients—sodium and potassium — which are effective solvents of uric acid.

FINANCIAL FLASHES

Ypres Cadillac is located in the heart of a proven mining area, the rich Cadillac field, and is approximately half mile from O'Brien Mines where the sensational discovery last year was made.

The property consists of ten claims, approximately four hundred acres.

Development work is being pushed forward, aggressively, by the management. Harold G. Way, M.A., Ph.D. geologist, is in charge of work on the property, and crews have recently been increased, to facilitate operations.

"I am very enthusiastic about the chances of your property." Dr. Way recently stated in a letter dated December 2, 1936, to the officials of the company.

From a standpoint of future operations, the property is very favourably situated. The road has been completed into it from Kewagama, and the new Canadian National Railway line to Senneterre, passes through the middle of the property itself. Electric power lines are within half mile.

At a meeting of unitholders of Rebair Gold Syndicate held recently, J. M. Baird, manager, reported that finances are in good shape, with arrangements made for large interests to assume the final financing upon completion of present development work. Arrangements for additional equipment, including diamond drilling, have been completed. L. W. Reed, mine manager, stated that the ore bodies were increasing in size as development work progressed. At present the main ore body has been proven to be over 1,000 ft. long and 6 to 20 ft. in width and from 25 channel samples taken an average value of $20 per ton was secured.

Nay ob Gold Mines, Porcupine gold area, has been aggressively concentrating operations on the 300 and 700-ft levels with excellent results, according to Hamlin B. Hatch, geologist. This is in line with the general plan of development previously decided upon. Upon completion of the present campaign, definite production plans can be formulated, Mr. Hatch declares. Approximately 150,000 tons of ore averaging $5 per ton has already been blocked out on 3 sides above the 700-ft. level. The 300-ft level drift (west face) is at present in good grade ore, with consistent values ranging from $2 to $10 throughout, the whole length of the drift widths. Crosscutting near the west face to the hanging wall of the vein structure definitely disclosed that the vein structure is 45 ft. wide, with sampling of 39 ft. on the hanging wall side yielding value of $8.75 over this width, while 9 ft. averaged $21.90 per ton. No. 1 vein has been driven on for 600 ft. east and west on the 300 and 700-ft. levels.

Immediate development at depth of the indicated orebody on the Denison Nickel Mines property in Denison Township, Sudbury mining division is planned by company officials. It is proposed to install a mining plant, sink a 3-compartment shaft to 250 ft and carry out lateral work on that horizon. Drilling has indicated a consistent nickel-copper ore zone, cut at depths ranging from 175 to 1125 ft. with an average width of 28 feet. An ore length of 400 ft. was shown on surface, while a length of 500 ft. was indicated on the 1,000-ft level. The grade averaged 1.05% copper, .81% nickel and $3 platinum and gold. Allan Anderson, M.E., has been appointed consulting engineer in charge of operations. A crew of men has already started clearing for the shaft site and a mining plant for sinking has been ordered.

E. W. Asselstine, M.E., in charge of operations at the West Shining Tree property of Bilmac Gold Mines, in a report to Toronto officials, states that the vein in the 175-ft horizon has improved in recent work. Development to date reveals that it is six feet wide and very heavily mineralized. This vein has likewise been encountered on the 400-ft. level, and will be opened up further in the course of additional underground operations.

Following the commencement of drifting operations on the second level at Mooshla Gold Mines property, a wire has been received from D. M. Giachino, resident engineer, to the effect that 73 feet of drifting has been done to date on the vein at this horizon. Fifty-six feet, according to Mr. Giachino, averaged $32.18 across an average width of 31½ inches. The last 17 feet is now being assayed.

Horace G. Young, managing director of Wendigo Gold Mines, currently making a regular inspection of the property, has ordered the removal from above the 100-ft level of between 3,000 and 4,000 tons of ore of ½ oz grade which procedure, it is officially believed, will improve extraction and boost current monthly gold output. It is expected that work of retimbering the shaft to the present objective of 500 ft. will be completed this month. The next step will be to carry the shaft below that horizon and establish two more levels for further underground operations. The present plant and hoist is considered adequate for this purpose. The mill is stated to be currently running at a daily average approaching 65 tons, treating ore of $15 grade when in mine run of ore.

Previous reports of a highgrade strike made on the Doreva Gold Mines property during trenching operations, resulted in directors sending Lewis A. Dunham, consulting engineer, up the property in Bousquet Township to make a thorough examination of the find. In a wire to Toronto officials, Mr. Dunham states that two pits on No. 2 showing at now down 10 ft with each pit being sunk to develop high-grade stringer in vein, which are wider at the bottom of the pit and show more mineralization. Three drills are in operation, with No. 5 hole south of No. 1 showing completed to 850 ft. The core shows conglomerate is 300 ft. thick and begins 600 ft. south from No. 1 showing. The core is being sampled preparatory to testing.

Butter Must Not Be Advertised In Reich

BERLIN.—Germany was told recently — by official decree and a newspaper editorial — to stop building up a taste for butter, and use street cars in preference to buses.

An official decree prohibited advertising agents from arousing yearnings for butter and other fats — of which there is a shortage — by picturing mouth-watering scenes.

Efforts to win new customers must be confined to such commodities as sugar, marmalade, fish, potatoes, cottage cheese and barley, the decree ordered.

Editorially, the newspaper Zwoelfuhrblatt urged greater use of the street cars instead of buses to save gasoline, another commodity on which the Reich is short.

Queer Things About Cats

Perfectly white cats are invariably deaf; they are sure to be, if they have blue eyes.

The Egyptians considered the cat a sacred animal, and usually mummified its remains.

The cats of the Isle of Man and those of North Borneo are all tailless.

All of the mummy-cats unearthed in Egyptian tombs have red hair, due perhaps to the embalming fluids and unguents used in mummifying them.

There are three times as many muscles in the tail of a cat as there are in the human hand and wrist.

At the end of each hair of a cat's whiskers is a bulb of nerve fibre which makes that particular hair a very delicate "feeler."

A cat's head has a regular partition wall projecting from its side, inward, which, naturalists say, is a provision against concussion of the brain.—Our Dumb Animals.

HAVE YOU HEARD

When a wife dies a husband says: "I would be a better husband if I had it to do over again." But when a husband dies his wife says: "Well, I did my duty by him."

Post Office Clerk—This letter's overweight, madam. You'll have to put another three-cent stamp on it.

Woman—Well, of all things! Here I've mailed dozens of letters that were underweight. And now you want to charge me three cents because I'm sending one that's just a teeny-bit over the limit. That's terrible. And right at our own post office, too!

Loafing is an insufferable task for those who have been taught to work, we are told. But there's a surprising number of people, says the professor, who aren't doing any suffering.

A distinguished professor of a noted university was delivering an address before a group of business men. At its conclusion a manufacturer joined issue with him.

Manufacturer—Natural science is of no benefit to me.

Professor—What is your business?

Manufacturer—I manufacture suspenders.

Professor—And where would your business be if the law of gravity were suspended?

This might, in some cases, prove a bar to identification.

Friend—How did you manage to evade the photographers who have taken so many pictures of you?

Movie Actress—I threw away my lipstick and washed my face.

An intricate machine is now a man, it needs "a doctor" at close call, so as to straighten it out when it begins to get sick, and the machine can develop as many ailments as can a human being, which is saying a lot.

The one-ring circus was visiting a town in the hills. The folks there recognized all the instruments of the band except the slide trombone. One settler watched the player for quite some time, then, turning to his son, said: "Don't let on that you're watching him. There's a trick to it; he ain't swallowing that thing!"

Ascetic Person—Do you expect to spend your whole life in the wicked pursuit of riches?

Brisk Individual—No. If I'm not rich by the time I reach fifty years of age I shall resign myself to a simple future.

At the turn of the road is a picture that comes to my mind like a dream,
'Tis the little white house of my neighbor that stands by the side of the stream.

Diner—I can't eat this soup.
Waiter—I'll call the manager.
Diner (when manager arrives)—This soup, I can't eat it.
Manager—I regret that, sir. I'll fetch the chef.
Diner (when chef arrives)—I can't eat this soup.
Chef—What's the matter with it?
Diner—Nothing; I ain't got a spoon.

Great Britain Has Gone Back to Beef

With a million hundredweight rise in the home production of beef and sixty-seven pounds per capita eaten in the United Kingdom last year, the London Daily Telegraph declares that the popularity of mutton, lamb and pork is on the wane, and that the beef-eaters are coming into their own again.

In the United Kingdom between 1926 and 1932 beef and veal consumption declined from 70 to 61 lbs per head of the population, while pig meat rose from 44 to 50 pounds and mutton from 26 to 32 pounds. By last year beef and veal consumption had increased to nearly 67 lbs, while pig meat had declined to under 44 pounds and mutton to thirty pounds.

The annual output of home-produced beef and veal has risen by more than 1,000,000 hundredweight in the past seven years. It represented 52 per cent of the country's requirements in 1935, compared to 48 per cent in 1929.

The output of home-produced pig meat increased by 2,750,000 hundredweight and in 1935 accounted for one-half of the pig meat consumed, against 39 per cent in 1929. During the same period home production of mutton and lamb declined from 46 to 43 per cent of total supplies.

World trade in meat as a whole declined by about 12 per cent, between 1929 and 1935 mainly owing to import restrictions and increased home production in importing countries. The United Kingdom is by far the largest meat importer, taking about 85 per cent of the entries of beef and veal into the eight principal importing countries, and about 95 per cent of the world's exports of lamb and mutton.

Village Improvement

Writes the New Orleans Times-Picayune — Calypso, a North Carolina hamlet, broke into the news recently by advertising in outside papers for "two used jail cells." At latest report nobody with "used jail cells" had answered the ad., but it attracted a lot of attention from curious folk who wanted to know why Calypso wanted "used jail cells." Until last summer, a Calypso correspondent explains, the town got by without a jail, sending its occasional offenders to the lockup of a neighboring village. Then, it appears, some Calypso booster talked the community into seeking WPA aid for public improvement. The "improvement" took form of a brick building to be used as a jail and for other municipal services. When completed, it was found that no provision has been made for the "jail cells." Hence the advertisement for "used jail cells."

BOOK REVIEWS

"The Skipper," in a charming series of military and quasi-military reminiscences published under the title 'Beating Back", in the Globe and Mail of 7th January, 1937, devotes a quarter column or more to the activities of our Peel historian during the Great War.

"From the prolific pen of Mr. Perkins Bull there have come in recent years well-written books of various titles and various subject matter. Out of the goodness of our heart we suggest that he some day write the story of the Convalescent Officers' Hospital he is said to have organized and operated for Canadians in the Putney district during the last couple of years of the war. We hope we are not treading on any tender toes when we say that here were the ideal surroundings for speedy recovery. The V. A. D.'s, we are informed, were uniforms of pink or some other attractive color, and were such a charming lot of girls that of all who from time to time did duty in that hospital only two, according to rumor, came back to Canada unmarried.

"A wonderful rest home, and what if there was keen competition among wounded subalterns to become patients there?

"Pianos thumped incessantly the latest intriguing numbers from 'Brie-a-Brac' or 'Theodore & Co.'; and there was light-hearted, whispered banter of a type far removed from the ditches of death; and dinner was an institution in itself, with the delightful Mr. Bull invariably present, as host, to spread his good fellowship over the gleaming silver and the snowy linen."

JUVENILE HOCKEY

Last Friday night the Juvenile Club held a dance which was very successful and by all reports we can expect another one soon. In the meantime watch the teams progress and be on hand to help them out wherever possible. The club wishes to take this opportunity to thank the following donations: Mr. F. W. Reid, Mr. Bland, MacCarthy Milling Co., Mr. Watson and Mr. Longworth.

On Saturday night, the Streetsville Juveniles played Upper Canada College. The final score was 2-1 in favour of Streetsville. During the course of the game, two of the players sustained injuries, G. Schnurr was cut around the eye and J. Rice received a crack on the knee which put both out of the game temporarily. Bill Evans and Frank Reid scored the goals. The team was slack in the first period but in the second they made a grand rally and tied the score and then bulged the net again making it 2-1.

Coconut Tree of Ceylon Mainstay of the Natives

In Ceylon, we claim that the coconut tree is the most useful tree in the world, states a correspondent in Pearson's Weekly. The coconut palm has been established in the island for hundreds of years. Each palm yields from 40 to 100 nuts a year for 70 or 80 years. Copra comes from the dried kernel, and is exported in large quantities for the manufacture of margarine and soap, etc., and desiccated coconut, coconut oil, and coir-fiber, made from the husks of the nuts, are also exported.

With the wood he builds his hut, and his fishing boat is a trunk hollowed out. His simple furniture is made from the same wood, and his drinking cup is a coconut shell. His lamp is a shell filled with coconut oil, the mat on which he sleeps, his broom and his ropes are made of coir-fiber.

The fresh juice of the young nuts forms his drink, and the soft kernel gives him a staple dish; it's a delicious, jelly-like substance.

Grated coconut eked out his meal of rice, and from the coconut flowers are made arrack and toddy, potent spirits, much appreciated at village festivals. Jaggery, a kind of brown sugar, is made from the juice of the trunk. The beautiful cream-colored blossom, and the tender young leaves are used in every form of decoration in this land of sunshine.

Pine Tree Is Classed as Favorite of the Forest

There is something knightly about a pine tree. It raises itself on sturdy trunk into the atmosphere, great arms sweeping the air, and shoulders its stalwart bulk against the elements. It can be among the most quiet of trees, producing an utter forest stillness a breathless hush, or, when roused, among the most tempetuous. It is a communal tree, observes a writer in the Rural New-Yorker, pitched in encampments, marching in mighty armies, but is also to be seen riding along the barren wind-whipped hillside or lonely lake shore. It is somber, dignified, with a protective strength about it.

It is one of those trees that have personality, not graceful like the white birch, nor domestic like the maple, but a thing of the wild, a little aloof, serene, fearless, with a certain majesty, but the majesty of a strong man of the people rather than of courtly places.

That the pine is a favorite among trees is small cause for wonderment. It can be gentle, as a true knight should be, murmuring low words of consolation and comfort. It has about it something of gloomy romance and mystery, the spirit of moat and castle. In battle its war song rises high on the blast and its great body, assembling all its forces, struggles mightily with the enemy, the grim conflict showing wild against the storm clouds of the sky.

Meaning of "Layman"

The first part of the word "layman" is derived from the Greek "laikos," meaning "of or from the people," and "layman" is most generally applied to the people in general who are not members of the clergy; in other words, to members of the laity. Thus in various churches we have lay deacons, lay preachers, lay elders, lay readers, etc., persons who perform such church duties and continue with their outside occupations. In religious orders lay brothers and lay sisters are occupied chiefly with domestic or manual work. Apart from church usage, the term "layman" is applied to outsiders or non-experts in relation to some profession, art or branch of knowledge, especially with reference to law or medicine.

Discoverer of Eucalyptus

Sir Joseph Banks fitted out a vessel at his own expense and accompanied the famous Captain Cook on his first voyage around the world in 1768, and when they touched the shores of Australia (then called New Holland), Sir Joseph was the first man to see and describe the Eucalyptus which grow by the millions in California. He called them "Gum" trees because of the exudations of gum on the trunks and Gum trees they still remain to us. The Araucaria was first introduced from the Society Islands in the Pacific and named by him, while the same is true of the famous "Bird of Paradise," Strelitzia, which he introduced from South Africa and named in honor of his friend Queen Charlotte Sophia of Mecklenburg-Strelitz.

Rheumatism in Stone Age

Even in the Stone age, some 4,000 years ago, Britons suffered from rheumatism. This was shown by the skeleton of a Stone age man dug up at Notgrove long barrow, in the Cotswold hills, in the west of England. This Stone age veteran showed extensive signs of osteoarthritis, indicating that when alive he was crippled with rheumatism. Experts take this as a sign that the climate of these isles was chillsome in winter.

St. Mark's Decorations

According to the ancient laws of Venice, every merchant trading in the East was required to bring back material for decorating St. Mark's, and every successful general or admiral returning from an Eastern campaign was expected to carry some offering for it. "Not one of the hundreds of columns and capitals within or without the church was originally built or constructed for St. Mark's," writes Arnold Lund in "Venice."

The Open Column

The writer of the Open Column has, for many moons past, been more or less gently rapping the county council for absorbing something better than a hundred dollars a day of the ratepayers' money for doing little or less. Last week's session of the council, at times, looked as though the councillors were making an honest attempt to do what little work they had on hand, and get home to something important. But such, alas, was not the case. The council met Saturday although Warden Moran was frank in telling his subordinates that there was nothing to keep them later than Friday night. From our own point of view, there was nothing, if the councillors had really tackled the work before them, to keep them after Thursday night, at the latest.

The council spent a great deal of time discussing the Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act, which does not, if our memory serves us accurately, come within the legislative jurisdiction of the county council. Much time, also, was spent in discussing who should have the apparently remunerative post of House of Refuge Committee. One man wanted the job because he would have liked to have had it. Another man wanted the job because he thought that the first man had had all the committee money to which he was entitled. Evidently, from the remarks of the second candidate, it was time that some one else had some of the "gravy". The third man wanted the job because he felt that he represented more people who had an interest in the operation of the old people's home than either of the other two. Curiously enough, he got the job.

The actual election of the warden occupied, perhaps, half an hour. The appointment of a subordinate commissioner took the councillors about half a day. There are fifteen members of council who receive, we believe, five dollars a day for their services. They also receive mileage to and from their homes, which would make the cost of $100 a day for services of councillors, during sessions, quite a reasonable estimate. So that, while the council was orating, moving and amending in the election of the commissioner, the taxpayers of Peel were called upon to hand over $50.

And even the councillors themselves do not take their work at all seriously. Several of them have admitted to the writer that county council is "just a picnic." No one, it seems, expects county councillors to do any real work. They are in office, we are coming to believe, just to talk and provide "copy" for several bored reporters.

Mitchell F. Hepburn has suggested that he will wipe out county councils as of these fine days, and the move, to us, looks like a splendid idea, after watching the Peel county council in action.

COOKSVILLE

Judge Mott, head of the Juvenile Court of Toronto, advised members of the Cooksville Business Men's Association that the way to produce good citizens from unpromising material was to boost a stumbling youth rather than kick him into the mire.

Judge Mott was the guest speaker at the annual banquet of the association, held under the presidency of Jack Braithwaite. The dinner marked the end of the most active and useful year in the brief history of the association, with the organization of a fire department and purchase of a fire truck, the acquiring of a system of traffic lights for the chief intersection of the village, and the erection of a community flagpole as the outstanding achievements of the business men.

Other speakers included Rev. G. M. Chidley, pastor of Cooksville United Church, Rev. G. F. Banks, rector of St. John's Church of England, William Leonard, Harry Sproule, C. J. Bogel, James Smith, members of the association, Col. T. L. Kennedy, Dixie, and E. D. Maguire, recently elected reeve of Toronto Township.

Bill was pugnacious, but he didn't live long. A few days after his funeral his widow was hanging pensively over her front gate. A neighbor came along.

"Not he," said the widow; "more likely he'll be smiting the angels with the harp."

BURNS' SUPPERS ARE BECOMING MORE POPULAR

Hon. Duncan Marshall Gives Fine Address In St. Andrew's Church

On a stormy winter night, Jan. 25th, 1759, Robert Burns, Ayrshire plowboy, nature's poet, was born.

It was thought then, there was just an ordinary poor boy born, but now pilgrims from all lands, with pious regards, repair to this humble cottage, and as they wander over the scenes made immortal by the Ayrshire plowboy poet, heart clings closer to heart, the pride of birth and wealth melts away to a feeling of common humanity, and it is felt a man's a man for a' that. He was so truly a member of the human family that he was well within his rights when he touched its foibles, weaknesses, meannesses, and sins with an easy and familiar hand, made sport of its pretentious and childlike vanities, and held up its greed and snobbishness, and cruelty to derision and scorn. He lived so close to his kind and was so deeply involved in the life he portrayed. Our interest in Burns started when the first book of poetry in our house was Burns' poems.

When our parents came from Scotland to Canada with four children, the only book they took with them was the Bible. When our oldest brother, while attending the school at Oakville, would drive a citizen's cow to and from pasture, night and morning, the first money he received for this service he bought a Burns' book and with great pride presented it to our father.

For years that book was side by side with the family Bible, and long before many of the family could read for themselves, were well schooled in both books.

We lived and made our living on the farm, and Burns was our hero farmer. How delighted we would be in some of his feats of rural activity and skill; how he loved to plow the straightest furrow in the field, sow the largest quantity of seed grain of any farmer in the dale in a day, mow the most grass and clover in ten hours and stook to the greatest number of reapers. In stooking he sometimes found his match and after a hard strife with a fellow-stooker, in which he was equalled, he would say to his rival, you are behind me in something yet. I made a song while I was stooking. While straining every nerve in my body, my mind was busy composing a song about my first partner in the harvest field. My first song and my first love, Mary Morrison, My Highland Mary.

Burns' strength was united with great activity. He could move a twenty-stone sack without any apparent effort and load a cart with bags of corn in the time one of the neighbors said other men would be talking about it. A man was squaring a stone for a cheese press, and he took great pride when a side was squared, to turn the huge mass over unaided, which no other man could do. For years before his death his health was not good and he was often worn and weary. He fanned the flame of life too rashly and too fiercely. Burning more energy than he could spare, he exhausted the supply. The spirit faltered and the darkness came too soon. But in his short span of life, 37 years, he left behind monuments of virtue the storms of life can never destroy. And while we often bewailed the fact that cities, towns, villages and every place where they speak the English language, there they would celebrate the birthday of Burns. Streetsville took no heed until Rev. John Y. Fraser came to St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. Then he soon found out that all that was required for a Burns' night was a leader, and what a successful leader he has been. This, the third celebration, has shown how these celebrations have grown in popularity. All the roads led to Streetsville Tuesday, Jan. 26th, for Burns' supper and all had a glorious time. The Rev. Murdo MacInnes, West Hill, piped in the Haggis, carried in by a dozen young ladies of the congregation wearing tartan ribbons and sashes. Around the room the piper marched, followed by these young ladies with samples of the Haggis held high above their heads. Several times they marched around the room to the skirl of the bagpipes. This song was composed by the poet on his way to Inverness, a beautiful marching tune. The words of the song are:

When simmes blinks in summer braes,
And o'er the crystal streamlets play,
Come let us spend our lightsome day
In the Birks of Aberfeldy.

(Chorus)
Bonny lassie, will ye go
Will ye go, will ye go,
Will ye go, will ye go
To the Birks of Aberfeldy.

The Selkirk grace was pronounced by Rev. J. Y. Fraser:
Some hae meat and canna eat
And some wad eat that want it,
But we hae meat and we can eat
And sae the Lord be thankit.

Then the address to the Haggis was made by Rev. Edgar Foreman, of Morningside Presbyterian Church, Toronto:
Fair fa your honest sonsie face,
Great chieftain o' the pudding race
Aboon them a' ye take your place,
Painch, tripe or thairm.
Weel are ye worthy o' a grace
As lang's my arm.

Ye powers wha make mankind your care,
And dish them out their bills o' fare,
Auld Scotland wants nae skinking wares
That gaups in luggies,
But if ye wish her gratefu prayer
Gie her a Haggis.

The menu was as follows :— Haggis, Ham, Mashed Potatoes and Turnips, Scons, Oat Caks, Pie Cheese, Bread, Butter, Shortbread and Tea. There was a plenteous supply, and some left over. The Ladies of St. Andrew's have a reputation for being good providers

The tables for the second sitting were well filled. Then adjournment was made to the church where an excellent programme was given. Miss McDougall sang, accompanied by Mrs. Ramsay, four of Burns' songs, which charmed the large audience, many hoping she would be present to sing in Old St. Andrew's Church at the anniversary next year. Hon. Duncan Marshall gave one of the best addresses on Burns' life and poetry we ever heard. Many who heard him that night do not wonder now that every year the birthday of Burns is celebrated all over the English-speaking world.

Mr. Marshall showed us the independent spirit in Burns' life, which was expressed in the poem, "Man was made to mourn." The humor in Tam O'Shanter at Alloway Kirk, with his old gray mare crossing the stream and the witch catching and pulling off her old grey tail, the mousie nest, the toothache, the little animal on the lady's bonnet in church, Johnnie Peep, and many other poems, were presented in such a humorous strain, that he kept his audience in continual applause. But he did not forget the greatest of all his poems, The Cotter's Saturday Night.

The sire turns o'er with patriarchial grace
The big ha' Bible once his fathers pride
He wales a portion with judicious care
And lets us worship God, he says, with solemn air.
Then kneeling down to Heaven's Eternal King
The saint, the father, and the husband prays
Hope springs exciting on triumphant wings
That they all shall meet in future days
There ever bask in uncreated rays
No more to sigh or shed the bitter tear
While circling time moves in an eternal sphere.

It was in Burns' Cotter's Saturday Night home where the foundation was laid for Burns' schooling, which makes him loved at home, revered abroad.

Hearty votes of thanks were given to Miss McDougal, to Mrs. Ramsay, to Mr. MacInness, to Rev. Mr. Foreman, Hon. Duncan Marshall, and the chairman. We nearly forgot one of our Streetsville real Scotchmen, Bob Little. He had the full Scotchman's outfit and was an imposing figure as he followed the piper around, followed by a dozen ladies, all with a samole of the Haggis held high above their heads.

To this Robin with the magic voice,
And with his gifted pen,
That noted down the songs of love
To charm the hearts of men,
For o'er the gamut of the heart,
Thy fingers seemed to stray,
And every passion played its part,
Beneath thy magic sway,
Ah! these were truthful words he spoke
With the death dew on his brow,
I will be better kenned, my Jean,
A hundred years from now.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON V.

The Financial Cost of Alcoholic Beverages. — (The Economic Approach to the Liquor Problem).

Printed Text: — Proverbs 21:17; 23, 20, 21; Matthew 24:45-51; John 6:26, 27,35.

GOLDEN TEXT — "Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labor for that which satisfieth not?" — Isaiah 55:2.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

Time — The book of Proverbs was written about 1000 B.C. The discourse of our Lord, from which a few verses are taken, as recorded in Matthew 24, was given on Tuesday of Passion Week, April 4 A.D. 30. The words used from the sixth chapter of John were uttered by Christ in April A.D., 29.

Place — The Olivet Discourse was delivered on the Mount of Olives opposite to and east of Jerusalem. The words recorded in the sixth chapter of John were uttered in the synagogue at Capernaum.

"The Poverty to which Drunkenness leads, Proverbs 21:17; 23:20,21. Proverbs 21:17. "He that loveth pleasure shall be a poor man; he that loveth wine and oil shall not be rich." For the representation of wine and oil as common sources of enjoyment, see Prov. 27:9; Judges 9:9,13. Among the Hebrews as among the Greeks and Romans they were usual accompaniments of feasts.

Proverbs 23:20 "Be not among winebibbers." That is those who drink wine to excess. "Among gluttonous eaters of flesh." Of course this refers to meat consumed at the table. The word "temperance" has come to have reference almost entirely to the matter of restraint in the things which one drinks; we are too prone to forget that it also in the Bible is continually applied to our eating.

"For the drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty." Poverty flier ahead of the men here spoken of because drinking intoxicating beverages and gluttonous habits of eating have, in every age led men to extravagant outlays for the satisfaction of their craving for wine and rich food which they could not afford: furthermore when one is given to indulgence in these things the desire for work is often greatly reduced; in the third place such men as are here referred to by these habits of over-indulgence make themselves less and less capable of rendering efficient service in their particular fields of work, and will be the first ones to be dismissed from employment; these are the ones who will fail when it comes to decisions in important business matters. "And drowsiness will clothe a man with rags." This refers to the torpor that follows excessive eating and drinking.

"Who then is the faithful and wise servant, whom his lord hath set over his household, to give them their food in due season?" "Blessed is that servant, whom his lord when he cometh shall find so doing." "Verily I say unto you, that he will set him over all that he hath." In the second part of our Lord's Olivet Discourse, beginning with this verse, Christ gives three parables indicating the responsibilities resting upon his own during a period in which he as to bodily presence, would be absent from them. We should notice first that the Lord of the household is absent, but that, before he departs he has designated certain duties for his servants to perform while he is absent. The parable of our lesson is the picture of his household.

"But if that evil servant shall say in his heart, My lord tarrieth; and shall begin to beat his fellow-servants, and shall eat and drink with the drunken; The lord of that servant shall come in a day when he expecteth not, and in an hour when he knoweth not, "And shall cut him asunder, and appoint his portion with the hypocrites; there shall be the weeping and the gnashing of teeth." We have already made brief reference to the teaching of these verses in the previous paragraph. We must never forget that the person speaking these terrible words was none other than the Lord Jesus Christ himself. The final testimony of these unfaithful servants is punishment in the next life. It does not say it is eternal, but other passages of Scripture do so inform us. The evil servant had exactly the same opportunity that was given to the first, but he said within himself, My lord delayeth his coming, and so he began to do as he pleased.

"Jesus answered them and said, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Ye seek me, not because ye saw signs, but because ye ate of the loaves and were filled." The discourse of which these words are a part was given the day after Christ, with five barley loaves and two fishes, miraculously fed five thousand men on the shore of the Sea of Galilee. On the following day, a vast multitude of people, seeking Jesus, had come to Capernum that the discourse (vs. 26-59) was uttered.

"Work not for the food which perisheth, but for the food which abideth unto eternal life which the Son of man shall give unto you; for him the Father even God, hath sealed." This verse is peculiarly full of instructive lessons. (1) There is something forbidden. We are not to labor exclusively or excessively, for the satisfaction of our bodily wants, for that food which only perishes in the using, and only does us a little temporary good. (2) There is something commanded. We ought to work hard and strive for that spiritual food — that supply for the wants of our souls, which once obtained in an everlasting possession. (3) There is something promised. The Son of man Jesus Christ, is ready to give to everyone who desires to have it, that spiritual food which endures forever. (4) There is something declared. The Son of man, Jesus Christ, has been designated and appointed by God the Father for this very purpose, to be the dispenser of this spiritual food to all who desire it.

"Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall not hunger, and he that believeth on me shall never thirst." Man is not able to maintain in full strength and life his physical body by anything which he has in himself — he must receive into his body every day meat and bread from without. So also a man is not able to satisfy the needs of his spiritual life by anything he has in himself but must receive this also from God, who has given him spiritual food in Jesus Christ who is the bread of life, i.e. the bread which communicates life, sustains, and enriches it.

The new version of "Seventh Heaven" is coming along fine, with Simone Simon in the role that made Janet Gaynor famous overnight, and James Stewart in Charlie Farrell's place. Henry King, who directed "Lloyd's of London," (which you'll want to see) is wielding the megaphone.

Speaking of "Lloyd's of London" brings up the fact that his work in that picture made a star of young Tyrone Power, son of the famous old actor of that name. Twentieth Century Fox is giving the young man a stellar part in "Love Is News," with Loretta Young playing opposite to him. He had a hard time getting started; being his father's son wasn't the help you'd think it might be. But now he's on his way!

One of our ace directors returned from England recently, after completing a very successful picture, and announced that he'd never get over one thing that happened to him. In Hollywood he is accustomed to discussing the rewriting of a scene with the author who is working on the picture and having said author promptly leap to a typewriter and dash off the new version.

In England he was working with a well-known woman writer. They would discuss the changes that had to be made. Then she would get into her car and go to her country home. A week or so later she would return with the new version of the scene perfectly written. Eventually he wondered why everybody didn't work that way.

Joan Crawford and Franchot Tone are the most recent recruits to the Broadway stage — that is, they are if they can find just the right play, (and it's rumored that they have) and if the studio will let them have leave of absence. It has been no secret that the ambitious Joan wanted to try the stage some day, she once danced on it, and now she wants to act. But she wanted to wait till she felt ready for it, and has always insisted that her husband must act with her because he'd lack confidence if he didn't. And as he made quite a reputation for himself before he went to Hollywood, the change won't be hard for him.

The Kind Word

Writes the New York Sun: Many a girl and boy has been encouraged in politeness by a little reward from a relative or an intimate friend of the family.

"You've been very nice to me, Mary," says Aunt Almira, as she departs after a visit, "and here's something for you to put in your bank." "Now, Mira," says mother, "you must not spoil the child; she only does as she should." "Well," says Almira, "this ain't agoin' t' spoil her, and she is a nice girl."

"Tommy," says Uncle Bill, "you took good care of me; don't spend all this in one place." "Shucks, Uncle, I liked to lo it," says Tommy. "Bill," says father, "I won't have you giving money to Tommy; it'll teach him bad habits; it'll make a beggar out of him." "Now, Pete, you keep still," says Bills, "or I'll tell Tommy some things about you."

QUESTION: "I have been growing tobacco on a plani field sand and using a 3-8-4 fertilizer for some years but lately I find it has a tendency to ripen slowly and in some parts of the field it shows rim burn. I have been told that rim burn is caused by a lack of potash in the soil and I would like to know what analysis you would recommend to overcome or correct the condition mentioned above." — E. G., Norfolk County.

ANSWER: From your description and from our knowledge of Plain field sand, it is apparent that lack of potash is the difficulty in your soil. It appears that you are using rather high nitrogen and distinctly low potash for your conditions. We would ecommend using 2-10-8 rather than a 3-8-4 fetilzer for blue tobacco, applying this at the rate of 100 lbs. per acre. Under the extreme conditions which you mention, I believe you would be justified in using a bag of 2-10-12. It might be advisable to use a bag of the latter analysis along with the 2-10-8 for observation.

QUESTION 2: "I grow a quantity of tomato plants in greenhouses and hot beds for sale to farmers growing tomatoes for the canners. What soil mixture and fertilizer would you recommend for these beds? — D. T., Norfolk.

ANSWER: As a rule gardeners do not advise using fertilizers on hot beds in which they are growing tomatoes for the canning trade provided that they have a good compost available. This soil gives sufficiently rapid growth under hot bed conditions and gives much stronger plants than those which have been probably fed an excess of nitrogen. If however, you do not have compost soil that can be used, good results can be obtained from working in a light application of such fertilizer as 5-8-7 or 9-5-7 at the rate of 2-3 ozs. to the sq. yard. Be careful of one thing in particular, however, and that is do not overdo the nitrogen side of the plantfood, otherwise you will get long stocky plants which will not be sufficiently strong.

Number 2 diamond drill hole at Kenocho Gold Mines, Kenora mining division, has reached a depth of 320 ft., according to word received from Charles Young, managing director. The hole passed through 22 ft. of vein matter which is believed to be the downward extension of a wide quartz vein exposed on surface. A five-foot porphyry dyke and another five feet of vein material were also encountered, while a quartz stringer was intersected in greenstone formation at a depth of 320 ft. The hole, aimed to crosscut the formation, is being continued for another 300 to 400 ft., Mr. Young reports. A crew is also engaged in ... tipping and trenching other veins in preparation for the spotting of additional holes.

Shaf sinking is proceeding on the Bourlamaque property of Payore Gold Mines and, according to official word, the first level will be cut at the 150-ft. horizon by the first week in February. All equipment, which has been paid for in full, is on the ground and in operation. A new 80 h.p. boiler is in operation giving a total of between 130 and 140 horsepower. Upon completion of station cutting at the 150-ft. level, it is planned to carry on 3,000 ft. of lateral development simultaneously with shaft sinking which is to be continued to the 275-ft. level, where a similar amount of lateral work is proposed. Three shifts are engaged on a 24-hour schedule.

Surface exploration is proceeding on the Martinson Malartic Gold Mine property in Malartic township, Quebec, while a campaign of diamond drilling has just commenced to further explore the ore zone revealed in previous drilling operations. A series of holes will be drilled along the major axis of the known sedimentary formation.

In the report Alexander P. Rogers, it is stated that the surface is heavily covered with muskeg, and the drill holes so far put down have shown a geological structure with masses of porphyry and sheared sediments, as well as silicified sections containing commercial gold values across fair widths. Buildings sufficient to accommodate the operating crew for the winter's development work have been completed. The company has between $80,000 and $85,000 available in the treasury for the programme of exploration.

Estimated net profit of Dome Mines in 1936 after taxes and outside exploration written off, but before depreciation, depletion and adjustments of surplus and contingent reserve account, totalled $4,281,150, equal to $4.49 a share. On the same basis earnings in 1935 were equal to $4.63 a share, while after all charges for that year net was equal to $3.90 a share. Production in 1936 totalled $7,234,390 from treatment of 553,900 tons of ore, against output of $6,939,985 from milling of 549,100 tons of ore in the previous 12 months.

Productio. at Laguna Gold Mines, Northern Manitoba, in December totalled $36,500, bringing total recovery for the first 5 months of this company's production up to $164,700, or an average of approximately $33,000 per month. The management feel results obtained in December an excellent showing considering some minor crusher trouble was encountered during the month. Drifting and crosscutting on the 875 and 1,000-ft. levels is steadily increasing the known ore reserves. It is understood the mill is presently averaging 64 tons daily with mill heads approximating .70 ozs. or $24.50 ... ld per ton.

First official underground check sampling received from the Kenora property of Tecumseh Gold Mines from three channel samples taken across 14 ft. of vein matter at the first station in the shaft showed values of $16.80 $148.40 and $166.55 gold per ton. These results, while somewhat higher than expected at that point, show about the same representative values as previous sampling at lower levels officials report. The property adjoins Big Master on the north and east.

Says Sun Cause Of 'Flu Epidemic

Ottawa Astronomer Predicts More Severe Epidemic Next Year

TORONTO.—Dr. Ralph E. DeLury, of Ottawa, president of the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada, declared last week the influenza epidemic at present prevailing in parts of the country could be found in the "stars". He addressed the annual at-home gathering in the physics building at the University of Toronto.

The present cloudiness of the weather, he said, was related to the sun spots which, in turn, appeared to be related to the spread of influenza.

Following his address, he said in an interview the sun spot progression indicated that an epidemic much more severe would take place a year from now. The present mild epidemic was similar to the one which occurred the year or two preceding the flu in 1917-1918 which took many lives.

Medical men as well as astronomers were investigating the effects of sun spot cycles in the causation of influenza, Dr. DeLury said.

"The old astrologers knew all these things but they weren't so busy going to the movies," he continued. "Men in other days knew that when Jupiter and Saturn were close together, there was going to be a period of rain and the pastures would flourish. They knew also of coming disease. The word influenza really means due to the influence of the planets.

"Jupiter and Saturn are coming close together and the sun spot cycle is approaching its peak as it did in 1917 and 1918. If you put me up against a stone wall and asked me whether the epidemic would be worse another year, I would have to answer quite probably worse."

Orderly Recovery Urged At Royal Bank Meeting

Speculative Booms and Resultant Depressions Must be Prevented if Capitalistic System to Survive, States Morris W. Wilson, President and Managing Director—Recommends Commission to Investigate Financial Relationship of Dominion, Provincial and Municipal Governments.

Sydney G. Dobson, General Manager, Reports Continued Progress in Bank's Business — Deposits Up $56,000,000 — Profits Improved—Business Undoubtedly on Up Grade

Warning against the dangers of a speculative boom, and a plea that recovery be maintained on an orderly basis, were outstanding features of the address of Morris W. Wilson, President and Managing Director at the 68th Annual General Meeting of The Royal Bank of Canada.

That recovery was well on the way there could be little doubt, and "even the most sanguine would have hesitated a year ago to predict progress as great as that which has been accomplished during 1936," stated Mr. Wilson.

In addressing the meeting, Mr. Wilson said, in part:

"A serious drought again affected large areas in the West, with results that were disastrous to the farmers immediately concerned. Those farmers who reaped good crops last year, benefited materially by higher prices, but, in the midst of a broad recovery, farm income has lagged behind.

"It is gratifying that the stocks of grain in Canada are again of normal proportions. Nature is in a fair way to take the Government of Canada out of the grain business. It is sincerely to be hoped that she will not be drawn into it again.

Industries

"Prices for newsprint have shown a slight increase during the past year and this, together with a heavier volume of sales, has brought encouragement to the newsprint industry.

"In the lumber industry there has been a satisfactory volume of demand from Great Britain ever since the beginning of their building boom. This demand has been maintained during the past year and is the most important factor in the improvement of conditions in lumbering.

"The value of Canadian mineral production established a new high record in 1936, amounting to approximately $350 million compared with $312 million in 1935. The prospects of the Canadian mining industry are more favorable than at any time in the past.

"Throughout the manufacturing industries of Canada, volume of production has been above the level which prevailed in 1926 and in October reached the highest point recorded since July, 1929.

Employment and Relief

"At the moment manufacturing employment is close to normal. In mining, as a whole, the number employed is greater than at any time in our history. In trade the volume of employment is not unsatisfactory. Under these circumstances, I cannot but feel that the time has come to examine with care our lists of those receiving unemployment relief. It is a notable fact that there has been no census of unemployment since 1931. At a time like the present a biennial census would give our various governing bodies facts which would help them in determination of policies.

Division of Taxes.

Over a wide field of economic legislation it is virtually impossible to guess whether ultimate authority rests with the Province or with the Dominion.

"Let us secure a review of the whole subject by a Royal Commission with the object of resolving these complexities. Changed social and economic conditions have thrown responsibilities on various governing bodies that were never contemplated at the time of Confederation, and as a consequence it is found increasingly difficult, in some instances, to meet these additional responsibilities with the sources of revenue at their disposal. Having regard to the necessity of maintaining the national credit, if it is at all possible some solution must be found which will permit both provinces and municipalities to continue the service of their public debt in full.

Individualistic Democracy.

"It is the fashion in certain quarters to say that the system of capitalism—or, as I prefer to term it, individualism—has failed.

"In the past it has adapted itself to changes in economic conditions and social concepts, and there is no reason to think that such adaptations will not continue to be made. In fact, they must be made if the system is to survive. With Communism, Fascism and Nazism in competition, individualism will survive only if the benefits which it provides to the community continue to be greater than those conferred upon people living under other organizations of society.

"If we would set an example to the world we must manifest that unusual degree of self-control which restrains booms and thus avoids subsequent depressions.

Money.

"It is for this reason then that the present monetary situation is an outstanding challenge to economic individualism. Can a popular government, such as that in the United States, for instance, deal effectively with the monetary situation? The revaluation of gold by the United States and the reduction in the gold value of other currencies, made almost unanimous this past year by the capitulation of the European gold bloc introduced a dynamic inflationary force into world economy. It is encouraging to note that this potentiality seems to be understood by the monetary authorities in the United States and that they are taking definite action. The world has not previously experienced a period when borrowing rates have been so low for so long a time. If continued on this basis an unhealthy and artificial situation will develop. Easy money is a powerful force; it operates somewhat slowly, but to wait until it is evident that speculation is out of hand will be to create conditions which can be corrected only by depression. In some quarters we are asked to believe that the increased government regulation of general economy may make it possible to continue low interest rates more or less indefinitely. I feel strongly that this view is not correct and that the action now being taken is by no means premature. By use, if necessary, of the huge reserves already accumulated it will be possible to prevent any serious interruption in recovery. It is surely better that we maintain the upward trend for a prolonged period and that recovery shall proceed in an orderly manner, with the minimum of encouragement to irresponsible speculation. We must on no account allow recovery to degenerate into boom — the forerunner of depression. Individualistic economy will stand or fall, depending upon its ability to prevent depressions.

General Manager's Address

In reviewing the annual balance sheet, Mr. S. G. Dobson, General Manager, referred with satisfaction to an increase of $54,068,757 in total assets, which now aggregate $855,588,457, and to an increase in deposits during the year of $56,579,909. Mr. Dobson said in part:

Current Loans Situation

"The demand for loans in Canada was again disappointing, though there have been indications during the last few months of increased requirements for business purposes. While advances under the heading of Current Loans in Canada decreased $41,251,583 during the year, this does not mean that the requirements of our ordinary borrowers were that much smaller. The reduction is fully accounted for by repayment of two special loans, namely, about $32,000,000 due by the Wheat Board liquidated principally through the sale of surplus stocks of wheat held under Government control, and the repayment of approximately $10,000,000 due by the Canadian Pacific Railway, being our participation in the loan to that company made by the chartered banks of Canada under Dominion Government guarantee.

"I give this information to correct an impression which casual consideration of this item in our Balance Sheet might create, that is, that business is still undergoing a process of liquidation.

"In this connection it is interesting to note that total commercial loans in Canada of all banks are only 50.46% of the amount outstanding at the end of 1929.

"Due to increased volume of business, I am pleased to report an improvement in Profits of $201,492. While not large, this is an encouraging trend.

Improvement in Business.

A review of conditions in Canada and other countries in which the bank has branches, indicates a definite improvement in business in Canada and in practically all of the foreign countries in which we are represented. Business is undoubtedly on the upgrade, and I look forward to 1937 with a greater feeling of confidence than has been justified for some years.

Scotchman — "Well, when you refused to marry me, you said you'd always be like a sister to me."

Don't brag or bluster and blow your horn,
And think the world lucky that you were born.
The firecracker bangs, as firecrackers do —
But the dynamo works quietly true.
For power is noiseless — like eagle-wings,
And noise is powerless to do big things.
While racket and roar are the waste amounts,
And they never accomplish a thing that counts.
The rattling wheels ren't power and might,
But the silent current that's out of sight.
And there's never a bit of bluster and blow
To the force within that makes the things go.
For the perfect machine and efficient man.
Accomplish the most by the noiseless plan.
And the work of the world is done today,
By silent power in the quietest way.
So its what you DO; and the results will show
Without the need of bluster and blow.

This was too much for the China man, who stuck his head into the hall, and shouted indignantly:

Chinaman — "You go 'ella yourself."

Achilles Tendon Needs Exercise

Art in Teaching, Learning Exercises to Improve Posture

NEW YORK.—Before any course of exercises or treatment is begun in a new salon here each entrant submits to an examination by a registered physician. Not until the instructor has been advised of her pupil's condition does she begin her work. There is an art in teaching and learning the exercises for constructive and corrective work. Only certain muscles must be brought into play. Those that control, never those that will bulge and throw the body out of line, become the objects of attention. Every effort is made to maintain the feminine lines and proportions of the figure.

It is well begin with the Achilles tendon, which must be stretched to make easy walking possible. At this time of the year, when there is skiing and skating to be done, it is doubly necessary that the steel-like spring at the back of the ankle be flexible. One exercise is to place the feet far apart, one directly in front of the other, and, while keeping both heels firmly on the floor, bend the forward knee, thus stretching the Achilles tendon. This is done first with one leg and then the other.

Tabloid Foods

St. Thomas Times-Journal writer—Eating is not only necessary but a social and pleasurable ceremony. Yet there are times when busy individuals or people going touring or staying at a remote lake resort might wish they could have their food in compact and easily manageable form, the ultimate minimum, perhaps, being a meal in a pill.

Experiments have recently been carried out in England with hydrated foods, which, as successfully achieved, and for the manufacture of which a company has been formed, are the invention of a master mariner, P. C. Lavender, who, it is somewhat gruesome to note, derived his idea by seeing the mummies in the British Museum. He felt that if human bodies could be preserved for thousands of years why could not food be preserved for weeks, months or years.

On display in a London office at the present time are three small bottles, each containing two ounces of powdered substance. One represents a pound of steak, and the others forty heads of lettuce and forty heads of spinach, respectively. There are strawberries shriveled and weighing almost nothing, which, when placed in liquid resume their normal weight, taste and consistency. A black currant, dried for nearly two years, becomes tender and full flavored when placed in the mouth.

As for the powdered foods, all the essential nutrimen remains, and they can be used in many ways, say scientists. One method is to add water to make a paste for spreading between bread or biscuits.

The Lavender process has been applied most successfully to cattle foods, it has been found that cows fed on dehydrated foods give even more milk than those on pasture.

Middle age is that period when a man begins to shed his hair, his teeth and his illusions.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

Questions on Lighting

Here is bad and good lighting. At the left the light strikes almost directly on the front of the subject. Shadow contrasts are too harsh and the young lady's "crowning glory" is almost lost in the dark background. Notice the difference in the other picture where the light strikes from the side.

TAKING proper exposure for granted, right lighting, whether it be daylight or artificial, is the principal quality which distinguishes the photographic work of art from the ordinary haphazard snapshot. How much attention do we, as amateurs, really pay to how light illuminates our subject when we aim our cameras?

Suppose we are photographing a person, do we take the pains to avoid harsh front lighting, which makes our subject squint and casts deep shadows into eyes and from the nose. This usually happens when the sun is high and directly strikes the front of the subject. Especially in the case of a close-up the shadows that delineate the features are likely to be unpleasantly harsh.

Do we seek to discover the light angles that are most pleasing? Usually light coming from the side or a bit from behind the subject makes a better picture.

Do we observe the tone of the principal object of interest? If the object is dark do we note whether it is in such deep shadow that it is in danger of merging with the background when the negative is developed and the print made?

Do we notice whether a light colored subject is in a full glare of light without a dark background behind it to set it off? Sometimes a background that seems to be dark may not prove effective because of unobserved light reflections such as from the surface of water.

Some of the most famous photographers stress the intelligent use of light to an almost unbelievable degree. When working with artificial light, they may use thousands of watts on such a seemingly easily photographed subject as a basket of eggs. They carefully study the effects of variations in light intensity, how they affect sharpness of shadow outline, shadow density, shadow gradations. They experiment with these effects, shifting camera, lights, or the subject itself, and decreasing or increasing the volume of illumination. They want to show you a picture of that basket of eggs that is realistic enough to tempt you to reach your hand into the basket and pick one up, and by controlling the lighting, they succeed in doing just about that very thing.

We, too, as amateurs, can immensely improve the quality of our pictures if we will but study and consider light effects, whether from the light of the sun or from home photo lamps.

Obviously, there can be no rigid rules for selecting or arranging light effects, considering the infinite variety of picture subjects, often quite differently affected by similar light conditions. Getting the right effects depends upon how much sense of the artistic we possess, plus experience sizing up the picture chance.

But there is one general rule, and that is to seek contrast in the highlights and shadows that compose the outline, substance and background of the principal object of interest. At least we can avoid that cardinal sin of black and white photography—"flat" lighting.

DIARY OF A SPORTS SCRIBE

TORONTO, ONT.: There is a splendid flicker now showing at one of the Yonge street playhouses called, "One in a Million," starring the world's olympic figure skating queen, lovely Sonja Henie.

According to press reports Sonja won the world's figure skating title at the age of fourteen. (That was in 1927). She has held this honour since then, but turned professional right after the Berlin games.

Our good friend Oswald, who saw the picture the other evening, exclaims that the Hollywood sittings for Miss Henie's skating numbers are simply delightful, delicious and delovely (courtesy of the song). Oswald continues the review by stating that she has an attractive personality and such dimples. (Now, now Oswald).

Hearing all these things, we have decided to purchase a ticket (after we finish this column) and take in "One in a Million"—to hear Don Ameche sing? Of course not. Just to brush up on our figure skating.

Cage Capers

They seem to be taking their basketball seriously on the other side of the Niagara river and incidentally according to a despatch which reached us the other afternoon, Dr. Naismith, Canadian born, explains the origin of the cage game. It reads—

The young instructor, a soccer ball in hand, addressed the group of lightly-clad youngsters whose gaze wandered questioningly toward two peach baskets, one nailed to the balcony railing at each end of the gym. "The idea," Dr. Naismith explained, "is the one side to get the ball in a basket without running with the ball, striking it with the fist, or holding, tripping, pushing or shouldering an opponent. Let's see, there are 18 here. That will make nine on a side." That scene in 1891 marked the origin of basketball.

The story goes on to say that Dr. Naismith is known wherever basketball is played as the originator and father of the hoop-to-hoop game.

Notes From All

Girl Friday suggests that fair maidens who intend to play softball or form a club get together and take action. Something along that line would certainly help. B. W. asks why we do not put much Streetsville sports in our column. Well sir, oddly enough, we have asked for sport items from that fair community but nobody seems interested. Sorry old man, but the maestro lives in the Credit not in Streetsville. We would still be pleased to have any sport notes. Thanks just the same for the letter. Whoever mailed it, knew our address. Another bit of news from the north is that a dog team and driver will "mush" from Timmins to Ottawa in a few weeks.

By Way of Comment

We enjoyed that article in the Open Column last week on monkey wrench hurlers. The old maestro knows all about such persons.

When we arrived in Port Credit we started out to form a softball team and it was then that we came in contact with the well-known squawkers (as referred to in last week's paper). They decided to spoil the maestro's plan, but what did we do? We not only formed a team but an entire league and believe it or not, there were so many obstacles in our way that we spent many a fifty-cent piece on headache tonic. The Open Column certainly deserves our orchid this week. Let's have fair play!

Now we'll stickhandle our way over to Woolworth's lunch counter, check our skates and view the Sonja Henie talkie.

EDEN CHURCH

Last Saturday evening a pleasant time was enjoyed by the Junior Bible Class of Eden Sunday School when they were entertained at the home of one of their members, Mr. Jim May. After spending the early part of the evening skating, the young people returned to the house where they played progressive games, the winners being Miss Doris Waite and Mr. Elmer May. The members of the class gave their teacher, Mrs. Elmer May, a complete surprise when they presented her with a pyrex baker as a token of their appreciation, the presentation being made by Miss Allie Sinclair and Mr. Jim Hamilton. A bountiful lunch was served by the hostess, Mrs. Anderson May, to which the young people did ample justice and extended a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. May for their kind hospitality.

OUR WINNIPEG LETTER

285 Langside St.,
Winnipeg, Man.,
Jan. 18, 1937.

Dear Editor:—

I am late in congratulating you on your Golden Jubilee of The Review, but I am not the less sincere in giving you great credit on your management of your paper. Always discouraging scandal—and altogether a wonderful paper—I have always, and still do, enjoy reading your paper, and I think I have been a correspondent for your paper during all your years of editing the Streetsville Review. Hoping you have many more years to conduct your good work.

My last letter I had celebrated my birthday. We have celebrated our 59th wedding day, Dec. 31. A friend called me up in the morning, wishing us all kinds of good wishes. She said, "Would it not be nice if you could live another year, for your diamond." I said, "It sure would and I would have all my children home." She said, "Whatever would you do with them or where would you put them?" I said, "I would have to have the auditorium." Now, just to let you know what size of a gathering it would be: Twenty children, counting son-in-laws and daughter-in-laws, thirty-seven grandchildren, and eight great grandchildren. A big party, I say.

The last week has been extremely cold and one does not feel like going outside very far. An old friend, Mrs. George Hinton, who many years ago lived in Islington, Ont., had her hip fractured Xmas day. She boarded a street car, and it started up, as she reached for a parcel, and was thrown down on her face. She had been to a Xmas dinner with her daughter. She is in Misicordia hospital. She is recovering, but expects to be in hospital another week. She is eighty years of a[illegible] quite smart. I was to see her a week ago today. Coming home, I called into the Bible School to see two young ladies, who claim me for their Grandma. There are sixty-five students in the school—young men and women. Sixteen expect to graduate this spring. It sure does [illegible] to meet so many earnest workers for their God. One of my young friends is planning for work in a foreign field. She would like to go to Palestine; the other plans work in the home mission. She lives in Sask. and says there are plenty who have never heard the name of Jesus. Yesterday was Bible Sunday in Elim Chapel. Mr. Salter took charge of the service and he gave us many interesting things to think about. He had good congregations considering how cold it was.

Winnipeg's first New Year's baby just lived a week; a little boy—Albert Lebrecht—what would have been given to him, will be given to the parents. There are six other children. There is a lot of sickness in the city the hospitals are full—besides those in the homes.

I hope all your readers and yourself and family enjoyed a happy Xmas. I assure you we did; had Xmas dinner with a granddaughter, and after the meal enjoyed the unloading of the Xmas tree. We were not forgotten. I can just tell you there were far too many Xmas trees left unsold. I thought it such a pity—so many beautiful little trees were wasted. If they had been planted in drouth areas, might save the earth from blowing. Wherever they were used for decorations or Xmas trees, they were beautiful. The Army and Navy had two large trees and lovely and useful gifts were given to the children of the returned soldiers. Santa was a little late. He said he got stuck in a chimney and had to wait till some one came with ropes and pulled him out. And you should have heard the way they sang Jingle Bells. If there had been Radio you sure would have heard them. Everybody received two cups of ice cream.

PRAIRIE ROSE.

The Editor of The Review wishes to thank Prairie Rose for her congratulations on our Golden Anniversary, which we appreciate very much. Prairie Rose is one of our oldest readers and we can remember that about the first thing we learned to do was to set the type for the letter written by Prairie Rose, from Manitoba, 44 years ago—and she was a reader of our paper before that. It's a long time to read a paper, and we hope she will be spared to enjoy, with her husband, her diamond wedding anniversary—and have many more years of happiness and prosperity.

O.R.C.

Cooksville

Mr. Fred Dawson has returned to Cooksville.

Miss Blanche Denison is progressing after her recent operation. Her many friends will be pleased to see her out again.

We are glad to see Mr. Clarence Garbutt back in his old position as examiner of cars, and hope he continues to enjoy good health.

The Business Men of Cooksville are holding their Banquet on Wednesday evening.

Mr. Norman Sanderson is attending Shaw's Business College, Toronto.

Mr. Roy Harris has been appointed school constable—to see the children safely cross the highway in school hours.

Mayor and Mrs. Phillips lost their valuable airedale dog last week—answers to the name of "Pat."

The many friends of Robert Raine wish him every success in his new undertaking. He is teaching at Cedarburn school, Castlebury. Bob was an active worker in the church and Young People's Union, and will be greatly missed in the Sunday School, especially by the members of his class.

The Young People's Union held their regular weekly meeting in the Sunday School room of the church on Monday evening.

TRINITY CHURCH NOTES

On Monday evening, Jan. 25th, a large number attended the regular meeting of Trinity Church A.Y.P.A. in the Parish Hall. The meeting was of a literary nature and was in charge of Arthur Arch. The meeting opened with a hymn, and prayer led by the President, Albert Lovatt. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted, and as there was not much business it was dispensed with until the next meeting. The President welcomed all the visitors to the meeting, and then turned the meeting over to the Convener of the programme. The first feature of the evening was a debate between Erindale and Streetsville, the subject being: Resolved that a wheel-barrow is of more use to a farmer than a wife. The affirmative side was very ably upheld by Mr. Frank Nesbit, and Mr. John Watson of Erindale, and Mr. Arthur Arch and Mr. Jack Wright upheld the negative side. Exceptionally good arguments were put forth by both sides, and the decision was given as a tie. The debate was very interesting, amusing and entertaining. The main feature of the evening was an address given by Mr. Sam Cordingley on "His Pacific Coast Trip." It was very instructive and interesting, taking us across Canada, through the West, through the Western States, Mexico, and other places. It was very much enjoyed by all, and a very hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Cordingley for coming out, and giving us such a splendid description of his trip. The meeting was closed by the President, after which lunch was served.

Don't forget the "Extravaganza" being given on Wednesday evening, Feb. 3rd, in the Parish Hall, at 8 p.m., directed by Mr. Shipp. It is a company of 30 entertainers giving an evening's performance of old-time songs, dances, recitations and instrumentals all in costume, with a little dialogue in each part. It promises to be a real evening's programme. It was given in Milton last week, to a crowded theatre. So come along, next Wednesday, to Trinity Church Parish Hall, and enjoy a pleasant evening. See advertisement elsewhere in this paper.

The next meeting of the A.Y.P.A. takes place on Monday evening, Feb. 8th. It is to be a Valentine Social, and it is hoped that all the members will attend this meeting.

Services next Sunday: 10 a.m., Sunday School; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer; 7 p.m., Evening Prayer.

SNIDER'S

This community was represented by thirty residents at Sheridan Hall, when the Prospect Park Church Dramatic Club, Toronto, presented their play, "Rear Entrance Please." This was given under the auspices of the Trafalgar Y.P.U., who have been asked to return the visit on February 1st.

We regret to report that Mr. Allan Fish is seriously ill with pneumonia at his home here.

Mr. Wm. Greensides, Sr., is recovering nicely from his recent illness.

The condition of the icy roads prevented many from attending the annual meeting of Wesley Church on Wednesday of last week. The church treasurer, Mr. Earl Albertson, reported that all financial obligations had been met and a small surplus remained. Reports were also received from the Women's Association and Woman's Missionary Society. The Sunday School reported a successful year and also had a balance remaining. Mrs. H. T. Post and Miss Grace Fish resigned as teachers, and Miss Clara Dunn and Miss V. Lunau were appointed in their stead. Reg. D'Bell was appointed treasurer and W. Thomas, blackboard artist. A tabulated attendance report presented by the secretary, Willard Fish, elicited commendation, and on suggestion of Miss Lunau, it was decided to conduct an attendance campaign, with Mrs. Lunau and Mrs. J. E. Dunn as leaders. Fifteen dollars was voted by the S.S. towards the fund for the purchase of a new piano. A pleasing feature of the meeting was the presentation of a collection plate and bell to the S.S. by the scholars of the primary class, Miss Fish, teacher. An expression of appreciation was tendered Rev. H. S. Lovering and family for their interest in the welfare of the church and also to Mr. Albertson, for his work as treasurer. A social hour was enjoyed following the meeting.

The young people of Snider's tendered Miss Grace Fish a surprise party at her home on Thursday evening on the occasion of her birthday. This pleasant affair was arranged by Miss Mary Shea. This week Miss Fish left for Guelph, where she will visit for several days with her friend, Miss Mary Thomas.

On Sunday, at Wesley Church, Rev. Mr. Lovering chose as his text, "For I seek not yours, but you," from Corinthians. For this sermon he coined the word, "Utilitis," which he said was a disease of the church, which meant using people entirely to promote church material interests and not being concerned about them for their own sake. For the children, the minster told the story of William Oliver, who carried the gospel message for many years to the people on the British Columbia coast by means of his boat, "Glad Tidings."

Harold, little son of Mr. and Mrs Fred Lepofsky, underwent an operation for his eye at the Jewish Hospital in Toronto last week. He is home again and doing nicely

Miss Mary Millen, who died at Long Branch on Jan. 26, was buried at St. Mary's R.C. cemetery, Port Credit, this Thursday morning.

Mr. Gordon Graydon, M. P., is certainly keeping Peel County before the public in Dominion Parliament and never loses a chance to participate in the debates on the floor of the House. According to Hansard of Jan. 20th, he spoke at length on sports in Peel County, showing what part the two great games, Lacrosse and hockey, play in his constituency ...We think Mr. Graydon is representing us well and will never let any matter of importance pass his attention..

Bowlers Elect Officers

Streetsville Lawn Bowling Club held its annual meeting on Monday evening. The 1936 season was the most successful of any for a number of years back. Not only from the players or sporting part, but quite a number of repairs were carried out the members showing the sp[illegible] spirit of sport in helping in the[illegible] repairs as they did in the games.

The membership was greatly increased for the year. How about you, dear reader, joining for 1937? No other game shows your sporting character out so well. Come on with us so we may see what kind of a spirit you are.

An evening of entertainment is in store for all in the near future.

Officers for the year—
Pres., H. Q. Burns
Vice Pres, G. S. Jourdan
Sec., Fred Mabs.
Treas., Alf Bruce.
Executive, A. Graydon, B. Root and Dr. Smith.

Alaska's Lottery Known as "Nenana Ice Pool"

Just as other countries have their favorite lotteries, and sweepstakes, so Alaska comes in for its sweepstakes, known as the "Nenana Ice Pool." One puts down a dollar bet on a freak of Nature, says the Washington Star.

You set the date when you estimate the ice will break and flow down the Tanana river, designating the hour and the minute. For example: You select April 1 (though 'tis no April fool's stunt), designating the hour and the minute. This is considered your booking for your chance in lottery. Here's the way the winner is determined:

A crowbar is set in the ice, a wire runs across the frozen river six feet below the iron stake. This wire is connected to a clock on the shore. When the ice breaks and moves downstream contact is made, which stops the clock. There is a thunderous roar of breaking ice, flowing down the river. This tremendous noise keeps up for many days as the ice breaks up and flows with the current. Very often the ice jams cause floods. This great tide feeds the Yukon river in Alaska. It is a very spectacular sight, especially at early dawn. It has been found necessary at times to dynamite the ice, which accumulates in great boulders, to prevent overstacking of the river banks.

The "ice stake" is awarded to the person whose lottery ticket registers nearest the automatic stopping of the clock-time. There is no graft and very little overhead expense, and the full sum, with exception of minor expenses, goes to the lucky winner. At "Nenana Ice Pool," held in Fairbanks, the winner received over $60,000. The whole performance is automatically operated and no one can possibly be cheated.

"Castle of True Wives," Story of Middle Ages

Not very far from Heilbronn, in Wurtemburg, is the ruin of the Castle of Weibertreu, concerning which is told one of the most curious tales of the Middle ages, writes a Heilbronn, Germany, correspondent in the Washington Post. It appears that in the Twelfth century the castle was captured by a feudal chief, who, holding the male inhabitants within its grim walls, planned to put them all to death.

As a parting gesture to the women, who were similarly captured, he gave them permission to leave the castle and take with them only their most valued piece of property. To the victor's astonishment, the women marched across the drawbridge to freedom, each carrying her husband on her back. For this reason, says the old legend, the old fortress came to be called "The Castle of True Wives."

The Castle of Weibertreu is sought out by visitors who account it one of the quaint sights of this region. Mark Twain, when he was there, if one may believe what he says in his "Tramp Abroad," did not actually go up the hill to the ruin, but "observed it from a distance, while my horse leaned up against a fence."

Northern Ohio Indians

The Eries, for whom the lake was named, were at one time the occupants of northeastern Ohio, as well as of the whole southern shore of Lake Erie from near the site of Buffalo to Sandusky bay. They were kin of the Iroquois, but bitter enemies, and it seems that about 1650 a merciless war broke out between them. The Iroquois were superior in numbers and organization, with the result that they practically exterminated the Erie nation, a few remnants of it being received into other tribes. The lands of the Eries were thus left largely in possession of the Iroquois. They were also occupied to some extent by more westerly nations—Ottawas, Chippewas and Pottawattomies.

Ruins of Pompeii

When the fury of the volcanic conflagration which destroyed Pompeii 79 A. D. was past, the site of the city was a sea of ashes, the upper parts of buildings not destroyed sticking out and serving as a guide-post to those who returned to dig among the ruins. By the Third century a number of buildings had been erected to the north of the city. This second Pompeii was, however, abandoned in the Eleventh century on account of the frequent earthquakes, eruptions of Vesuvius and incursions of Saracens.

Famous Greek Monastery

The famous Greek Orthodox monastery of Valamo, on one of a group of islands in the northern part of Lake Ladoga, Finland, is said to have been founded A. D. 992, and was at its height of fame toward the end of the last century, when pilgrims visited it in enormous numbers. The most noteworthy sight is the magnificently equipped Chuch of the Transfiguration, which consists of two churches placed one over the other. There are several smaller sanctuaries and hermitages.

Had to Buy Sailors

From the Sixteenth to the Nineteenth century, England had such a difficult time getting sailors for her navy that she paid gangs and others so much a head for every man that they "pressed," or shanghaied, into the service. One woman found this business so profitable that she opened a saloon and; within a period of twelve years, produced 26,000 recruits—with the aid of knockout drops—for her king and country.—Collier's Weekly.

Juvenile Hockey

(Simpson & Sampson)

It was falsely reported in the last week's paper that the Streetsville Juveniles suffered defeat at George town. The Streetsville Juveniles won the game with a score of 4—1. Leslie Longworth and Lloyd Hope scored two goals each. Jimmie Lumbers, the goalie, was put out of action when he saved a goal by stopping a puck with his mouth. Pete Rutledge took Jimmy's place in the nets and finished out the game.

In the future please disregard any Juvenile Hockey information that is not labelled Simpson & Sampson.

On Monday night Streetsville took a beating from UpperCanadaCollege The score at the end of the game was 2—0. It was their first defeat this year but the boys played a good game.

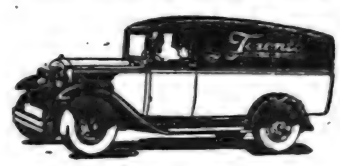
The object of the society is to help beautify our village. Flowers will be planted at the old cemetery, at the village pound, at the schools and at other points: There will likely be flower shows during summer and fall, and prizes will be given:

Prof McClellan, of OAC, Guelph was expected to give an address at this meeting, but the roads were so treacherous, that he phoned he was not coming: However, the society may have the pleasure hearing him soon:



The Society had 80 members last year, and Mr: Broadbear deserves much credit for His share of the work of securing this large number:

The executive is now asking for membership fees for 1937, and hopes to exceed the number of last year: Everybody seemed to be satisfied with their premiums, especially the roses. This year the members may get a chance to choose their premiums. Any of the executive will accept your membership fee—one dollar—and the sooner it is paid the better.

STAR RUBY

By Louise Jerrold

Albertine Tevans, shopgirl, falls in love with Dennis Maxwell, jewelry salesman, but is worried by a rumor that he has got into some sort of trouble with his firm. Out of a clear sky, her rich great-Aunt Celia Tevans, whom she has never seen, invites her for a visit. The night before she is to leave, Jennis thrusts a star ruby into her hand and bolts. The next day, she arrives at her aunt's estate to find two other guests—Countess Yelena Loupakoff and her brother, Count Michael. There seems to be tension in the air, and Aunt Celia's houseman and chauffeur, Bates, who always wears dark glasses, gives Albertine the creeps. A man with a collection of rubies to show. Aunt Celia is expected. He arrives—it is Dennis!

CHAPTER VI.

"My investments," she said quite simply, "and your inheritance. Open it, Albertine."

The girl pressed a tiny spring, and the lid flew up. Unset diamonds, sapphires, emeralds and rubies blazed at her. Star rubies, like the one Denny had entrusted to her.

"But you aren't afraid— for your own safety—and theirs?" she whispered, in an awed voice. "Aren't you afraid, living alone the way you do?"

"The stones are insured," Aunt Celia told her. "And my servants are all men—Bates and the cook and the gardener. And then, there is Bob Fletcher of the State Police, who is a great friend of mine. I have plenty of protection.'

She let the gems slip through her fingers.

"Lovely, aren't they? Only I can not enjoy them as much as I used to because of my eyes," she said very wistfully. "That is why I'm not certain that I care to add to my collection. There is a man coming here to show me more rubies. They are so warm-looking —so alive—I find it hard to resis them."

She took off her emerald and diamond rings and, holding them close to her eyes, turned them this way and that in the light.

"I've been a stupid old woman—letting jewels fill my life when I might have been enjoying you. Not only stupid, but wicked as well because Albert's daughter— her voice broke—"has been forced to work."

"But that hasn't hurt me," Albertine pointed out. "Why, I've loved it! And if I hadn't been working, I might never have met—" She bit her lip. She had almost spoken of Denny.

She was grateful when the telephone bell rang at that moment.

* * *

Aunt Celia answered. "Yes, Bates, I'm taking the call. Hello, hello. . . Who?. . . Oh, yes. Well, you tell Max Atker that I said he was to drive you right over here. . . Nonsense, you can't stay at his hotel, where the locks can be picked with a hairpin!. . .

"You're to stay here . . Goodbye."

She turned back to Albertine.

"That was the man I was talking about—the one who is bringing the rubies for me to see."

Albertine dipped into the little heap of jewels.

"I love them," she murmured. "Wasn't that a wonderful necklace the Countess wore tonight? It—it seems odd to hear her talk about having so little money."

"She would probably do without many things before she would part with her necklace. People who really love precious stones are like that. It was a private sale of unset diamonds in New York that brought us together."

They were still discussing the Russians some time later when they were interrupted by a tap on the door.

"It—it's Bates, ma'am."

Aunt Celia opened the door.

"There's a gentleman downstairs" the man announced. "He said you were expecting him."

"Put him in the room next to Count Michael, and tell him—no, Albertine, you'd better go down and tell him that I'll see him the first thing in the morning. I'm going to bed now."

As Albertine started down the stairs, she saw a man at the foot of them, stooping over a bag. A man with crisp red hair like Denny's. He straightened up, and turned.

It was Denny!

"D-DENNY!" Albertine stammered. "You—I never dreamed—Aunt Celia——"

A queer change of expression in his eyes stopped her. He stepped back, his gaze guarded, wary.

He said, almost in a whisper, "It will be better—under the circumstances—to act as though we were strangers to each other. I'll explain later," he added hurriedly.

Albertine felt bewildered. Why all the mystery? First the magnificent star ruby he had dropped into her hand last night, and now this! Carrie Williams' warning came back to her. With an effort she pushed it out of her mind, and repeated her aunt's message.

"Miss Tevans——" Dennis began formally, then broke off as a voice behind them said, "This way, sir."

Bates had soundlessly appeared and had already picked up Dennis' bag. Silently, Dennis followed him to the second floor.

The next morning, Albertine awoke to find sunshine splashing its gold through the open bedroom windows. A flowering catalpa just outside threw lovely wavering patterns on the floor as she dressed.

On such a lovely morning, she thought, everything was sure to turn out all right. Denny would clear up all this mystery. What nonsense to pretend to be strangers!

"I hope Aunt Celia will like the way you look" she said to herself, and knew that she meant Denny.

She started down the hall and as she rounded a corner she almost collided with Bates, carrying a breakfast tray. She had to force herself to greet him politely. She didn't like Bates. He was too—too something or other. His close-cut, shiny black hair made you think of a wet seal, and those dark glasses seemed to cover so much of his face that all you saw was his very thin-lipped mouth and small black moustache.

"Your aunt isn't so well this morning, Miss Tevans," he said, in his irritatingly soft voice. "I'm bringing her breakfast. She wants to see you when you——"

Keep the Sunnyside Up

When the regular round of desserts has been served over and over and not only you, but the family, are wanting something new and different, try a peach upside down cake. It is a perfect and complete dessert combining the lightness of a good cake with the sweetness of luscious peaches which will bring back memories of summer at this time of the year.

This cake is simple to make and certain to satisfy, that is if you take care and use only the finest ingredients. A cake is no better than the flour it is mixed with so be sure to obtain the lightest, finest, cake flour on the market. Peach Upside Down Cake, served sunny-side up, is a rich, attractive appetizing dessert for the whole family.

Peach Upside Down Cake

1½ cups sifted cake flour
1¼ teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
⅔ cup granulated sugar
4 tablespoons softened butter or other shortening
1 egg, well beaten
½ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
4 tablespoons butter
½ cup brown sugar, firmly packed.
2 cups sliced peaches (fresh or canned)

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, salt, and sugar, and sift together three times. Add butter. Combine egg milk, and vanilla Add to flour mixture, stirring until all flour is dampened then beat vigorously 1 minute.

Melt 4 tablespoons butter in 8x8x2 inch skillet, over low flame. Add brown sugar (¼ teaspoon nutmeg may be mixed with brown sugar, if desired); stir until melted. On this arrange peach slices. Turn batter over contents of pan. Bake in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) 50 minutes, or until done. Loosen cake from sides of pan with spatula Serve upside down with peaches on top. Garnish with whipped cream. Canned pineapple, cooked apricots, or sliced apples may be used for peaches.

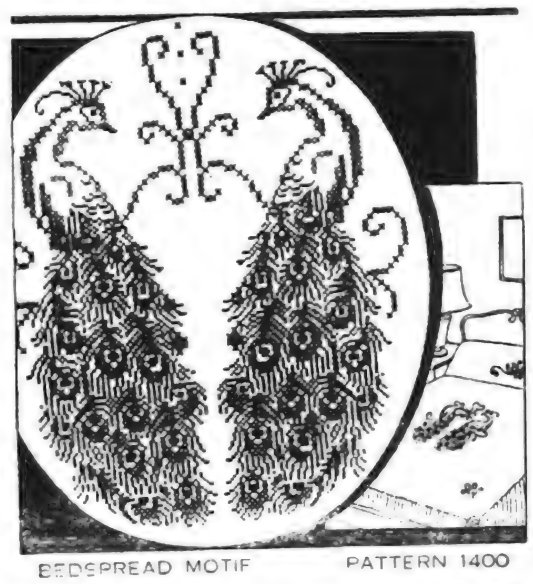
Something Different

"Everybody's always talking about the weather," said Mark Twain, "but no one ever does anything about it!" That is too often true—particularly so in the pantry, where we prepare the same old dishes regardless of heat, cold, drought or blizzard.

Cold weather calls for hot dishes —dishes to warm the body and supply much-needed nourishment. That is why dried limas are especially valuable during the winter months.

Baked Limas with Marshmallows

2 cups cooked dried limas
½ teaspoon salt
1½ tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons brown sugar
¼ cup hot water
3 strips bacon
3 to 6 marshmallows



Put limas in a buttered casserole dish, adding water and stirring in salt, butter and brown sugar. Bake in moderate oven 350 deg. F.) for about 20 minutes (until thoroughly heated). Then place bacon strips over top, dot with marshmallows and place under broiler flame until toasted a golden brown.

Lima Croquettes

2 cups cooked, dried limas
½ cup cream
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon poultry seasoning
1 tablespoon tomato catsup
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon powdered sage
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 cup fine dry bread crumbs

Rub limas through a coarse strainer. Add crumbs, cream, salt, pepper, sage and egg. Shape in the form of small cylinders. Roll in crumbs, dip in 1 egg, beaten with 2 tablespoons cold water and again roll in crumbs. Fry in deep hot fat (890 deg. F.) until brown, then drain on soft paper. Place on serving plate and garnish with rings of fried apple.

Handy Actors In The Movies

Supply Hands, Feet, Legs, For the Stars In Closeups

HOLLYWOOD.—You never have seen the faces of some of the people who make a living by appearing before movie cameras. They don't get even screen credit with the rest of the cast. They're anatomical doubles for the stars; their hands feet, and legs are used in closeups.

Studios call in these doubles when stars are too busy to be bothered by scenes in which their faces don't show. A double also is used when a star's hands, feet or legs are not especially attractive at close camera range. The screen must have glamour to the last detail.

Not all these flattering substitutes are made for actresses either. Just the other day a studio put in a hurry call for a man with handsome legs.

A famous male star had a scene in which a masseur was to give him a rubdown. But his bony knees and string calves were so funny-looking that the director decided to call in a leg double rather than risk the chance of wrecking the star's reputation with his feminine fans.

Writing Inserts

Some of the unseen actors with good-looking hands have mastered several styles of penmanship and do most of the writing inserts in which only the moving hands are visible. Such a one is Margaret Burt, who can do ordinary writing, German script and a fair imitation of Chinese. She gets $25 a page for her pen wielding.

Myrtle Flynn is another. In her spare time she sorts fan mail at RKO, but she also is a handwriting double and is in demand for other manual closeups. She wrote in a diary for Miriam Hopkins in "Becky Sharp."

Her hands, and not Ann Sothern's are shown holding a jewel box in "The Smartest Girl in Town." In other pictures she has rung doorbells, put on gloves, struck matches and pressed light switches.

A native of Vancouver, Miss Flynn came to Hollywood three years ago after working as a stenographer in Chicago. A director learned of her expert penmanship, then noticed her beautiful hands, and it wasn't long until she became the studio's official hand-double.

Evil Paws

A certain male extra gets many assignments in mystery thrillers which have inserts showing a hand gripping a dagger or a gun. He has what casting directors call "evil hands" — short fingers and nails which he carefully keeps unkept. His paws are handy, too, for clutching the lily-white throat of a heroine, or for twirling the combination of a safe.

Doris Bigges is an extra who makes extra money by doubling for both hands and feet of actresses. You have seen parts of her when you thought you were looking at Luise Rainer, Josephine Hutchinson, Kay Francis, Ruby Keeler and others.

Nice Work

She makes as much as $25 a handie, or footie, although the usual rate is $15 an hour. She turns pages of books, put on stockings, shuffles cards, and holds up engagement rings to be admired. Nice work for those who can get it.

When Miss Bigges isn't doubling she poses for the ads or works as a dress extra.

Photographing such scenes is simple enough. For a writing shot the paper is mounted on a drawing board and the camera peeks over the writer's shoulder. The words first are done in light blue pencil, which doesn't show and for the actual sceent are traced with black ink. The camera is run slowly so that the writing will seem rapid on the screen.

The unsung anatomical doubles of Hollywood know which stars have bgi feet or peculiar legs or unattractive hands. But they won't tell —because they'd lose their jobs.

The modern way to treat a cold is this: Two "Aspirin" tablets the moment you feel a cold coming on. Repeat, if necessary, in two hours. English Capital Wanted

Whatever excuse there may have been in former years for hesitancy on the part of British investors no longer exists because of the proved value of Canadian mines. It would appear to be desirable for British investors to establish agencies in the Dominion so that they can become perfectly familiar with the opportunities in Canada and, hence, be able to discriminate between good and bad prospects. British investors are as a rule very cautious and like to see their way clearly before they commit themselves. Capitalists in the United States are near at hand, and they are quick to seize every opportunity that promises rich rewards.—Brantford Expositor.

Costly Low-Attendance

As far as the attendance group of one to five is concerned, the total of such schools has been decreasing. In 1933 there were 150 in the province, in 1934 there were 129 and in 1935 only 124. Of the decrease of 26 in two years, the counties were responsible for 21 and the districts five. Taking the group of schools attended by an average of six to ten, of which Oxford at last report had three, the average cost is 46.16 cents per pupil-day, compared with an average of 23.46 cents for all rural schools in the province.—Woodstock Sentinel Review.

Helen Hayes

Helen Hayes, movie actress, as she received the 1936 National Speech Award for fine diction said that she had achieved her improved style practising before a mirror. So that is why members of the fair sex can be so frequently seen gazing at themselves.—Brantford Expositor.

Buried Treasure

It was a most inspiring address which Hon. Charles McCrea, former Minister of Mines, gave last night.

Mr McCrea spoke on How Mining Betters Business, a subject which appeals strongly to his enthusiasm and one which few are more competent to discuss than he. But Mr. McCrea's enthusiasm is based on actual knowledge and experience; it is not the airy optimism of the visionary but the considered judgment of an expert. In fact he is able to present ample statistical corroboration of the faith that is in him. Canada has advanced far beyond the stage of probability; the 'pre-Cambrian shield,' especially has spectacularly revealed its wealth and is continually giving further proof of its latent riches.

"This belt," said Mr. McCrea, "is the greatest mineral empire in existence." A big claim, certainly, but one not lightly advanced.—Hamilton Spectator.

Fewer Newspapers Today

In 1911—so reports the Bowmanville Statesman—Ontario had 52 daily newspapers; today the number is 33. In 1911 Toronto had six daily newspapers, now but three. In the weekly field Ontario had 408 country weekly newspapers; today the number is 16[illegible]—Guelph Mercury.

Aiding the Hard of Hearing

Seats wired for the hard of hearing are likely to come more generally into use in theatres, churches and other places of assemblage. At least two St. Thomas churches have several seats wired but the theatres here have no such equipment as yet, although the day when they will have cannot be far distant. Seats equipped with these earphones make shows and church services of value to many who otherwise would stay at home to catch what they can over the radio through their own individual appliances.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Denning a Good Liar

A good liar is an asset to a community or a nation—or not as the case may be. And one of his basic attributes must be an ability to at least give the hearer the notion that he may be telling the truth. Take Hitler, for instance. People don't know whether to believe him or not. He might be but you feel 75 per cent. sure that he isn't.—Sault Star.

Wanton Destruction

In some people there is a stronger desire towards wilful destruction than in others. Why some people do some of the things they do in the way of unnecessary and mean destruction is difficult to understand.

From the little village of Niagara-On-The-Lake comes a strange story to emphasize this. Numerous complaints have been made of late by residents of this village that damage is being done to wreaths and flowers in St. Mark's Cemetery.

One family came to the cemetery the other day to see the grave of a departed loved one on which grave they had placed two wreaths some time previously. When they came to the grave they found the wreaths "practically destroyed and the remains strewn all over the ground."

It has not been learned who was responsible for this piece of foolish destruction so far, but whoever it is it seems difficult to imagine very many people who would resort to this type of wanton destruction.—Oshawa Times.

Nothing To Fool With

There is a great deal that the doctors do not know about influenza, but they do know pretty well what to do about it. In all varieties of it, it may be laid down as a general principal that you had better coddle yourself a bit about it, before you get it and after; and that, if you get it, you had better on no account try to "tough it out."

This is old-fashioned treatment, but the best doctors seem to agree that it is the best. It means going to bed and staying warm for a day or two; and it means put in the converse, not going out to expose yourself to further chills and infections, and the risk of pneumonia.

It means also not going where you can contribute your own collection of germs to the general infection. Influenza, even of the mild sort, is a bad thing to fool with.—Vancouver Province.

Drop Final Letter

The Italian Vice-Consul says that the word "gangster" cannot be translated into Italian. However, Italians get along very well with the word "bandita," which we have borrowed from them, dropping the final letter.—Toronto Globe and Mail.

The Soo's Population

The Sault's population has increased 245 over last year's figure to a record for the city of 23,627. The previous high mark was 23,504 in 1932. Two year's later, the assessor's census showed only 23,064.—Sault Daily Star.

THE EMPIRE

It began for us with a plunge into mourning when King George V died, rose through an access of welcome to his successor and ended with a sudden, bewildering abdication and ye another King. Scandals, Cabinet indiscretions, fires and floods have made the year seem like a retrospective Old Moore's Almanac. These troubles have been our own. In addition we have shared the dismalities of a world that seems to live under the cloud of lunacy. The year opened with slaughter in Abyssinia and closes with slaughter in Spain. Nation has called unto nation, but the call has been to war. Never in history have the weapons of war and mutilation been piled with such ghastly speed as during the Year.—

Absent-Minded Empire

A great historian once said that the British Empire was won in a moment of absent-mindedness. It is true that there was little calculating foresight or diplomatic skill displayed in acquiring it. The Empire emerged as the result of characteristics inherent in the nature of the people who brought it into being. It was an expression of their life. Its foundations were laid in the character of its people. It has endured and expanded because their spirit has remained strong and virile. In face of tremendous opposition and severe losses it has become the most astonishing achievement of modern times.—Melbourne Argus.

Zippers Are Still Favorite Fasteners

NEW YORK.—Many a spectator sports dress is fastened at the front. Zippers are still pets; they are on cotton, crepe, flannel, linen dresses. Zipping from collar to hem. Hours can be spent counting rich man, poor man, beggar man, thief with buttons; they, too fasten frocks at the front from top to bottom or they may run down the shoulder seams under the arms and so to the hem. Again they are used in a zigzag fastening that goes from the neck almost to the base of the armpit and back again to the front of the waistline. It has amused some designers to tie dresses at the front with ribbons that serve the double duty of trimming and fastening.

The Rarest Talent

By TRELLA DICK

"Mother, look at this!" fourteen-year-old Emily Stevenson exclaimed, rushing into the room where her parents were seated. "Do you think I might join?"

Her mother took the proffered paper. "Six Weeks Course in Home Economics!" she read. "Open to all women and to girls over thirteen years of age. $10 fee." She looked at Emily. "Seems quite a bit for things you can learn just as well at home," she said. "Joan's music will cost us a lot this summer. Besides, I don't know as we could spare you every morning to attend this class. You'll have to look after Jimmie."

Emily's face showed her disappointment, but she said nothing. The steady rhythm of the piano in the living-room ceased abruptly. Quick footsteps sounded in the hall. Seventeen-year-old Joan appeared.

"Can't you take better care of the baby, Emily?" she demanded crossly. "He's bothering me. I should think you could do that much—"

Emily hurried out, Joan following and still scolding. A moment later, the piano was heard again.

"Isn't she ambitious?" Mrs. Stevenson said proudly. "She certainly ought to get somewhere."

"Who?" Mr. Stevenson turned from the radio he was adjusting and faced his wife.

"Who?" she echoed in surprise. "Why Joan, of course."

"Didn't Emily show just as much ambition by wanting to take that course in economics?"

"O, yes," Mrs Stevenson dismissed the matter lightly. "I can teach her most of that at home. I need her to take care of Jimmie. With a talented girl like Joan in the family, we all have to make sacrifices."

"Joan's talented," Mr. Stevenson admitted, "and ambitious, and industrious, but to my way of thinking, her talent doesn't compare with Emily's."

"Emily's talent?" Mrs. Stevenson was genuinely bewildered. "Emily is a very sweet child and a great comfort to me, but she hasn't any talent that I know of. She doesn't care to learn music, nor dancing, nor—"

"Those things!" Mr. Stevenson waved them aside. "Any girl can learn them. I can name you a dozen girls right in this block who do one or the other. Emily has the rarest talent there is, these days, and the finest—homemaking. We must encourage it."

"I do," his wife answered promptly. "I let her cook, and arrange the furniture, and fix drapes and—"

"And take care of Jimmie," laughed her husband.

"Isn't that a part of homemaking?"

"Certainly; and, of course, it's right and proper for Emily to take care of him some of the time, but Joan should do her share, too and leave Emily free to 'practice' her chosen work, the same as Joan practices hers."

Mrs. Stevenson was thoughtful for a while. "Perhaps you're right," she said at length. "I hadn't thought of homemaking as a talent to be developed."

She hurried to the window, through which came shouts of baby laughter, mingled with Emily's gay tones.

She called to her. "Come in, a moment, dear," she said. As Emily appeared, she continued, "Your father thinks we can manage about the course."

Emily gave a gasp of delight and hugged first one parent and then the other. "May I try out some of the things I learn, at home?" she asked eagerly.

"Indeed you may. I shall want you to."

"O, that'll be fun. Thank you, both. And I'll run back to Jimmie, now."

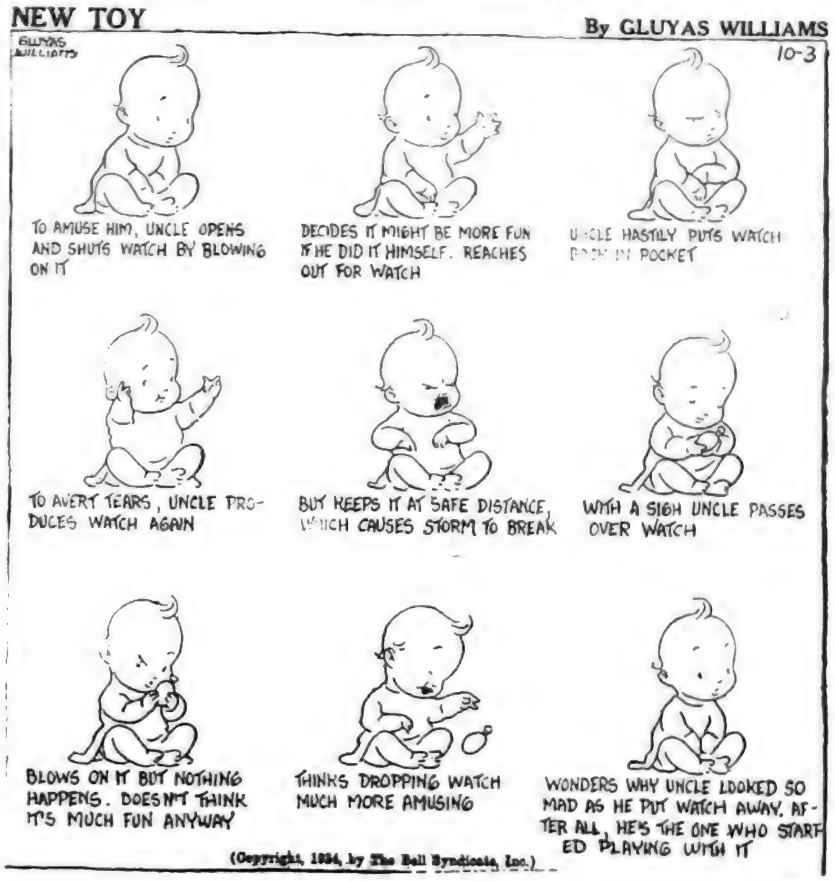
Her parents gazed after her fondly, as she hurried away.

"You're right, John, she has the rarest of talents," murmured Mrs. Stevenson. "I wonder why you realized it before did I."

"You see," laughed Mr. Stevenson, "her mother has the same gift. That's how I came to know its importance."

The fact is that Brisbane was neither a great writer nor a great thinker and that the stuff which he wrote was mostly superficial and sometimes trash. Where he excelled—it brought him his undeniably great following—was in his capacity to appear to know more than he knew, to take a complex or scientific subject and "write it down" to his audience. It is the art of a certain type of journalism—and no easy one. The late Lord Birkenhead, at a dinner to T. P. O'Connor, said that reading the London Irishman's sketches of public men through the years he had always the impression that it was an easy way to make a living, but that when he came to turn out his own "portraits" of public men he realized the immense art and difficulty of producing something readable.

It was this art—something of over-simplification—that gave Brisbane his following. His column "Today" was mostly superficial and often utter nonsense, yet no one else in the United States produced anything quite like it. Brisbane turned it out every day. Whether he was on an air liner between New York and Los Angeles, or on Mr. Hearst's California ranch, or in Europe, or on a fast express train anywhere in the United States, his column came out just the same, appeared the following day in all the Hearst papers, was read by millions. And in between Brisbane wrote the long weekly editorial in the Hearst Sunday newspapers, wrote for the Cosmopolitan, wrote for the Pictorial Review. His production of words was tremendous.



Yet Brisbane, his wealth and his following notwithstanding, will never belong to the Valhalla of great American journalists: will not rank with Greely and Godkin, or Dana or Bowles; will not rank with a half score of others. It takes more than $150,000 a year in a pay envelope or the ownership of a lot of New York real estate to make a really great journalist.

Aided By Advertising

A good salesman known to me was tempted to change jobs. He had been salesman for a firm making a well advertised product which was rather easy to sell. The offer of a larger salary led this man to join up with a company selling an unadvertised article. In his new job this salesman found himself falling down daily, and his new employers began to grow cold on him. When he changed jobs this salesman had acquired the belief that it was he himself who was selling what was given him to sell, but when he changed jobs, he saw that his success with his old firm was made possible by the company's advertising. Yielding to the lure of a large salary has been an error committed by many a man.

The Royal Navy As A Career

The Admiralty announce that there vacancies for suitable young men between the ages of 19½ and 23 who wish to join the navy as engine-room, electrical and ordnance artificers observes the London Observer.

The physical standard is not unduly high, and there is a simple educational test and practical trade test before entry. Particulars and conditions of entry and service can be had from the nearest Naval Recruiting Officer, whose address is obtainable from any post office.

Artificers, who have the status of petty and chief petty officers, engage to serve for 12 years, with the prospect of re-engaging for another ten to qualify for life pensions. Before that time however, they will have had chances of promotion to warrant officer, with the opportunity of attaining commissioned rank if exceptionally good men. The work of artificers is skilled and responsible, and apart from the variety of service afloat and ashore in all parts of the world — roughly 40 percent. of the time abroad and 60 percent. at home—the pay is good.

Men should be drawing a sure 66s a week within a year of entry, rising gradually to some 95s a week after nine years' service, with further increases as time goes on. Over and above this there are marriage allowances for wives and children, and supplements of pay for various special qualifications and good conduct.

But the actual pay is not everything. Naval men receive free uniforms on joining and annual allowances for its upkeep; free food of excellent quality and good accommodation; duty-free tobacco and cigarettes, and free medical, surgical, and dental treatment if required. The Service is a good employer.

It not only offers the chance of seeing the world, with good leave and prospects of promotion, but looks after its men from start to finish. Moreover, those leaving the Navy with skilled trades behind them have excellent chances of good civilian employment in early middle age. It is not a "blind alley" occupation, and the naval saying, "They don't pipe dinner ashore" is not merely a slogan. It is literally true.

As regards the eventual prospects of those who join the Navy as engine room artificers it may be said, that 16 men in this category were promoted to the rank of sub-lieutenant (E) or lieutenant (E) during 1936. And now serving on the active list there are 62 engineer commanders, 22 engineer lieutenant-commanders, or lieutenant-commanders (E) 35 lieutenants (E), and nine sub-lieutenants (E), all of whom were originally entered as engine room artificers.

Women Doctors Far Outnumber the Men Medicos in Russia

Extraordinary Development of Socialized Medicine in Soviet Union Is Described

NEW YORK.—More women than men are studying medicine in Soviet Russia today according to Dr. Henry E. Sigerist, professor of history of medicine at John Hopkins University who has passed the last two summers studying the extraordinary development of socialized medicine in the Soviet Union.

In an address at the new school for social research, Dr. Sigerist estimated that of the young doctors that will emerge from the Soviet medical schools in the next five years to engage in the ambitious public health program approximately two out of every three would be women.

He attributed this vocational phenomenon [illegible] to the demand for engineers [illegible] Russia during the last decade, absorbed a large proportion of the young men who otherwise might have turned to the medical profession. Engineers were better paid and accorded more privileges during the period of intensive industrial development, and as a result young women found many opportunities in the medical field. In 1928, according to figures which Dr. Sigerist obtained from Soviet officials, 52 per cent of the medical students were women: in 1931, 58 per cent, and in 1934 75.1 per cent. In the last two years the salaries and professional standing of doctors have been raised until they are now on a level with engineers, receiving 400 to 900 rubles a month.

Mr. Sigerist was impressed by the ambitious public health program undertaken by the Soviet Government, and by the pioneer spirit and enthusiasm shown in carrying it forward. Medical units he said, have been established in all the state's enterprises, from the great Stalin automobile factory at Moscow, employing 30,000 workers to the small mechanized farm.

A lion won't attack anything that looks formidable and often will desert a lioness in a fight.

America's first insurance company was organized in 1735 at Charleston S.C. A fire in 1740 destroyed half of Charleston and ruined the company.

Surgery of the Seas

Dr. Adam N. Beattie, surgeon of the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Japan, and his ship's nurse, Miss Margaret Grant Allan, who are shown here, performed two delicate operations during the ship's round trip to the Far East, via Honolulu, just completed in Vancouver. On the outward trip, between Honolulu and Yokohama, the liner's huge turbines were stilled for nearly an hour while Dr. Beattie removed a ruptured duodenal ulcer from a Chinese passenger. On the homeward trip, between Hong Kong and Shanghai, the London, Ont. doctor's skill was again called into play when a Chinese saloon steward was stricken with acute appendicitis. Both patients are recovering well, the physician reported. Dr. Beattie, former house physician at Vancouver's St. Pauls hospital, and graduate of University of Western Ontario's medical school at London, Ont., stated that the Empress of Japan's splendidly equipped operating room made the operations little different in practice from any performed in large hospitals. His assistant, Miss Allan, is a graduate of St. Pauls hospital, Saskatoon. She has been in the Empress of Japan for the past three and a half years and previously was in the Empress of Russia. Dr. Beattie first went to sea in 1930 aboard the Canadian-Australasian liner "Niagara", out of Vancouver.

BOOK REVIEWS

J. Fred Holliss, K.D., LL.B., writes as follows to Perkins Bull, a friend since their days at the Central School in Brampton under Adam Morton, and at the Brampton High School in the eighteen-eighties.

"All Saturday afternoon, Saturday night, Sunday morning to 3 a.m., and all day Sunday, I spent with you and your Boyne to Brampton. I found it very readable, most enjoyable and of absorbing interest. Why! I boarded for a season with old John C. Price, and Sir Melville Parker bought me a glass of beer at the Puddy Huddle hotel one day when he and I were there at a pigeon shooting match. I would judge it to be a fine record of the growth of Orangeism in America and a splendid tribute to its support of the development of our civilization in the direction that British minded folk desire it to go.

"I have a higher opinion of the worth whileness of Orangemen than I held before reading the book."

Michigan Jack Pine Does Not Mature for 80 Years

Considerable has been said in the past regarding the large amount of mature jack pine that may be found on state-owned lands, particularly in state forests. Most of these reports emanate from those who would like to see this timber harvested for commercial purposes, writes Albert Stoll, Jr., in the Detroit News.

A careful check of the state holdings would reveal that there is very little, if any, so-called mature jack pine on these holdings. What undoubtedly is meant is the merchantable jack pine. Under the most favorable growing conditions jack pine matures in Michigan at about eighty to ninety years of age. It is conceded, however, that before this period much of this forest growth becomes merchantable for pulpwood, box wood, railroad ties and the like, but it is by no means mature. Even after reaching maturity, if fire and disease are eliminated from these stands the trees may persist for many years longer without deteriorating.

Reforestation in Michigan did not begin until 1904, and even the oldest of our jack pine plantations are far from being mature today. It is quite true that some of the land which reverted to the state did contain a fair stand of natural jack pine which is approaching close to maturity, but there is so little of this that the state would be unwarranted in attempting to harvest it.

The jack pine tree of northern Michigan, while not as valuable commercially as other species of pines, or hardwood, has gone far in covering the lumbering and fire scars of the past generation and has a distinct recreational value.

Commodore Hull's Sword Rests in U. S. Academy

The sword that signaled "Cease Firing!" at the end of one of the United States navy's most important victories rests at the United States Naval academy, at Annapolis, Md., notes a writer in the Washington Post.

The sword was that of Commodore Isaac Hull; and the victory, that of the United States frigate Constitution, called Old Ironsides, over the British frigate Guerriere in 1812.

The Constitution encountered the Guerriere of Halifax, Nova Scotia, August 19. In less than an hour, the British man-o-war was a total wreck.

This victory was the first major triumph for the infant United States navy and established out nation as a ranking sea power.

When Commodore Hull, then a captain, returned to shore, his native state, Connecticut, presented him a new sword in token of his achievement.

He gave his old sword to Lieut. Stephen Decatur La Valette, an officer on the Constitution, whose descendants donated it to the Naval academy.

Origin of Word "Cop"

There have been advanced a number of stories as to the origin of the word "cop," as applied to policemen. The word cop is supposed to be derived from the Old English verb to cop, meaning to catch, to get hold of, to nab. This meaning is retained in the slang expression to cop off, meaning to grab; to make away with something sought by others. In England, a policeman is often called a copper, that is, one who cops or catches offenders. As applied to a policeman, the word cop dates back to 1859. The verb cop, as used in dialect English, has been traced back to the Seventeenth century. There is no evidence that cop was originally the abbreviation of constabulary of police. Another story of the origin of the word is connected with the following: In 1829 Sir Robert Peel organized the first modern police force in London. Members of the police force wore blue uniforms with very large copper buttons. These buttons gave the police the name copper, shortened to cop.—Literary Digest.

Born in February

Among famous Americans born in February besides Lincoln and Washington, there are Horace Greeley, born on the 3d, in 1811; Aaron Burr, on the 6th in 1756; William T. Sherman, February 8, 1820; William Henry Harrison, ninth President, February 9, 1773; Samuel J. Tilden on the same date in 1814; Thomas A. Edison, February 11, 1847; Daniel Boone, the same date in 1735; Elihu Root, February 15, 1845; Edgar Allan Poe, February 19, 1809; James Russell Lowell, February 22, 1819; "Buffalo Bill" Cody, February 26, 1846, and Longfellow, February 27, 1807.

Home of Mongol Peoples

Mongolia is the home of the Mongol peoples, who have, at various times in history, overrun neighboring territories and established military empires. The largest of these was the Mongol empire, which dominated Asia and part of Europe in the Thirteenth century. Mostly tribesmen, says the Washington Post, they live in felt tents called yurts, depending on vast herds of sheep, horses and camels for their living. Nearly a third of the men are Lama priests.

Saying, "How Do You Do?"

The Anglo-Saxon's "How do you do?" is the German's "Wie geht es Ihnen?" (How does it walk you? How do you progress?) the French equivalent for "How do you carry yourself?" "How do you dress yourself?" and the Latin's "Comme sta?" (How do you stand?) The Arab, whose religion leads to war, will never salute a Christian with "Salaam-Aleikum" (Peace be with you).

The Open Column

The county of Peel Agricultural Society has adopted the phrase "we have just begun to fight", and the directors have been touring the councils, the past week or so, "biting the ear off" the representatives of the various municipalities to such good effect that grants have been substantially increased. Whether the efforts of the directors will be sufficiently forceful to retain possession of the Brampton fair grounds for the society remains to be seen, but at least the society has shown more life than at any time within the past five years.

Some time ago, we advanced the idea of a single fair for Peel County, supported by the various agricultural societies in the south, centre and north of the county. This idea was not at all favorably received by the various outlying fair boards, chiefly on the grounds that the smaller societies were paying their own respective shots, while the County of Peel Agricultural Society was sinking deeper and deeper into the red every day.

But we had the pleasure of sitting in on a debate, the other day between a former resident of the northern section of the county, and a director of the Brampton fair. The northerner said that he would favor the abolition of the smaller fairs, and the support of one single, central fair for the whole county, provided that only Peel County produce was shown at that fair.

The Brampton agricultural official did not entirely agree with this scheme, although, of course, he was entirely in favor of the centralization of the activities of all the agricultural societies in the Brampton fair. He pointed out, wisely enough, that outside exhibitors provided a standard of excellence against which the Peel County farmer could compare his own products, and that, if the outside showman was excluded, a central fair would have less benefit to the agricultural community.

At the same time, both men agreed that there was too much of the prize money from the various fairs of Peel leaking out into pockets beyond the borders of the county, and not enough prize money distributed amongst the county farmers.

BRAMPTON

"The conduct of these two youths is absolutely inexcusable," declared Judge Archibald Cochrane, when James Donelly and Clarence Wilson, both of Brampton, appeared before him last week. Donelly to face a charge of assaulting, and Wilson of obstructing a peace officer.

Police Chief Fred J. Elderfield, Streetsville, testified that on Dec. 16 at a legion hall dance the pair had been "wrestling" and that Donelly had used foul language. He had gone over to warn the two youths, he told the court, but when he left them, Donelly persisted, with ladies and girls standing only a few feet away.

"I then told them both to go outside," he testified. "Donelly mumbled something about paying money to get in. I didn't answer. I told him I was a police officer and took him to the stairs. He demanded his money back and then struck at me twice. I ducked the first blow, but the second landed on my nose. I afterwards found it had been fractured. It isn't right yet."

When he had tried to grab Donelly and arrest him, Wilson had run in between them, the chief said, after which Donelly ran away. "He came back later, only to change his mind and tried to run away again. One of the men at the dance caught him and brought him back," he added.

"I'd say he had had a drink, but not that he was drunk," the police chief replied to a question.

Donelly testified that the officer had pushed him off balance, and that he had tried to regain his balance by throwing both hands up in the air, accidentally striking Elderfield. He vehemently denied being rowdy or using bad language. He had left, he said, because he thought the crowd of onlookers was going to mob him.

C. H. Bowyer, defence counsel, said the officer was not in uniform at the time, and that neither of his clients knew who he was.

Donelly was given suspended sentence of one year. The case against Wilson was ordered dismissed for lack of evidence.

NONAGENARIAN KEEPS FIT FOR BIRTHDAY PARTIES

Timothy Shawcross, 93, Came to America 73 Years Ago—Toys With Stock Market

Toronto, Jan. 21.—Timothy Shawcross—he was named after an uncle who fell at Waterloo—was feeling "fit as a fiddle" to-day and looking forward to more parties like yesterday's.

"I am," he said quite proudly, "a younger man than Sir William Mulock. Sir William was 93 on Tuesday. I was 93 yesterday."

It is hard to believe that Mr. Shawcross is only seven years short of a century. He is just as alert both physically and mentally as many men half his age and, according to Mrs. John Howard, his daughter, his health is still almost perfect.

Mr. Shawcross really looks on Paris, Ontario, as his home. He lives there in the warmer months but every winter his daughter prevails upon him to move into her home at 119 Sorauren avenue. At Paris he has a fine flower garden, which occupies his time, and already he is looking forward to spring when he can "get back on the land."

Three years ago the family persuaded their father that he should no longer attempt to do the heavy part of the garden work himself. He was getting too old, he was told, and too much exertion might be dangerous. After putting up a stout battle, Mr. Shawcross was finally forced to agree. He hired a helper, who that spring did the ground work.

"Why he almost wrecked my garden," sputtered the 93-year-old gentleman. "I had to do the whole thing over myself and I'm going to keep on doing it as long as I live."

Mr. Shawcross was born in Hyde, Cheshire, England, in 1844, just seven years after Queen Victoria had come to the throne. He came to America when he was 20 years of age and for a short time lived in the eastern United States. "I didn't like it," he whispered. "I wanted to get back to the Union Jack. As soon as I set my foot in Canada I felt at home and I've been here ever since."

There are no secrets to longevity in Mr. Shawcross' opinion. He smokes he claims "perpetually," drinks "occasionally," eats "just what I want and I feel fine."

At present he has just one hobby. He plays the stock-market. And while he didn't talk about it very much it is understood that his one hobby is a most worthwhile one.

Mr. Shawcross was a resident of Streetsville back in the "eighties" and conducted a watch-making and jewelry business at the corner of Queen Street and Maiden Lane. Mrs. (Dr.) G. A. Montemurro is a relation of Mr. Shawcross.

UNITED CHURCH

The February meeting of the Women's Missionary Society held last Tuesday at Mrs. Lundy's brought out a gathering of twenty-eight and was a very happy and sociable meeting. Mrs. Jones, Hon. President, presided. Mrs. Turney gave the Bible reading, Mrs. Robinson read interesting extracts from late letters from Lawrence and Mrs. Evans told some thrilling stories of pioneering in mission work. Mrs. Hare sang "The Sweet Story of Old." Items of interest were given of the meeting of Toronto West Presbyterial by members who had been there. Reports of treasurer and supply convener showed a fine start made in each of these departments. Announcement was made of the Women's World Day of Prayer on Friday afternoon, Feb. 12, in which the women of the three churches of the village will unite, this year in the United Church. The meeting ended up with the friendly cup of tea and chat.

The Young People's League of the United Church met on Monday night with Miss Leona Durie, president, in the chair. After the business session and devotions, the meeting was given to the care of Miss Jean Temple and her program. Miss Margaret Falconer, with piano solos, was heartily encored. Mrs. McIntyre delighted the group with Scotch and other songs, inimitably sung and Mr. Jas. B. Ross delivered a thoughtful and impressive address on "Foundations for Youth". With poetic quotations he supported his argument and won his audience.

Then Tom Plumb took charge with two good games, the first a contest in a hardware store, and the second "Do we know our bible?" Altogether it was a very enjoyable and profitable evening.

Foresters Have Big Night Here

Splendid Program and Address by Geo. A. Mitchell, A.S.C.R.

Last Friday night the Independent Order of Foresters gave one of the best concerts ever given in Streetsville, in the Odd Fellows Hall, when there were over 300 people present.

The occasion was a visit by officers and members of Court Brampton No. 86, I.O.F., and they brought loads of talent with them to assist in the program—and what a program it was! Young people galore, real actors, dancers, singers, etc. And how they did perform! We never saw anything just like it before in Streetsville or anywhere else. It was a scream from beginning to end. And the audience sat with rapt attention—with their eyes wide open—and there was plenty to see and hear. There was not an idle moment from beginning to end. The performers were well trained, the costumes were beautiful, the selections admirably chosen and enthusiastically applauded again and again. It was a great night—one never to be forgotten—and all hoped to have the pleasure of witnessing it again. If any actor stood out above the others, we would say it was the little Scotch boy, Donald Spence, of six summers, who performed remarkably well, and even better than some could do at twice his age. Several artists from Toronto assisted in the program.

Following is the program:
Accordion Solo—Earl Bunton.
Song and Irish Jig—Betty Archibald.
Bowery Dance Marguerite Martin and Lynda Alliman.
Song—Barbara Corneil.
Tap Dance—Joan Tipping.
Softshoe Dance—Rose Burkett.
Mouth Organ Solo—Tom Smith.
Fast Tap Dance—Helen Stephen, Thelma Green and Ellen Taylor.
Dutch Dance—May Blake's Class.
Scotch Song—Donald Spence.
Address—Geo. Mitchell, A.S.C.R.
Softshoe Dance—Jean Cole.
Recitation—Edith Markell.
Song and Dance—Garner Twins.
Piano Accordion Solo—Earl Bunton.
Novelty Toe Dance—Corneil Sisters.
Rhumba Dance—Lynda Alliman.
Acrobatic Dance—Katie Hayward.
Song—Geraldine Kendal.
Mouth Organ Solo—Tom Smith.
Song and Tap Dance—Barbara Atherton.
Song and Dance—Garner Twins.
Song—Donald Spence.
Specialty Tap—Corneil Sisters.
Buck and Wing Dance—Jean Cole.
Accordion Solo—Earl Bunton.

The program was under the direction of Mrs. Irene May of Brampton and Mr. C. Musgrave of Toronto.

Mr. C. H. Falconer acted as chairman, and with him on the platform were Mr. George A. Mitchell, Asst. Supreme Chief Ranger; a number of other prominent Foresters from Toronto and Brampton, and other places, and Mr. S. H. Foster, Reeve of Streetsville. Mr. Mitchell, in a splendid address, told of the great work the Order is doing and of the assistance rendered by members of the different Courts and officers of the High Court. He stated that Court Streetsville was going to be re-organized and asked that every assistance be given Mr. Chas. Tipping, D.D.S.C., when he started to work in Streetsville.

The Independent Foresters is one of the best fraternal insurance societies in existence today. It is world-wide, has a big membership, and an extensive reserve fund. It has distributed millions of dollars to its members and their dependents and is becoming stronger every day.

The best thing that men and women of all ages can do is to link themselves up with this great insurance organization.

A meeting for members of the Order who live in Streetsville or within ten miles of the village, is to be held in Church's Hall, over the printing office, next Monday night, Feb. 8, at 8 o'clock to discuss the matter and plan for the re-organization of Court Streetsville. All Independent Foresters are invited to attend.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON VI.—FEB. 7.
JESUS THE LIGHT of the WORLD
JOHN 7: 1—9: 41.

Golden Text:—I am the light of the world: he that followeth Me shall not walk in the darkness, but shall have the light of life. John 8: 12.

The Lesson In Its Setting

Time.— All the events in this lesson occurred during the week of October 11—18, A.D 29.

Place.—All the events in this lesson took place in the city of Jerusalem.

Again therefore Jesus spake unto them, saying, I am the light of the world: he that followeth Me shall not walk in the darkness, but shall have the light of life. In these nine verses we have a declarative statement by Christ, a repudiation of that statement by the Pharisees who heard Him, and a defense of the truthfulness of His words by the Lord Himself.

Jesus therefore said to those Jews that had believed Him, If ye abide in My word, then are ye truly my disciples. "Surrender of mind, heart, and will to the power of Christ's doctrine must be complete and enduring. There must be more than a mere recognition of the striking personality of Jesus. There must be the reception of His word into conscience and heart."

And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free:—Later on, the night before His death, Jesus, in praying to the Father, again refers to the word of God as truth (John 17. 17—19). If men accept the truth which Christ teaches, that is, the truth about God, about sin, about Satan, about eternal life, about holiness, about love, men will be free from the power of Satan who deceives, from the bondage of fear, which is due to ignorance, from the power of darkness, from sin itself.

And as he passed by, he saw a man blind from his birth. Blindness from birth is a condition which no man could change, especially no man could ever open his own eyes. All the beauty of life is shut out from the world of a man born blind.

And His disciples asked him, saying, Rabbi, who sinned, this man, or his parents, that he should be born blind?— That the man's blindness was due to sin the disciples assumed: the question was, Was the sin committed by the man so afflicted, or by his parents? In one way the question seems foolish, for the man was born blind, before he ever could have sinned. Furthermore, the question is based on a false assumption. Not all suffering or physical handicaps are the consequences of sin in some immediate ancestor. Parents of most devout faith have been known to have children of imbecilic tendencies, while there are parents who have given birth to children while living in scandalous sin whose children have lived for years without any physical suffering. Ultimately, of course, all suffering results from the fallen condition of the human race.

Jesus answered, Neither did this man sin, nor his parents: but that the works of God should be made manifest in him. "The Lord deals only with the special case; and that only so far as it is an occasion for action and not a subject for speculation.

We must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work:—"We cannot think it strange that Jesus should connect the man's blindness with his own appearance on earth, born blind in order that Jesus might give him sight."

When I am in the world, I am the light of the world.—"There is special reference here to Christ's giving light both to the man's eyes and to his soul."

When he had thus spoken, he spat on the ground, and made clay of the spittle, and anointed his eyes with the clay.—"A medicinal value was attributed to saliva, above all, for disorders of the eyes. (See also Mark 7: 33; 8: 23). Neither are we without examples of a medicinal of clay. Still we must not suppose that, besides his divine power, the Lord also used natural remedies, or that these were more than conductors, not in themselves needful; for other blind eyes he opened without employing any such means (Matt. 20: 30—34).

And said unto him, Go, wash in the pool of Siloam (which is by interpretation, Sent). He went away therefore, and washed, and came seeing.—The pool of Siloam was 50 feet long, 20 feet deep, and 20 feet wide, lying in the mouth of the Tyropean Valley. Water was drawn from it for the temple, and it was supplied by the Fountain of the Virgin. "The obedience was that of faith, feeble as yet, but real; and the reward that which is always promised to faith, even feeble, if real."

The neighbors therefore, and they that saw him aforetime, that he was a beggar, said: Is not this he that sat and begged? Others said: It is he: Others said: No, but he is like him. He said: I am he. — Here we have the first words from the man who was blind, "I am he." His testimony must be received. He knew who he was.

They said therefore unto him, How then were thine eyes opened? The question is perfectly natural. It does not intimate any unbelief or skepticism, but a natural inquisitiveness. Anyone would ask this question.

He answered, The man that is called Jesus made clay, and anointed mine eyes, and said unto me: Go to Siloam, and wash: so I went away and washed, and I received sight. — The report of the blind man is vivid, accurate, clear, and ought to be convincing. There are no adornments here. It is a simple statement of fact. He relates what happened, but actually how Christ opened his eyes, he does not know, and no one else does. We do not understand miracles: we believe them.

Farm Problems

Conducted by
PROFESSOR HENRY G. BELL
with the co-operation of the various departments of Ontario Agricultural College

1. Question:—"A farmer has just taken over a greenhouse which contains 25 tons earth prepared for tomato plant growing five years ago, but never used. This soil has been tested, is natural in reaction, contains a fair amount of nitrate, but is low in phosphoric acid and potash. Would an application of 0-12-10 or 0-12-15 at the rate of 25 lbs. per 1000 square ft. put this soil in suitable condition for growing tomato plants this Spring?" R.W., Northumberland Co.

Answer:—The addition of 0-12-10 or 0-12-15 fertilizer at the rate of 25 lbs. per 1000 square feet would be equivalent to a little over 1000 lbs. per acre. This is a fair application for outdoor use, but I would be of the opinion that this could be almost doubled for indoor purposes such as you recommend. You do not say whether or not the 25 tons of earth have been kept in a dry place and rain and snow have been prevented from falling on them. Of course, if this soil has been kept absolutely dry and no moisture has been added to it, microscopic life will be at a low ebb in it on account of lack of moisture. In this case, it might take the soil a short time to come back to its normal form. I believe the treatments you suggest would put it in fair shape for tomato plant growing.

2. Question:—"I wish some information regarding the building up of land which is in poor condition. I have 45 acres fall plowing on which I would like to sow oats and seed down with 5 lbs. of Timothy and 5 lb. of Red Clover, and was wondering if lime and salt would be a good thing to put on the land and if so, how much per acre? There is also 50 acres that I was thinking of summer fallowing and putting in Fall Wheat and the same mixture of grass seed. Would also like to know if lime and salt would be a good thing to put on for potatoes on land in good condition."—M. G., Oxford.

Answer:—Answering your question regarding treatment of 45 acres of fall plowed land on which you purpose sowing oats and which land I understand is in poor condition, I wish to say that use of lime and salt cannot be recommended. Without testing the soil, it is impossible for me to know whether the soil needs lime or not. If it is acid in reaction (or sour) lime will help. If it is alkaline or neutral, the addition of lime will do no good whatever. The addition of salt merely hastens the robbing of the soil of its fertility. The sodium of the salt displaces the potassium of the soil, hence benefit for a crop or two can be seen, but in general, the use of salt on the land corresponds to the use of the whip on the team. Most often more oats fed to the team give better results in labour which can be obtained from them, similarly, the addition of plant-food to the soil in the shape of manure or fertilizer, or both, will give much better and more lasting results than the use of salt.

With reference to the handling of the other 50 acres, I would strongly advise against putting on lime where you purpose growing potatoes, since lime produces a condition where the potato scab thrives. This fungus disease is common in most of our older soils.

Tsetse flies do not lay eggs; they bring forth living larvae.

You May Be Skeptical, But——

You've laughed at the idea of a hare chasing a hound, but here's irrefutable proof of an otter-hound paling up with his traditional enemy the otter. While hunting with the Bure Valley otter hounds near Aylesham, Norfolk, Eng., Miss E. Townsend caught the young otter which she reared with the aid of a baby's feeding bottle. Named Perdita, it is now a household pet, and follows her about like a dog. Perdita's greatest pal is an old otter-hound—but the young otter is "boss," and chases the old dog sometimes. The strange pair are seen here taking a stroll on the beach with their mistress.

By DOROTHY

There was a rather funny reaction to an interview that Edward G. Robinson gave a reporter for an Italian newspaper some time ago. He praised the work of Frank Capra, the director, who is Italian by birth, saying that Capra refused to direct gangster films.

He remarked that he thought it was because Capra did not want to make pictures which showed his own people in a bad light. When the storm burst it hit, not Capra, but Robinson. Seems the Italians thought gangsters were something like senators — an American institution of which the Americans were proud!

The long discussion over which actress would play the mother role in "Stella Dallas" has been settled at last. It goes to Barbara Stanwyck, who does seem a bit young for it, but of course, there's always the make-up. At any-way the part is to be rewritten to fit her.

Barbara Stanwyck

At the moment the "Gone With the Wind" pursuit of a heroine is still raging, but no doubt that will be settled in the same way—some attractive, dependable actress whose screen work is known to the public everywhere will get it.

Phil Baker, who has long been one of radio's favorite comedians, has learned a lot from what has happened to other men like him when they consented to make a picture. And he is profiting by what he has learned. He knows, that, when the picture is released, the comedian's part may have been cut and cut until there is practically nothing left of it.

Both Samuel Goldwyn and Paramount want him to do his specialty in pictures, but he has held out even to the extent of refusing $12,000 to do his stuff.

The very funny Ritz Brothers, who can be relied upon to send movie audiences into gales of laughter, encountered something that was not so very funny to them, when they had to learn to skate for "One in a Million," the Sonja Henie picture that's all about skating, with Miss Henie doing five big numbers.

The brothers simply could not learn to skate. They could not even stand up on skates. Finally the difficulty was solved by having special skates made for them.

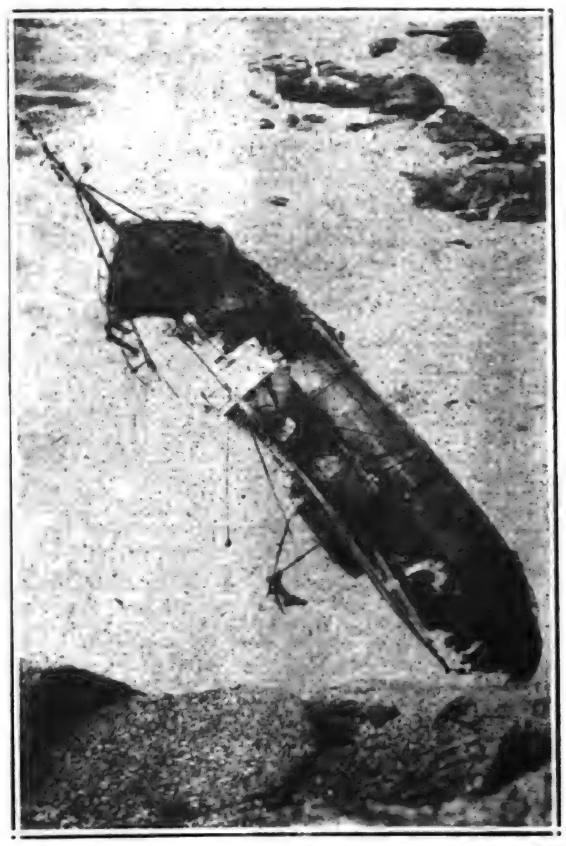
Speaking of romantic stories, even the movies can't beat the one of Wallace Ford's long search for his mother and his finding her, just before the Christmas season. It's about 38 years since she had to put him in an English orphanage, and Ford found her living in an automobile trailer, and the wife of a blind match seller. Now he is going to do all the things for her that he has planned during the long years when he was trying to find her.

Head of Trust

T. J. Lord (above) recently was appointed manager of the $10,000,000 Nuffield Trust for the Special Areas. Lord, who is 40 and until recently the managing director of the Morris organization and Lord Nuffield's right hand man, is regarded as a production genius. It is believed that an important scheme for industrial developments in the distressed areas, for which Lord Nuffield gave the trust as a Christmas gift, is being prepared.

Probably nobody will ever be able to explain why certain radio programs succeed, any more than motion picture producers can tell why some pictures smash box-office records and others that seem just as good flop terribly.

There is a delightful radio program that has been going well for considerably more than a year. It's called "Dot and Will." And so far no sponsor has bought it. Yet the company has actual proof that thousands of people listen to it.



Apparently a lot of old stories are to be re-made during 1937. "Ben Hur" is up for discussion, maybe with both Clark Gable and Robert Taylor in it. There was a time, when, if three featured players were in a picture, it was advertised as having an all-star cast. Now the producing companies put several of their biggest stars into one picture and just take it as a matter of course, as do the audiences.

ODDS AND ENDS—Hollywood is still regretting the death of Irene Fenwick, Lionel Barrymore's wife; their's as an exceptionally happy marriage, and Miss Fenwick was very popular — Now that Bette Davis is back at work they are working her so hard that she barely has a chance to breathe, to make up for the time lost when she was battling with the company—"After the Thin Man" is just as funny as "The Thin Man" was — so don't miss it. — And you'll surely want to see "Beloved Enemy," with Merle Oberon and Brian Aherne —And "That Girl From Paris" Tilly Losch, who did a bit as a dancer in "Garden of Allah" may appear in re-makes of some of Greta Garbo's old pictures.

HER HANDS WERE ALL OUT OF SHAPE

In Grip of Rheumatism for 15 Years

Here is a letter which shows the value of persevering with Kruschen:—

"For about two years I hardly went out, it was such a painful effort to walk owing to rheumatism. My hands and feet were the worst affected. I was unable to walk without a cane. I read so much about Kruschen, I decided to try it. I was three months before I felt any better, but I kept on and since then I have been fine and never used the cane. My hands were all out of shape, but they are almost normal now. Of course I could not expect to get better all at once, as I had suffered for 15 years before I started on Kruschen."—(Miss) A. L.

Rheumatism is frequently caused by an excess of uric acid in the blood. If you could see how Kruschen dulls these uric acid deposits, then dissolves them away altogether, you would agree that the Kruschen treatment should bring relief in cases of rheumatism.

Points Out Need Of Reforestaton

Farmer Outlines Benefits of Proper Tree Planting

SIMCOE—What is all this about "conservation?" What has reforestation and tree planting to do with floods, drought and soil erosion? Answers gathered from prominent men in Norfolk County, where reforestation has gained considerable headway, go far to answering these questions.

Monroe Landon, Norfolk County Chamber of Commerce, chairman considered conservation from its economic and aesthetic side.

"All objective of a reforestation scheme are not yet clear," said Mr. Landon, "Life today is a survival of woodland environment. That environment requires moisture. Forces interlocked to provide mutual helpful effects until we destroyed our forests. Rivers irrigated the land, trees stored up water, swamps [illegible] that rivers flowed evenly, trees provided bird protection, birds in turn ate insect pests which might otherwise have destroyed the trees. The whole program of nature interlocked. We still teach this inter-locking picture of our children in the schools."

"We don't know enough about trees," he added. He went on to point out that few took advantages of robins' preference for mulberries to cherries. A few mulberry trees in a cherry orchard would attract the birds and let the cherries ripen in peace.

"Farmers would be better off with smaller fields surrounded by hedges," said Mr. Landon. He pointed out that hedges provide protections to insectivorous birds and keep down soil erosion from winds; the few extra feet occupied by a hedge as compared to a fence would be amply repaid by other benefits derived.

Reforestation was held out as means of providing winter agricultural employment. Men could work in the woods during winter months. Forests would retain moisture to even up stream flow and promote propogation of game fish, which in turn would attract tourists. Municipalities should be interested in reforestation as a means of increasing property values.

The Assessment Act, said Mr. Landon, was an injustice as far as reforestation was concerned.

The forestry taxation was begun when it was desirable to have land cleared and in the days when a small amount purchased valuable timber from which revenue could be derived. Trees are taxed for 40 years, their crop life.

"Municipal Drainage Act needs looking into," he said. According to law a man with swamp land could demand that his neighbour provide him with a outlet so that he could drain his swamp, thereby destroying the thing which irrigated against drought.

What to do about it all? Mr. Landon said consideration might be given to legislation which would zone the province and provide a forester for each zone. Regulations could be made which would require permission before trees were cut; and replacements should be made in most cases.

The Norfolk Chamber of Commerce president has taken only part of his ideas from books. Much of his information on nature science has been gained first hand. He has a case filled with thousands of botanical specimens collected by himself.

His two greenhouses are his hobby. Here, one is surrounded by strange plants. Bananas have grown here. Bougainvillea, a Mexican red-flowering vine, was in full bloom a few days ago. Mr. Landon displayed a monstera deliciosa, strange palm-like plant, with weird roots which branched off into snakey tendrils.

Besides farming, including raising of purebred stock, Mr. Landon goes in for nature study photography and wood carving.

"Glass Boot" Saves Limb

London Teacher — Used in Moose River Mine Disaster

London, Ont.—One of science's latest contributions to the medical world, the glass boot, is credited with saving Fred Kirkpatrick, London Technichal School teacher, from losing his leg and possibly his life.

The glass boot gained world-wide prominence after the Moose River disaster. One was used on Alfred Scadding after he had been rescued from the mine and medical authorities believe it saved his leg.

Victoria Hospital officials decided to purchase one, and it arrived here just in time to save Mr. Kirkpatrick's leg. At first it was feared the leg might have to be amputated, but instead the glass boot treatment was tried. Medical authorities believe it did the trick. Mr. Kirkpatrick was reported to be recovering satisfactorily after the treatment.

Seeks Answer to Age-old Riddle

Doctor Deals with Question "Will It Be Boy Or Girl?"

BUDAPEST—In statistics, not biology, Dr Bela Foeldes seeks an answer to the age-old riddle: "Will it be a boy or a girl?"

Seasons, he says, have something to do with the sex of babies. The surplus of boys over girls for example, is greatest among births in July, and least in October.

The age of parents is also to be taken into account. Of one group studied where the father was older than the mother, there were 684 boys born to 589 girls.

When the parents were of the same age, the ratio of boys to girls was the same. When the mother was older than the father, girls were found to predominate, the ratio being 289 to 270.

It explains, too, he thinks, why the preponderance of illegitimate are girls—in these cases, the father is younger than the woman.

When the parents are older than 35, it is contended that the proportion of boys declines, but the ratio favors male births when the parents are between 20 and 24.

THANKFULNESS

I'm thankful for the dawn of day,
For useful work and buoyant play;
I'm thankful for the faith of friends,
For humble heart that condescends.
I'm thankful for the trees and the flowers,
For sapphire seas and cooling showers;
I'm thankful for the world of books,
For chanting birds and purling brooks
I'm thankful for the sun at noon,
For silent stars and crescent moon.
I'm thankful for the gift of prayer,
For blessings I can freely share.
I'm thankful for the right to live,
For daily chance to serve and give.
I'm thankful most to God above
For His protecting, perfect love.

Gas From Clover To Help Farmers

Young Scientists Tell of Discovery Made of Cheap Fuel

NEW YORK—Two young men, graduated last June from Macalester College, St. Paul, Minn., arrived in New York to tell about a new process for manufacturing illuminating gas from clover which they discovered as youngsters of 1 and 20 years old. They are Harold A. Ohlgren, 23, now an assistant in the physics department of the University of Minnesota, and William H. Mahle, who is doing research in chemical engineering.

At an interview the two inventors discussed their plans for bringing the farmer all the comforts of city life by means of three acres of clover. It would, they estimate, supply a year for cooking and heating [illegible] that cedar of 5500 [illegible] which converts clover into gas.

Ohlgren and Mahle took up the problem their chemistry professor had given them as freshmen. An attempt to extract pyroligneous acid from cellulose was a great failure they reconstructed all their apparatus and then discovered all they were obtaining was gas. For three years they worked on their discovery and, in the course of it, discovered a new method of extracting gas from coal which they believe is cheaper and yields larger amounts of gas than the present method.

"It's really just an improvement," said Mahle. "Under the present system one ton of coal yields 13,000 cubic feet of gas at 500 British thermal units per cubic foot. Our process gets 18,000 cubic feet at 800 British thermal units. The essential difference lies in the fact that we completely break down all volatiles, including tar and oils, which are residues of the present process, into a permanent fixed gas."

Although Ohlgren and Mahle estimate that they will need $15,000 to start production of their clover-gas machines on a small scale, they are experimenting with the application of their discovery to other than stationary machines. At present they are working on the bottling of their gas under pressure so that it may be used on tractors and automobiles. "In that case the pistons and the stroke will have to be longer," Ohlgren pointed out, "but we fixed up a car in Minneapolis and ran it for less than a quarter of a cent a mile."

Advice On Plant Disease, Insects Given by Department

Like every other branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, the plant pathological service of the Division of Botany is at the disposal of the people of Canada, particularly farmers. In addition to the practical and research work of the Division, assistance with reference to plant diseases is given to individuals through personal correspondence which may be addressed to the Dominion Botanist, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, or to the officer in charge of the Dominion Plant Pathological Laboratories, respectively, at Charlottetown, P.E.I.; Kentville, N.S.; Fredricton, N.B.; Ste. Along Canada's Mining Highway

One of the best mediums for the conservatively minded, for participation in the developments along Canada's mining highway, is through the holding companies.

Ventures controls excellent mining enterprises in Quebec, Ontario and Manitoba, and has important interests in the North West areas. Premier Gold has, in addition to British Columbia and Ontario interests, a very important investment in Australia.

Towagmac Exploration has interests in copper, silver, gold, lead and zinc, through its important holdings in Aldermac Copper, Francoeur Gold and Lake Geneva Mines.

Royalite is a safe medium among the oil holding companies.

Market interest, however, is still concentrated on the developing gold properties. The public memory is still fresh with the spectacular movement in Moneta shares, following diamond drilling results. Federal Kirkland, with one drill started and a second ready to begin, is being watched with great interest. The proximity of its adjoining neighbors—Sylvanite, Toburn and Continental Kirkland is the reason. Jellicoe — in the Little Long Lac Camp — has reported what promises to be a very interesting development, according to diamond drilling indications. Its rich ore discovery is of importance, not only to Jellicoe, but promises much for Bankfield and Magnet Lake.

Hutchison Lake should provide market news at an early date. Shaft sinking is nearing the first level. Smelter Gold should provide news from its diamond drilling campaign already started.

Underground work on the Kerr Addison and Martin Bird properties in the Larder Lake District of Ontario is creating a big public following for these issues.

In the Quebec Field, Francoeur Gold, Astoria Rouyn, Dempsey Cadillac, Powell Rouyn and Rouyn Reward are likely to provide important mining news.

In the Oil fields the important development has been the formation of the Brown Oil Corporation with finances provided by Eastern capital. The Company is financed to drill three wells on the west flank of Turner Valley. The Company's holdings are regarded as proven acreage. Pacalta Oils is expected to start drilling operations in the Wainwright field at an early date. The Company's Alberta Oil leases approximate 17,480 acres.

Difficulties of British Films

The motion picture industry in the British Isles is confronted with difficulties, observes the Galt Reporter. It lost $10,000,000 last year and three [illegible] independent concerns have been forced into receivership. Liabilities of these [illegible] companies are said to total [illegible].

The [illegible] of the motion picture [illegible] in Britain refers to fantastic salaries, attempts to turn out colored productions and competition with Hollywood in world markets. It is said that the future of the business is not promising unless drastic changes in policies are undertaken.

It would appear to be a difficult task to bring the motion picture down to earth because of the superlative traditions associated therewith. In the American field, it is the custom to exaggerate in every detail relating to pictures. The word colossal is worn thread bare in describing productions and the idea gets into all the accessories. It is habitual to brag about the salaries paid the people who, in many cases, by freaks of luck, have been able to create a public impression. It is not infrequent that a restaurant dish-washer becomes the toast of the picture stage. That is not exactly in line with the Post's conception of sound business in trying to imitate something in which they have not genuine confidence, the Britishers find that they are running up a blind alley. They would be well-advised to change their tactics to conform with the conditions and demands that are characteristic of their own country.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

DEPTH OF FIELD— What Does It Mean?

ALTHOUGH good picture-taking with a focusing camera depends in a large measure upon obtaining the proper depth of field (or as sometimes called depth of focus) for the subject, some little uncertainty exists (even in the minds of some who are no longer beginners) as to precisely what this phrase means.

By depth of field we mean really depth of definition, or the distance from nearest to farthest object from the lens that is sharply defined.

Depth of field is controlled primarily in two ways. One is by the aperture in the diaphragm of the shutter. Using a smaller aperture increases the range of definition. Depth of field also depends upon the distance for which the lens is focused. The greater the distance, the greater the depth. When the lens is set for 25 feet, for example, at some particular diaphragm setting, the depth may be from 15 feet to 50 feet. Objects closer than 15 feet will appear blurred, the blurring being more noticeable for objects closer to the camera. When the camera is focused for objects close to the camera, the depth is quite small. For example, when focused for 6 feet, the depth might be from 5 feet to 8 feet, again assuming a particular diaphragm setting. Objects beyond will be blurred.

Isn't there a way, you ask, to get good definition of both near and far objects? Yes, if you want it. This is done by using a small aperture, and since less light comes through a small aperture, giving a little longer exposure.

An experiment may be easily performed that will give a visible demonstration of the need of proper focusing on the object that you want to be clearly defined. Remove the back of your camera and open the shutter after setting it for "time." Place the camera on a table pointing it out of a window towards some fairly distant object such as a house or tree. Next, place a small piece of ground glass at the back of the camera. Now operate the diaphragm changing it from a large opening to a small one, while watching the image which will appear (upside down) on the ground glass. Note how the image changes in definition as the size of the opening is changed.

Then move the lens forward and back on the distance scale. Note that there is one certain setting at which the image is especially sharp and clear. At other settings it is more or less blurred and indistinct.

Now having secured a sharp image of the distant object, observe the image of some nearer object, such as a vase of flowers on the window sill, say at 6 feet from the lens. The image of the flowers will appear blurred. If the lens is moved forward on the scale, a setting can be found which will give a sharp image of the flowers, but the image of the distant object will be blurred.

The experiment should then be tried both with the largest and the smaller stops, when it will be found that if a small stop opening is used it is possible to have both near and far objects reasonably sharp at the same time.

News and Views

By A Ryckman

Toronto, Ont.—We see where the N.H.L. scoring race is a bit exciting these days, what with Harvey Jackson making a bid for the well-known honours. So one of our scoop reporters, Commodore Old Sassafrass of the Armchair Yacht Club, delved deep into our celebrated scrap book and has solved the mystery of the scoring champions for the past eight seasons.

Player	Club	Season	G.	A.	P.
I. Bailey, Tor.		1928-29	22	10	32
R. Weiland, Bost.		1929-30	43	30	73
H. Morenz, Can.		1930-31	28	23	51
H. Jackson, Tor.		1931-32	28	25	53
W. Cook, Rang.		1932-33	28	22	50
C. Conacher, Tor.		1933-34	32	20	52
C. Conacher, Tor.		1934-35	36	21	57
D. Schriner, Amer.		1935-36	19	26	45

The loss of Charlie Conacher has been the heaviest jolt Dick Irvin's stickhandlers have received in many a moon. Maybe Schriner will take the 1937 scoring honours and thus tie Conacher's record of two seasons in a row—or maybe, well we hope it's Busher Jackson.

Reviewing

The press bureaus will soon be conducting their all-star National Hockey League team selections.

Therefore with the aid of little Oscar (who insists on a high chair at all events) and the bouncing ball, by way of review, we hereby present the choice of last season. Remember we didn't pick this team in 1935-36, other sport scribes did.

It goes like this. In goal was Tiny Thompson of Boston, on the defence, Eddie Shore and Babe Siebert; at centre ice Hooley Smith; on right wing, Charlie Conacher, on left wing Dave Schriner and for the all-star coach Lester Patrick.

In our humble opinion (as crooner Vallee would say), the old maestro believes that there will be a struggle for that right wing berth this year, now that famous Chuck is sitting on the sidelines watching the rookies go by.

Tribute to Morenz

The injury of Howie Morenz last week came as a sad blow both to the hockey fans around the N.H.L. circuit and to the Flying Frenchmen.

Morenz of this year was the same great player of old. One of the most colourful players hockey has ever known—a true sportsman both on and off the ice.

Maybe he will return to the puck chasing wars—maybe he won't, but in any case we will always remember him as hockey's greatest star during our time.

Hot-Stove Highlights

In case you are worried about the Maple Leaf baseball situation, our representative from the Home Lover's Club (which holds its daily meetings at Woolworth's lunch counter) tell us that Daniel Howley will have a top-notch hardball outfit even if Tommy Oliver has to play the entire outfield alone and Sir Daniel himself hurl for the Queen City crew.

'Tis said that the Fleet Street moguls are trying to tie up with a farm team in the Canadian-American league set-up. We think everything would be rosy, if the local International leaguers staged a working agreement with Ogdenburg in the "C.A." circuit. This of course is just a suggestion.

Warnings, Etc.

Any girls interested in forming a softball team write to this department.

Outside towns are making bids for entry into the Highway Softball League; so if Streetsville boys desire to play in the loop this year, write immediately to Mister Selwyn Adamson, Port Credit, the league secretary. This is positively your final chance.

THE NEW AGE DEMANDS A NEW SPIRIT

Last Sunday evening, the Rev. T. D. Jones dealt with the growth of the new age and reasoned that the most imperative requirement in the success of the age is a new spirit adequate for life.

"Ye must be born again" was the text. He had dealt with this same text the previous Sunday evening showing its personal implications, he now proceeded to deal with the social state and the utter folly of trying to manage life in this age whilst characterized with a selfish spirit.

Last Sunday he had said that life is a succession of births in which the birth of the intellect, the birth of the moral being and the birth of faith, hope and love, or the birth of the spirit, ought to follow in natural sequence the birth of the body.

He now proceeded to show that the rapid development of man's estate in Democracy, trade relations with world wide significance, international relationships, inter-dependence, unity of common needs, paralleled man's personal development. Man is achieving unity never before imagined possible. Nations can no longer live to themselves. Self sufficing states are neither required nor desired. Man must live together for barriers are breaking down in spite of man's best efforts to maintain them. Thought travels. Trade spreads. The Cinema, Radio, Telegraph, press and travel are assisting to unify the world. Let no one think that there is anything wrong with the earth. "God made it and a better earth I cannot conceive." God made everything beautiful. The only factor in question on the earth is man.

This fact is worth thinking about. Man survives. Possessed with few defences save those he makes, man survives, whilst many creatures more considerable far have become extinct. Thus we see the huge Brontosaurus with his many tons of weight gone utterly, whilst man with his few pounds remains. The gigantic Dinosaur with his tiny brain passes away, man with his great brain continues. And still, possessed as he is with a mighty brain, man sometimes turns his mental faculties to destructive ends. When he does he is very inconsiderate. He will deplete forests. He will destroy species. He left not a buffalo in Canada nor would we have any now but for importations from the south from a few remaining small herds bought and placed on reserves. Man will dynamite lakes and destroy fish. He will invent engines of war and bring ruin to peoples anxious only for peace and continuing prosperity. He will form combines and ruthlessly manipulate them against the interests of men who ought to be thought of as brothers.

But the age demands that the spirit of greed and selfishness be replaced by a spirit of concord and goodwill.

Greed and selfishness were not good enough for the old age. George Bernard Shaw in his preface to "Androcles and the Lion" makes this plain. He pictures the age as maintaining the obsolete cry, "Not this man, but Barabbas". "Now Barabbas was a robber". Barabbas stands for might, greed, parasitism, the strong living on the weak, and he proceeds to show that this sort of spirit is not good enough. Not until we cultivate the desire or passion for the Christ spirit can we discover the way of fulness of life and peace. It is useless singing passively, "A better day is coming, a morning promised long" for such an age cometh not by mere spectatorship. Standing to see the great sight will not cause us to inherit the new age. "Speak to the people that they go forward." Even Queen Victoria was unready for the new age. She imagined that the chief bulwark of the body politic lay in the titled rich. Lord Roseberry was called in and the Queen rather tartly chided him with his democratic tendencies. She seemed unaware of the new age and the new spirit required for it. The day for superior austerities passed with Oliver Cromwell's dictum, "Anything which makes the many poor to make the few rich suiteth not the commonwealth". She likely had never heard of him. But her successors have. They even quote him.

However there seem to be many directors of trade who have never awakened to the need of the age. There are many statesmen who are living in a fool's paradise and think it is as it was in the beginning, it will so continue to be, and there are some churchmen who seem to gloat over their assumed power over civil law.

But the world is achieving a sense of unity and people have to live together. Barriers are breaking down. No matter how foolishly men try to build up the dykes, the waters of humanity pour over them. Germans must live with the French, Roman Catholics must live by the side of Protestants, Japanese must live near the Chinese, and if we are to enjoy fellowship we must change our spirit from one of bitterness, suspicion, greed, hate and austerity to a spirit of goodwill, friendliness, brotherliness, understanding, trust and love.

We never can attain fulness of life unless we are born again or are born into the spirit of Christ.

As long as Roman Catholics insist upon making havoc of civil law and pretending that it does not concern them, that they are superior to Protestants and to law, we are doomed to trouble. As long as Germans nurse hatred and thoughts of revenge and French sense ill-will and threat we cannot go forward with confidence. Ye must be born again. Statesmen and politicians, employers, investors, and work people, businessmen and buyers, all must be responsive to the imperative need of the Kingdom of God, the ethic of Jesus Christ.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Mary Ann Adams

On January 19th, there passed away in St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, Mary Ann Beamish Adams, widow of Thomas Adams, who predeceased her twenty years ago. Had she lived till this week, February 5th, she would have attained the unusual age of 91 years. This nephew and his sister were present with her last February, joining with the felicitations on her birthday, and she seemed as well and as spry, and with sight as perfect as 50 years ago. She had a remarkable constitution, having very little ill-health during her long life except the last six months. She went to the hospital one day and died the next. She was the only sister of the late Francis Beamish of Erindale, who passed away in 1911. Her brothers, George, Samuel, William and Henry, all died some years ago. One brother, Thomas, of Toronto survives, and two daughters, Mrs. Janey Neil with whom she lived and Mrs. Lizzie Kerr. This was one of the real pioneers of "Little Muddy York" and Long Branch. What a remarkable foundation on the Rock of Ages these pioneers had, and what a firm trust in, and hope for, things Eternal was ingrained in their being. Yes, they took time to meditate on serious things. One of her life-long friends (though 15 years younger) was Miss Mary O'Connor, of Long Branch, a beautiful devout Roman Catholic lady. The writer had the unique privilege of taking Miss O'Connor to see Mrs. Adams only a few months ago. What a genuine two-hours' chat they had, and it was of that real Irish spirit which sees neither class nor creed! In reminiscent parade were hundreds of mortals and immortals, mutual friends of the two, and they became young again. When they arrived at the fareells, I shall never forget that parting. They hugged and kissed each other and Mary Ann said to Mary, "If we don't meet here again, I hope we'll meet in a better land." Yes, that was worth a dozen sermons.

Mrs. Adams was laid to rest beside her husband in St. James' Cemetery. Rev. Oswald Smith, of The People's Church, officiating.

ANY DAY A FISH DAY

A Message From the Premier of New Brunswick

To me it seems strange that one should be coaxed or coerced into eating fish and, to my mind, it presupposes a mental resistance to overemphasize the health-giving and energizing qualities of fish. While I do not doubt for a minute that fish contains superb food qualities, I prefer to eat fish because it pleases the palate like nothing else will.

Living, as we do, on the Atlantic Seaboard where fish of all varieties are readily available in abundance, we are naturally deeply interested in having the people of our sister provinces make use of our food supplies; but despite my mercenary interest as a public man in the natural resources of our Province, my own experience prompts me to advise people to use fish liberally because of its own delightful appeal.

OAKVILLE

For more than forty years, the Independent Order of Foresters has been caring for orphan children, and recently a new wing at the Home for Orphan Children at Oakville was opened.

Nothing is overlooked in the care of children at this home, the authorities stated, stressing that the main objective of the teachers and mentors is to make the youngsters physically and mentally healthy, and to make them happy.

A gymnasium and a swimming tank have been installed in the building, and special training in body building is given the children. The institution also gives careful supervision to the food the youngsters eat.

Special school training is provided for the children to equip them with ability and knowledge to earn their own livelihood when they leave the home.

Special attention is paid to character building. "Long experience has taught the Independent Order of Foresters that character building is one of the most important things in the life of a child, and that it can be accomplished by intelligent men and women who understand tolerance and patience and who understand discipline," one official said.

It is the aim of this institution to bring up boys and girls with the same care and attention that they would receive in their own homes, the official stated.

In an exhibition game Wednesday night 27th, Streetsville Juveniles tied Milton with the score of 4—4. The game started off well but ended very roughly. There were many penalties dished out by a rookie referee, who had overlooked the small detail of reading this year's rules. "Speed" Longworth was given a penalty for accidentally hitting the referee. If Speed had meant to hit him he would not have been able to give him a penalty. The goals were scored by Speed Longworth, Norm Potts and Shell Rice.

On Saturday night, the Richmond Hill team didn't show up at Willow dale to play Streetsville. As Streets ville players were on the ice, ready to play, the game goes to them.

There is a game Friday night at Ravina Rink with Weston High School. Why not turn out and watch the Streetsville lads in action?

The game played Tuesday night at Georgetown ended with a score of 5—4 in favor of Streetsville. The goals were scored by Evans, Redick Rice and Schnurr. B. Saul took J. Lumbers' place in the nets

Rev. Father Egan's 25th Anniversary

On Monday night, the parishioners of St. Joseph's Church, Streetsville gathered in the Parish Hall to do honor to Rev. Father Egan on the occasion of the 25th anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood. Mr Barry Farrell acted as chairman The chairman very briefly expressed the good wishes of Father Egan's congregation with the hope that he may long be spared to carry on his great mission. Mr. Hutchinson then read a rather lengthy address, in which was emphasized Rev. Father Egan's unceasing efforts in carrying out the command: "Go forth and teach all nations." The presentation of a beautiful chair and smoking cabinet was then made by Mr Frank O'Connor. Father Egan expressed his sincere thanks and gave a brief sketch of his life during his seminary days and since his ordination in 1912 relating many amusing incidents.

The evening was then spent in cards and dancing. A tasty lunch was served by ladies of the parish.

STAR RUBY

By Louise Jerrold

Albertine Tevans, shopgirl, falls in love with Dennis Maxwell, jewelry salesman, but is worried by a rumor that he has got into some sort of trouble with his firm. Out of a clear sky, her rich great-Aunt Celia Tevans, whom she has never seen, invites her for a visit. The night before she is to leave, Jennis thrusts a star ruby into her hand and bolts. The next day, she arrives at her aunt's estate to find two other guests—Countess Yelena Loupakoff and her brother, Count Michael. There seems to be tension in the air, and Aunt Celia's houseman and chauffeur, Bates, who always wears dark glasses, gives Albertine the creeps. A man with a collection of rubies to show Aunt Celia is expected. He arrives—it is Dennis!

"I'm on my way to her now. Let me take her tray."

But Bates gently insisted on carrying it himself, and lingered in Aunt Celia's bedroom after he had adjusted the breakfast rack in front of her in her bed.

"That'll do, Bates," she said rather testily.

"Hadn't I better see if madam's coffee——"

Aunt Celia cut him short. "Your coffee's always good. Too good, I shouldn't drink it, the doctor tells me, but I'm going to. Usually, coffee keeps me awake all night, but yours puts me to sleep before my head's on the pillow."

"A excellent servant," said Aunt Celia, munching toast, "but a little too much underfoot. I've a strong feeling he's not really a servant, but the Loupakoffs assure me he worked for them when they first came to this country.

"Sit here, my dear. Close to me. You look fresh as the morning. What a fool I was not to break down my stupid pride and send for you sooner. But that's spilled milk. Now you're here, child, I shall not let you go again, as I told you yesterday. The doctors agree it can't be more than a matter of months, at the most—"

On such a heavenly day, one must not think of death and sadness and parting, Albertine told herself, while she said aloud:

"You don't know how wonderful it is that you want me to stay, Aunt Celia," she bent over and kissed the old lady's withered cheek.

"You're better than any doctor, my dear, but I suppose I'll have to be sensible and keep to my bed today. Tell that young man from Tanman-Roan——"

"Dennis Maxwell," Albertine supplied quickly.

"Tell him to stay here till I feel able to see his collection. Probably tomorrow some time. It will be worth his while to wait. And please make my excuses to the Loupakoffs."

From the doorway of the breakfast room, a few minutes later, Albertine saw Dennis and Yelena on the window seat, laughing and chatting like old friends.

"I'm usually starved for breakfast, Countess," Dennis was saying, "but how could one think of anything so material as food in the presence of such beauty?"

Yelena, who in the brilliant morning light, looked rather jaded, flashed her eyes at him.

"You American men are usually so high-speed, so full of business, you have no time for such pretty speeches."

Albertine entered, and managed a pleasant, "Good morning, Countess. Good morning, Mr. Maxwell. I hope you slept well."

The Countess nodded coolly, and Dennis answered her with polite formality. When she gave him her aunt's message, he regarded her very queerly for a moment, and then he merely nodded.

Breakfast was gay at least for two of them. Albertine, behind the coffee urn, said little as she listened to Yelena's bright sallies and Denny's witty retorts. Michael had not yet appeared.

"Miss Tevans tells me that there is a rather good golf course west of the village," Yelena said. "Michael and I brought our clubs."

"Possibly I could borrow a set," said Dennis. He turned to Albertine. "How about a foursome, Miss Tevans?"

He knew she didn't play golf — did not play any game. She had told him. Her chin lifted if he wanted to keep up this make-believe of being strangers all right.

"I don't play golf, Mr. Maxwell," she said, her eyes looking coolly into his. "Besides, I have letters to write."

Later, she was standing by the window in her room when merry voices and laughter floated up to her. Dennis with both golf bags strapped over his shoulder, was guiding Yelena, his hand on her elbow, down the driveway that led to the garage. One gay remark of Yelena's was clearly audible.

"I want to beat you at the game of golf, my Dennis, douschka, but not at the game of love."

Albertine suddenly felt unutterably lonely.

Fish — The Food of Health

From the days of the early Greeks and Romans fish has always been a popular dish. Instinctively they knew what was good for them and the prowess of the early Romans as a sturdy nation is well known to students of history.

Throughout Europe fish is a daily dish. In Canada, however, more of the housewives should make a closer study of this wonderful food. Fish contains vitamins, minerals in quantity and variety and is an excellent source of high digestible proteins.

Fish contains proteins for building of muscles and other body tissues. Fish fats have a high energy value, too, and are as completely digested as fats from other foods.

Apart from the standpoint of better health, you will find a study of your local fish market will prove worthwhile and a tremendous help in this business of balancing both budget and menu. Ask your merchant about all the varieties he sells. Usually he can tell you whether each kin is dry or oily, free of small bones, where it is caught, and how brought to market and give you suggestions for cooking it. Fish merchants take a pride in the telling you what they know about it.

Fish is equally delicious whether it is baked, broiled or steamed. There are no end of tempting dishes also that can be prepared from canned fish products. While there is an art in the cooking of fish, it is so simple even growing boy or girl can prepare it. The determination of that psychological moments when the cooking process is complete is one that must be left to the individual judgment. Over or under-cooking minimizes that essential delicacy of flavour which does make properly prepared fish so enticing. So watch it closely.

As one demonstrator from overseas said recently. "Ve do not cook from the recipe in my country, ve cook from de heart." She who cooks fish, will, likewise, not cook from "de recipe," but rather from 'de heart." The wish itself will give the signal. She will watch for it. The one infallible sign when fish is cooked is that the moment a knife blade, or a fork is slipped between the flesh of the fish it separates clean from the bone. At this moment fish in in its full perfection. It makes no difference what method of cooking you employ, this test may be used.

Try this delicious recipe for stuffed fillets of Sole. It is one that is simple to prepare and one that every member of the family will enjoy. Choose six large fillets of equal size, which will serve four or five people. Make a stuffing by moistening a cup and one-half of stale bread crumbs with a cup or more, depending on the staleness of the crumbs, of hot, sifted tomato juice, one-half a teaspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful of minced parsley, and one-half teaspoonful of pepper. A teaspoonful of mixed dried herbs may be added if desired. Spread this stuffing over three of the fillets, place over these the left-over three fillets, fasten at the sides with the wooden toothpicks, lay on the grate of a baking pan with a thin slice of salt pork over each, pour into the pan a cup or more of fish stock, water or water and tomato juice and bake for half an hour until done — at 350 degrees F., basting every ten minutes.

2 lbs Canadian Fish Fillets, 1 table spoonful finely minced parsley, 4 tablespoonfuls butter, juice of one lemon, salt and pepper.

Roll fillets in salted flour. Heat some oil in a frying pan and fry fillets until cooked a nice brown on each side. Remove to a hot platter. Melt the butter, add the lemon juice.

And don't forget that a good sauce always adds to the zest and enjoyment of a fish dish.

HANDY HINTS

Below are listed some questions and answers concerning numerous, small household problems:

Q. How can I treat cellar walls that are moldy?

A. Apply unslacked lime with a garden spray. The atmosphere of the whole house will be freshened.

Q. How can I take proper care of rubber gloves?

A. If the gloves are used frequently sprinkle talcum powder into them before putting them on. It will be easier to slip them on and off, and the powder will absorb any perspiration from the hands.

Q. How can I renew and restore the colors to a rug?

A. Sprinkle some ammonia powder over the rug, dampen the broom, and sweep thoroughly. The rug will look almost new.

Q. How can I prevent dates, raisins and figs from sticking to the grinder when running them through?

A. They will not stick to the grinder if lemon juice is sprinkled into the grinder before the fruit is put through it.

Must Find Right People

The man who had made a huge fortune was speaking a few words to a number of students at a business class. Of course, the main theme of the address was himself.

"All my success in life, all my tremendous financial prestige," he said proudly, "I owe to one thing alone—pluck, pluck, pluck!"

He made an impressive pause here, but the effect was ruined by one student, who asked impressively:

"Yes, sir; but how are we to find the right people to pluck?"

HOW TO AVOID ILLNESS

In a Showdown With Japan, China Cannot Count On Powers' Support

Japan's predominance in the Far East has reached such a stage of development that the three other powers which bulk largest in China's foreign relation—Great Britain, the United States and the Soviet Union—are all inclined, for various reasons, to sympathize with efforts by the Chinese Government to check Japanese penetration, observes the Christian Science Monitor. It is, however, extremely doubtful whether China can count on any of these powers for positive material support.

Japan is, of course, China's most urgent and immediate concern in foreign policy. And two objectives which various Japanese spokesmen, with various degrees of authority and directness, have indicated during recent years are impossible to reconcile with China's new-born and growing sense of national unity. One is the claim, most plainly set forth in the famous "Amau Statement," that Japan, by virtue of its self-asserted "special status" as the main stabilizing force in East Asia, may exercise a right of veto in relation to foreign financial assistance to China. The other is the obvious disposition of the Japanese army leaders in North China to treat that region as a sort of special Japanese military and economic preserve, detached in act, if not in name, from allegiance to the central Chinese Government.

Russia's interest in China is primarily political, while that of Great Britain and America is basically economic. The Soviet Union has annexed in all but name the vast, sparsely populated region of Outer Mongolia, which still appears on most maps as part of China, and has established a virtual protectorate in Sinkiang, or Chinese Turkestan. Both these measures have been political, rather than economic, in motivation. Outer Mongolia is quite valuable from the point of view of military strategy.

But it seems improbable that either Great Britain, with its grave European preoccupations, or the Soviet Union, which is after all more of a European than an Asiatic power, or the United States, where aversion to foreign "entanglements" has seldom been stronger than at the present time, would intervene actively on China's behalf if Japan should force the disputed issues between the two countries to a military showdown. In such an eventuality, China must depend mainly on its own strength, combined with the various factors which make Japan indisposed to press matters to extremities.

Country's Backbone

Blessed is the nation that can boast of a sturdy "farm aristocracy," families that have farmed for two or three generations and would no more think of going off the land and migrating to the cities than they would of becoming sailors. Such families have character. They sink their roots into the soil, and one generation is proud to succeed another. It would be interesting to know how many families on Canadian farms could trace their ownership back to pioneer days. Such people are the the backbone of the country and make the first type of citizens.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

Woods Going, Too

Optimists say that Canada is now out of the woods. But if the destructions of her forests continues, the woods will soon be out of Canada.—Toronto Star.

One View of Speed

Surely, it requires no argument to prove that risk increases proportionately to speed. With all the modern mechanical improvements and technical safeguards, it is, after all, the human factor which counts most in ensuring safety. A car bounding along at 70 or 80 miles an hour is not under proper control and it is a peril to itself and to other vehicles. Experts agree that to drive above 50 miles an hour is to invite disaster.

While something might be said for stepping up the speed limit to some extent, in view of recent developments in the automobile industry, to abolish it altogether would be to surrender to the demands of the reckless, the selfish, and inconsiderate.—Hamilton Spectator.

Days of Youth

"We are only young once," you often hear some person remark as an excuse for "hitting the pace." True, we can be young but once, and the pleasures of youth must be crowded into that space of time. But how long are we young? Some men are old at 40, while others are still young at 60. It depends upon the pace they hit and the manner in which they hit it. —Kingston Whig-Standard.

Scenic Highways

Everybody knows that the provincial highways are all too drab at many points and everyone will agree that the placing of pretty flowers here and there would do much to improve them. It seems to us that the government itself should give some attention to this phase of the highway situation, doing a good deal more than it has in the past toward making Ontario's main routes the scenic attractions they should be. It should be needless to point out the enormous revenue that we secure from these routes and the desirability of making them look better than at present.—Windsor Star.

Modern Convenience

Dr. Arthur Pillsbury, naturalist, scientist and inventor, states that housewives soon may be growing their own vegetables in the kitchen sink by the use of chemicals. With coal in the bath tub and vegetables growing in the sink, the folks in the house will have to resort to the old tin basin for washing hands and face and to the tub in the kitchen floor for the Saturday night soapy plunges.—Montreal Gazette.

School Buildings

There are those who say and believe that no municipality can afford to be niggardly in regard to such an important matter as education of the young, but they can be, and often are, less sensible about it and not involve themselves in expenses which are other than reasonable and justifiable or above the ability of the ratepayers to meet over a period of years. More than one municipality has found itself financially embarrassed during the past few years because of unwise capital expenditures which it previously made in respect of education with town vieing with town as to which should equip itself most lavishly in this regard.

There is danger that in this country we have made rather a fetish of school buildings without as much attention being paid to the teaching given in them.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

Candid

"There is nothing connected with the Press that has ever got me into such great trouble as the accuracy of the reports of what I have said," confides Lord Derby. And such admirable honesty and candor is worthy of a place in the records.—St. Catharines Standard.

Too Much Talking

Some day we are going to wake up and tumble to the fact that there is too much talking. Every time you turn on your radio somebody is starting (that's as far as he gets) to give you an earful of words. Politicians spend their lives talking. Wives (not your or mine of course) are always at it. Preachers do their share. Editors do their with a typewriters or fountain pens. What a lot of ink there must be! One of these days when we wake up and cease the incessant clatter for a moment, somebody is bound to take advantage of the lull — and do a little thinking.—St Mary's Journal-Argus.

Fat Profits from War

During 1914 1918 one British munitions company is reputed to have made net profits of some £34,000,000. The firm supplied four battleships, three armored cruisers, fifty-three submarines, sixty-two light ships, three auxiliary cruisers, 2,828 heavy naval guns, field guns, etc., 100,000 Maxim guns, 5,500 aeroplanes, and a large number of rifles, small guns and other materials of war. The war business certainly runs up big profits for those who depend on human sacrifices for their orders. Windsor Star.

Air Mail Service Pays

Air mail service in Canada has proved cheaper than other kinds. Air mail costs in the last fiscal year were $375,971, and the revenue amounted to $533,048. If the entire service could operate on that basis we would have 2-cent postage in a hurry. — Peterborough Examiner.

Careers for Youth

There has in the past been no official machinery by which boys have been able to join the British Army or Air Force. Unofficially some 50 young men have gone over to find successfully military careers. Although it is the Navy that invites youth "to see the world," the sister same invitation, and South Africans service could really extend much the who have returned after service in the British Army come home with tales of strange places. But judging from the inquiries we have received, the offer of commissions in the Royal Air Force to university graduates unde. the age of 25 is likely to find most response in the Union. Even with clouds on the European horizon, these careers hold much to attract youth. And to judge of the value to the Union of this training abroad it may be remarked that Air Force pilots were the pioneers of civil aviation in this country. —The Cape Argus.

No Excuse for Slaughter

Crossings and speed limits are of no avail if the drivers, riders, and walkers will not be constantly vigilant. There is no excuse for road slaughter. It must be stopped. By taking thought and taking care it can be stopped. — London Sunday Dispatch.

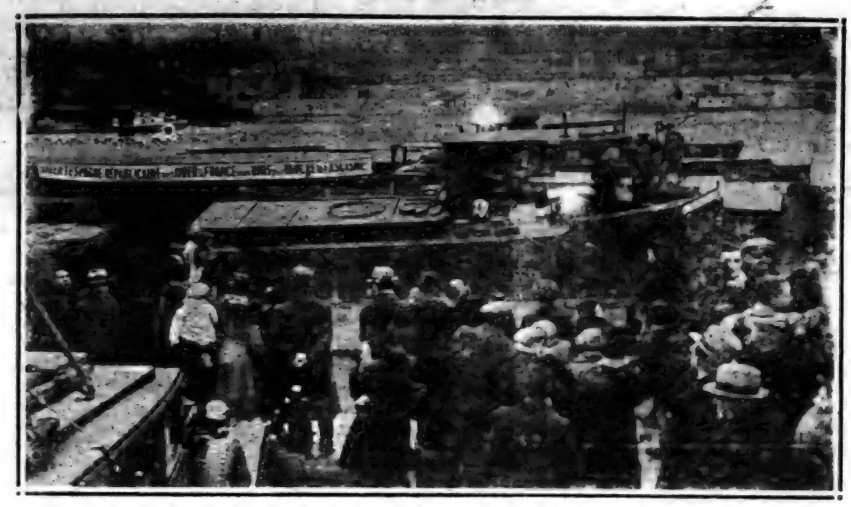
Art in All Trades

In the turbulent days of the pioneer west, one of the popular ways of execution was death by the rope. This was meted out in wholesale manner and not always with the sanction of the law. Because in the early day, the law was far too inadequate to cope with all crooks in so large a territory. At one time the law had an area of not less than 73,000 square miles in its jurisdiction under one United States court.



Hanging was used extensively and men became very proficient in the use of the rope, for this, at the time was a trade.

It was discovered that the method used in fastening the rope was of great importance to the victim. The difference being whether he died a slow death of strangulation or instantly a broken neck. If the rope were tied as any other rope might be tied then usually the victim was strangled to death, very slowly as can be seen. On the other hand if the rope were tied loosely and the knot were placed under the left ear then when the trap was sprung the neck was broken instantly.

At the time of these unsettled regions one United States court had under its jurisdiction an area covering 70,000 square miles of land.

Production of Nova Scotia creamery butter, reported by twenty-six creameries and one creamery estimated, was 296,569 pounds in November as compared with 289,564 pounds in the same month last year, an increase of 2.45 per cent., the provincial department of agriculture reports.

61,382 Industrial Mishaps Are Reported During Past Year

375 Fatalities Among List; Reductions for 1937 Easily Obtained Accident Prevention Officials Claim—Give Suggestions For Safe Driving During Winter Months.

TORONTO.—"Industrial accidents reported to this board for 1936 totalled 61,382. Fatal accidents totalled 375. Sand sucking fatalities totalled 24. These are serious losses. They can and should be reduced for 1937. Employers and workmen and the Accident Prevention Associations can and should for their own sake and for the sake of humanity help make that reduction."

Such was the message received from George Wilkie, chairman of the Ontario Workmen's Compensation Board by the Industrial Accident Prevention Associations.

R. B. Morley, general manager of the I.A.P.A., commenting on the statement pointed out that the increase last year in industrial accidents was due to a considerable extent to the fact that within the past few years "industry has moved out on to the highways."

This development, said Mr. Morley, has seriously complicated efforts to promote highway safety and the organizations he represents have been working for some time in close co-operation with the Department of Highways and other groups interested in reducing accidents on Ontario roads.

RULES FOR DRIVERS

He made the suggestion that recent clear road conditions throughout the province offered an excellent opportunity to put into practice several suggestions designed to promote safe driving when Winter lays its inevitable blanket of snow and ice over the countryside.

The following rules, if applied conscientiously, Mr. Morley believed, would help considerably to control highway accidents in Winter weather:

1. When starting on slippery pavements, accelerate slowly and gradually; when stopping, begin to slow down a safe distance from the stopping point. Avoid situations calling for quick stops.

2. On days requiring anti-skid chains, continue to drive as though you didn't have them.

3. Watch the road surfaces for very slippery spots. Try to keep out of ruts and street car tracks. If driving in them, bring the car to a stop before trying to turn out.

4. When two vehicles meet on narrow, slippery roadway one should pull to the right and stop to let the other one pass.

5. At all times drive with courtesy and consideration for the other users of the highway. This includes the pedestrian.

Commenting further on the increase in compensated accidents in 1936, Mr. Morley pointed to the increase in industrial activity throughout Ontario, and urged employers who were taking on new men, or former hands who had lost some of their skill, to exercise full accident prevention control so that these new workers might be saved from injury.

Income of American farmers from their sale of products in November amounted to $731,000,000, compared with $882,000,000 in October and $669,000,000 in November, 1935. The income from crops fell off somewhat more than usual from October to November, due chiefly to the decreased sales of cotton and tobacco. Receipts from live stock and live stock products on the other hand increased more than usual.

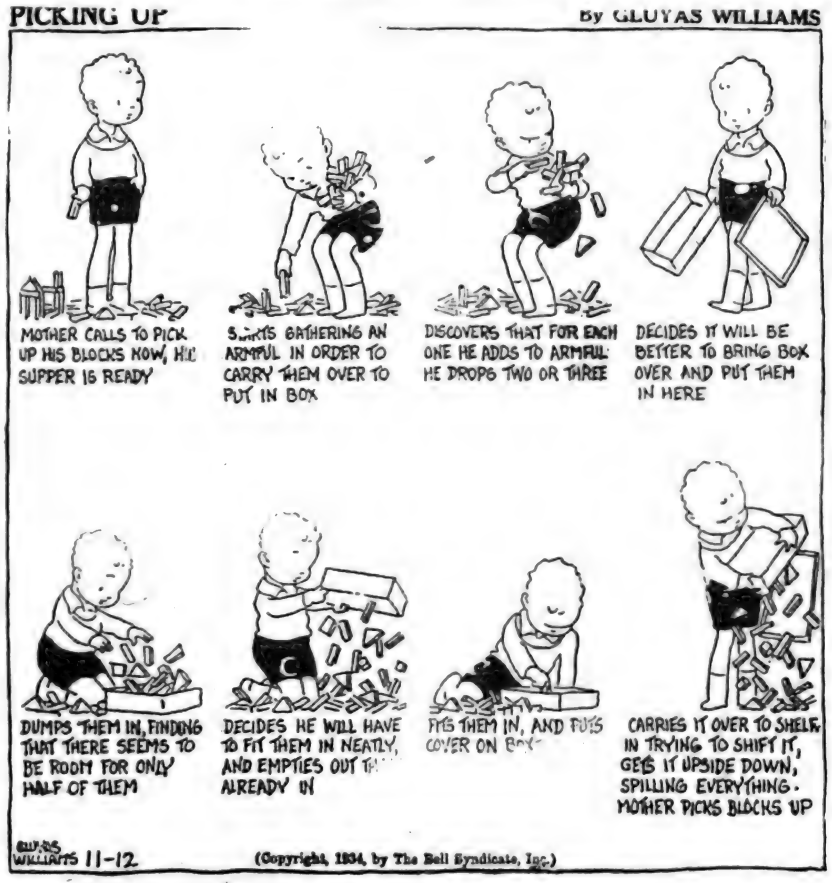
What Our Visitors Expect When They Cross the Border

(By F. T. Pattison, Collector of Customs and Excise at Fort Erie, Ont., in the National Revenue Review).

The successful handling of a large volume of tourist traffic is, of course, a matter that requires close attention and serious consideration. At the same time, unusual incidents occur during the daily routine to relieve any monotony.

Many tourists entering at Fort Erie have a sketchy and meagre knowledge of the geography of Canada, and their inquiries very often appear to be the result of an active imagination. For instance: An officer is busily engaged with the flow of automobiles before him, making the necessary inquiries of each person to determine what procedure he shall outline to be followed, when someone from the rear seat of the the outomobile says, in response to inquiry as to the length of time it is intended to remain in Canada, "Oh, we are only coming in to see the quints. We will be back in plenty of time for dinner." The time is approximately two p.m.

At 11 a.m., on one occasion, three boys of the "teen" age, equipped with fishing rods and a light lunch, informed the officers they were just going up to North Bay for some Canadian trout. In response to further inquiry, they stated they would not be in Canada more than a short time, as they had to be back to play football that afternoon in a nearby United States city.



There was a lady tourist from the state of Alabama applying for a permit, who, in response to the officer's question if the car was with radio or heater replied that if a heater was needed in this country at this time of the year—September—she would go no further, but would hurry back to Alabama.

A native of the state of Kansas naively stated he had been spending a few days in Buffalo, N.Y., and, "learning that Canada was just across the way," thought he would run over to Montreal for the afternoon.

During the month of August a young man from a not far-distant United States city requested a permit to enter. Not a little attention was attracted to his equipment, which consisted of heavy woolen socks, shoepacks, mackinaw jackets and sundry other articles to be found in lumber camps.

Taking no exception to any of these articles, the officer advised the young man that the regulations did not permit him to bring into Canada the large western type, 45-calibre revolver contained in his duffle bag. However, the young man would not contemplate the protection of this gun, and it was only after repeated assurance of his safety that he hesitantly decided to brave the dangers from wild bear and moose, pictured to him by his friends, to be encountered in Canada.

News in Brief

Fears News Leak

TORONTO—At the Liberal Party caucus held this week, Attorney-General Roebuck refused to talk on the reported pending purchase of more Quebec power from the Ottawa Valley Company, for fear, the news would "leak" to the newspapers.

"Traitors"?

A lot of caucus argument was centred on the possibility that "traitors" were providing the press with caucus information that could not be obtained except through "leaks." Major James Clark (Windsor-Sandwich) was strong in his denunciation of such alleged tactics, and had the caucus adopt a resolution providing that all speeches therein be regarded as "secret." Tom Murray, veteran legislator and famed humorist from North Renfrew, sugested that the best way to get around the situation was to trip up the press by having the best liar among the Liberals invent inaccurate stories to feed out systematically to the reporters.

Good Speech

At Ottawa this week when A. A. Heaps, (C.C.F., Winnipeg North) presented his motion asking the Government to request President Roosevelt to call a world peace conference, he read at length from what he thought was an address delivered by Mr. Roosevelt at Rio de Janeiro.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King interrupted him: "Is my honorable friend quoting the President of the United States? I think that is what I said."

"That may be the case," replied Mr. Heaps, "but I think it is a pretty good statement to make and I am fully in accord with what the Prime Minister said and I hope I have done him no injustice by crediting his remarks to the President of the United States.

Veto Peace Conference

The World Peace Conference to be held at Washington suggested by A. A. Heaps, was sternly opposed by the Prime Minister and the Leader of the Opposition.

Declared Prime Minister Mackenzie King: "I am not sure that a world conference would achieve any good. And it might make things a great deal worse."

"Our generation is gone a little mad on the question of conferences, it seems to me. A conference is a very convenient way of appearing to be doing something, while in reality very little is being achieved. The more I see of conferences, the less patience I am coming to have with them."

Observed the Conservative Leader, R. B. Bennett: "I have not forgotten that a great World Economic Conference was called in 1933. I know one man, two men, three men, who were urged by the President of the United States to expedite in every possible way the work of that conference. Yet the conference had hardly met and organized before the President of the United States torpedoed it for reasons which have never yet been made public."

Provincial Parley Favored

Right Hon. R. B. Bennett's proposal for a conference on constitutional questions generally found favor among Provincial Government heads.

Premier W. J. Patterson of Saskatchewan said he believed it might be better handled by a commission than by the proposed conference.

Acting Premier Harry Nixon of Ontario had no comment to make on Mr. Bennett's suggestions.

Hon. A. P. Paterson, Minister of Federal and Municipal Relations of New Brunswick: "We shall never get it right until all get around a table and talk it over quietly and dispassionately."

Premier Angus L. Macdonald of Nova Scotia: "It is generally agreed certain amendment are necessary. The only point of difficulty is deciding on a method of amendment that will be satisfactory to both the Dominion Parliament and Provincial Legislatures."

Premier J. D. Pattullo of British Columbia: "Such action had been advocated by British Columbia for years."

Premier John Bracken of Manitoba: "We have been agitating for modernization of the Canadian Governmental set-up for ten years."

DR. LOCKE

Flowers and messages from all over Canada, the United States, and Great Britain, evidenced world-wide regret for the passing of Dr. Locke, Chief Librarian of Toronto.

While his father was pastor of old Queen Street Methodist Church and building St. Paul's, George Locke was at Brampton High School with Curtis Williamson, R.C.A., whose portrait of him in his LL.D. robes now hangs in the Central Library, Toronto, and Wm. Perkins Bull, K.C., whose pioneer history is being dedicated to his friend's memory. At the time of his death, Dr. Locke was Vice-president of the Peel Old Boys' Association.

At the funeral Dr. Stanley Russell spoke feelingly of the essentially lovable character and great ability of the man. At the memorial service in the Central Library Mrs. Richard Davidson, Chairman of the Library Board, presided, and Dr. H. J. Cody, D.D., LL.D., President of the University of Toronto, conducted devotional exercises.

The Honourable Mr. Justice Kelly, Chairman of the Committee which appointed Dr. Locke in 1908, and still a member of the Board, told how, considering and passing over numerous candidates, they had sought out and secured Dr. Locke, who had been Dean of the Faculty of Education in Chicago University, then a responsible officer in perhaps the largest educational publishing house in the United States, and finally Principal of Macdonald College, McGill's Faculty of Education, but who had not been an applicant for the Toronto position. To him the city really owes the present proud position of its library system. He built up "from a dusty main library with four branches" the present powerful organization with twenty-odd buildings, a staff of over 230, and an annual circulation of approximately four million. Nor would he accept personally credit for this great achievement. Co-operation, declared Mr. Justice Kelly, was his watchword; all he ever boasted of was his splendid staff and he considered every member a personal friend.

Canadian Pacific Extends Air-Conditioned Service

The Canadian Pacific Railway Angus Shops at Montreal are humming with activity these days as the Company continues its comprehensive programme of air-conditioning. In the current year, air-conditioning equipment will be added to 136 cars, including standard sleepers, dining cars, tourist sleepers, parlor cars, and day coaches, and these, in addition to the 130 cars air-conditioned in 1936, will permit a very considerable extension of air-conditioned services throughout the Dominion.

Provision is made by the 1937 programme to provide air-conditioned dining cars on all trains carrying air-conditioned sleepers or parlor cars, besides additional sleeping and parlor cars for use on trains between Montreal and Quebec, Montreal and Ottawa, Toronto and Ottawa, and trains 39 and 40 between Montreal and Saint John, N.B. Air-conditioning of tourist cars for use on the transcontinental trains between Vancouver and Montreal and Toronto is a new and interesting feature of the 1937 programme. This will supplement last year's services which allowed air-conditioned standard sleepers, compartment-lounge, bedroom and parlor cars to be used on transcontinental trains between Montreal, Toronto, and Vancouver; the Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton, Chicago services; and the night trains between Montreal and Boston. Air-conditioned sleepers and lounge cars were also provided for the "Mountaineer" service between Chicago, St. Paul, and Vancouver.

Some idea of the work connected with air-conditioning is given by the pictures above. Cars are stripped, as in lower right, and insulated to keep out heat, cold, and dust. The pictures at the left show some of the material being placed in the cars. The satisfaction written all over the face of the young lady, in "Lower 5," expresses the public's feelings toward this new type of controlled comfort. In the centre is a close-up of the control equipment, by which, as the arrows indicate, the individual can regulate the volume and direction of the flow of air.

The Open Column

This is about pancakes, and will be of interest only to the women-folk. Early this week the madam, mindful that Shrove Tuesday was nearly upon us, decided that we would eat pancakes, all dispepsia to the contrary. Being busy with our child, "Groucho", she delegated the task of acquiring a good pancake recipe to us, we not wanting the job.

Our first idea was to coax a pancake recipe out of some housewife who took prizes at the fairs with her cooking. We phoned a lady in Chinguacousy township who has a great reputation with the skillet. Imagine our embarrassment, and hers, when she admitted that she had not a set recipe for pancakes. "I don't make very good pancakes," she blushed over the phone. "When we want pancakes, I just beat up buttermilk, flour and soda. You had better try Mrs. So-and-So."

We did try to get Mrs. So-and-So, but she had no phone. Desperate, we phoned the next-door neighbor's wife. She told us where we could go—to buy some ready-mixed pancake flour, and added that, if we made much more of a pest of ourselves around the neighborhood, she was going to move. We agreed with her.

Then we remembered that Miss Betty Wallace, Institute Branch Instructress, was conducting a short course at Brampton. So we phoned Miss Wallace, who was not greatly pleased. "I haven't a recipe with me, and I wouldn't want to give one that might not be quite accurate," said Miss Wallace. "I'll call you back."

Nettled, we determined to have a recipe at once, at all costs. So we called Mrs. Will McClure, of Brampton, who demonstrates cookery under the auspices of the Women's Institute. We had better luck this time. "One cup sweet milk, one egg, one tablespoonful salt, two teaspoons baking powder, two cups flour, or less if you use bread flour," chuckled Mrs. McClure. "Grease the pan with a little dripping, and have it piping hot."

While this gladsome information came over the line, there was a slight scratching sound audible. "Mrs. McClure," we enquired, "you're not writing that down, are you?" "Why, no," was the amused reply. "Well then," we pointed out, "your recipe has been stolen." "Oh," said Mrs. McClure, unphased, "that's all right. I hope that the person who got the recipe enjoys the pancakes. Good night."

Then, when we thought that the pancake question was closed, the phone roared a summons, and Miss Wallace was back with us. No grass had grown beneath her feet as she ferreted out her best pancake recipe, which went as follows:

Two cups pastry flour; two teaspoons baking powder; three-eighths teaspoon baking soda; one-half teaspoon salt; two tablespoons white sugar; two cups stale bread crumbs; one egg; one and a quarter cups sour milk; one and a half tablespoons melted butter. The above is treated as follows:

Mix and sift dry ingredients; cover bread crumbs with boiling water, and let stand until soft, then drain off all surplus water, and beat bread until smooth. Add dry ingredients, mixing as little as possible. Add beaten egg, milk and butter. Bake on hot, greased griddle. Turn only once while cooking.

Personally, we didn't use to like pancakes, but after stowing away a plateful of cakes made from either of the above recipes, we believe that it was worth it all.

LET US SMILE

A little fellow was on a visit to his uncle and grandfather.

"Uncle," he said, after his grandfather had left the room, "how old is grandpa?"

"I couldn't tell you," answered his uncle, "without looking it up in the family Bible."

"My word!" gasped the child, "is he old enough to be mentioned in the Bible?"

INFANTILE SPINAL PARALYSIS

To the Editor of The Star,

Sir: Years ago, post mortems upon the bodies of twenty victims of infantile spinal paralysis at Johns Hopkins hospital, showed the presence of a vegetable mould in every case. The mould developed in cooked vegetables, principally potatoes, that were kept over for a day or more. The mould gave no indication of its presence by either taste or smell, but in the case of potatoes, they became "sticky" and were unfit for use. This view accounts for its seasonal occurrence, in the early spring and fall months. During the hot weather, housewives know that cooked vegetables are liable to spoil, and in winter months the danger does not exist.

The onset of the disease begins with high temperature and [illegible] bowel discharge, followed by muscular weakness, finally ending in paralysis. Early and efficient treatment of the bowel condition usually means rapid and complete recovery. Its prevention can be secured by cooking just sufficient vegetables for that day only.

REFORM

"The true reformer will not only hate evil, but will earnestly endeavor to fill its place with good."—C. Simmons.

"Reform comes by understanding that there is no abiding pleasure in evil, and also by gaining an affection for good according to science, which reveals the immortal fact that neither pleasure nor pain, appetite nor passion, can exist in or of matter, while divine mind can and does destroy the false beliefs of pleasure, pain, or fear and all the sinful appetites of the human mind."—Mary Baker Eddy.

"Mere outward reformation differs as much from regeneration as whitewashing an old rotten house differs from pulling it down and building a new one in its place.—Toplady.

"What you dislike in another take care to correct in yourself."—Spratt.

"He that has energy enough to root out a vice, should go further and try to plant a virtue in its place; otherwise he will have his labor to renew. A strong soil that has produced weeds may be made to produce wheat."—Colton.

"He who reforms himself has done more toward reforming the public than a crowd of noisy impotent patriots."—Lavater.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON VII
Jesus the Good Shepherd
John 10: 1-42
Printed Text John 10:1-16.
Golden Text—I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd layeth down his life for the sheep. John 10:11.

Time—The discourse on Christ as the Good Shepherd was uttered in October A.D. 29. The events recorded in the last of the chapter took place in December of that year and in January, A.D. 30.

Place—The events recorded in this chapter took place in Jerusalem, except the one found in verses 40-42, which is to be located in Bethany beyond Jordan.

1. Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that entereth not by the door into the fold of the sheep. The sheepfold was a walled enclosure, with a strongly barred door, through which alone access could be had to the sheep. Through this door the sheep were led at night, after which the gate was barred. A porter slept near the gate on the inside of the enclosure. In the morning the shepherd knocks on the gate, it is opened to him, and he calls his own sheep out. But climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber. A man who had no right to go through the door, who would not be allowed to enter the door, and who would resort to climbing over the wall to seize a sheep is truly "a thief and a robber."

2. But he that entereth in by the door is the shepherd of the sheep.

3. To him the porter openeth. The sheepfold speak of the true church, the body of Christ; the sheep, of course, are those who are the true followers of the Lord Jesus Christ, the children of God; the shepherd is the Lord Jesus, though he has not yet announced himself as such. Professor Plummer says we might take the porter to be the Holy Spirit. And the sheep head his voice: and he calleth his own sheep by name, and leadeth them out. Frequently three or four shepherds will lead their sheep into one sheepfold at night. It is one of the most amazing sights in the Orient to see a shepherd approach, say, seven hundred sheep, belonging to four or five different shepherds, and, by a peculiar guttural sound, call his own sheep out from amongst the others.

4. When he hath put forth all his own, he goeth before them, and the sheep follow him: for they know his voice. The shepherd goes before the sheep because he knows the way. In doing so, he is the first one to meet prowling beasts and to see places of danger which must be avoided. Our Lord has gone before us in conflict with Satan, and has defeated him, so that we follow in that victory.

5. And a stranger will they not follow, but will flee from him: for they know not the voice of strangers. Strangers, as far as Christians are concerned, are those false teachers and false prophets who would lead astray the very children of God.

6. This parable spake Jesus unto them: but they understood not what things they were which he spake unto them. They did not understand Christ's teachings because they were not sincere; they were not really seeking for the truth.

7. Jesus therefore said unto them again, Verily, verily, I say unto you, I am the door of the sheep. Sir Wilfred T. Grenfell, the famous Labrador physician, had an experience which remarkably illustrates the meaning of this verse: "One of our party, as we climbed, noticed a shepherd driving his sheep into a large kind of cave with an open mouth. In reply to her question, he said: 'I am puting them way for the night to be safe from the jackals and dogs.' But she objected: 'There is no door to the cave.' He replied simply: 'I am the door.' It is the Eastern shepherd's custom to lie down across the doorway of such caves, and with his own life to protect the sheep."

8. All that came before me are thieves and robbers. By this Jesus does not mean that all the prophets of the Old Testament and the true priests of God in Israel's history were thieves and robbers, but that all who in themselves pretended to satisfy the needs of men, to provide in themselves salvation from sin, had illegally and falsely assumed such prerogatives and, therefore, had robbed their followers of the peace, joy, life, and hope which they falsely had promised to bestow. But the sheep did not hear them. It does not say that no one heard them, for great multitudes did, but the sheep, those who truly belong to God, whom God had called, would not follow these false teachers and shepherds.

9. I am the door; by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and go out, and shall find pasture. (Cf. Matt. 7:14). A man who approaches God by believing in the Lord Jesus Christ is a man who will find entrance into the new life here and in the glory to come, and is one who certainly will be saved, for no man can come to Christ sincerely but that Christ will receive him.

10. The thief cometh not, but that he may steal, and kill, and destroy. Satan is the great thief. I came that they may have life, and may have it abundantly. To follow Christ is to know a richer physical life, a clearer, stronger mental life, a sweeter domestic life, a more honorable social life, and, pre-eminently, a true, eternal, spiritual life, the very life of God.

11. I am the good shepherd. At last Christ identifies himself actually as the Shepherd of the sheep—the good shepherd layeth down his life for the sheep. It is very significant that almost every passage in the New Testament that speaks of the love of God for man and the love of Christ for man also speaks of the death of the Lord Jesus Christ for man (for instance, John 3:16; Gal. 2:20; 1 John 3:16; 4:10).

12. He that is a hireling, and not a shepherd, whose own the sheep are not. The hireling was simply a hired shepherd, who himself was not interested in the flock, but was caring for it simply for the money he received. Beholdeth the wolf coming, and leaveth the sheep, and fleeth, and the wolf snatcheth them, and scattereth them. The wolf represents any enemy of Christ who, at the same time, of course, would be an enemy of the welfare of Christ's own.

13. He fleeth because he is a hireling, and careth not for the sheep. The hireling flees because he is interested only in himself and his own welfare. Christ was concerned first with men. He came to minister to and to lay down his life a ransom for us.

14. I am the good shepherd; and I know mine own, and mine own know me. The whole experience of Christ is our shepherd gives him an increasing knowledge of us.

15. Even as the Father knoweth me, and I know the Father; and I lay down my life for the sheep. "As the shepherd is always with the sheep and so deeply interested in them, the shepherd comes to know his sheep very intimately.

16. And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold. Christ is here referring to the Gentiles, as a great company distinct from the children of Israel, and yet, with them, equally the sheep of his fold. Them also I must bring. Literally, the verb should read "lead." And they shall hear my voice. Millions and millions have heard the voice of Christ, through the written word, and his witnesses down through the ages. And they shall become one flock, one shepherd. The church of Christ is one indivisible body, because it is the body of Christ; each believer has the same privileges as another; we are bound together by a common faith, a common hope, and one Lord (Eph. 4:5).

Farm Problems

Conducted by
PROFESSOR HENRY G. BELL
with the co-operation of the various departments of Ontario Agricultural College

Question — "I have your bulletin No. 364 "Manures and Fertilizers," of 1931 and observe the mixture designed to produce a 2-12-6 fertilizer. From another source, I have the following suggestion for the 2-12-6 formula: 500 lbs. Ammo-Phos 10-48, and 200 lbs. Muriate of Potash, to give 700 lbs. It is claimed that the 700 lbs. can be sown without any filler at the rate of 70 lbs. per acre, which should give the same results as 2-12-6 sown at the rate of 200 lbs. per acre. I would be pleased to know from you if the latter method and ingredients are more modern than those mentioned in your bulletin, and also if it would be quite satisfactory. Would sawdust, reasonably dry, make a satisfactory filler to keep mixture from becoming lumpy if it lay some time before being used? Also is it at all successful to mix fertilizer with the grain in the drill box when a fertilizer drill is not available or does the fertilizer run out first instead of coming evenly with the grain?" H. T., Renfrew County.

Answer — In answer to your first question, home mixing is not a new practice. I saw it used with varying success 25 years ago in New Brunswick and Maine. The ingredient Ammonium Phospate, 10.48, is a comparatively new product. It is highly concentrated and contains available nitrogen and phosphorus as guaranteed. It has been mixed in the quantity that you quote, which closely approximates with the potash, the analysis 2-12-6. As to it being quite satisfactory, I am not prepared to say. Some claim to have gotten good results from it. If the mixture has been made carefully and applied evenly, I see no reason why it should not give results. I certainly advise adding at least 300 lbs. of filler to make the mixture up to the ½ ton quantity, since I doubt if you can get a drill that will sow evenly and thoroughly in quantities of even 100 lbs. per acre.

In answer to your question about sawdust, I would not recommend it as a filler since it takes up moisture rather readily and is very light and bulky. The best type of filler is something that is about the same specific gravity as the fertilizer material. Engineering tests have shown that the material that is heaviest, flows from the drill more quickly than lighter specific gravity material.

In mixing fertilizer with grain in the drill box, this same point is encountered since grain is not the same specific gravity nor the same size kernel as is the fertilizer. I doubt if you can get even application of fertilizer through the grain drill box, if fertilizer and grain are mixed together. Especially is this the case if there is much moisture in the air or if the grain is at all damp. There is also danger of seriously injuring your grain drill. If you do sow the mixture through the grain drill box, be sure to clean it out thoroughly, immediately after drilling has been completed.

We'll all be Mad in 100 Years:—"If the growth of insanity continues at its present rate, every man, woman and child will probably be made by the year 2039," said a well-known woman doctor, in an Australian Health Week address. Insanity had increased by 30 per cent during the last ten years, she said. Worry and war were contributing factors.

London's Strangest House

Built on the foundations of the oldest historical monument in London — the Roman Wall — this odd house, No. 20 Tower Hi only nine feet wide and 32 feet high, has been marked for de tion soon. It has three rooms, one over the other. The floor of the basement is formed by the Roman Wall itself.

Movie-radio gossip

By DOROTHY

One of the trade magazines of the motion picture industry startled the workers in the business recently by publishing a report on the popularity of the screen stars. For months and months, people had been told that Robert Taylor had climbed to the very top: that he got more fan mail than Clark Gable did, that his name above a theatre was magic, because it drew so many paying customers that, in short, Mr. Taylor was tops.

But—according to this report, Clark Gable is the screen's most popular actor!

Last year Shirley Temple held that position. This year she is second. Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers as a team come third, Robert Taylor fourth, and William Powell fifth.

In case you're interested, the other leading stars are listed in this order: Myrna Loy, Claudette Colbert, Norma Shearer, Gary Cooper, Frederic March Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy as a team, Lionel Barrymore.

James Cagney

It had to be. He made it for Grand National you know, a new organization, and if it had not turned out well we might have had no more Cagney on the screen for a while, at least. After all his troubles with studios it is pleasant to know that he is once more on the big time and that his comeback is really a triumph.

Have you listened to that new radio program, "Do you Want to Be an Actor?" If you haven't, do! It's very entertaining. People who are in the audience are given roles in scenes that are done before the microphone, and after each performance the best woman performer and the best man are given movie tests by Warner Brothers. It's quite possible that some of our future stars will be developed in this way.

If the radio programs given by 'Myrt and Marge" for so long were among your favorites, you'll be glad to know that a new series done by that popular couple has started. It's a family affair, for "Myrt's" son is now on the program, and 'Marge" is her daughter. The son, George Damerel, used to go to the University of Southern California, but he left college to tour with his mother on the stage. Looks as if "Myrt" had built up a pretty good business for the family by writing those sketches, doesn't it?

Grace Moore has had to abandon her career on the concert stage and on the air, temporarily, in order to take a much needed rest. She has been working hard in pictures—in fact, she has turned into a real trouper, and the temperament that used to cause so much trouble is well under control.

In "Stowaway" you'll see Shirley Temple doing imitations of Eddie Canton and Al Johnson and doing them well. The funny thing about it is that the child star never has seen either of them; just worked the imitations up from what she was told about the two gentlemen's work.

Hollywood is still shocked over the grieve over the death by suicide of his first wife, Aleta Freile, a little more than a year before. It was said that she killed herself because, coming to Hollywood from the New York stage, she could not seem to get ahead in pictures Young Alexander was doing very well with his career, and his suicide of Ross Alexander, although some of his friends knew that he had never ceased to second wife, Anne Nagel, is one of the screen's prettiest young actresses.

Ross Alexander

ODDS and ENDS—Remember "The Shiek," with Valentino? Nino Martini will appear in a picture based on a similar story . . . Jean Harlow and Robert Taylor will appear together in "The Man in Possession" . . . It isn't supposed to be known that Joan Fontaine is Olivia de Haviland's sister, but everybody knows it—and the fact was announced here in "Star Dust" months ago, when she signed with Jesse Lasky....Once again "Madame X" is to be screened, this time with Gladys George in the stellar role

Doctors who wish to practise in London should, under the old Act of Henry VIII's time, be examined and passed by the Bishop of London or the Dean of St. Paul's.

Coronation Program A Priceless Aid To Broadcast Listeners

Details Procession Step by Step And Service in Westminster Abbey Word by Word

Advance Orders Forecast An Enormous Sale

Recent events in England have necessitated costly changes in the Official Souvenir Programme of the Coronation. Many new plates have had to be made, and portions of the text have had to be re-written and re-set.

Produced in the form of a brochure the Programme will be a masterpiece of the printer's art, in every way befitting the grandeur of the historic occasion it is designed to commemorate. It consists of thirty-two pages of text and illustration, with a cover bearing the Royal Coat-of-Arms, printed in full colours and gold.

According to a bulletin just received from St. Jame's Palace, London, the contents will include: Special photographs of their Majesties King George VI and Queen Elizabeth — Photographs of Her Majesty Queen Mary, Their Royal Highnesses the Princess Elizabeth, the Princess Margaret, and other members of the Royal Family — A Coronation Ode by John Masefield, Poet Laureate — the King's Majesty, the Significance of the Coronation to the Empire, by John Drinkwater — Description of the Coronation Proceedings—a Pictorial Map of the Route of the Procession — an Introduction to the Service, by His Grace, the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury — The Coronation Service in Westminster Abbey — an Explanation of the Coronation Ceremonial, with illustration, by Sir Gerald Wollaston, Garter Principal King of Arms — A Genealogical Table, showing the descent of the Crown.

With the aid of this Programme, those listening to the Coronation broadcast from London will be able to follow the historic ceremony word for word, and with complete understanding of what is taking place in the heart-centre of the Empire, at each and every moment.

Those wishing to secure a copy are trongly advised to order same through their bookseller or news agent without delay. The price is 50 cents, and delivery may be taken on April 23rd, when the Programme goes on sale. Orders so placed now will definitely be filled, but once the presses start no further orders can be accepted beyond the few that can be taken care of out of a very conservative overrun.

Many public and private institutions, societies, clubs and hospitals have already ordered large supplies and one West African colony will distribute copies in its public schools. Last reports from England are that more than half a million copies have already been sold.

By Gracious Permission of His Majesty, the Programme is being issued by King George's Jubilee Trust. All profits from its sale will be donated to bettering the lot of the under-privileged youth of Great Britain.

Pleasant Place

The Toronto Telegram writes: — The Guelph Reformatory was regarded as a model institution and as a lasting memorial to the late J. P. Downey and Hon. W. J. Hanna, whose humanitarian instincts were expressed in the construction and conduct of this reformative institution.

As a rule, no penal institution is regarded as an asset to a municipality, but Guelph citizens were proud of the Ontario Reformatory, located on the outskirts of that city. The buildings are scientifically constructed, are large, airy, well ventilated and sanitary. The grounds are not disfigured by forbidding stone walls. In fact, the landscape gardens carried out under the supervision of Mr. Neelands over a period of years have transformed acres of swampy, unsightly farm land into a beautiful park, through which streams of limpid water were diverted and small lakes created for ornamental purposes, which are so inviting that they are freely used by children of the community for bathing purposes during the hot weather..

The institution is almost a self-contained town. It produces its own meat, its own milk, bakes its own bread and weaves at least part of the clothing used by the inmates. There was great variety of employment, and unless conditions have deteriorated rapidly within the past year, the food is wholesome, nourishing and abundant in quantity.

The inmates were allowed a great deal of latitude. It is a matter of record that some of the prisoners remained on after their time had expired because they had no jobs to go to and were more comfortable there than they would have been anywhere else. It is significant that the guards were not even armed, and yet this institution is the scene of a serious riot.

O.A.C. Gets a New Breed of Sheep

There has arrived at the Guelph Agricultural College within the last month, a pen of a breed of sheep which is new in Canada observes the Kingston Whig-Standard. They are called the Kerry Hills, and this pen, which was the prize one at the big Kerry Hill sheep sale in Montgomeryshire last September, has been presented to the O.A.C. by the Kerry Hill Flock Book Society.

The Kerry Hill breed of sheep is one of the predominant breeds of Wales. These sheep are known as "the speckled faced rentpayers." They are exceedingly popular in Montgomeryshire, and Radorshire, as well as in parts of Shropshire and Hertfordshire, because of their hariness and the quality of both their mutton and wool.

Referring to the Kerry Hills in his pamphlet on "Types of Mountain and Hill Sheep in Wales," reprinted from the Welsh Journal of Agriculture, Prof. J. Glynne Williams, B.Sc., M.S., of University College Aberystwith, says:

The Kerry Hill sheep, another native breed are somewhat more localized than the Welsh breed. They are found on their native hills in Montgomeryshire, and also in the border counties of Brecon and Radnor. Under the influence of a very active Flock Book Society, considerable changes have taken place in the general type which has been popularized. For lowland and lower hill conditions, and in breeding rams for crossing, these changes represent improvements, but the smaller, more compact and hardier, earlier type of the breed are preferred for the higher and poorer hill conditions. The breed generally and the improved rams, particularly, are used in many districts for fat lamb production However, the small unimproved mountain ewes are still in demand for crossing with Down rams on the lowlands, and many are used in flying flocks in North Wales. These ewes are hardy, easily maintained, and have not the same tendency to ramble in a strange country as the Welsh mountain ewe and are thus more popular than the latter on badly fenced lowland farms.

This new breed of sheep has been introduced into Ontario by Hon. Duncan Marshall, minister of agriculture, at no cost to the province. They come with an excellent record behind them. Time alone will tell whether they will prove as valuable to the farmer in this country as they have to the farmers and small-holders in the border counties of Wales.

Automobile Legs Barred Them

Are the young people of the present generation going soft physically, asks the Chatham News? Directors of dancing in Hollywood say that they are, and they blame it all the family car. Recently a director was forced to examine one thousand young girls, in order to select one hundred capable of standing the strain of a dancing act. He says that most young people have "automobile legs", with muscles so soft that they cannot endure even moderate exercise. They ride too much in cars. This director says that the young people use their legs so little in these days that it is a wonder they are able to walk.

This latter observation is no doubt over-stating the case; but it is a fact that the ancient and honorable exercise of walking is losing favor in these days. Young people are driven to school. They must have the car if they want to go to a movie or a dance. Even when they go to visit friends in another part of the city, they must ride.

In the other hand walking is one of the most beneficial forms of healthful exercise. The automobile is a wonderful invention, and we are told that more new cars have been sold in Chatham and Kent County this year, than have been sold in any other single month since 1929. It indicates that prosperity is not only coming back — it is already back.

Pays Penalty Later

W. L. Clark in Windsor Star writes:—Girls who take too strenuous exercise in their 'teens and early twenties are very apt to suffer severe heart attacks when they reach their middle thirties.

Many young women go in for competitive sports, such as tennis, baseball and hockey. They keep playing after they are so tired they can hardly stand up. By strenuous training they tune themselves to endure extreme effort for tournament grinds and play-off series.

Apparently the girls are healthy and strong and the exercise seems to help them, rather than injure them. But ten years or so later, after the woman has dropped her sports career, she is frequently to be found suffering from a nervous breakdown. The strain on her physique has been too great when she was young and she pays the penalty in impaired health when she is still young in years.

HAVE YOU HEARD

The darkest hour is only 60 minutes long.

This from the Atchison, Kansas, Globe: "A preacher was talking to a little boy with a bruised eye when he said: "It's wicked to fight. And the little boy said: "You had ought to preach to your little boy, he's the guy that give me this eye."

Mr. Tiltnose — "No, I don't want to buy that horse. He looks as though he had a mean disposition."

Negro Attendant — "You mustn't mind dat, boss. He jus' got dat way from runnin' in sulky races.

Read it or Not — Sauerkraut made of turnips instead of cabbage is becoming popular in the Ozark communities.

One Guy — "Did you mark that place where the fishing was so good?"

Guy Two — "Yes, put an X on the side of the boat."

First Guy — "That's silly. What if we should get another boat?"

People who go after nothing generally get what they go after.

Father — "Daughter, I hope you will go to church this evening. The pastor's subject, "An Hour With Favorite Hymns," should be very interesting."

Daughter — "I should like very much to go, father, but I have an engagement with my own favorite him tonight."

You never can tell by the way a fellow says "Amen" in Church whether he carries his Christianity with him the rest of the week.

Political Speaker — "What we need is a working majority, and then —

A Voice — "Better reverse it, mister. What we really need is a majority working."

She looked me up in Bradstreet's; now I'm Dun.

Father — "I never smoked when I was your age. I hope you will be able to say that to your son when you do grow up."

Son — "Not with such a straight face as you do, Dad."

Time is a mighty serious subject— Some say "Time goes on!" — This is not so — Time stays; we go on — Keep this uppermost in your head — we go on.

Airplane Pilot — "You seem sad."

Sweet Young Thing — Not exactly sad. Only sentimental. Every time I get this far from earth I begin to feel terribly homesick."

If a man is happy, he is successful.

Little Dorothy — "There was a strange man called to see you today."

Father — "Did he have a bill?"

Little Dorothy — No. Daddy, he just had a plain ordinary nose.

If you could get religion like a Methodist, and experience it like a Baptist, and be positive of it like a Disciple; and be proud of it like an Episcopalian, and pay for it like a Presbyterian, and propogate it like an Adventist, and enjoy it like a Negro — that would be some religion!"

Friend — "How's your garden getting along?"

Man — "It is troubled with two kinds of pests."

Friend — "What are they?"

Man — "The pests that eat the plants and the pests that want to always know how my garden is getting along."

Dentist — Now that didn't hurt, did it?"

Junior — "You can't kid me. My dad is in the advertising business.

Men can laugh at women's intuition if they want to, but let them try to decide which is the front and rear of their wives' hats.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

Along Canada's Mining Highway

Activity everywhere — with the rapidly developing new Larder Lake Camp, located in Ontario, east of Kirkland Lake, and near the Quebec Boundary still holding the spotlight. In addition to the active mining operations — Omega, Martin Bird and Kerr Addison—many new incorporations are getting ready to commence mining. The Armistice and McGarry properties to the West and the Wesley and Pelangio to the east of Kerr Addison are probably the most important. Diamond drilling at the Kerr Addison continues to enlarge an already large tonnage medium grade ore deposit. The recent advance in the shares from pennies to dollars in a short space of time is apparently well justified.

Some fifteen miles to the east of Larder, the Faucoeur and Arntfield properties report important mine news. Francoeur has again enlarged the known extent of its new ore deposit and Arntfield has encountered important new ore in its underground operations. Farther east reports indicate that Osisko Lake to the south of Noranda is at long last to be aggressively diamond drilled.

In the West area near the Ontario-Manitoba boundary, Sachigo River is preparing for an active season. It is understood that the shares, selling at $20, are to be split twenty for one.

Smelter Gold drilling in the God's Lake area has officially reported a ten to twenty-five cent financing deal.

Among holding companies the interesting piece of news is the report that Mining Corporation owns a very substantial interest in Kerr Addison with a present indicated profit of several million dollars.

The Sunshine Oil well to the southwest of Lethbridge in Southern Alberta is close to completion with gas pressure and oil showings indicating a successful well. This well will be important not only to the Sunshine Company but also to Nordon and Pacalta who have nearby acreages.

The Plains Petroleum well east of Lethbridge is nearing completion. The driller states he hopes to reach the desired horizon with ten days clear drilling.

If He Had Met Ann Harding

William F. McDermott, in Cleveland Plain Dealer writes: I remember a night fifteen years ago when John Barrymore was playing "Hamlet." The curtain down, he was ready to talk and frolic.

'I should like," he said, when the evening was well worn, "to find a leading lady to act with me in a repertory of good plays. I want a permanent leading woman, such as my father had and my uncle, somebody of real stature who can play a variety of great roles with distinction. I have looked them all over and I can find nobody. There is only one I havent seen and I am inclined to guess she might do from what I hear of her. She is young and hasn't had much experience. She had only one real role on Broadway, in a piece called "Tarnish." Her name is Ann Harding. Do you know anything about her?"

That was long before Hollywood swallowed both Miss Harding and John Barrymore. If they had met, and formed that partnership, it probably would have altered the history of our stage, and it would certainly have fundamentally amended the lives of the persons chiefly concerned. In all probability they would be marrying and divorcing quite different people.

Horse Power Is The Cheapest

It is a well recognized fact that the most successful farmer is the one who comes nearest to producing what he needs on his farm. The farmer who produces his own motive power for working his farm will save more money and be more independent, than the one who buys his power units and the fuel to operate them. Horse power is the cheapest farm power; it is the product of the farmer's own manufacturing plant and consumes only such things as the farmer himself can manufacture.

The United States still pays Civil War pensions amounting to nearly $2,000,000 weekly.

AROUND THE DIAL

Here we are just catching up with the air wave events, but we must admit that we like the Thursday night Music Hall even though said hour of grand entertainment could certainly be better than it is. That is to say, Crosby sings (croons if you prefer) well, Burns is funny, the orchestra is a bit of okay and they usually have some guests of the silver screen. But the entire program is slowed up because the entire cast is introduced by Ken Carpenter, the announcer, and then Bing does it over again. Then Sir Crosby has to thank the guests individually and they thank him and everybody falls all over the script until the boys in the band decide to play the next number or the announcer tosses a commercial at you.

On the other hand (no, we're not left-handed) Valee has perfect timing. When his guest has finished and the applause is at its height the Yankees go into a fast number and in a few bars Rudy makes the next announcement. None of that "You must come and see us again, good-bye, good luck, success ahead" business.

Fred Astaire's hour is shaky, but we do get the odd laugh from the efforts of one Charles Butterworth. We still like Astaire's dancing on the screen but we wish Frederick would give up the idea of singing.

There is a lot more to add to this review but not just now. Suffice to say that the St. Catharines station is still entertaining its listeners during the afternoon race broadcast with that English classic, "Swimming with the Women." Incidentally whoever buys the records for CKTB knows what he is about.

Ah well! Blow out the candles, girls, the story's over.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor:—I was interested in a court decision handed out last week, whereby a Toronto daily paper was fined $600.00 for infringement of the Copyright Act. They had simply reproduced, without authority, pictures from copyright prints. Quite easily done!

Correspondents to newspapers, writers of short stories for magazines, as well as editors themselves, should be fully conversant with the regulations and restrictions of the Copyright laws.

To plead ignorance of the law is no excuse.

In years gone by I have noticed what seemed minor sins along this line in your issues, but not so pronounced as the one I have referred to.

Songs, music, pictures, plays and poems are almost universally under copyright. The author sells his goods to the publisher, who copyrights and protects his property, so that every Tom, Dick, and Harry can't reproduce it. Patents and many other things come under this very necessary protection. Debating societies and young people's societies who periodically put on plays, usually buy a copy or two. They then proceed to typewrite the several parts which is not permissible. The result is that the publisher sells one or two copies at two bits each, when he really should have sold ten. No wonder the law is being enforced, and it's about time.

The last meeting, which was held at Mrs. J. A. Leslie's, on Feb. 4th was in the form of a Grandmothers meeting. It was very interesting to see the different costumes represented in olden times. Mrs W. Atkinson won the prize for the best costume. Miss Alice Sleep sang a solo very fitting to the occasion, "The Old Spinning Wheel." The impromptu debate, "Resolved that our Grandmothers were more ambitious than we are," was very interesting also.

The next meeting will be held at Mrs W. Hamilton's on Feb. 17th

A social evening will be held at Mrs J. Mole's on Friday, Feb. 12

TRINITY CHURCH NEWS

In spite of the disagreeable weather, about thirty members of the A.Y.P.A. attended the meeting on Monday evening, which took the form of a 'Valentine Social Night'. The meeting opened with a hymn, and prayers led by the President. After the reading of the minutes, short discussions, and the completion of all business, the President closed this part of the meeting with the Benediction, and the programme was then put in charge of Miss Irene Bonham. Miss Margaret Quennell gave an interesting paper on St. Valentine, after which a Valentine contest was enjoyed, the winner being Miss Mary King. Partners were secured by piecing together broken hearts; and after visiting 'Alimony Al', Mr. Hugh Burns, we received our Court-Whist Scoring Cards, and seven tables of Court- Whist was enjoyed. During the evening, Mr. Arthur Arch, acted as Postman, and distributed the Valentines, which were posted at the Post Office in the Parish Hall. A dainty lunch was served by the committee, and Miss Mary Crozier presented the prizes to Miss Mary King, winner of the contest; Mr. Ben Drennan, high scorer of Court-Whist; Evelyne Green, low scorer; and Mr. Grenville Reed, winner of the lucky chair. A very enjoyable evening was then brought to a close.

The next meeting will be held on February 22nd. It is to be a Missionary evening, and a very interesting programme is being arranged.

The 'Extravaganza', which was presented in Trinity Church Parish Hall, last Wednesday evening, was a great success. All players did their part well, and are to be highly congratulated. We would like to take this opportunity of thanking Mrs. Shipp and her Crew for so kindly coming and presenting 'Extravaganza' for the Church; thanks is also extended to those of the Parish, who aided in any way, toward the success of the evening.

The Ladies of the W.A. held their Annual Pancake Social on Tuesday, February 9th, in the Parish Hall. Supper was served at 6 o'clock consisting of meat, hot vegetables, pan-cakes, pie and coffee.

Wednesday was Ash-Wednesday, the beginning of Lent, and it is hoped that during Lent there will be pictures shown once a week in the Parish Hall. These pictures will be of an educational nature, and nights when pictures are not secured, it is expected that a special speaker will address the gathering. It is hoped that all will attend these Lenten gatherings.

Next Monday evening, the Girls' Auxiliary meets in the Parish Hall at 8 o'clock. After the short period of study and sewing, the girls will have a Valentine Social. All the girls of the Church are most welcome.

The Services next Sunday, February 14th, at Trinity Church, will be conducted by the Rev. A. J. Forte, of Hornings Mills.

Services Next Sunday, Feb. 14th

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

Printing and Enlarging Your Own

Principle of an enlarger: the farther the lens is from the paper the greater the enlargement.

Enlargements bring out interesting detail. Light and shadow tones may be improved in the process.

Developing negatives—what with daylight developing in film tanks and dependable formulae in darkrooms—has in these days become largely a "time and temperature" process practically certain, if the exposure was correct, to produce good negatives. Printing a negative, developing a print and making an enlargement are very much "something else again," not that they are formidable tasks, but decidedly more choosy. Skill and judgment play a large part.

There is considerable choice, for one thing, in the kind of photographic paper on which the negative may be printed, depending upon the degree of contrast the paper will give to the dark and light portions of the negative, or whether or not soft effects are desired. Some negatives show extreme contrast in lights and shadows; some have average contrast; some, because of faulty exposure, are weak, thin and flat; some, extremely so. The selection of paper best suited to the type of negative and the kind of picture, plus proper exposure in printing, often makes the difference between a good and a bad picture.

Again, there is a choice of surfaces in paper, such as velvet, glossy, semi-gloss, according to taste. The highly glossy paper, for example, is best suited for a negative filled with detail. Again, re-development solutions are available for giving a print a different tone such as sepia for an autumn scene.

The amateur who does his own printing has the opportunity, too, of masking portions of the negative to suit his own artistic judgment. He may give a picture a more balanced composition or eliminate undesirable details on the sides, top, or bottom. In a cloudless picture he may insert clouds by "printing in" from another negative, and he may amuse himself by producing trick pictures by printing from two or more negatives.

Equipped with an enlarger, the amateur has still greater opportunity to improve his pictures and satisfy his own tastes. This is an apparatus with which a large positive image is obtained by permitting rays of light to pass through the negative, then through a lens and focus on a sheet of sensitive bromide paper.

With an enlarger the amateur may "blow up" a picture to several times the area of the negative. This may result in the transformation of a very ordinary looking picture into an extraordinarily impressive one, because the enlarging often reveals details of interest or beauty not visible in the small "contact" print. He may select only portions of a negative to enlarge — any portion — by masking light from the remaining area; he may even make two or three pictures from one negative. There are ways, too, of controlling the shadow tones of different parts of a picture, thereby greatly enhancing its artistic value.

All these possibilities are worth knowing, even if you do leave their execution to your photo finisher, because you can give him intelligent instructions as to what you prefer in the finishing of your snapshots.

Camel Has Hard Battle; Can Endure Punishment

The camel's life is about as hard as any animal has to bear. It lives in the desert where blinding dust storms sting its eyes, and where water is scarce. The hot sands grind its feet. It must live days without food. And if nature had not been extraordinarily kind to it, probably not a single camel would be alive to lope over the desert today. But it is marvelously protected against these hardships, according to a writer in the Washington Star.

Its nostrils, for instance, are slanting, and it can close them in sandstorms so that part of the stinging dust is kept out and air still can get in.

Its lashes are thick and long and shade its eyes from the blazing sun and glaring sand almost as well as awnings would.

Its feet are padded with callouses against the blistering sand, and so are its elbows and knees and even its chest, so that it may kneel and lie down comfortably.

Its humps are life-giving cupboards where extra fat is stored for use during the hungriest days. Humpless camels couldn't live long.

But the camel doesn't starve if his teeth can help him, for they're sharp and pointed and as strong as steel and can chew the toughest shrubbery. And the camel can smell water across vast distances of sand.

Once he reaches an oasis (or pool) he not only slakes his thirst—he fills the pouches of his stomach with water besides. These pouches, which are really a part of his stomach, he may then close off to keep the water in storage against the thirst of another long, dry journey. The camel generally lives for 40 lean years.

Copenhagen Porcelain Is Marked With Wavy Lines

Royal Copenhagen porcelain has a regal background. The first attempts to found a pottery in Copenhagen are shrouded in mystery. Between 1730 and 1756 suitable kaolin was discovered on the Isle of Bornholm and pottery-making was started under the direction of Mehlhorn, a modeler from Meissen. But there is no definite information until about 1760, when a Frenchman named Lournier was making a soft paste at Copenhagen. These efforts were short-lived but may account for the French apeparance of the porcelain, says a writer in the Kansas City Star.

In 1775, King Christian VII of Denmark gave the enterprise his support and the government took over the factory which had been re-established by Muller, a chemist who used the hard paste.

The Royal Copenhagen mark is three wavy lines, said to denote the three belts of sea which divide the islands of Zealand and Fuene from Jutland.

First Public High School

In 1821 Boston established the first public high school in the United States. This school, patterned after the academies, did not at first prepare for college; it offered, rather, a variety of courses of the modern (non-classical) and practical type. In 1827 the Massachusetts legislature passed a law requiring towns of a certain size to establish high schools. Few of the towns acted upon this law until Mann became secretary of the state board of education, but by 1850 Massachusetts had 64 public high schools—probably more than all the other states combined. The high schools later undertook to prepare pupils for college and thus combined the functions both of the old Latin grammar schools and of the private academies. In the country as a whole the high school made little progress until after the Civil war.

Oldest Botanic Gardens

The oldest botanic gardens in the new world are situated on the island of St. Vincent, in the Windward islands. It was established in 1763 and it was to obtain breadfruit tree specimens for this garden in 1787 that the British naval vessel Bounty sailed to the South seas, where the famous mutiny on the Bounty occurred. Eventually Captain Bligh, of the Bounty, was brought back to St. Vincent with 530 choice specimens for the gardens.

First Trip of Fast Mail

On September 17, 1875, great crowds at Chicago welcomed the first fast mail train, which completed the run from New York in 26 hours—about half the previous postal time between the two cities. In addition to a car for guests, the train consisted of four especially designed and equipped postal cars, manned by a picked crew of clerks who handled, en route, more than 30 tons of mail matter.

Siam's Idols and Temples

Nothing, it seems, was spared when Siam set out to build idols and temples. The ideas were lavish; so were the results. Outstanding is the Wat Arun, but such idols as adorn the entrance to the Royal Imperial castle are typical of the work which the Siamese undertook to express themselves. Gorgeous coloring and exquisite carving are the chief characteristics.

Anchor Ice

Since water expands on freezing, ice is lighter than water and therefore forms on the surface and floats. Anchor ice, however, is sometimes found at the bottom of the river. It consists of an aggregation of small crystals or needles of ice frozen at the surface of rapid open water and probably carried below by the force of the stream.

D. L. Moody to be Remembered at St. Andrew's

A hundred years ago this month there was born in Northfield, Mass a man of whom it was to be said 'He saved a million souls from hell.' The whole Christian world during the month of February is uniting to pay honor to the life and work of the great Evangelist whose name has come to be a household word. Moody had associated with him in the work Ira D. Sankey, who sang the gospel while the preaching of the gospel was left to the evangelist. Sankey's hymns are now known throughout the world. Simply Trusting Every Day, The Ninety and Nine. These hymn tunes were his own composition, while many others are popular to day because Sankey sang them into the hearts of men and women. Undoubtedly, there are some in our community who were privileged to hear Moody while he was in Toronto or in some other part of the world..

The service Sunday night at St Andrew's will do honor to this Man of God. Hymns associated with Moody and Sankey will be sung. Mrs. Robert Greig will sing The Ninety and Nine.

At the morning service the minister will preach on the subject A Spectacle or a Person. The fourth sermon in the series on the Standards of our Church will be preached a week from Sunday, when the subject will be God's Eternal Decree.

Juvenile Hockey

(Simpson & Sampson)

Last Friday night at the Ravina Rink, Streetsville Juveniles suffered defeat at the hands of Mt Dennis. The final score was 5—0, and the game, as the score indicates, was one sided in more ways than one

Up till now the Streetsville boys have played without any complaints about the age of their opponents but the apparent age of some of the Mt.D. players makes them feel very bitter. Not very long ago Streetsville Juveniles were compelled to break in a new goalie. Why? Because the original goalie was 3 months over age. We wonder where Mount Dennis would get new players from if the age law was enforced there as it is in Streetsville?

On Saturday night, Streetsville boys again went into action at Willodale Arena against the East End Nurseries. This time however, the Streetsville team came home —the winners. The score at the end of the game was 5—2.

It was a very fast game and the goalie, Bert Saul, deserves special mention for his display of net minding. The first period ended with the score tied 1 1. Shel Rice was on the business end of the hockeystick that netted Streetsville's goal. In the second period each team scored in the first 5 minutes. Then Streetsville lads got warmed up and bulged the net three times in the next fifteen minutes. The goals in the second period were scored by Redick, Potts, Schnurr and Evans. In the last few minutes of play the goalie, Bert Saul, received a nasty bang on the forehead from a high stick, which finished the game.

In an effort to boost their dwindling bank account the Juvenile Club are holding another dance on Friday night, Feb. 12. Come and support the team and enjoy yourself at the same time.

STAR RUBY

By Louise Jerrold

Albertine Tevans, shopgirl falls in love with Dennis Maxwell, jewelry salesman, but is bothered by his mysterious actions. He speaks of being on the lookout for a man with a drooping eyelid. Albertine's rich great-Aunt Celia Tevans, invites her for a visit. Before she leaves, Dennis gives her a star ruby to keep for him. At her Aunt's estate are two other guests—the Countess Yelena Loupakoff and her brother, Count Michael. There seems to be tension in the air, and her aunt's houseman, Bates who always wears dark glasses, gives her the creeps. Dennis unexpectedly arrives to show some rubies to Aunt Celia. He makes Albertine pretend they are strangers to each other, then pays ardent attention to the Countess.

CHAPTER VII.

Albertine's sense of loneliness persisted throughout the day, and even at the dinner table that evening, in spite of flattering attention from Michael. She had chosen to wear a simple white georgette frock that Dennis liked, but tonight he didn't seem to notice it—or her.

She was glad, of course, that Michael so openly admired her, but she longed for a gleam of approval from Dennis' eyes. It was Denny she loved and she felt a hot, stabbing pain when she saw him with eyes and ears only for Yelena. But you couldn't blame him, Albertine thought, sitting in her aunt's place at the head of the table, for Yelena, in a flame-colored dress, with her smooth black hair framing her oval face, looked like a vivid gypsy.

Oddly enough, the Countess wore no jewels tonight, whereas last evening she had seemed almost barbaric in their blaze. It was probably a whim of hers, thought Albertine, to dress very simply at times.

As they moved into the drawing room after dinner, Michael stayed close to Albertine.

"I must dance with you, adorable infant," he half whispered, and went to turn on the radio.

He danced beautifully, and Albertine momentarily forgot her heartache. But her pain returned full force when Dennis rose to take Yelena in his arms.

A little later, however, when she was dancing again with Michael, Dennis suddenly cut in, then whispered fiercely, "I couldn't wait any longer"!

She gazed up at him. Unexpectedly, he smiled.

"You're a wee scrap, Blue Eyes, but you reach as high as my heart. Since we last danced together, night before last, I've been to New York. But even by making the trip in record time, I couldn't get back before you left."

"Denny, why didn't you tell me that you knew Aunt Celia, that you were coming up here? And why did you give me that ruby?"

He merely smiled, and tightened his arm about her.

"Dancing with you is a bit of heaven," he whispered. "In that white dress you look like an angel."

He guided her around the room once again, and then, with a mumbled excuse, abruptly released her and cut in on Michael, who was dancing with Yelena.

When he danced with Albertine again, a little later, he was frowning, and his mouth was grim. They swept around the room several times in silence.

Finally, Albertine said, "I thought you'd admire my pearls."

"Pearls! Are you joking, Albertine? Those beads—"

"They aren't beads! They're real pearls. Aunt Celia gave them to me last night."

He stared at her a moment, then said, "You're right. I'm plain dumb to mistake pearls for beads."

But she was angry. Why did he have to act so queerly?

"I can't make you out," she flung at him.

"Have patience, dear," he pleaded in an undertone. "Give me a little more time! Everything will come out right if only you'll wait—trust me——"

His eyes looking deep into hers, melted her.

"A-all right," she faltered.

At that moment, Bates appeared with coffee. Dennis seated Albertine at the coffee table, then drifted over to Yelena, who had sunk gracefully into a corner of a tapestry-covered sofa.

A moment later, Michael was bending over Albertine, murmuring pretty flatteries as she poured the coffee.

"Lovely hands, like white butterflies!"

Albertine laughed. "That sounds like a song. I wish you'd sing again that little Russian folk-song that Aunt Celia is so fond of. Her door upstairs is open. She can hear you."

He bowed. "You have but to command, douschika."

"Douschika?" Albertine repeated, raising questioning blue eyes. Yelena had called Denny "douschka" that morning.

"Darling," Michael translated.

He crossed to the piano, and sang the rollicking song of the little red boots. When he had sung several other songs, Yelena suddenly rose and interrupted him, engaging him in what appeared to be an argument in Russian.

Dennis strolled over to Albertina.

"I never drink after-dinner coffee, Miss Tevans. I see you don't, either. But you make it look so tempting, I'm half inclined——"

"You'd better have coffee," she said, pouring him a cup. "Bates' coffee is wonderfully good, Aunt Celia thinks. Most coffee keeps her wide awake, but this, she says, puts her to sleep right away."

Dennis' voice sounded strange, but he seemed only to be making conversation as he asked, "Do the Count and Countess usually take it?"

"I don't know—why do you ask?"

He shrugged. "Just curious."

She didn't believe him and, a few minutes later, was sure he had been more than idly curious. For, when she excused herself to look in on Aunt Celia, she paused in the doorway, glanced back, and saw him stealthily emptying his coffee cup into a potted plant. Now, why did he do that?

She completely forgot the incident, however, when she got upstairs and found Aunt Celia sitting bolt upright in bed, in a furious rage.

"I've pulled the bell-rope till it broke," she fumed. "Where's that Bates, I'd like to know? I didn't dare to drink coffee tonight, after my spell last night. It's a crying shame if a person can't have a cup of hot water in her own house——"

Albertine sped down to the kitchen, but stopped short in the doorway at sight of Bates sprawled in a chair in a drunken stupor. His dark spectacles and an empty whiskey bottle were on the table at his elbow.

Flinging him a disgusted glance, she filled a pitcher with hot water and set it, with a cup, on a tray. She was starting out of the kitchen when a mutter from Bates made her turn her head.

He opened his eyes and, for an instant, looked at her supidly. Then, his chin fell back to his chest again.

The tray almost slipped out of her hands. That drooping eyelid! Taut and white, she stared at him a moment before she turned and started back upstairs. "Silly! You're always overworking your imagination," she scolded herself. "It's just because he's drunk that his eye looked like that. Forget it."

But she couldn't forget it, even after she had set 'em Aunt Celia for the night. What she had seen worried her. Should she tell Denny?

Sets Precedent

OTTAWA—Shortly after Easter, Lord Tweedsmuir will return the visit paid to him in Quebec last summer by President Roosevelt, and in so doing will set a precedent. He will be the first Canadian Governor-General to pay an official visit to the head of the American Government.

His Excellency, it is tentatively planned, will spend two days at the White House. Afterwards, he may stay for some days at the British Embassy, although this is not settled. It is possible he may accept one of the numerous invitations to receive honorary degrees, that have been heaped on him by United States universities. Princeton University, it is understood, would even like him to lecture, but this, it is said, would have to be deferred for a later unofficial visit.

Easy Entertaining

For the busy homemaker there is great satisfaction in the knowledge of a well-stocked cake tin and cookie box. For all those occasions when guests drop in for tea, when small persons come home hungry from school, and many other informal occasions, there must be a supply of small cakes and cookies. Of course, to have these on hand requires some previous planning, but they should be inexpensive, easy to mix and baked by the dozens. They vanish overnight almost but that is nothing to worry about when you can turn out a large batch of them in half an hour.

Chocolate flavored dainties are particularly popular. Crisp, crunchy chocolate cookies, chocolate ice box cookies — ready to slice and bake any time, and best of all, Brownies, are excellent small cakes to keep on hand. Here are the recipes for them, make up a batch of one or all and remain a calm and unflustered hostess in any entertaining emergency.

Chocolate Cookies

2 cups sifted flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ cup butter or other shortening
1¼ cups sugar

Bake on ungreased baking sheet in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 9 minutes. Makes 2½ dozen 3-inch cookies.

For special occasions and childrens' parties, cookies can be cut in fancy shapes and decorated with granulated sugar, mixture of sugar and cinnamon, colored sugar, nuts, raisins, caraway seeds, colored candies or silver dragees. A. When making garments, or cutting out quilt pieces, save all the scraps, and cut them for stuffing sofa pillows. They will not become lumpy, and are much more satisfactory than cotton.

Average Britisher's Life-Span Increased By Four Years

LONDON—Tens of thousands of people will see the Coronation procession next May, who, but for advances in medicine, engineering and chemistry, would have been dead.

According to a report just issued by the British insurance companies, which have conducted an investigation into the lives of 2,000,000 insured people, the average life-span of Britons of the present generation is at least four years longer than that of their grandparents. By 1944, the life-span will be prolonged by another five years.

The annual two weeks' holiday is one of the greatest contributory reasons why people of today are living longer, according to medical opinion.

"People who dispense with their annual summer holiday are asking for a nervous breakdown and a shorter life," says a specialist. "Those who reduce by drastic methods are asking for the same thing."

Housing in Quebec

It will be admitted that in Canada we are already behind from the point of view of sanitary lodgings. This delay may be due to a number of causes. It is only recently that the housing crisis became serious: it followed the exodus of country people to the cities. But the crisis is none the less severe. In many centres construction has not kept pace with the increase in population, and before the economic crisis, working men and the poor succeeded in housing themselves much more easily than today. The Federal Government has had the happy idea of choosing the building of sanitary lodgings as a means of lessening the unemployment crisis. For it must not be overlooked that in aiding the population to live in more hygienic dwelling places and more agreeable ones, the public authorities are contributing to procure work for a large number of men, and that they are encouraging all the industries which are allied to those of construction. Let us hope that Quebec will enter upon this movement shortly and with all its power.—L'Evenement, Quebec.

Wife Ends His Career

The passing of Mrs. J. T. Carroll recalls the history in Vancouver of an interesting pioneer couple. Her late husband, Dr. Carroll, was a busy physician, one of the group consisting of Dr. Duncan Bell-Irving, Dr. Johnson and Dr. H. E. Langis, all now dead except Dr. Langis, who is still hale and hearty at 79.

In 1898, Dr. Carroll was bitten by the political bug, this being about the time that Dr. R. E. McKechnie, now of Vancouver, was first running for office in Nanaimo.

The News-Advertiser, Vancouver morning paper, was friendly to the candidacy of Dr. Carroll for mayor. F. L. Carter-Cotton was proprietor of the morning paper of that day.

One night Mr. Cotton and Dr. Carroll were in conference and they called in a young reported to dictate an announcement about Dr. Carroll's proposed candidacy. The reporter took his notes, but then remarked:

"The only trouble about this announcement is that Mrs. Carroll was on the phone a few minutes ago to say that no matter what we heard from any source about Dr. Carroll running for mayor, there was nothing to it. She said he was not going to run."

"Did she say that?" huskily repeated Dr. Carroll, who was a towering man of huge frame. He turned to the editor and said: "I guess I had better go home and find out."

Mr. Cotton had to find another candidate for that election—Lethbridge Herald.

Florida and the Soo

Your coughs and your colds and your 'flu.
But take it from me

W. J. McCormack.

St. Petersburg, Florida, Jan. 11.

(Dear Bill. Had to pay 2 cents postage on your card. This is the warmest January in 40 years. However, there are neither rattlers nor jiggers in the grass, no alligators in the rivers. Sun is so bright a fellow needs to hunt the shady side of the street. The hoss shoes have taken a rest, but there is great curling, skating and hockey. It must be terrible down south to just have to sit around and play cribbage.—Editor).

Canada's Young People

Edward Bird, a young Englishman, after travelling in Canada, has an article in the Nineteenth Century about life among the young people in this country. That which most impressed him was the extent to which boys and young men spend their holidays canoeing and camping in the north country, where lakes, streams and forests abound. He tells of the camps for boys on Lake Timagami and elsewhere in the north. The young fellows learn canoeing, woodcraft, and above all acquire self-confidence. He found children aged six swimming and diving well. What he felt was that the young in Canada are looking forward, confidently to the fine future ahead of this country. They do not have any doubt about it. —Toronto Star Weekly.

Blinding Headlights

Blinding headlights continue to claim victims on Ontario highways with monotonous regularity in spite of the fact that they are supposed to be illegal and that there are supposed to be officers responsible for enforcing such a regulation.—Brockville Recorder.

Bell's Prophecy

Sending photographs over an ordinary telephone wire was something that even Bell himself would have been loath to prophecy, although he did predict in the early stages of the invention that a single human voice would be ultimately heard around the world.—Brantford Expositor.

Blondes Vanish

The new models of motor cars appear in the advertisements without a blonde on the running board, suggesting at least the motor car has reached a state of perfection that enables it to stand on its own merits.—Kitchener Record.

Incompetent Drivers

The Department of Highways now requires every driver who has had a bad accident record to be examined by a doctor to see if any physical defect is responsible for the accidents. This suggests that it might be a good thing from the standpoint of the safety of those using the highways, if more attention was paid to the physical qualifications of all who drive motor vehicles. Why wait until a driver has established a reputation for accidents before subjecting him to an examination regarding his physical fitness? Plain, ordinary common sense suggests that the time for such an examination is before and not after an accident, in which, perhaps, there has been a loss of life.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Music and Milk

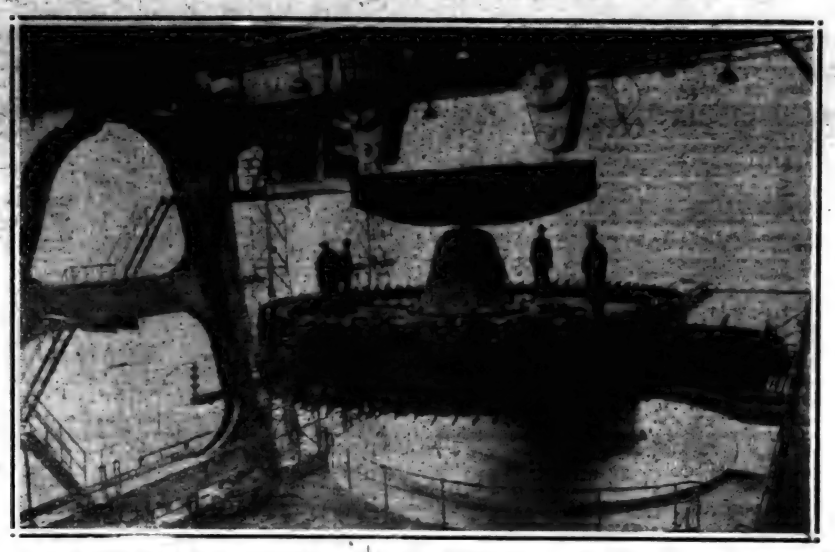
Science gains much by accident. An Indiana farmer is now getting five gallons of milk instead of the three he used to get before he began milking just outside his back door, where his two cows could hear the radio. But he didn't locate the cows there for their amusement, but his own. In a scientific spirit this column now suggests trying bagpipes on the two cows. Or on the farmer, if you prefer.—Sault Star.

Concern For A Dog

A curious incident, according to a cable dispatch from Madrid, held up hostilities for a time on that blood-drenched battleground. It seems that somehow or other a collie dog had wandered on to the danger zone and was rushing back and forth between the opposing trenches in a state of terror. Both sides ceased fire for a whole hour, but the dog refused to leave and was eventually dispatched. It is strange to reflect that men who would not hesitate for an instant to kill each other should instinctively refrain from killing a trapped animal. There is, then, a certain remnant of chivalry still surviving.—Hamilton Spectator.

The Empire and the World

The Empire does not involve the world in its domestic problems and crises. Other nations have diverted the discontent of citizens by precipitating crises with neighbouring or weaker nations, but the Empire has kept its domestic troubles within its own boundaries. Even though unemployment and poverty within the Empire have been exploited by the enemies of the British system, the Empire has not retaliated but has gone on in its quiet dignity and brought its enemies to reluctant acknowledgment that the integrity of the Empire is essential even to the welfare of those who would be its enemies, not as a nation but as the exponent of an opposing order. Thus it goes: enemies, rivals, competitors, all know that were the Empire to falter in its stride the pace of the world would diminish. The Empire is the driving-wheel, the motive power, and the safety-valve of international production and welfare. —Melbourne Argus.



South Africa and Immigration

On the Rand we do not want any more newcomers for the present, either from overseas or from other parts of South Africa, unless they have assured jobs waiting for them. It may be that the decentralization of secondary industry—recently much discussed—will provide a solution. Anxious as we are to see the Rand grow and thrive and prosper, it is as well to remember before it is too late that the Rand cannot continue indefinitely to carry the rest of the Union on its back. The prosperity of the Rand and the prosperity of the rest of the country are, in point of actual fact, interdependent. We must avoid the mistake of Australia, where almost the entire population is concentrated in a few large cities. Increased and more diffused industrial activity should readily attract a larger population of the desired type, which in turn will lead to an increased demand for raw materials and food. What is needed at the moment is a strong lead from the Government.

There are about 5,500 islands round the shores of Great Britain, including five hundred in the Hebrides group.

The temperature of the Carlsbad Caverns, N.M., remains at 56 degrees F. the year round.

Canadian Pupils Will Have Tour

Plans Under Way For Visit To Coronation

MONTREAL—While the majority of their schoolmates are still in class rooms, with the June exams like clouds towering on the horizon, it will be sunshine and blue skies in May for 200 fortunate Canadian and Newfoundland students, girls and boys, who not only will evade exams but will have the luck to be a part of the vast empire and international crowds that will witness the Coronation procession of King George VI.

Arrangements for the students to visit England are now being completed by the Overseas Education League. The student party to the Coronation celebrations will, in a way, mark a culminating point in the Empire educational work of the league, which was founded 26 years ago by Major Fred J. Bey, of Winnipeg, and is honored by having as honorary president, the governor-general.

The 200 students who will have the good fortune to miss nearly two months of class-work and at the same time see the King-Emperor in procession, will owe it to their own advancement in studies, as only those whose records for the year justify the school authorities in believing that they would pass in the June exams will be included in the lucky 200.

Selection of the students will be in the hands of the school principals, who in many cases will make their choices in collaboration with staff members. Vote of the student body may be the deciding factor in other cases.

The places in the Canadian party will be allocated to various schools through the provincial departments of education and no school will be alloted more than one place. Forty places have been assigned each to Quebec and Ontario; 14 each to Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia, and four to Prince Edward Island. Newfoundland will have eight members.

It looks as though sparks will fly any time now on the heavyweight horizon. It seems that Braddock and Schemling were matched to fight in New York on June 3rd for the title, now however, plans have been made for Braddock and Louis to battle out in Chicago on June 15th ..... hence Schmeling is all hot under the collar and reports have it that Maxie will take the Zeppelin "Hindenburg" on a 48-hour trip to New York to try and stop the fight.

Maxie, Baer, who is on the comeback trail, just had his 100-suit wardrobe destroyed by fire, along with the home of Ancil Hoffman, his manager. With this cramp Maxie's style? NOT MUCH!

The popular question that is always being asked at this office is: "In a six-day bicycle race how many miles would each rider travel?" This question was answered only the other day by Torchy Peden, who estimated the mileage to be somewhere between 2300 and 2600 miles per rider.

Denuding Country Of Trees Blamed For U. S. Floods

Dr. W. L. Finley, Naturalist, Urges Need of Wild Life Conservation

OTTAWA, — Dr. William L. Finley distinguished naturalist and nature photographer, in an illustrated lecture before the Ottawa Field Naturalists's Club gave a picture of the progress of wild life conservation in the United States and of the enormous wastage that follows uncontrolled exploitation of wild lands and the wild life.

Dr. Finley is one of the leading exponents of wild life connected with the American Nature Association. He had been one of the first real nature photographers.

Five reels of Dr. Finley's own moving pictures were shown. The first dealt with wild life on the Pacific coast and particularly with the salmon run on the Columbia river. He estimated the value of the fishing on the river at $200,000,000 and said that $4,200,000 had been spent in the building of fish ways around one of the Hydro-Electric developments to enable the salmon to reach their spawning grounds.

"If you cut you should replant," Dr. Finley said in speaking of the forests and he traced much of the recent flood and soil drifting problems to the denuding of the country of trees. His pictures showed the value of beaver in conserving small waterways. He remarked a dead beaver is worth $10 to $12 but a live one $300.

He showed the damage that has been done to wild life and to agriculture by the indiscriminate draining of swamps in the Middle West, and described a new bird sanctuary which has been created in Oregon by flooding a 12,000 acre ranch.

Outdoor celebrations, arena games at night, and indoor feasts in ancient Greece and Rome were illuminated by torches in metal baskets and receptacles filled with resinous woods, pitch, or other inflammable substances.

THE FAMILY ALBUM—SAVING TIME

Says Situation Is Ridiculous

Fifth Consecutive Year of Operation at Loss

MONTREAL — Canada's newsprint industry in spite of record demand for tonnage, is entering its fifth consecutive year of operation at a substantial loss, Charles Vining, president of the Newsprint Association of Canada, told Canadian Club members recently.

The industry's situation was described by Vining as ridiculous." The explanation, he said, lies in methods of selling which become common practice under the continued stress of buyers' market.

A "combination of interlocking contracts and lowest price policy" has made it possible in recent years he said, "for a single manufacturer, by timidity, vanity or faulty judgment to be bullied, cajoled or bamboozled into a decision sealing the fate of the whole industry for a whole year."

Vining, in a consideration of the newsprint outlook, warned against setting up a spot market "with buyers bidding frantically for supply." Such as might be poetic justice but would bring "an orgy of promotion and expansion such as this industry experienced in the period from 1925 to 1929 with the inevitable consequences from which we are just now beginning to escape."

Has New Method For Knitting

Graduate of German School Says It Involves No Lost Motion

GENEVA, N.Y. — "It's all in the way you hold the yarn," says Mrs. H. O. Jahn, German trained expert knitter and instructor of a group of Geneva women.

Wife of the head gardener at the New York State agricultural experiment station, Mrs. Jahn is a graduate of the 'Handels and Gerwerbe Schule' in Germany, a school devoted to the teaching of home economics and the knitting as a fine art.

Knitting is her favorite pastime and the beauty of her knitted wardrobe attracted attention of friends. She soon was busy giving instructions in the method which she says saves a lot of time and turns out a perfect garment.

Under the Jahn system there is no lost motion, and the work goes ahead rapidly. The yarn is held over the left index finger and instead of looping the strand over the top of the needle with the right hand Mrs. Jahn pushes one needle point down with a finger.

One of the reasons for the fine needlework done by European women is their lack of other interests such as the women have in America, says Mrs. Jahn. Few of the women have automobiles to drive, there are few women's clubs and similar organizations to occupy their time and they do not attend moving picture shows as regularly as do their American sisters.

Debt Increase Exceeds Income

Bank of Canada Gives Report on Provinces

OTTAWA—Provincial debts have been increasing at a greater rate than revenues between 1925 and 1935, according to a compilation made public by the Bank of Canada. This was the first of a series of monthly statistical summaries which the bank plans to issue.

In 1925 the total indebtedness of the provinces in excess of the amount they had deposited in sinking funds was $813,400,000. Ten years later, in 1935, it was $1,622,100,000. The increase was 99 per cent.

Debts have been increasing faster than revenues. In 1926 the debt was 563 per cent of the annual revenue of the provinces. In 1935 it was 777 per cent.

The public debts of the provinces in 1935, less the sinking funds with the relation of the debt to the annual income that year in brackets follow: Prince Edward Island, $5,200,000 (381 per cent); Nova Scotia, $81,100,000 (815); New Brunswick, $64,900,000 (951); Quebec, $163,900,000 (465); Ontario, $699,800,000 (852); Manitoba, $111,000,000 (761); Saskatchewan, $183,400,000 (1,105); Alberta, $165,600,000 (984); British Columbia, $158,200,000 (598).

Japanese fur farmers are raising rabbits and foxes, and government scientists of Japan are learning to breed Japanese sables and American mink.

Six families of the western coast of Schleswig-Holstein have started cultivation of 250 acres of land which have been reclaimed from the sea by building dykes.

Sanford - Jackson Wedding

St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, Port Credit, was the scene of a pretty wedding, when Monica Theresa Jackson, daughter of John W. Jackson, of England, and the late Mrs. Jackson, became the bride of Sylvester Edward Sanford, older son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Sanford, Streetsville. The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, George Jackson, looked lovely in a gown of royal blue chiffon velvet with long sleeves, embossed shoulders and Queen Anne collar. A brilliant clasp added a touch to the ensemble. She wore a navy blue silk turban with noseveil and matching accessories and carried a bouquet of deep pink roses and baby's breath. Miss Agnes Sanford, sister of the groom, made a charming bridesmaid in a gown of pencil blue sheer crepe, strikingly trimmed with rows of black beads. A black turban with noseveil and black accessories completed her costume. Her bouquet was of yellow daffodils and maidenhair fern. The groom was assisted by his brother, Vincent Sanford. Rev. Father J. Sheridan, of Port Credit, officiated. The wedding march was played by Mrs. A. Sullivan of Long Branch. C. Boegel, of Cooksville, sang during the signing of the register. Following a reception at the bride's home, the couple left by car for Buffalo and other points. The bride's travelling dress was of flowered crepe, a black coney coat, maroon velvet hat trimmed with metallic cloth and maroon accessories made a pretty outfit. On their return they will live in Lakeview.

A watch-night address given by Perkins Bull at St. Barnabas Church, Toronto, to mark the transition from 1936 to 1937, was considered by the rector so simple, earnest and convincing that the church had it printed and distributed to the congregation and a copy sent to each Church of England rector throughout Canada.

In acknowledgment the Archbishop of Fredericton wrote: "I have read this stimulating address with great interest. It would be very helpful, I think, if more of our laymen could do similar work."

The rector of St. Paul's Church, Charlottetown, wrote in similar vein: "Allow me to thank you most cordially for the courtesy of sending me a copy of Mr. W. Perkins Bull's Watch-night address. I have read it with great interest. You are fortunate in having that stamp of layman at your back."

Canon H. W. Canningham of Halifax was even more detailed in his praise: "I have very carefully read Mr. Perkins Bull's watch-night address and have filed it. It is well put together and must have been delightful to listen to, as it has been a delight to read. Please convey the thanks of this Canadian priest and the preacher Mr. Jenkins for the opportunity of reading such a timely sermon."

From the far west came equally flattering comments. The Bishop of Calgary wrote direct to Mr. Bull: "Powell sent me a copy of your Watch-night address—received today. I think it is excellent and want to send you my hearty congratulations."

The rector of All Saints' Church, Castor, told the rector of St. Barnabas: "I think the address is timely, and superb in its language and utterance. I am so impressed by its richness that I am making bold to ask (if there are any copies left) you to favor me with two or three other copies. I would dearly like to send them to some friends in the Old Country.

"You are indeed fortunate in having a layreader of such calibre."

Here and There

Opening three weeks earlier this year with a 15-inch snow fall on December 2, the ski-ing season in Quebec province was off to a flying start with special Canadian Pacific trains as well as regulars crowded with enthusiasts on the first week-end thereafter from Montreal to the Laurentians.

The Empress of Britain will start the winter cruise season from New York December 29 on a nine-day voyage to the West Indies and Cuba. It will carry its own night club of Broadway entertainers and a smart dance band. The Empress of Australia, between January 7 and March 25 will make six cruises of eight, nine, ten, 16 and 18 day duration to the West Indies, all from New York.

Gift of a visit home for Christmas and New Year was the unusual present suggested for the year end by G. E. Carter, general passenger agent, Canadian Pacific Railway, Montreal, as he explained the company's pre-paid ticket plan for sending transportation to out-of-town relatives and friends. Arrangement of details of such visits is extremely simple, Mr. Carter said, and tickets cost no more despite use of telegraph in case of emergency and the guarantee that the tickets will reach the right person. This service is not confined to Christmas and New Year but is particularly popular at this season.

Canadian and world ski-ing enthusiasts will have an opportunity to test the Rocky Mountains' claim of having ski facilities equal to any when the Dominion championships of the Canadian Amateur Ski Association are held from March 5 to 8 on the steep slopes of 8,275-foot Mount Norquay, four miles from the Canadian Pacific Railway station at Banff.

According to announcement by Canadian Pacific Communications Department Christmas and New Year's greetings of pre-arranged message texts will be again available to the public this year. Within Eastern or within Western Canada they will be accepted at the low rate of 25 cents. Between eastern and western Canada and from points in eastern and western Canada to points in the U.S.A. they will be accepted at 40 cents. Rates are subject to government tax.

A gift to the Province of Ontario from the Kerry Hill Flock Book Society, in North Wales, ten ewes and one ram, of the world famous Kerry Hill sheep are now at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. The gift was arranged through W. Rupert Davies, President and Editor of the Kingston "Whig-Standard", and the sheep, known in Wales as "speckle-faced rentpayers", are expected to prove extremely popular with stock breeders across Canada. Experts consider the Kerry Hill sheep an outstanding breed, noted for their adaptability to any environment, and for their general utility.

Canadian Pacific semi-streamlined, air-conditioned trains which have been a feature of railway development this year, have had a big reaction on Christmas presents and are now been shown in many of the big department stores in the form of models. These miniature trains are having great success with the kiddies who are given rides in them in the stores and then have the opportunity of getting a toy train for Christmas, built on the same lines as the miniature.

"Mississippi Bubble" Was Disastrous Speculation

The "Mississippi Bubble" was a scheme devised by John Law, a famous Scotch financier, who lived from 1671 to 1729. Under the patronage of the duke of Orleans, regent of France, he organized a project intended originally to liquidate the national debt of that country by developing, under an exclusive grant, the resources of the province of Louisiana and the commerce of the Mississippi, then claimed by the French.

The scheme was launched in 1716 with the establishment of a bank. In 1717 the West Indian company was organized with a capital of 200,000 shares of 500 livres each. The company was at first successful, and in 1719 obtained exclusive control of the trade to the East Indies, China and the South Seas, and all the possessions of the French East India company. The holders of West India shares seemed likely all to profit tremendously.

An additional issue of 5,000 shares was created, and so wild was the speculative craze that more than 300,000 persons applied for them. In consequence all of the shares rose to twenty times their original value, and at the height of the excitement in 1719 were nominally worth more than eighty times the amount of all the currency in France.

The company could not hope to make a satisfactory profit for those who had paid the preposterous prices which speculative demand had put upon the shares. Before a year was out the "bubble" burst and the shares sank to a tenth of their face value.

The whole enterprise was thus discredited, and the company was wound up, while Law was obliged to flee; he died in poverty in Venice.

So great were the losses, which were in France rather than England, that the collapse of the Mississippi scheme nearly precipitated a revolution. It is usually regarded as the most disastrous speculation of modern times.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Three Distinct Groups Make Up Cricket Family

There are comparatively few species of crickets, but they represent three quite distinct groups. These can be distinguished as True crickets, Mole crickets and Tree crickets, says an authority in the Montreal Herald.

Mole crickets are so called because they burrow in the ground like moles. The form of their bodies is fashioned for this kind of life. They feed upon the tender roots of various plants.

True crickets are the black creatures seen in the cracks in pavements, or in the paths in the fields. They are common everywhere, some even invading our houses. They usually feed upon plants, but some are predaceous. They lay their eggs in the autumn, usually in the ground and hatch the following summer.

The common name Tree cricket was applied to this group by the fact that they are apt to live in trees; but they are also found on shrubs, tall herbs or grass. The song of the Snowy Tree cricket is often mistaken for that of the Katydid.

The Nation's Songs

"Let me write the nation's songs and I care not who makes her laws" was written by a Scotch patriot, Andrew Fletcher of Saltoun, in his "Account of a Conversation Concerning a Right Regulation of Governments for the Common Good of Mankind," a letter written to the marquis of Montrose and others in 1703. The correct quotation is: "I knew a very wise man so much of Sir Christopher's sentiment that he believed if a man were permitted to make all the ballads he need not care who should make the laws of a nation. And we find that most of the ancient legislators thought they could not well reform the manners of any city without the help of a lyric, and sometimes of a dramatic poet."

Kangaroo Kitchen

In Australia the natives have been living off kangaroo meat for at least 10,000 years. Parts of kitchens believed to be that old were unearthed near Kingston, South Australia, some time ago. Shape of the ovens leads archeologists to believe they were for roasting kangaroos at ceremonies. So strangely man-like are these animals that it seems almost incredible that they should be eaten, but the fact remains that the Australian aborigines consider them a great delicacy. Vast herds of the beasts formerly roamed the great inland plains of the "island continent," but they have been largely killed off for their hides.

"Yellow Streak"

The meaning of "yellow streak" appears to have originated with the fact that things have yellowed through age, disease or other discoloration, just as a complexion may turn yellow through jaundice; hence the meaning of jaundiced or jealous, melancholy. A later development of this was in the sense of mean, contemptible, cowardly or craven. Another applied meaning is sensational, with regard to news or the press.

Trial of Socrates

At the trial of Socrates, time was divided by means of a water-clock, a kind of hour-glass, with water instead of sand, into three equal portions; the first, to the speech of the prosecutor, the second to that of the defendant and the third, if the verdict was "guilty," to the speech of the prosecutor, the reply of the defendant, together with the decision of the judges

The Open Column

Apparently our little creed about the inactivities of the county council has borne fruit. Warden David Moran was discussing the story with us, the other day, and was not too well pleased about it. Yet the story was based on remarks made by the Warden last year ,when he warned the councillors that, if they did not get something of a move on them, that Mr. Hepburn would deal them a hearty slap on the wrist, one of these days.

At the same time, we must admit that the Warden can take a bit of criticism, and hand it out, too, if it comes to that. While arguing about the County Council, he made the statement that, in his opinion, the work of the council would be speeded up to marked degree if, instead of the present good roads committee the county road system was controlled by a commission composed of one man or two men appointed by the Province, and one or two men appointed by the county, the members of the commission to hold office for five years whether the member of the commission is still a member of the County Council or not.

We have watched with a good deal of interest, the article on photography printed in the Review, and have picked up a good deal of information from them, being somewhat enthusiastic about pictures. But one thing seems to have been overlooked by the writer, to some extent. Most photo amateurs get the idea that the better their camera, the better the pictures they can take. There is some truth in this idea, but it usually fails to work out that way at first.

The more expensive the camera, the more "gadgets" it has. Once the user has mastered his camera, he can take much better pictures than he can with the little box camera with which he began his quest of the beautiful. But until he masters them, each new "gadget" presents just that much more opportunity for making mistakes. And enthusiastic amateur photographers are too apt to change their apparatus before they have mastered the details of each new purchase.

A friend of ours bought an outfit, some time ago, that sells when new for approximately $400. And, said to say, he exposed an average of six films to get one good one. He would pick the hard way of doing things.

One point to remember in buying an expensive camera outfit is that the greater the focal length of the lens, the more difficult it becomes to obtain really sharp, clear pictures, for the reason that the depth of focus decreases with the increase in the focal length. We bought, a year ago, an outfit with which it is almost impossible to miss, if you use anything like reasonable precaution. The lens length is only five and a half inches, while our luckless friend has a seven and a half inch lens and a telephoto lens, either of which is extremely hard to control, compared to our less expensive outfit.

ISLINGTON

At the recent annual business meeting of the Islington Volunteer Fire Brigade, Mr. V. R. Ide was re-elected trustee for three years. The other members are Dave Norwood and James Portch. Fred Mitchell is chief for 1937 and Howard Wellwood, deputy-chief. Reports showed a total of 37 fire calls during 1936, of which 13 were grass fires, and 2 were false alarms. Seven of the calls, while outside of the Islington fire area, were all in the township. It is estimated that a property value of $48,000 was saved by the work of the brigade during the year. This speaks volumes for the efficient service rendered by these men who volunteer their best at all hours, in all weathers, and in all hazards.

By all accounts it would appear that the nineteen-thirty-seven Etobicoke township council are having some extremely lively meetings. At the first meeting in January, Reeve Stephens, while in the chair, wrote a resolution, moved it himself, had it carried and refused to allow any debate on the question. The legality of this has been challenged. Then, too, some members of council strongly object to having the relief meetings held in public. It is felt (and we agree) that many people, through no fault of their own, are on the relief rolls. Then, why subject them to further humiliation by having their troubles aired by council, when a crowd of gossip mongers are present, filling every available space, even to packing the stairway.

A few cases of scarlet fever of a mild type are reported in this district. Most of the flu cases are of a severe type.

About ten days ago when all pavements were a sheet of ice, Miss Alma Cheyne of Islington had the misfortune of having her car skid round and round on Lambton bridge, and finally collided with a hearse, westbound. Miss Cheyne was hurried to the Western hospital, where she is still suffering from torn ligaments of the ankle. Both vehicles were badly damaged.

Centenary of Moody's Birth

On Sunday, Feb. 7th, a large congregation gathered in the Sunday school room of St. Andrew's Church to hear about Rev. G. L. McKay, D.D., the first missionary to North Formosa, from March 9th, 1872, to June 2nd, 1901. The obstacles he had to contend with were many and great. But he had courage, faithfulness and unwavering trust in the sure Word of God to stand against it all. But there was sometimes the low note of discouragement, and sometimes the clear note of hope. And as the leaves of the past were turned over and scene after scene was presented to our view, made immortal by this one christian missionary. And this great man was once a boy like many boys who were present on Sunday night, with no brighter outlook. Hero boys almost always make hero men. And George Leslie McKay's boyhood history may be of interest to some boys.

George Leslie McKay was born in Township of Zorra, county of Oxford, 1844. The early settlers in Zorra came mostly from the highlands of Scotland. And no fainthearted men and women were they who left behind them their old Scottish home and sailed away over the western sea to build homes for themselves in the unknown country, Canada. And in the midst of repeated disappointments in their new home in Zorra they did not forget the God whom they had worshipped amid Scottish hills. The home, the Church and the school were the great vitalizing force in their lives. Their house was a log cabin with two rooms, with thatch on the roof instead of shingles. The first public building in Zorra was a log Presbyterian Church, and it was in this home and Church pioneer life where young McKay got his schooling for the great work he was called to do in after life. These are his own words, Before I reached the age of ten years, the ever-blessed name was sweet and sacred to my ears. The paraphrase beginning with these words:

"When humble shephards watched their flocks,
In Bethlehem plains at night."

Repeated at my mother's knee on a quiet Sabbath evening, early made a deep impression on my soul. And while he was a mere lad a great evangelist came to Zorra, he was a man of remarkable power and great earnestness. Service was held in the log church for two weeks. The people came from far and near to hear him. The name of Burns was cherished in every home. And to be a missionary like Burns became the passion of young McKay's life.

On Sunday, Feb. 14th, Sunday school was well filled to hear about the work of another great evangelist, Dwight L. Moody. On Feb. 5th, 1837, at Northfield, Massachusetts, in a stone-mason's house, Dwight Moody was born. His father died when he was four years old. When he was eight years old a man who owned a mortgage on his mother's little farm, came to the house one day and told the widow that she must pay the mortgage or get out of the house. The poor woman was sick at the time. She prayed to God to help her. Then she wrote to her brother and he helped her by paying the interest on the mortgage for several years. At last by economy and industry the family was able to clear off the mortgage and retain their home. Many years afterwards young Dwight was able to secure the farm belonging to the man who once held the mortgage and on that farm is now located the school of Mount Herman, established for the education of young men. At the age of nineteen young Moody left the farm and went to Boston, where he entered the shoe store owned by his uncle. In Boston he was converted by the preaching of Dr. Kirk, at Mount Vernon Church. When Moody and Sankey first met, told by Sankey. In 1870 with two or three others, I was appointed a delegate to the International Convention of the Association to be held at Indianapolis that year. It was announced that Moody would lead a morning prayer-meeting at 7 o'clock. I was rather late and sat down near the door with a Presbyterian Minister, the Rev. Robert McMillan, a delegate from my own country, who said to me, Mr. Sankey, the singing here has been abominable. I wish you would start up something. I promised him to do so, and when opportunity offered I sang the familiar hymn, "There is a fountain filled with blood". The congregation joined heartily and a brighter aspect was given to the meeting. At the conclusion of the meeting Mr. McMillan said to me. Let me introduce you to Mr. Moody, and thus I met for the first time the man with whom, in the providence of God, I was to be associated for the remainder of his life, nearly thirty years.

Moody's first words to me after my introduction were: Where are you from? Are you married? What is your business? Upon telling him that I lived in Pennsylvania, was married, had two children, was in the government employ. He said abruptly, "You will have to give that up." I stood amazed. What for?, I exclaimed. "To come to Chicago to help me in my work," was the answer. When I told him I could not leave my business, he retorted, "You must, I have been looking for you for the last eight years." The next day I received a card from Mr. Moody, asking if I would meet him at a certain street corner that evening, at six o'clock. At that hour I was there with a few of my friends. In a few minutes Moody came along. Without waiting to speak he passed into a store near by and asked permission to use a large store box. He rolled the box into the street, and, calling me aside, asked me to get up on the box and sing something. "Am I a soldier of the cross" soon gathered a considerable crowd. After the singing, Mr. Moody got up on the box and began to talk. The working men were just going home from the mills and factories. When he had spoken for some twenty-five minutes, he announced that the meeting would be continued at the Opera House and invited the people to accompany us there. He asked me to lead the way, and with my friends sing some familiar hymn. This we did, singing as we marched down the street, "Shall we Gather at the River". The men with the dinner pails followed closely on our heels, instead of going home, so completely were they carried away by the sermon from the store box. The opera house was packed to the doors and Moody first saw all the workingmen were seated before he ascended the platform to speak. His second address was as captivating as the one delivered on the street corner, and it was not until the delegates had arrived for the evening session of the convention that Mr. Moody closed the meeting, saying, "Now, we must close, as the brethren of the convention wish to come in to discuss the question, "How to reach the masses." Here was a man who could successfully reach the masses while others were talking about it.

Mr. Moody closed one of his meetings in Montreal, in which he deeply touched his audience by a wonderfully effective portrayal of the Saviour's triumph over pain, sorrow, and death, culminating in this coming by reciting Miss Proctor's beautiful poem, "Coming". Many of the audience were moved to tears. Mr. Moody's own eyes were wet and he could scarcely speak for emotion.

The lines are as follows:

It may be in the evening,
When the work of the day is done,
And you have time to sit in the twilight,
And watch the sinking sun,
When the long bright day dies slowly,
Over the sea,
And the hour grows quiet and holy
With the thought of me.
When you hear the village children,
Passing along the street,
Among these thronging footsteps,
May come the sound of my feet,
Therefore I tell you watch,
By the light of the evening star
When the room is growing dusky
As the clouds afar.
Let the door be on the latch
In your home,
For it may be through the gloaming
I will come.

It may be when the midnight
Is heavy upon the land,
And the black waves lying dumbly,
Along the sand,
And moonless night draws close,
And the lights are out in the house,
When the fires burn low and red,
And the watch is ticking loudly,
Beside the bed,
Though you sleep tired out on your couch,
Still your heart must wait and watch,
In the dark room,
For it may be that at midnight
I will come.

It may be in the morning,
When the sun is bright and strong,
And the dew is glittering sharply,
Over the little lawn,
When the waves are laughing loudly,
Along the shore,
And the little birds are singing sweetly
About the door.
With the long day's work before you,
You rise up with the sun,
And the neighbours come in to talk a little,
Of all that must be done,
But remember that I may be the next,
To come in at the door,
To call you from your busy work,
For evermore,
As you work your heart must watch
For the door is on the latch,
In your room,
And it may be in the morning
I will come.
In the chill before the dawning
Between the night and morning
I may come.
Only a few more shadows
And I will come.

Dr. McKay died June 2nd, 1901. Mr. Moody died, Dec. 22nd, 1899. Their work for their master was far apart telling the old, old story, and their graves are far apart, but it can be truly said of them they rest from their labor and their works do follow them.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

TIME — The winter and early spring of A.D. 30.

PLACE — All the events here recorded took place in Bethany except the sojourn of Christ in Ephraim (vs. 54-57) which was near th wilderness.

John 11:23. Jesus saith unto her, Thy brother shall rise again.

Martha saith unto him, I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day.

Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth on me, though he die, yet shall he live;

And whosoever liveth and believeth on me shall never die. Believeest thou this?

"Jesus saith unto her." It is exceedingly difficult to say just the right word to those who are heartbroken in grief, and Jesus knew exactly what to say at the right time (Prov. 15:23). "When the Lord Jesus breaks the silence, he breaks that makes the silence deadly. "Thy brother shall rise again." Christ does not say that Lazarus would be raised again at once from the dead, but simply declares a fact which certainly Martha knew before Christ uttered it, as the next verse proves. Jesus spoke these simple words to draw out her own faith.

"Martha saith unto him, I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day." The words I know suggest disappointment; she had been told the same thing often during those four days, but the last day was far off; had the Master no other and fresher comfort than that?

"Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection, and the life:" This is the sixth great I am uttered by Christ in the record of John's Gospel. Christ is the resurrection because he himself experienced the great resurrection from the dead (John 2:19; 10:27) (though this was still in the future when he was talking to Martha); because, by his death he has fully atoned for our sins, and made our resurrection possible (Rom. 4:25); it is Christ alone who, by his coming again 1 Thess. 4:13-18), will raise up from the dead all those who believe in him (John 6:39, 40, 44, 54, 1 Cor. 6:14). "He that believeth on me, though he die, yet shall he live." "And whosoever liveth and believeth on me shall never die. Believest thou this? Faith in Christ who is eternal life binds our life to him, and, though believers die, in that their spirits are separated from their bodies, until the Lord returns, they themselves never die, i.e., they are never separated from the life of God, or lose their individuality.

"She saith unto him, Yea, Lord: I have believed that thou art the Christ, the Son of God, even he that cometh into the world." 8his is one of the great confessions of the Gospels. In believing as she did, she believed that everything that Christ had said about himself was true.

"And when she had said this, she went away, and called Mary her sister secretly, saying, The Teacher is here, and calleth thee." Jesus must have told Martha that he wanted to see her sister. How wonderful that Christ in one sentence can announce himself to be the very resurrection and life of believers of all ages, and, in the next sentence, can express his desire to see one individual friend whom he knew to be bowed in grief.

Mary therefore, when she came where Jesus was, and saw him, fell down at his feet, saying unto him, Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died." Whether or not the text will allow for such an interpretation, we must at least give great weight to the comment of such a profound Bible student as Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, when he compares the identical statements of these two sisters: I think that Martha meant Why did you not hurry when we sent for you? I think Mary meant, I wish it had been possible for you to be here, the same words with a different emphasis and intention.

"When Jesus therefore saw her weeping, and the Jews also weeping who came with her, he groaned in the spirit, and was troubled." Literally, we might read the last clause, he was vehemently affected in spirit and troubled himself. He was moved with holy indignation at sin, which caused all this dreadful desolation.

"And said, Where hath ye laid him? Then say unto him, Lord, come and see." He asks this question not for his own information, but that he might interest those to whom he was speaking in accompanying him to the tomb. I was for their benefit that Lazarus was raised.

"Jesus wept." As everyone knows, this is the shortest verse in the Bible. It describes what others saw, and intimates what Christ felt. Three times do we read of the tears of Jesus (Luke 19:41; 22:44; cf. Heb. 5:7). A Christian does not show himself Christ-like when he thinks it is evidence of a lack of faith should he weep because of the going of a loved one. It is humane so to do, and our Lord was human, as well as divine.

"The Jews therefore said, Behold how he loved him! But some of them said, Could not this man, who opened the eyes of him that was blind, have caused that this man also should not die? It is difficult to determine whether the remarks of the Jews here are the expression of a real question in their minds, or, in an indirect way, a severe criticism and rejection of the Lord Jesus. Their reference is to the miracle of the healing of the blind man which is recorded in the ninth chapter of John. It is significant that they do not speak of the other two miracles of the raising of the widow's son (Luke 7:11-15) and of he daughter of Jairus (Matt. 9:18-26, etc.).

"Jesus therefore again groaning in himself cometh to the tomb. Now it was a cave, and a stone lay against it." The stone which blocked up the entrance, kept aloof the beasts of prey. It was naturally of a size and weight not easily to be moved away (Mark 16:3).

Jesus saith, Take ye away the stone." (Cf. 20:1.) Jesus could have miraculously removed the stone, but what men were able to do so, he expected and commanded them to do so. "Martha, the sister of him that was dead, saith unto him, Lord, by this time th body decayeth; for he hath been dead four days." It is significant in the light of this passage to remember that Christ was not in the grave four days, but three days, and the promise was that his body should not see corruption (Psalm 16: 10; Acts 2:27,31; 34, 35).

unto thee, that, if thou believedst,

"Jesus saith unto her, Said I not thou shouldst see the glory of God?" The reference here is the statement recalled in verses 25 and 26. All that Christ ever did or said on earth glorified his Father (John 17:1).

"So they took away the stone. And Jesus lifted up his eyes, and said, Father, I thank thee that thou heardest me. And I knew that thou heardest me always: but because of the multitude that standeth around I said it, and they may believe that thou didst send me." The raising of Lazarus from the grave, forming as it did the crisis of his activity and the crowning point of it, could not but be the subject of prayer to his Father, more urgent prayer than even was Christ's wont, not so much that power to perform it should be granted, but that in and with the performance of it, the glory of the Father through the Son might be made conspicuous.

"And when he had thus spoken, he cried." The Greek word is nowhere else used in Christ. It is elsewhere used of the shout of a multitude (12:13, 18:40; 19:6, 15). This loud cry was perhaps the result of strong emotion or in order that the whole multitude might hear "With a loud voice." Bishop Westcott remarks: "The contract has in the muttered indications of sorcerers." "Lazarus, come forth." Christ speaks to the dead man, implying that he exists, though dead; that it is with him directly he deals, that he is not beyond the range of hearing the Son of God, not beyond the range of his dominion who has the keys of Hades and of death (Rev. 1:18). The authority of Christ, therefore, over the unseen world is hereby proclaimed. The great antagonist of life, death, and he that has power over death, are (Heb. 2:14) subject to him.

"He that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with grave-clothes." The Greek word here translated grave clothes appears nowhere else in the New Testament. It means the bandages which kept the sheet and spices around the body. with a napkin." The cloth was bound under the chin to keep the lower jaw from falling. "Jesus saith unto them, Loose him, and let him go." The miracle is accomplished, and yet how few the details concerning the very moment in which everyone would be most interested. Not a single word is recorded of how Lazarus looked when he came forth, or of what he said, or of his experiences during the days of living in another world, or of the feelings of Martha and Mary when he was restored to their home. This is the end of John's account of the miracle itself. All the rest of the chapter is occupied with the effect of this miracle upon the Jews.

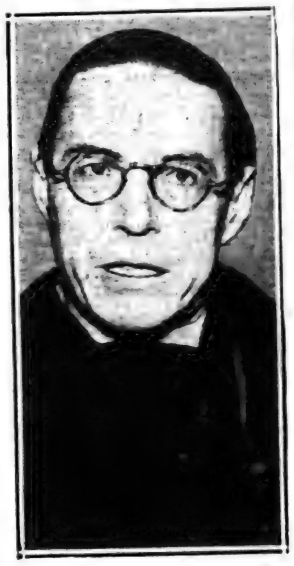
The Book Shelf

BY MAIR M. MORGAN

Shining Scabbard by R. C. Hutchinson (Oxford University Press, Ltd., Toronto) offers the reader a wealth of good reading. Those who enjoy the narrative style of Joseph Conrad and H. M. Tomlinson will be delighted with this poignant study of human nature pursued by an implacable destiny.

Here is superb characterization combined with stirring adventure. Colonel Severin, definitely of the ancien regime, fanatically determined to clean the stain from his military honor dominates the household at Baulon, where dwell his wife, sister and mother. Then Renee, his son Pierre's colonial wife, comes with her two children to live with them. Colonel Severin, in an endeavour to impres his grandson with the so-called militaristic code of courage, terrifies the sensitive lad. Renee endeavours to shield Armand from her father-in-law's tirades by keeping close to the two rooms allotted to them. The dust and decay and mould of this old house containing so many complex characters makes fascinating reading.



Combined with this, Pierre's desertion of the army and his flight to France involving much hardship and strange adventure, form an unforgettable picture. And when the war of 1914 explodes, the effect it has on all the Severins, the quiet town of Baulon, brings the book to a convincing end. You feel the surge of inevitability throughout. R. C. Hutchinson is a craftsman of words and atmosphere.

Love I Dare Not by Allene Corliss (Oxford University Press, Ltd., Toronto) is an entertaining story of literary and theatrical New York. You are charmed with Alec, the famous playwright, who has intended to marry Gina, the artist for years. Then Caroline, beautiful redhead from Maine, with stage ambitions arrives and Alec falls wildly in love with her.

Caroline meets Alec's nephew, Tommy and it is a case of love at first sight. Tommy, who has long admired Alec, feels he has no right to wreck Alec's happiness and decides to fade as gracefully as he can, from the picture.

How these four charming people untangle their involved hearts is told in a natural, gay manner. A good book to pick up for lighter moments.

Paris Sees Skirts At New High

The good word from Paris is that skirts are reaching new highs — that is, new highs for the last few years oberves Lisbeth. What womankind is worrying about is how high this year? Prayers are being offered that it won't be as high as the years 1925-6-7.

The present length is 12 or 13 inches from the floor for daytime skirts. A new rise is threatened — about five inches—bringing the total to 18 inches from the floor. This will expose the knee when milady is seated. In other words, knee action is seen likely in the new 1937 models of frocks as in automobiles.

At present the new bathing suits and play suits have very brief skirts. but the suits and dresses shown for resort and spring wear are the same length as we have been wearing this winter. In styling, there are plenty of pleats as well as gored skirts that swing. Narrow skirts usually are slit to permit freedom of movement.

Suits are to be tops in early spring it seems.

The superstition about ill fortune following anybody who walked under a ladder arose from the fact that when a ladder leans against a well, it forms a triangle, symbolical of the Trinity. A layman would feel himself debarred from walking through so sacred an arch.

Movie-radio gossip

By DOROTHY

Those august personages at National Broadcasting company's artists's service have put a new artist under contract and they are fairly swamped with mail asking about her. She is minnie, the singing mouse, who appeared on the National Barn Dance program, and who will probably be star of a program of her own soon. Minnie was trained by W. W. Lichty, a veterinary of Woodstock, Ill., who noticed that when he was playing the piano, one of the mice he raises for experimental purposes tried to follow the tune.

Paramount is going to defy the fates and attempt to make a picture that has long been a jinx in their studio. They started it last year with Marlene Dietrich, and when it was about half-finished, she walked out and declared that she would have none of it. So, Paramount engaged Margaret Sullivan to replace her, and then little Sullavan tripped over a cable and fractured her arm. Paramount still likes the story, once called "Hotel Imperial" and then "I Loved a Soldier" and also they like very much a young Viennese actress named Franciszka Gaal, so they are going to attempt to make it with her.

George Cukor, who will direct "Gone With the Wind," is determined to cast some girl who is not very well known in pictures in the lead. One faction at the studio wants Tallulah Bankhead, whose tests have shown her to be a brilliant actress but too old for the early part of the story. Others want Margaret Sullavan. But by far the most promising candidate is a very young and vivid actress on the New York stage named Louise Platt.

ODDS AND ENDS — The M-G-M studio is busily pairing off their stars, but just professionally, trying to achieve a combination as sure at the box-office as Gary Cooper and Jean Arthur have proved to be. They are going to try Jean Harlow with Robert Taylor, Joan Crawford with William Powell . . . . . Both Warner Brothers and Paramount are trying to get Noel Coward and Gertrude Lawrence to do their nine short plays, that are Broadway's biggest hits, as screen shorts. But a radio sponsor is topping their every bid . . . . Portland Hoffa always maneuvers an invitation to spend Sunday away from home, because that is the day her husband, Fred Allen, writes his radio script and he does not like to be disturbed.

HAD AGONISING PAINS IN HER BACK

Free from Pain Since Taking Kruschen

Like many other sufferers from backache and rheumatic ailments, this woman decided to try Kruschen Salts in a last attempt to obtain relief from pain. To her surprise, the pains did grow less, and in a few months the backache had disappeared. Having made sure of the results, she now writes as follows:—

"For about four months I had agonising pains in my back, and could not turn in bed. During that time I tried various remedies, but obtained no relief, and was seriously considering going into hospital. However, seeing a case similar to mine described in an advertisement for Kruschen, I thought I would try it, and was more than surprised to find the pain getting less. I have been taking Kruschen for four months, and would not be without it for anything. I must say I am free from those dreadful pains."—(Mrs.) B. C.

Kruschen is an excellent diuretic—that is, it helps to stimulate kidney functions. When kidneys are restored to healthy, normal action, poisonous waste is properly eliminated, the blood-stream is purified, and you get welcome relief from the dragging pains of backache.

Canada's Birds

Canada has probably 500 different kind of birds, and each different kind has a different travel schedule; in fact, some kinds scarcely travel at all and may be found even in the most severe winter weather in their accustomed haunts.

Canada values its bird travellers for the aesthetic pleasure they give by their presence by their beauty of color, and by their charm of song. They are an import control of insect pests in forests and garden, and some birds, are a major attraction for the hunters in the fall. Not only are the game bird kinds valuable for sport, but they are also valuable to the residents in remote parts of Canada as providing an important part of their food supply.

To protect its bird travellers which spend part of the year in Canada and part of the year in the United States, Canada almost 20 years ago, entered into a treaty with the United States which by co-operation between the two countries, extends protection to migratory birds by means of close seasons, bag limits, and the prohibition of unfair hunting methods. The birds do not belong to either country — they belong to both.

Canada's Migratory Birds Treaty of 1916 has been of major assistance in conserving this resource and has been hailed the world round as the first international treaty for bird protection. — Canada's Weekly.

Opportunities For Boys on Farms

The Gait Reporter says: George H. Corsan, swimmer and naturalist of Toronto, makes the suggestion that boys living on farms might find a profitable side line in the breeding of wild animals or birds. Mr. Corsan has specialized in growing nut-bearing trees at Islington and he has collected quite a lot of information on kindred subjects. He points out that raising wild game does not require much capital at the beginning, therefore any farm boy, in a district where waste land is available could start in a small way and eventually own a game farm that might have a revenue of $5,000 a year.

It is well known that many farm boys become tired of the monotony that is inescapable where routine work is concerned. Give these youngsters an undertaking such as raising pheasants, mink, foxes or wild ducks and in the majority of cases there would be new enthusiasm brought to bear on the task. It is pointed out that a boy could readily find waste land in almost any part of Canada. It might be on the farm owned by his parents or a neighbour. Wild game would always command good prices. There is some doubt at present whether it could be sold on the open market but there is an impression that such game raised on the farm can be sold without special permit. However, this is a matter that could be determined readily. The fur of wild animals is always in demand and the business of raising foxes, mink, marten, and rabbits for commercial purpose has been sufficiently exploited to establish that it can be done successfully.

Under conditions where the orthodox farming is somewhat discouraging in possibilities, the switch to game or fur-bearers might offer opportunities to enterprising and industrious youth of the rural areas. In any event it is an idea that might be studied by boys and girls as well.

Women In Music And Science

Writes the New York Times:

After having told women that they can never achieve greatness in music Jose Iturbi will probably take to the cyclone cellar. Verbal brickbats have already been hurled at him. Yet he said no more than physicians, anthropologists and psychologists have been saying for these many years — saying no more than that men and women are physically and temperamentally different, and that these differences account for man's supremacy in art and sport.

Of course women retort that they play musical instruments as well as men and argue that they have been held back in the arts because of the restrictions imposed by a man-made world. But who held them back from writing poetry? They give us lyrics but no great epics. Who told them not to paint? They give us portraits, landscapes, but no penetrating interpretations of stupendous historical events. They write plays, but no immortal tragedies, so that we have yet to hear of a Goethe or a Shakespeare among them. Their position as composers of music is especially weak and for thousands of years they were the instrumentalists of the home and the seraglio. But not yet has any feminine Beethoven or Wagner made her appearance.

In science too, the female record is none too good, though here it must be said that opportunity is lacking until the universities were open to both men and women. Mme. Curie and her daughter both earned the Nobel Prize. But no woman has contributed anything of importance to the theory of the atom or to cosmic physics. It may that a feminine Newton or Einstein may yet astound the world. But the philosophy of science as we know it is still dominated by man.

Along Canada's Mining Highway

Day by day brings its mine and oil news. British Columbia, Alberta, Northern Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario (West and East), Quebec, and occasionally Nova Scotia, give news of greater or lesser importance in the development of Canada's natural resources.

From British Columbia comes news that Base Metals Mining Corporation will resume work as early as possible in the Spring. The southerly continuation of the orebody mentioned in the last quarterly report was located shortly before closing down, states J. H. C. Waite, president, but there has not been sufficient work done to estimate its importance.

Alberta supplied wonderful news this past week with the bringing in of the fourth and so far largest well of the Turner Valley crude oil development. This B. & B. well is named after and largely owned by the two R. A. Browns—Senior and Junior. Several wells are now competing for next honours. Royalite's Sterling No. 4, Arca, Newfold, Westside and Dalhousie are scheduled to complete during the next month.

In the Patricia District, Western Ontario, Albany River, adjoining Pickle Crow—according to reports from the North had favourable underground developments. Well-informed mining opinion expects the Pickle Crow area to be intensively active this year.

The Long Lac Camp reported little news of importance. MacLeod-Cockshutt declined severely in the market on publication of an unfavourable report on underground values. Some well-informed mining people in close touch with this situation are optimistic on the long range view of this important mine.

Federal Kirkland, in the Kirkland Lake Camp, after preliminary difficulties, started drilling with two diamond drill rigs, launching the Company's important drilling programme. News should be continuous from this property during the next six weeks.

The Kerr Addison Gold Mines development at Larder Lake carries all the signs of a great thing. There are many high grade sections, but there is also a great tonnage of medium to low grade. It is expected that an initial 500-ton mill will be erected on Kerr Addison, this summer, for operation in the fall. New ore on the 250 foot level of Martin Bird was reported. A new incorporation with properties close to Kerr Addison, called Barber Larder Mines Limited, was reported. R. S. Potter, well-known mining man, is President.

A new financing deal on Oriole Mines, some miles to the west of Larder Lake, was reported.

In the Quebec area, Astoria Rouyn reported good values in shaft sinking.

Rouyn Reward in the Noranda area has drills set up and drilling commenced. Further east, good underground results are reported on the Bousquadilhac.

PROBLEMS OF EVERY DAY LIFE

By Dr. M. M. Lappin

SHOULD COUSINS MARRY?

The questions of kinships marrying has generally been considered a delicate one. It all depends upon two things, viz: (1) the nearness of the kinship, and (2) the family history on both sides.

I have been asked to advise on the proposed marriage of two first cousins. The young man is twenty eight and the girl is twenty three. Their mothers are sisters, and the young man's father and mother were cousins. I am not told whether first or second cousins. The family history on both sides appears to be very good, and the young couple are financially in a position to marry; but the girl's mother objects and, in deferance to her mother's wisher, she has been putting off and putting off.

This young couple have been courting for six years. They have come to mean much to one another and are quite wrapped up in each other. I believe it is really a matter of true love.

Well, from the psychologist's point of veiw, I can see no reason why they should marry, and particularly when the family history on both sides is good. I cannot conceive of ill effects resulting from their marriage and I would advise that the girl's mother give in, and allow the marriage.

Of course, as I have stated in this column before, I am not qualified to give medical opinion since I am a Christian Psychologist and not a medical man. In this instance, however, I have taken the trouble to consult a friend of mine who is a medical man and an authority on the matter. He agrees with my opinion and says he would give exactly the same advice. Moreover, he tells me that medical authorities could be quoted as supporting this opinion.

From the psychologist's viewpoint, more harm is likely to result from frustrating the purpose of these two young couple. Having kept company for so long, to put anything in the way of their love consummating in marriage now, would only tend to ruin two lives. I think that should be borne clearly in mind. If either of the parents intended to stop this friendship, the time was when it begun, and not now after six years when it has flourished into love.

Novel Inspires Feminine Styles

Leisurely Fashions of Old South Reflected in Spring Showings

CHICAGO.—The novel "Gone With The Wind," inspired fashions displayed recently in style shows at the annual spring and summer market.

Fluffy bouffant skirts are reminiscent of the more leisurely yesterdays in the "deep south." The styles have in some instances an "old fashioned girl" appearance.

The decidedly feminine motif was accented throughout the showings of suits, coats and silk dresses.

In keeping with the trend are the new net dresses. One simple girlish black net frock has an elbow length pleated cape that ties demurely under the chin. Another has a bolero jacket with touches of white lace at the throat. A more dressy number has vertical rows of ruching at the hem.

The redingote dress is a fashion leader. Nearly all the redingotes come to the dress hemline.

Skirts are about the same length as they were this winter for daytime wear. The emphasis continues on short sleeves.

In China's 1920 quake, 180,000 people lost their lives in a few minutes.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

How Many Pennies Your Child's Life?

Don't Try to "Save" on Home Remedies—Ask Your Doctor

There is one point, on which practically all doctors agree. That is: Don't give your child unknown remedies without asking your doctor first.

All mothers know this. But sometimes the instinct to save a few pennies by buying "something just as good" overcomes caution.

When it comes to the widely used children's remedy — "milk of magnesia" — many doctors for over half a century have said "PHILLIPS." For Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is the standard of the world. Safe for children.

Keep this in mind, and say "PHILLIPS' MILK OF MAGNESIA" when you buy. Comes now, also in tablet form. Get the form you prefer. But see that what you get is labeled "Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia." 25¢ for a big box of the tablets at drug stores.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM: Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Fewer From the Farm

The New York Times writes: — Statistics revealing only 61 members of Congress born or raised on a farm are hard to believe.. This would mean, for a body of 531 senators and representatives, that only one in nine is a farm boy. But that is obviously impossible. Assume a low average age of 40 years for members of Congress and we are back in the year 1890, when half the population of the country was on farms. At least half the babies of 1890 and half the future Congressman should have been born on farms.

The explanation is quite simple. A great many Congressmen who were born on farms did not mention the fact in their personal sketches for the Congressional directory. Farm ancestry is not the political asset it used to be. A great many lawmakers nowadays would no more boast of being born on a Thursday. We are getting urban-minded.

Fair Banquet Big Success

The banquet given in Oddfellow's Hall here Tuesday night under the auspices of the Toronto Township Agricultural Society, was a grand success. Nearly 200 people were present and enjoyed the refreshments and the program.

Wm. H. McCaugherty, president was toastmaster and he filled the position real well. After the toast to the King, he extended a hearty welcome to all present. He said there were three reasons for having this banquet. The first is that we were hungry for the kind of supper that the ladies of St AndrewsChurch have always been noted for serving. The second was that Mr. Eckardt of Toronto has donated a trophy to the Streetsville Fair Board to be presented to the competitor winning the most points at our Fair. The third reason is to create a feeling of good will between you people and the Fair Board.

Streetsville Fair has been going on now for about 45 years and has never been known to pay less than 100 cts on the dollar in prize money won by exhibitors, which, I believe, speaks well for the officers of the Board and for the support of the community.

It has been suggested by some that there are too many fairs and that we should have just one fair in each county. However, we feel that most of these suggestions come from around Brampton. But times do change and we may have to give something like this a thought later.

However, your directors have decided to hold a fair again this year and we would like to take this opportunity of asking for your co operation to make this Fair one that you will be proud of.

Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture, congratulated the ladies upon the excellence of the repast. He knew they were good providers because he had partaken of a supper they had served about three weeks ago.

Speaking of Fairs, he said we are better by having a number of small Fairs than one big one. If the show can be made to pay, it should be kept going. He advised the Board to keep out of debt if they want to succeed. He said we would have a few years of good times and then the bad years would start again. Don't speculate. Don't buy if you cannot pay. Farming is a gamble, but the biggest drawback is the weather. Let us work: there's no need to join the ranks of the unemployed. The factories may shut down for a time but you can't shut down a farm. We must keep working. Canada is the best farming country in the world—save Scotland—and we should keep on farming. We are going to have better and purer seed. Farmers should be careful in buying seed. It's going to be higher this year—so is live stock. If you are going to raise good beef, feed them. There are only two countries in the world where oats will grow 100 bus to the acre and weigh 48 lbs to the bus—Canada and Scotland. In some places it takes six months to grow oats but in the Peace River district they can be produced in 60 days. Rainy River is the best district for growing alfalfa. It used to thrive well around here but not now. New Liskeard is a good place to grow seed grain. If you cannot grow the best seed grain in Peel County, there is something wrong with either the soil or the man himself. The Dept. intends to institute a soil test here. Essex county grows 100 bus. oats per acre, and it weighs 42 lbs to the bus. Streetsville Fair has shown that this is a good grain-growing section. He advised the Fair Board to arrange for two or three public meetings during the year, and speakers would be sent out from the Dept. to address and advise the farmer on vital farm subjects.

The government will spend thousands of dollars on investigations to make farming pay. The warble fly must be put out of business and a lot of other things done to help the farmer make a success of his life work.

Great Britain is a large consumer of farm produce. They are great cheese eaters, and Canadian cheese is in great demand, so much so that they prefer it to that made in any other country, and pay 2c. more for it than New Zealand cheese, which is also a good article. There is also a good demand for Canadian butter and England is now taking four times as much as she did formerly.

Eternal diligence is the price of success. The farmer who is diligent never shirks a job.

He also paid our boys and girls a compliment when he said they were the best of any country in the world.

Miss B McDermand, Director of Women's Institutes for Ontario, also gave a fine address for the ladies dealing with work in the home on the farm.

A pleasant part of the evening was when Mr. Eckardt, head of the A J. H. Eckardt Co. Toronto, presented Jack Fraser, RR3, with the handsome prize, a silver tea service, which he won at the Fair by securing greatest number of points in all classes.

Others who contributed to the program were: Miss Mary Crozier pianist: Earl Tobias, mouth organ solos: Donald Spence, six year old entertainer and comedian: W.C. Ure slight of hand artist: and Mrs Mac Naughton, eloutionist.

Addresses were also made by Mr C. D. Graham, District Rep., Dept of Agric., Brampton: and Mr Victor Hall, Reeve of Trafalgar. Mr Graham promised every possible assistance by his office, to the Fair and said he would be at the Board's command whenever called upon.

The Officers and Directors worked hard to make the banquet a success and are to be congratulated upon the splendid result of their efforts.

It was one of the best banquets we have ever attended, and we are sure the people of the district will want the Fair Board to make this an "annual" event.

Mr. Ecardt said he was here 21 years ago and presented a silver tea service to Miss Wolfe (now Mrs. W J Cooper) as best lady driver.

Mr. Eckardt congratulated Mr. Fraser on winning the prize. He said it would also serve as a gift for their silver wedding, and hoped he and his wife would live to celebrate their golden anniversary.

Mr. Fraser is a past president of the County of Peel Junior Farmers and is a prominent farmer

ERINDALE

Erindale U.F.O. club transacted approximately $6,000 of business last year, it was reported at Thursday night's annual meeting of the club at the home of Harry Lee. Despite adverse weather conditions during the past summer, the volume of business done by the executive of the club remained practically the same as that of the preceding year. Arrangements are being considered for the inception of a series of study groups on agricultural subjects. Omar Turney was appointed president, with T. R. Maxwell, secretary, and Harry Lee, treasurer.

SNIDER'S

A meeting of the official quarterly board of Trafalgar United circuit was held at Wesley church Tuesday, Feb. 2nd, at 2 p.m. A goodly number was present, each of the three churches being well represented. The treasurer's report showed all departments to be in a prosperous condition, each church having a balanced account. By an unanimous vote of the board it was decided to increase Mr. Lovering's stipend $90, making it $1710, instead of $1620 as at present. The M. & M. objective was reached—a 10% increase over last year's givings. The parsonage indebtedness has been lessened considerably during the year. A very cordial vote of appreciation was extended Mr. and Mrs. Lovering, accompanied by an invitation to remain in the circuit. This invitation was accepted. A marked feeling of optimism and co-operation pervaded the meeting.

Hears all, Sees all and Knows Nutting

Would you be interested to know if—Mrs So and So had her new coat paid for or if Mr. Duffy stayed sober over the week end ?

You know a little backfence chat If you are not interested, then you should be to know that the Juvenile Hockey team are paying their way up to the present— but only with the greatly appreciated assistance of a few town and out—of—town supporters who made it possible for them to do so. At the present time the average game is approximately $5 50, which sum covers entrance and transportation expenditures to the game And of course a team participating in a game must be equipped with certain necessities such as pads etc, which again lets down the swelling of our club wallet So friends —if you have not already sent your subscription to the stricken victims of the Ohio flood areas or the Salvation Army Fund, then is there any substantial reason why you cannot remember your home town boys who are in need of a helping hand ? There are now 12 new brightly colored sweaters ready for distribution among the boys that were donated to the club by two Toronto supporters who after seeing the boys in action felt they were certainly worthy of their kind support

So friends, if this is the honest opinion of Torontonians, then why not let it be your opinion, and do not hesitate to send your donation to the Club

If you are curious enough a statement showing the exact figures of the Club's expenditures up to the present will be placed in The Review but only by signed request.—P H R

At Willowdale Arena Thursday night—Streetsville Juveniles were defeated by Rhodes United with a score of 3—2. At the end of the first period the score was 3—0 in favor of Rhodes United. In the second period M Rodick and J Rice netted a goal each for Streetsville.

On Monday night our team met New Toronto Crusaders at Willowdale with a final score of 2—0 for the Crusaders. Our only remark on this game is that the score does not indicate the best team Our boys had little difficulty in getting thru the enemy lines but their goalie stopped every shot

The dance held by the club last Friday night was not as big a success as it might have been but all expenses were met.—Many thanks to our supporters

PRINT "DODGING"

Pictures may be improved during enlarging by controlling tones with a "shadow brush."

WHEN an advanced amateur or professional photographer shows some of his beautiful salon pictures to a group of interested but uninitiated people, some of them are sure to ask questions such as these:

"How in the world do you get those lovely tones? How did you make this picture so dark in this part and light in that? How did you get the soft effect in this one? How did you get the light to shine so brightly on the principal object and scarcely at all on the rest of the picture? How do you make these objects in the shadowy parts dim yet visible; and objects in the light parts to stand out so distinctly? My camera won't take pictures like that."

And the cryptic answer is likely to be, "Neither will mine, exactly."

"Then, how do you get all these different gradations in shadow tones? These pictures are like paintings. Do you touch up the negative with something?"

And the answer will be, "No, I do not touch up the negative; I dodge the print."

"Dodge the print? What do you mean—'dodge?'"

Then comes an explanation of a method whereby a very ordinary picture, as recorded on the negative, may often be transformed into a work of art in the process of making an enlarged print of it. "Dodging," in the slang of photography, means interrupting some of the light passing through the negative to the sensitized paper during the printing of the picture. "Dodging" may be done in contact printing, but more effectively in making enlargements. It is done by holding something opaque between the light source and the paper, such as a piece of cardboard, in such a way as to keep the light from striking a certain area for a certain portion of the time. Thus, that part which continues to receive the full light will print darker than the part from which the light is held back. In other words, the light is caused to "dodge" a certain area.

Virtually, the shadow from the cardboard in the hands of the photographer is used as a paint brush. It serves to light the dark parts. In another way, a print is "dodged" by using a piece of cardboard with a hole in it. The hole lets through a pencil of light, which is manipulated over the surface of the paper and serves to darken the light parts. The intelligent use of a "shadow brush" or "light brush" in this fashion requires a preliminary study of the negative or a contact print as it would ordinarily register in order to discover where "dodging" would improve the picture. Often it means a number of trials before the result is satisfactory.

Amateurs who do not enlarge their own negatives may suggest to their photo finisher how they think a print may be improved by "dodging," and ask him for a special job on it. Of course, the greater satisfaction comes from doing this work yourself. But that is the way many of the lovely effects we see in salon photographs are obtained.

STAR RUBY

By Louise Jerrold

Albertine Tevana, shopgirl, falls in love with Dennis Maxwell, jewellery salesman, but is bothered by his mysterious actions. He speaks once of being on the lookout for a man with a drooping eyelid. Albertine's rich great-aunt Celia Tevana invites her for a visit. Before she leaves, Dennis gives her a star ruby to keep for him. At her aunt's estate are two other guests—Countess Yelena Loupakoff and her brother, Count Michael. Albertine is stunned when the old lady gives her a pearl necklace. Dennis unexpectedly arrives to show some rubies to Aunt Celia, and pays ardent attention to the Countess. The houseman, Bates, who always wears dark glasses, gets drunk one evening, and Albertine discovers him in the kitchen without his glasses on. He has a drooping eyelid!

CHAPTER VIII

In her room, Albertine tried to read, but when her eyes had travelled over a page three times without making sense, she tossed the magazine aside and went to the window. The garden lay bathed in moonlight.

Deciding to go out for a breath of air, she slipped downstairs and quietly let herself out of the house. She crossed the front lawn to the rose garden, and sat down in a small arbor.

Should she tell Denny about Bates? But she wasn't sure of what she had seen. Besides, Denny was probably still dancing with Yelena. She could faintly hear the strains of the radio music.

A quick pain stabbed through her as she thought of Denny and Yelena. He had devoted himself to the attractive Russian practically every minute. Torturing thoughts circled in Albertine's mind.

She sprang up to go back to the house, and walked straight into Michael's arms.

"Ah, I caught you, my lovely one," he murmured. "The house was empty without you. Exquisite child!" His arms crushed her to him. "I am mad about you!"

She tried to push him from her, but he clasped her tighter while, with one hand, he cupped her face and brought her lips nearer—nearer to his . . .

"Don't—oh, please don't!" she gasped, straining away from him.

"Oh, there you are, Miss Tevana." Dennis' voice sounded behind them. Albertine wanted to cry out with relief.

Michael, with an angry mutter, released her and stepped back.

"I have a message for you, Miss Tevana," Dennis said, then turned to Michael. "I believe your sister is looking for you."

The Russian, with a formal bow to Albertine, strode stiffly off towards the house.

Dennis' eyes looked straight into Albertine's. "I was standing at a window and saw you go into the garden. Then I missed him and, like the bright boy that I am, put two and two together. But perhaps I was taking too much for granted?"

"Oh, no, Denny!"

"Then you're not sorry that I—"

"Oh, Denny, if you hadn't come—He was so disgusting!" She covered her face with her hands.

Gently he drew her hands away and tipped back her head. Then, almost before she realized it, she was where she wanted to be—in his arms.

"Blue Eyes, my loveliest," he whispered chokily.

His lips found hers and, for a moment, she knew nothing but the ecstasy of her love for him. And he did love her!

Suddenly, he let her go.

"I'm sorry, Albertine," he muttered awkwardly. "I'm a fine one, snatching you away from that Russian bum, then staging the same act myself."

Again! Again he was apologizing for kissing her! She stood very still. Staging the same act! So it was only an act. Did both Michael and Denny think her so easy, that they could kiss her, make love to her, when it didn't mean a thing? Anger flamed within her.

She felt Denny's hand on her arm.

"I know you must be thinking pretty black things of me right now," he said, with a straight-forwardness that she longed to believe, yet couldn't. "But I can't explain things—yet. You'll just have to take me on trust for a little while longer."

She had to harden herself against the seeming honesty in his eyes. She felt a tear inside, but she managed to say lightly:

"Aren't you bold to think I'd take you at all!"

She unclasped his fingers from her arm and started toward the house. He seized her by the shoulder and swung her about.

"Don't be like that, Albertine! Can't you—won't you promise to be friends until I work this thing out? I know I must seem to—talk in riddles but"—he thrust out his jaw—"unless I'm a bigger fool than I think, I'm beginning to see a streak of light in the darkness.

Their eyes met. His pleaded. Hers finally softened. She sighed and made a helpless little gesture with her hands.

"You'll still be friends with me—stand by me and trust me in this thing until I can clear things up?" he urged.

She nodded. He hesitated a moment before he spoke again.

"Then—as one friend to another—will you do me a favor?"

Her heart answered, "I'd go through fire for you, darling," but aloud she said flippantly, "Anything to oblige a gentleman."

He came very close to her, and his voice was low.

"Get your aunt to go for a drive with you tomorrow afternoon. Tell her the fresh air will do her good and—Blue Eyes, give me your pearls.

Albertine stared at him. Get her aunt out of the way?

"Don't look at me like that, Albertine, sweetheart. It isn't what you think. Soon—sooner than you expect—

With trembling fingers, she unclasped the pearl necklace and dropped it into his hands, then ran across the garden and into the house as though a pack of evil spirits were chasing her.

Back in her room, she undressed and made ready for bed. But she was too upset, too troubled for sleep. She slipped a coolie coat over her pajamas and settled herself in the chaise lounge beside the window.

Then, for the second time that day, voices floated up to her from outside. She knew those voices without peering out. But, against her will, she found herself rising and staring out into the moonlit night. In the shadows of the catalpa, she could see Denny and Yelena standing close together. She heard Yelena's musical laugh, saw her make a protesting gesture with her hands. Then, the two passed from sight.

Albertine sat by the window a long time, later heard Michael, Yelena and Denny come upstairs and pass along the hall. Still she sat there rigidly. Sleep was out of the question. Perhaps there was some book in those huge cases in the library that would make her drowsy.

She left the room and had reached the top of the stairs, when a sharp outcry stopped her. There was the sound of a scuffle—an overturned chair . . . She gripped the staircase railing. What was happening? Where—

Then she knew. The sounds were coming from the room next to Michael's. Denny's room!

Woman's World

Hearts and Flowers

St. Valentine's Day is one day in the year when the whole world dares to be sentimental. Most of the time we are business-like and though the sentiment may be there, it isn't shown. But this day is set aside for sending and receiving love tokens, lacey cards with foolishly sweet rhymes, and flowers and candy for lucky sweethearts from their best beaux. So don't let your best beau down on this day whether he be fiance, husband or son. Make this a special occasion by putting your love token on the table in the form of something good to eat and thus take the shortest and surest route to a man's heart.

Lady Baltimore Cake is something really special and seems to convey all the dignity and charm of long-ago times when the ladies in full skirts and ringlets which we see pictured on Valentine cards of today, actually lived.

LADY BALTIMORE CAKE

3 cups sifted flour.
3 teaspoons baking powder.
½ cup butter or other shortening
1½ cups sugar
1 cup milk
½ teaspoon lemon extract
4 egg whites, stiffly beaten.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Add lemon extract. Fold in egg whites quickly and thoroughly. Bake in two greased 9-inch layer pans in moderate oven (375 Deg. F.) 25 to 30 minutes. Spread filling between layers and frosting on top and sides of cake.

LADY BALTIMORE FILLING AND FROSTING

1½ cups sugar
½ teaspoon light corn syrup
2-3 cup boiling water
2 egg whites, stiffly beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla.

Combine sugar, corn syrup and water. Bring to a boil, stirring only until sugar is dissolved. Boil rapidly, without stirring, until a small amount of syrup forms a soft ball in cold water, or spins a long thread when dropped from tip of spoon (240 Deg. F.). Pour syrup in fine stream over egg whites, beating constantly. Add flavoring. Continue beating with rotary egg beater 10 to 15 minutes, or until frosting is cool and of consistency to spread. Use wooden spoon when too stiff for beater. (Frosting may be tinted delicately pink with vegetable coloring if desired) For the filling, take 6 chopped figs, ½ cup chopped raisins and ½ cup chopped pecan or walnut meats, add enough of the frosting to make a filling that will spread easily. Spread between layers of cake. Spread frosting on top and sides of cake and decorate with pecan or walnut halves.

As St. Valentine's Day falls on Sunday this year, many parties will be planned for Saturday night. If you are expecting a gay young crowd to your home, here are some suggestions that will add to their fun and add to your reputation as a hostess.

Keep the refreshments in harmony with the decorations. Lacey paper doilies can be used to place the food on, as well as to decorate the table. For a dessert, dry quick-setting jelly. Strawberry or cherry are ideal for flavor as well as color. Just dissolve the quick-setting jelly powder in warm water and pour into heart shaped moulds or let cool in shallow pan and then cut into heart shapes. Top these ruby-red jelly hearts with whipped cream and you have a simple, time-saving delicious dessert.

Small heart-shaped cakes frosted in white and outlined with little red cinnamon candies, small cup cakes topped with long-shredded canned coconut tinted pink and heart-shaped cookies are just a few of the many dainty foods which you can serve.

SUGAR COOKIES

3 2-3 cups sifted cake flour
2½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2-3 cups butter or other shortening.
1½ cups sugar
2 eggs, unbeaten
1 teaspoon vanilla
4 teaspoons milk.

Sift flour once, measure, add the baking powder and salt, and sift again. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, creaming well. Add eggs, one at a time, beating thoroughly after each. Add vanilla. Then add flour, alternately with milk. Chill. Roll 1-8-inch thick, cut with floured heart-shaped cookie cutter; sprinkle wtih red colored sugar. Bake on greased baking sheet in hot oven (400 Deg. F.), 9 minutes, or until done. Makes 10 dozen cookies.

Drive to Increase Trade Commences

Hon. Vincent Massey Visits Northern Ireland in Goodwill Tour

BELFAST.—Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner to the United Kingdom, launched the Northern Ireland regional drive of the "Canada Calling" campaign which seeks to increase the exchange of goods between the Dominion and the British Isles.

Address ing a luncheon of the Chamber of Commerce, the high commissioner said he was gratified that trade between Ulster and Canada had been improving and mentioned Canada's increased imports of linen goods, a gain that had amounted to 20 per cent. of the 1932 total.

He said he hoped the people of the United Kingdom would endeavour to visit Canada in numbers similar to those in which Canadians visit the United Kingdom, because knowledge of the country and its people would strengthen the commercial and political bonds already developed.

During the luncheon greetings were exchanged by telephone between Rt. Hon. J. M. Andrews, Minister of Labor for Northern Ireland, and Hon. Norman Rogers, Minister of Labor for Canada. The transatlantic greeting and Mr. Massey's address were broadcast over the British Broadcasting Corporation's Northern Ireland facilities.

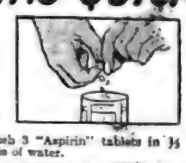
Calendar Oddities

The year 1937 appears to contain rather more than the usual number of calendar curiosities, or should we say "absurdities"? As compared with 1936 there will be three fewer working days in the first quarter, and two more in the second. And the year ending on March 31, 1937, will have contained two Easters, whereas that ending on the same date in 1938 will have had none!



Such discrepancies supply ammunition for advocates of calendar reform, upon which a resolution is being brought before the League of Nations Council this month. Common sense calls for four equal quarters in a perpetual twelve-month year.

But some of us prefer to have the calendar as it is, just as we prefer a rambling road, with its round-the-bend surprises, to a straight one all mapped out and monotonous.—The New Outlook.

Carries a Moral

A story in the New York Times seems to carry a moral of some kind for thoughtless drivers.

As the traffic light turned on a busy corner, a frail old woman started to cross the street with a crowd. A big car brusquely nosed its way around the corner. While others scattered out of the way, the old woman stood still, evidently incapable of movement.

Just as the car seemed about to hit her, a silk-hatted man, with a cane, limped quickly to her side and swung her out of harm's way. At the same moment there was a sharp report, and the tire of the car went flat.

Talking to a nearby policeman, a few minutes later, a reporter learned that a similar incident had been happening nearly every morning, and that the silk-hatted man figured in each of them.

Following up the story, the reporter learned that the man was a former diplomat, whose foot had been crushed by an automobile; and that it was not a cane he carried, but a sword stick.

The forgotten pedestrian, who has to keep out of the way of imperious drivers, should be glad to know he has an avenger.—Guelph Mercury.

"Silly" Is Banned

But it seems rather a pity, nevertheless that Mr. Speaker should have ruled "silly" out of order. The amenities and the dignities for ever, of course—but really, the House of Commons ought to be of sterner stuff than to take at a little plain speaking in debate. Better, surely, that men's arguments should be called silly than that they themselves should be exhibited by Mr. Speaker as sissies in the sight of the nation.

Mr. Blackmore says he will not use the word again. "All right, Mr. Speaker," he said, "I have several others just as good." But he is boasting of course. There is no better word for silliness than "silly." That is the trouble about censoring the apt word.—Vancouver Province.

Sign It Clearly

Next to an anonymous letter in our morning mail, we are most annoyed by communications bearing signatures which no one could read . . .

It is customary for the average stenographer in a business office to type the name of the Big Boss below his scrawl, which is very helpful to the puzzled reader. Sometimes one may guess at the name by checking over the officers designated on the letterhead. Too often the reader is left wholly in the dark.

It is certainly a breach of courtesy on the part of any letter writer to so scrawl his own name that it is illegible to the recipient of the communication. If those who write letters are incapable of writing their names clearly, they should at least be considerate enough to have it typewritten or printed in block letters.—Cornwall Standard-Freeholder.

A Woman of Eighty

She is a woman of eighty. In her younger days she played the piano well enough to give lessons to others. Today she is still giving lessons, not because she is required to by need of money to sustain her; far from it, for the reason is she is helping others who have not the means to pay for tuition. Two little girls, daughters of a neighbor, were eager to know how to play the piano, but the depression had left their parents with little better than sufficient to pay for the necessities of life, and piano lessons were out of range. So the neighbor of eighty years comes into the picture. She brings the little girls to her home and gives them lessons regularly, with the result that the gift to play the piano is not to be lost to these children of the depression years. —Lethbridge Herald.

Still To Come

There is food for thought in the perfectly accurate contention of a writer in the Philadelphia Messenger that the world has yet to see either a Christian country or a Christian city. A Christian city, he says, would be a city without slums, without jails, without poverty, without unemployment, without injustice, without drunkenness, without vice, without jealousy, without hatred, without bitterness. A Christian country, the same writer holds, would be a country without guns, without luxury for the few and hunger for the many, without bribery, without graft, without oppression.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

Income of Farmers

—An item in the New York Times tells of the income tax received from small French farmers. "The French peasant, as a rule, keeps no books," comments the article. That makes the news all the more interesting, for the government has to rely mainly on the word of the taxpayer. "One French farmer confessed last year to a profit of $17,000 on the year's farming." Others acknowledge making as high as $10,000 a year.

The majority, however, report profits ranging all the way from $100 to $1,000 a year, anything above the latter figure being exceptional. Experience of farmers in this province would appear to be much like their cousins' in France, anything above a $1,000 a year being exceptional—at least according to income tax returns.—Edmonton Journal.

Badly Needed

The search for the non-glaring headlight and the 100 per cent. efficient glare-eliminating windshield must go on. The reward for the discovery will be fewer traffic accidents, thousands of lives saved annually and faster and more comfortable night driving.—Port Arthur News-Chronicle.

A Good Season

Unless the devastating floods of the mid-section of the United States have an adverse effect on tourist travel, it is confidently expected that North Bay district and other sections of Northern Ontario will enjoy even a greater business in the coming Summer season. Visitors to the Dionne babes will number 750,000, according to an estimate by persons in the know, which means a 30 per cent. gain over the number counted at the hospital last year.—North Bay Nugget.

Men Canny Losers

A survey of department stores, buses, trams and street cars has demonstrated that women lose more articles than men. As a matter of fact the male of the species also mislays many things, but he knows enough to do that in the home, and then have every one else in the household hunt for them.—Brantford Expositor.

Music For The People

Music is no longer a luxury or the almost inaccessible field of a few gifted enthusiasts. It has suddenly become part of the stuff of daily life—and a very important part. As Lord Horder said recently: "I envy musicians because they 'doctor' thousands of people at one time when, as a physician, I can only attend to one patient at a time."—Winnipeg Tribune.

A Judge Defends

The moving picture industry has received so many thrusts from magistrates, judges and social workers that it is refreshing to find no less a personage than Lord Hewart, Chief Justice of England, coming to its defense. He was addressing a dinner of moving picture people and remarked that while there was a fear that films of passion and crime influenced the young people to become killers, blackmailers, thieves and to lead frivolous lives, he went back to the days of his youth and recalled that while he, and doubtless millions of other boys and young men, enjoyed stories about pirates, robbers and criminals of all kinds, they had nearly all grown up normal and decent living people. Many of these stories, he said, had become classics of literature, including, for example, Oliver Twist, wherein appears the greatest burglar of all, Bill Sikes, yet the piety and virtue of the readers had been undimmed.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

THE EMPIRE

Big Ben

The most familiar voice in the world today is that of no mortal orator, whether king, peer, or commoner, but of a robot dictator. The deep-cheated tones of Big Ben, thanks to the B.B.C., reverberate daily through the length and breadth of the globe.

Londoners accept those brazen accents as a matter of course, though many of them have paid their pence to gaze through the telescope by Boadicea's chariot on Westminster bridge, and watched Big Ben's giant paws visibly counting off eternity on his colossal dial. But, as the B.B.C.'s oversea correspondence testifies, to kinsmen in distant corners of the Empire the star performer on the ether is Big Ben.

Kipling's banjo may claim to be "Town and all that ever went with evening dress," but Big Ben, for dusky forelopers of the Empire, is London's roar personified. His voice is that of the Empire's muezzin, daily summoning the scattered kinsmen to thoughts and memories of the Old Country.—London cor. Ottawa Journal.

Motor Deaths in Canada 1,200 Year; 1,600 Maimed

Dominion Automobile Safety Conference Considers the Measures To Reduce Automobile's Tragic Toll.

OTTAWA.—Self-preservation led to the formation of the Dominion Automobile Safety Council, T. Taggart Smyth, director of the council, and Montreal banker, told the National Safety Conference here.

The conference, first of its kind held in Canada, was called to promote the interests of safety on streets and highways.

During the past 10 years, said Mr. Smyth, more than 1,200 persons have been killed annually and 1,600 maimed. "Self-preservation explains the why of the council's birth, as we are each and every one of us personally and intimately interested in the work that the council has set out to do, namely, to make our public highways safe for ourselves and particularly for our women and children."

Public Enemies

Others who spoke included Senator Emile Vinck, vice-president of the Belgian Senate, Clifford W. Ham, Chicago, executive director of the American Municipal Association, and W. M. Philpott, Toronto magazine editor.

Mr. Philpott characterized the man behind the wheel as "public enemy number one in terms of highway carnage." Every year, he said, the people of Canada pay out for automobile accidents the equivalent of our annual investment in new motor cars.

"The steering wheel sends history skidding into reverse," he remarked. "Veneer of century-old civilization sloughs off in the twinkling of an eye. Charming Dr. Jerkyll becomes barbarous Mr. Hyde. Delightful drawing-room hostesses become deadly amazons intent on 'beating the red light' at all hazards. Meek little men who normally submit to life's minor roles become towering Napoleons of destruction with the power of 80 horses underfoot."

Curb Speed

Mr. Smyth summed up the aims of the council as follows:

Curbing the speed mania at all costs and the enforcement of the laws governing the slowing down on hills and at curves.

Reform of the system of granting drivers' licenses.

Obligatory periodical inspection of automobiles.

Obligatory carrying of lights by all vehicles using the highways after dark.

Further safeguarding of level crossings.

Simplification and co-ordination of traffic laws and road and drivers' signs.

Educational campaign through pulpit, platform, the radio, the press and the screen, urging respect for the laws of the road and observance of its courtesies.

Promotion of a system of recognition for careful drivers that would be Dominion wide.

Compiling of statistics and other data; issuing safety literature and furnishing public libraries therewith.

Promotion of a Dominion safety week, and acting as a connecting link between all safety bodies in Canada, having for their object the protection of human life and property on the highways.

News In Review

Up To Province

OTTAWA — Houses at a low rental was urged in the House of Commons by Denton Massey, (Cons., Toronto-Greenwood), but his motion for a national housing plan for slum elimination ran into difficulties in the matter of jurisdiction following upon the recent ruling of the Privy Council.

Hon. Charles Dunning, Minister of Finance, contended that the problem which Mr. Massey raised lay entirely within the Provincial jurisdiction.

Said Mr. Dunning—"The Federal authority has been "put in it's place" in respect to its powers recently by a very high authority.

He admitted that, until recently there had been little in the act to encourage the building of lower-cost homes. Since the act came into force, the average price of homes built was $4,861. Due to recent changes designed to encourage lower-priced homes, however, this average had dropped to about $2,400 and the scheme was growing.

Soviet Likes Ontario Seed

TORONTO — Fifteen thousand bushels of Ontario variegated alfalfa seed, valued at more than $250,000, was purchased by the Soviet Governmen last year for use in Russia, according to an announcement made during the annual meeting of the Ontario Field Crop and Seed Association, here.

Ten years ago two bushels of the Ontario variegated seed were sent to Russia, which also secured United States Grimm and Western Canada Grimm for experimental purposes, a delegate announced.

"And," he added, "the Russian Government last year purchased 15,000 bushels of Ontario variegated alfalfa. The purchase was of considerable importance to our business."

Rules Kissing Bible Is Not Necessary

GODERICH — When Campbell Grant, solicitor jumped to his feet and protested a witness had not been properly sworn, in that she had not kissed the Bible, Judge T. M. Costello ruled that kissing the Book was not necessary.

"Witness, in taking the oath, does not have to actually kiss the Book," his Honor maintained. "In raising the Book in the right hand," he said to the witness, "you have solemnly sworn to tell the truth."

Coronation Film By Plane

LONDON — A special transatlantic airplane flight is being planned in order to hasten delivery to North American motion picture theatres of Coronation films.

Negotiations are proceeding with Amy Mollison, Beryl Markham and other distinguished pilots to undertake a flight to New York, according to Sir Gordon Craig, General Manager of the company which has been granted exclusive rights to film the ceremonies on May 12th (British Movietone News).

Copies of the films will also be despatched to North America on the dirigible Hindenburg, scheduled to leave Frankfurt, Germany, late on the day of the Coronation. They will be flown to Frankfurt.

Mrs. Mollison and Mrs. Markham, both of whom have already conquered the North Atlantic by air, have indicated their willingness to attempt the flight, it was stated.

Canada will receive its copies of the films from New York by fast service.

To Trap Burglars

NEWMARKET — Mayor S. J. Boyd last week enthusiastically endorsed a scheme submitted by a resident whereby any householder could give a burglar alarm to its one police constable during the night.

"For years we have sought a communication system and here's one that beats the cost objection," said Mayor Boyd. "If a burglar enters your house, you telephone the waterworks department and a man working there all night presses a button which then makes the face of the town clock at the Post Office go dark. The policeman, looking to see what time it is, sees no clock and realizes that something is wrong. He telephones the waterworks department and hurries to the home entered by the burglar. The scheme is beautiful in its simplicity."

Cut Unlikely

OTTAWA — The Postoffice Department will have the largest net revenue this fiscal year that it has had since 1920, but there is not much possibility of a reduction in postage rates.

The reason is that the financial position of the Postoffice Department is so much a part of the national financial system, and, although Federal revenues have shown an increase of $58,000,000 for the first ten months of the fiscal year, there will still be a deficit of $75,000,000 when the Budget is brought down.

Country Without Prisons

LONDON — If the trend of the past thirty years is maintained, Britain in another fifteen years may boast of the ideal state of being a country without prisons.

Since introduction of the Probation Offenders Act in 1907 by Sir Herbert Samuel, then Parliamentary Under-Secretary for the Home Office the number of committals to prison in Britain has fallen from more than 180,000 to fewer than 60,000.

Discussing the probation system, Sir Herbert declared more than half of the country's prisons had been closed for lack of tenants.

"The saving of cost to the nation has been immense, but more important has been the saving of souls," he said.

New Spray

WINNIPEG — The Manitoba Horticultural Association were informed of a 100 per cent satisfactory method of killing dandelions developed by Dr. G. P. McRostie, now of the Ontario Agricultural College Guelph, a solution of copper nitrate and water is sprayed.

William H. Silversides, University of Manitoba student, told of the discovery. He collaborated with Dr. McRostie, who recently left the Manitoba University.

Six years' experiments were behind the discovery, Silversides said. The solution is made of 1½ pounds of nitrate to 7½ gallons of water, a quantity sufficient for 1,000 square feet of lawn space, he said.

Two sprays during the summer, one about mid-July the other in mid-August, were recommended. Both need to be done on a warm bright afternoon, when there is no wind, he said.

The two applications, the agronomy student continued, end the operation. Both turn the grass to sickly, yellowish green within 48 hours, but after about two weeks the grass will return to its natural colour. The next year, tests showed, it willl come back greener and heavier than before and free of dandelions.

The spray must hit leaves of the weed.

To Serve Another Year

FORT ERIE — A. B. Damude, M.P., for Welland County, announced here the Federal Government had granted to Fort Erie's Collector of Customs and Excise, Frank T. Pattison, an additional year's extension of service. Mr. Pattison is approaching retirement age but has expressed a desire to remain in his position until 1938. Mr. Damude said.

$20,000,000 Loans

WASHINGTON — The Senate has passed and sent to the House a bill creating a $20,000,000 disaster loan corporation for flood area rehabilitation loans.

The bill would permit loans to individuals on liberal terms. Security would not necessarily be required, but grants could not be made.

Winners !

NEW YORK — Canadian dog fanciers carried off three blue ribbons and a reserve award in the competition among the Scottish terriers and cocker spaniels at the Westminster Dog Show in Madison Square Garden.

H. E. and W. Batt, of Guelph, won the majority of the prizes with their Scotty puppy, Haldon Emblem, judged the best of the puppies between nine and twelve months of age. He went to the front in the class for novice dogs and then ranked second only to the more experienced Gold Finder's Starman, owned by William Quade, of Gardner, Mass., in the class for best of the dogs.

Among the cockers William H. Barrett's Gardens Desirable Lady, of Cooksville, Ont., was judged the best of the novice bitches of solid color.

Ideal Weather, undefeated four-year-old owned by Leonard Collins, of Toronto, paraded to the top of the sheep dogs for his 10th straight victory.

Fix March 22 To Vote

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced a writ for the by-election in Bonaventure, Quebec has been issued, fixing March 22 as polling day. The seat was vacated by the death of Hon. Charles Marcil, Liberal who represented it for 37 yrs. A by-election in Hamilton West, occasioned by the death of H. E. Wilton, Conservative, will be held the same day.

Tourist Travel to Canada Shows Sharp Rise in Year

Estimated That in Course of a Season Canada is Visited By Numbers Equalling Twice Her Population.

MONTREAL.—"Tourist and convention travel from the United States and other countries to Canada during last year totalled in numbers approximately twice the population of the Dominion," according to a review of Canada's tourist traffic for 1936 issued here. "Last year we enjoyed a continuation of the increasing number of American tourists visiting Canada and the general view among those directly concerned with the development of the tourist traffic in this country is highly optimistic as to the prospects for 1937. This healthy condition prevailed from the Atlantic to the Pacific, as reports received from various tourist organizations from Nova Scotia to British Columbia all indicate a substantial increase in business over the previous year."

After the setback resulting from the economic upheaval of a few years ago, the tourist industry has again commenced on the upward climb to new heights. When official figures first began to be compiled in 1920, the tourist trade was value at $83,734,000. In 1929 it had reached a high of $309,379,000, and in 1933, the bottom of the depression, it dropped to $117,124,000. Since then, each year has shown an increase until it now stands at an estimated value of $275,000,000 for the season of 1936, representing expenditures for transportation, purchases and accommodation. Of this total, it is estimated that $20,000,000 were spent by those attending conventions, another $20,000,000 by fishermen and hunters, and $235,000,000 by tourist vacationists indulging in various other forms of recreational activities.

In an analysis of the tourist statistics for the past season, it is interesting to note that tourists came to Canada from many countries in addition to the United States, although by far the greater proportion came from the latter country. Probably no country in the world is visited by such a large number of tourists as in Canada. It is estimated that in the course of a year Canada is visited by numbers equalling twice her population.

"Canada and the United States do not need any 'bon ententes' or peace conferences to provide mutual understanding and good-will. The tourist is seeing to the development of the 'good neighbor' policy quite satisfactorily" said Mr. Howard. Last year Canada played host to approximately 15,000,000 Americans, a number that exceeds the entire population of the Dominion by about 4,000,000. They represent, of course, visitors who crossed into Canada by all means of transportation. The balance of trade, however, is not entirely lop-sided, for it is estimated that more than 3,000,000 Canadians paid a return call to the United States, and figured on a per capita basis, this represents a pretty fair piece of reciprocity in neighborliness.

Ottawa Increases Publicity Program

OTTAWA. — Advertising and publicity will play a larger part in the government's program during the next fiscal year, according to estimates tabled in the House of Commons recently.

For advertising and publicity in the United Kingdom and Europe the vote is increased from $250,000 to $350,000 while the trade and commerce vote for publicity in Canada and abroad is $65,000, an increase of $10,900. The vote of last year for the Canadian Travel Bureau was left unchanged at $250,000.

BOOK REVIEWS

Alfred J. Rawling, Secretary of Davenport United Church, Toronto, writes:

"Owing to an accident on New Year's Eve, I have happily been able, even at this late date, to roam and rambie with the characters portrayed in Our Illustrious Volume, From Spadunk to Davenport United.

"I am happy that I chose Davenport in which to fulfil my vow to assist His work should I be spared to leave my narrow trench in the Amiens woods on August 9th, 1918. Whenever I worship in Davenport the memorial plates (to Bartholomew Bull and George Cooper) seem to call me to carry on. They left a splendid heritage.

"In my present trouble, many a loving heart has written and called. They witness, unknowingly, the voice of The Master who through your family and its associates, in 1830 and even earlier, lifted up His Hands in Toronto. How many notables gained their early training (home and otherwise) through your forebears.

"We are all greatly indebted to you for your untiring efforts and those of your friends in recording, for posterity, the history of the present and the spirit of the past.

"Couldn't Springmount (the Bartholomew Bull homestead) be made an Historic Site by our Historical Society in co-operation with our Civic authorities? I recall being told on visiting it once that it was not a Public Building. It would be nice to have it restored as a land-mark.

"Also for the Davenport Station to be preserved by the C.N.R. in conjunction with the York Pioneers or some such body. I understand that at that station, the train-to-train telephone was developed to perfection.

"A rambling note, Mr. Bull, but one of sincerity, and a deep appreciation for your interest and untiring work in connection with "Our wonderful volume". A task not made with hands, but with a true heart, and one that felt the strain of loss as expressed 'In Memorium'. 'She will not be forgotten'; you are not forgotten.

Oscar Reckles (mascot of the Fireside Snowshoe Club), cycled into our office this morning with the following gem in his vest pocket:

The grandstand is calling,
The bleachers are bawling,
The voice of the ump is abroad in the land:
Dizzy Dean's capers,
Again make the papers,
And baseball extras appear on the stand.
The fans pay their dollar
To shout and to holler,
The doctor and lawyer are reading the score.
The landlady's tenants,
Are talking of pennants,
The office boy's grandma is buried once more.
The radio tuners,
Are tuning out crooners,
And getting the game via the air.
The hot-dog chorus,
Once again is before us,
For baseball is here with a bang and a blare.
Good evening friends!

Out of the Past

Memories of ye old public school house came back to the old maestro the other evening, when a friend of ours sent us a valentine with two little fellows playing marbles on it. The sender of this novelty states that he still has his collection of alleys up in the attic yet.

When the Maestro was just a nipper, the game of marbles seemed the greatest sport on earth and especially when we played for keeps. We remember one kid in the school-yard who was so good that they called him, "Crack-shot Bob" and anytime any member of the Senior Second appeared on the school property with a bagful of nibs, Robert was always there to play for keeps. Personally we had quite a collection, which included some fine colour works which were known to us then as smokies. But like most of us who have saved stamps, labels and cigar bands during our younger days, we finally had them to give away to the neighbours' children who are interested in that hobby to-day.

There were various colours and sizes that we recall besides the nibs and smokies, particularly the ball bearing kind. This type was known as the irony and often chopped many a good agate.

Ever save them. We did. But to get back to the game of marbles, we recall three methods of playing. One game, the players stood at a line and threw their alleys against the school wall. The fellow whose alley was nearest the wall collected all the others.

Another way was for one lad to toss his marble out on the ground and another pal to toss his close enough to the first marble in order to span it with his hand. Lastly (or the third method), the boys had to hit the marbles directly and no ticks were allowed. Shouts such as "Burns", "Ticks", "No ups" or "One step only", had a lot to do with this great outdoor pastime.

And Furthermore

After a very bad day on the school campus, it took a lot of coaxing to get father to hand you a nickel for just three smokies. Then like a shot we were off to the corner store to make that thrilling purchase, only to come out to find "Crack Shot Bob" saying in a very sweet tone, "Play you for keeps, pal."

But anyway we wish we had kept some of our collection in order to challenge the delivery boy to a game of span.

PEEL COUNTY SCORES

While Peel County breeders failed to make any first awards, Credholme Farm, Streetsville, were in second position in a class of 22 four-year-olds (open section) with a production of 18,128 lbs. milk, 750 lbs. fat; and G. Percival Leslie, Georgetown, was second in a class of 29 three-year-olds (milked twice daily) on Pauline Pabst Abbekerk, with a production of 14,459 lbs. milk, 637 lbs. fat. Other district herds with creditable scores included Alex. McKinney Jr., Brampton; J. Stanley Watson, Woodbridge; Harold Bingham, Georgetown; R. C. Given, Georgetown; Emerson Ford, Hornby; Geo. A. Love, Cheltenham; Roy H. Barker, Woodbridge; Chas. W. Carney, Georgetown; T. O. Dolson, Brampton, and J. M. Fraser, Streetsville.

Another Peel County record has recently been completed, the official announcement of which is awaiting calving qualifications only. The heifer, Pioneer Lodge Dora Aggie, a junior 2-year-old owned in the herd of Alex. McKinney Jr., Brampton, has completed her year with 17,800 lbs. milk in 365 days which is nearly 600 lbs. more than that of the Canadian championship holder Pietje Colantha Dewdrop; while her 305 day production of 15,584 lbs. milk is also 492 lbs. greater than that of Korndyke Snow Ormsby the present Canadian champion in this division.

Of 19 sisters in the Pioneer Lodge herd, all daughters of a C.P.R. Strathmore Koba bull, four only have finished their first lactation records, all as junior two-year-olds, showing the splendid average of 15,627 lbs. milk with appromixately a 3.55% test for the year.

The February meeting of Wesley W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Earl Albertson. The program was arranged by Mrs. Lorne Fish, with Mrs. Emerson Ford, of Bethel auxiliary, as special speaker. The theme for the worship service was "Light". The leader of the Mission Band, Mrs. F. Wilson, gave an interesting report of its last meeting. Delegates were appointed to the Halton Presbyterial Annual which will be held in Oakville on March 11th. Miss Stella Ford and Miss Edna Inglehart were among the visitors.

Miss Ruby Albertson, of the E. P. Lunau staff, Oakville, is holidaying at her home, Dundas highway east.

Mrs. A. R. Lunau, who has been a patient in Guelph hospital, returned home on Wednesday of last week.

Thirteen ladies of Wesley and district accepted the invitation of Eden W.A. and attended the cooking demonstration by Mrs. H. M. Aitken at Streetsville last Wednesday. The drivers of the three cars, Mrs. L. Fish, Mrs. E. F. Wilson and Miss Mary Albertson, held lucky numbers in the draw and each received a package of one of the commodities used in the demonstration. Miss Grace Fish was also among the fortunate winners.

The death of Mr. C. Henry Turner occurred at his home near Omagh on Saturday evening. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Turner and in his youth and early married life lived in the base line district, later removing to a farm near Milton and of late years near Omagh. He served the Trafalgar Township council for several years holding the office of Reeve for two years about twenty years ago. Mr. Turner was a member of Bethel United church. For many years before union, he was superintendent of Boyne Presbyterian Sunday school. Mr. Turner was twice married, his first wife being Miss Abbie Watson. Surviving are his wife, formerly Miss Belle Urquhart, two sons, Gordon, of Montreal and Maurice of Palermo and two daughters, Miss Abbie, at home and Mrs. Brownridge, Omagh. One son, Howard predeceased him. The service was held on Tuesday, from his home. Interment followed in Evergreen Cemetery, Milton.

Mrs. Calvin Bentley and children are staying with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. Trowbridge, Trafalgar, until her health improves. Owing to a condition of the foot from which Mrs. Bentley is suffering, she is taking an enforced rest.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Jewitt, of Oshawa, spent the early part of the week with Mr. D. Turner. They attended the funeral of Mrs. Jewitt's uncle, Mr. C. H. Turner, on Tuesday.

EDUCATION AND NATIONAL PROGRESS

The last week of this month (Sunday, February 21st to Saturday, February 27th) has been designated Education Week for 1937 by the Canadian Teachers' Federation, acting in co-operation with other organizations which are interested in the educational institutions of this country. The slogan for this year's campaign is, "Education—the essential factor of national progress", and in Ontario where the three teachers' Federations (whose executives form the Ontario Teachers' Council) are responsible for bringing the week to the attention of the public, the emphasis this year is being placed on a number of forward steps which have as their ultimate objective equal opportunities in education for all children.

The time is ripe for a "new deal" in Ontario schools, for a complete review of past achievements and past mistakes, in order that the mistakes may not be perpetuated and that the benefits arising from the achievements may be spread throughout the province and may reach every boy and girl, no matter what handicaps of geography, poverty, school or home environment may have been imposed upon them. No two people are likely to agree on every point in any reform programme, but all of the following suggested reforms have been endorsed by prominent educationalists in Ontario, severally if not collectively. They are given here with the sole purpose of informing the general public. An informed public opinion is the first step in any programme of reforms in a democratic country.

A greater share of the costs of education should be borne by the Dominion and Provincial Governments, in such a way as to distribute the burden among all the people. Good schools are a national as well as a municipal asset.

Eliminatfon of those units of school administration which, because of circumstances which they cannot control, are unable to run their schools with profit to either the children or the taxpayers. In this connection, the benefits derived from an enriched curriculum and from medical and dental services should be balanced against any inconvenience resulting from the change to a larger unit.

More attention paid to the needs of the poor but clever student whose one barrier to advanced study in his chosen field is poverty. Allowances for travelling and living expenses, in addition to a larger number of scholarships, are urgently needed. Canada lags behind the other parts of this Empire in this important matter.

An end to overcrowding in classrooms, one of the unfortunate legacies of the depression which seriously handicaps teachers in their efforts to attend to the individual needs of their pupils. Many school authorities in Great Britain limit their classes to 30 students each. Recently the French Minister of Education, Jean Zay, decreed that all school classes in France with more than 35 pupils must be divided.

Such changes in curriculum and in administration as will bring us still nearer to the ideal state of things when the school will adapt itself readily to the requirements and the capacities of the child rather than the reverse.

Empress Winter Golf Tournament

While the rest of Canada is shovelling itself out of snowdrifts, Canada's only mid-winter golf tournament of an international character will be held on the Royal Colwood Golf Club Course at Victoria, B.C., from March 1 to 6. This is the annual Empress Winter Amateur Golf Tournament, now in its ninth year, which brings well on to 200 enthusiastic golfers from Canada, the United States, and Europe into competition for a large number of valuable prizes, including the Sir Edward Beatty Challenge Cup, Chamber of Commerce Trophy, Victoria Rotary Club Rose Bowl, and Matson Inter-District Team Cup.

Favored by summer-like weather, the tournament is the high-water mark of the social season for the winter colony on the sunny southern tip of Vancouver Island. Victoria will be in festive mood for the event, while Colwood's beautiful clubhouse and the regal Empress Hotel, with its gardens, conservatory, and Crystal Garden swimming pool, will form an ideal background for the colorful social activities which mark the six days of tournament play. Included as added attractions will be a dinner dance and entertainment every evening in the Empress Hotel, with presentation of prizes at a Grand Ball on Saturday night.

Golf experts and dubs alike will find competitions suited to them in the week's play at Royal Colwood, a lovely course constructed on park land, 6,291 yards in length, with a par 70 that was broken only once in tournament play. Play will be divided into classes for both ladies and men, ranging from open amateur events and handicap matches to features that stress the social side of the grand old game.

The Open Column

The Hon. T. B. McQueston, we see, is unpleased that the Federal Government has a scheme for control of motor transport, thus usurping authority fondly believed to have belonged to the Province. Perhaps, at a wide guess, this "usurpation" of authority by the Dominion is just a short step along the pathway to a more centralized government for Canada. The Province, for some years past, has been stealing away powers that were at one time exercised by the county councils.

Charlie Pyper, the newest ace war correspondent of the Toronto Evening Telegram, speaking to his co-workers, and officials of the paper, at a banquet given in his honor at Eaton's Round Room, claimed that he had been responsible for several major international events, simply because he had written articles to the effect that these events could not occur. His denial of the probability of an event happening, Pyper claimed, was the surest means of bringing that even about. By the same line of reasoning, then, the Telegram is responsible for the recent flood at Brampton. An article appeared in the Telegram a night or so before the flood declaring that danger of high water was past for 1937. If the ability of Telegram correspondents to produce a chain of circumstances by denying that they could happen was assured, the paper could easily become "Canada's National Newspaper" by producing rains, huge crops, and general prosperity. However, it frequently happens that things predicted by the Telegram actually become facts.

Sunday, we took our first stroll with our newly acquired child "Groucho" and her perambulator. This, popularly supposed to be the most embarrassing moment of a father's life, certainly packed plenty of punch. We met all the people in Brampton we knew, it seemed, and each carried a grin from ear to ear. In fact, some of them smiled so widely that it was a wonder the tops of their heads didn't fall off. But long ago a very wise friend of ours placed a paternal hand on our back, when we were complaining about the amount of "ribbing" we had to take about this and that, and said, "Son, don't worry about people making fun of you in that way. You'll find that the toughest time of your life is when no one pays any attention to you at all." Well, pushing our sour-faced daughter along the street, we sure had lots of attention, so it couldn't have been as tough as it felt.

Georgetown's midget National Hockey League stars made their original appearance on the big ice surface of the Maple Leaf Gardens on Saturday night, when they played to a 0-0 tie before the Americans-Maple Leafs match. The youngsters put up a fairly good show, although, possibly because they were just a mite in awe of the big crowd, they did not play as interesting a brand of hockey as we have seen them put up. We still claim, however, that if the midget league is kept going for the next ten years, and the youngsters can be kept in Georgetown, instead of bought out of the town by moneyed clubs looking for promising material, that Georgetown will have the smartest amateur squad in many counties. The boys have been taught a lot of hockey, and can be taught a great deal more, if the tendency amongst the backers of the league to squabble over the games can be squelched. The youngsters play far better hockey on the ice than their seniors produce in the committee rooms.

HONESTY

"Socrates being asked the way to honest fame, said, 'Study to be what you wish to seem'."

"Honesty is spiritual power. Dishonesty is human weakness, which forfeits divine help."—Mary Baker Eddy.

"Prefer loss, before unjust gain: for that brings grief but once; this forever."—Chilo.

"No legacy is so rich as honesty."—Shakespeare.

"Plain good intention, which is as easily discovered at the first view as fraud, is surely detected at last, is of no mean force in the government of mankind. Genuine simplicity of heart is a healing and cementing principle."—Burke.

"True honesty takes into account the claims of God as well as those of man; it renders to God the things that are God's, as well as to man the things that are man's."—C. Simmons.

LET US SMILE

Pilkington retired from the city and went to live in the country. In due course a neighbour called on his wife. She said:

"I hear your husband has taken up hunting. Do you approve of that?"

"I don't know about approving," said the sportsman's wife, "but it makes life more exciting. We never know which to expect home first—my husband or the horse."

Physical volume of business—index 120 (1926—100) gain of 13% over 1935. About $88,000,000 more received by Canadian farmers than in 1935. "For the first time in this century, Ontario will not only have a balanced budget, but a reduction in the Provincial debt."—Hon. M. F. Hepburn, Premier of Ontario.

"I feel confident that the growth and progress experienced in 1936 will continue and will increase in volume during 1937."—Sir Edward Beatty, President C.P.R.

Did it ever occur to you that our mines, forests and fields are not our greatest natural resources? No, our people are the greatest natural resources and only through their efforts and ambitions can the so-called natural resources be of value to the nation. Remember also, that the youth of today is the man of the next generation; if we lag in giving the highest training to our youth of to-day, the country will suffer in the future.

Passing of Three Trafalgar Men

When we were putting our old friends and neighbour, Will Armstrong, to bed with the shovel in the beautiful God's Acre, beside the Anglican Church, Hornby, Feb. 16th, on the South West side of a magnificent monument, in which is this inscription: Charles Brown, and his wife Mary Ann Armstrong, his uncle and auntie, he was laid to rest. And this sent memory back when Will Armstrong began his first active service in real life as an apprentice in the blacksmith and carpenter shop of that once Drumquin establishment owned by Charles Brown, where all kinds of farm implements were manufactured. Our father operating three hundred acres at that time, we had the pleasure of using all the vehicles and implements used on this land, cutters, sleighs, waggons, buggies, plows, harrows, cultivators, scufflers, etc., and horse shoeing was done with skill and rapidity. And in all this work for years Will was an expert, and everyone loved Will Armstrong; he was so obliging. When Will was married to Miss Evans he bought the farm on the Eighth Line, where he was a successful farmer, until about two years ago, when, through sickness he was unable to do any work, neighbours working the farm on shares. And thus one of the connecting links that binds the past with the present is removed. There are no Browns or Armstrongs around Drumquin now. All the old landmarks are removed. Two well-known men, Henry Turner and Fred House, on Feb. 15th Mr. Turner was buried at Evergreen Cemetery, Milton, at the same hour and day Mr. House was laid to rest in the cemetery at Georgetown. These two men owned and operated farms on the Eighth line many years ago. Their names are also removed from the history around Drumquin corner.

And I can vouch for the testimony of every neighbour and friend who knew these three men, they were never known to do a mean or crooked act and were always ready to do a good turn for anyone. And thus Drumquin's glory, with all the old landmarks, have passed away.

There are footprints they left on the highway of life,
They were true to the world, their home and their wife,
And this tribute recorded with the tongue and the pen,
Every day in their life they acted like men.
With their past behind and their future ahead,
May their dreams be sweet in their earthly bed.

The friends of Allan Fish will be glad to know that he is steadily improving in health after his long illness.

Miss Evelyn Lunau, of Guelph Hospital, spent several days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Lunau, last week.

Notwithstanding the fact that many people are on the sick list, about seventy guests were present at the hot supper in Wesley Sunday School on Tuesday evening of last week, which was sponsored by the W.A. under the convenership of Mrs. Earl Albertson. This event was scheduled for Wednesday but owing to another meeting, it had to be brought on earlier. The entertainers engaged were therefore unable to be present. Rev. H. S. Lovering made a witty chairman for the program which was given with the guests seated at the tables. The entertainers, who kindly supplied on short notice were, Miss Mary Peddie in readings; Martha and Kathryn Biggar in vocal duets, and Miss Edna Lawrence, A.T.C.M., in piano numbers. Mr. Lovering and Mr. Wilson Oughtred staged an impromptu debate, "Resolved that a woman has the better time", the minister upholding the affirmative. Community singing with Mr. F. A. Forster at the piano, was enjoyed by all.

Major Prouse, of Brampton, was guest speaker at the meeting of Trafalgar Y.P.S. at Sheridan Hall on Wednesday, Feb. 17th. Mr. Prouse, who has travelled extensively in the East, gave a talk on "Five Times Across the Equator", which was beautifully illustrated with colored slides of photographs taken in India, Palestine and other eastern countries. Misses G. Savage and D. Speck contributed piano numbers. Miss Irene Bentley, Missionary convener, arranged the program and introduced the speaker.

ANCIENT CUSTOM LINGERS ON

Early Church Started Fish Habit that Persists To this Day

Fishermen from the Atlantic to the Pacific are hopeful that the present effort of the Canadian Government to promote the consumption of Canadian fish will result in people eating more fish throughout the week rather than confining this delicacy to Fridays.

Though fish has been eaten as a food since prehistoric times, the early Christian Church decreed that no meat should be eaten on Fridays and fast days but that fish might be substituted. From that arose a practice that has persisted down to the present time and has led people of every denomination to associate fish with Friday often to the virtual exclusion of other days.

According to leading executives of the fishing industry, this habit is not only harmful to the industry but is robbing people of many advantages. If the people eat more fish throughout the week, they would be assured of fresher fish and they would get it at lower prices. The increased demand for the products of sea, lake and river would give an impetus to the whole industry and, while retail prices to the public would drop, the price to the fisherman would increase, owing to the lessening of the present overhead caused by the public habit of eating fish mostly on Fridays.

Not only the fishing industry but the medical profession are behind the move to encourage people to eat more fish throughout the week. Many medical columnists of newspapers have gone on record as to the nutritive and healthful value of fish. With its richness in proteins, minerals and other elements, they say, fish is an important article of diet, as nourishing as other foods and more easily digested.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON IX.
The New Commandment
John 12:12—13:38.

Printed Text John 12. 20-33; 13: 34, 35 Golden Text.—A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another; even as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. John 13:34.

The Lesson in Its Setting

Time.—The entry into Jerusalem took place on Sunday, April 2, A.D. 30. The discourse that followed took place on Tuesday, April 4. The entire scene of the washing of the disciples' feet took place on Thursday evening, April 6.

Place.—The triumphal entry was made as Christ came over the Mount of Olives on the east of Jerusalem. The washing of the disciples' feet took place, of course, in the upper room in Jerusalem.

20 Now there were certain Greeks among those that went up to worship at the feast. These were Gentiles, citizens from Hellas, or their descendants living throughout the Mediterranean world who had become proselytes of the Jewish faith and, once a year when possible, came up to Jerusalem, in order to worship there at the feast as the Hebrews worshipped.

21. These therefore came to Philip, who was of Bethsaida of Galilee. They came to Philip "not only because he had a Greek name, and therefore presumably belonged to a family in which Greek was spoken and Greek connections cultivated, but because, being of Bethsaida of Galilee, he might be expected to understand and speak Greek, if, indeed, he was not already known to these strangers in Jerusalem." And asked him, saying, Sir, we would see Jesus. At the birth of Jesus, wise men came from the East to behold the Lord (Matt. 2:1-12); now, at the end of our Lord's public ministry, there came men from the West, speaking the language identified with learning and scholarship, asking that they might see Jesus.

22. Philip cometh and telleth Andrew: Andrew cometh, and Philip, and they tell Jesus. "Andrew" is another Greek name. "Andrew solves his difficulty in the way in which all difficulties of disciples are resolved, referring them to Jesus himself."

23. And Jesus answereth them, saying, The hour is come, that the Son of man should be glorified. Previously it has been said that "his hour" had not come (2:4; 7:30; 8:20). The hour in the life of Christ was the hour of his death (13:1; 16:32; 17:1). —of course not a literal time of sixty minutes, but, nevertheless, a brief period.

24. Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except a grain of wheat fall into the earth and die, it abideth by itself alone; but if it die, it beareth much fruit. There are four things that can happen to a grain of wheat: it can be hoarded, with the possibility of ultimate destruction by mould, mildew, or rust; it can be immediately consumed, in various forms, especially as bread; it can be ignored, and therefore lost for all purposes; or it can be sown in the ground, thus multiplying itself, the highest use to which it can be put.

25. He that loveth his life loseth it; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal. The word twice translated "life" in the first part of this verse is the word "psuche" (from which comes our word "psychology"), a word that includes all man's mental, sensual being; the word translated "life" at the end of the verse is the word "zoe," a word referring to the higher life which is in men, the spirit. "Self-love leads to destruction and death. From beginning to end of his earthly history, Jesus laid down his life for men.

26. If any man serve me, let him follow me; and where I am, there shall also my servant be: if any man serve me, him will the Father honor. Christ himself is the great example of denying one's own life; if we are to truly serve the Lord, then, in his sacrificial ideal, we are to follow him, with the result that whoever serves the Son, will be honored by the Father.

27. Now is my soul troubled; and what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour. But for this cause came I unto this hour. There is no shrinking from the cross here, but a glorious determination to endure it in the consciousness that, for that hour, he had come into the world.

28. Father, glorify thy name. There came therefore a voice out of heaven, saying, I have both glorified it, and will glorify it again. "It is the highest utterance of faith, love, and hope, that whatever experience of pain is ordained, the outcome may be all to the glory of the name of God."

29. The multitude therefore, that stood by, and heard it, said that it had thundered: others said, An angel hath spoken to him. "For the mass the voice was mere sound. The apprehension of a divine voice depends upon man's capacity for hearing. Others felt that the utterance was articulate, though they could not hear the words."

30. Jesus answered and said, This voice hath not come for my sake, but for your sakes. "The voice came to test their faith and to strengthen it; and, at the same time, to make clear the importance of the crisis revealed by the Gentile request."

31. Now is the judgment of this world: now shall the prince of this world be cast out. "The passion was the judgment of the world, which showed both men's thoughts towards Christ, and the true position of the world towards God. Jew and Gentile are alike included in the sentence."

32. And I. "The position of 'I' is very emphatic, and Christ, by this phrase, places himself in opposition to the 'prince of this world.' The crucified Christ will rule men's hearts in place of the devil." If I be lifted up from the earth. Probably this phrase has a double meaning, and includes both the lifting up of Christ from the earth on the cross, and his subsequent going up from the earth into heaven, at his ascension. Will draw all men unto myself. "The words emphatically prove that the cross is the basis of Christ's sway over all whom he brings out of Satan's empire and draws to himself as Lord. In the phrase, 'I will draw,' Christ clearly intimates that, though crucified, he was not to abide in death, but was soon to live, and set up a kingdom, drawing subjects unto it."

33. But this he said, signifying by what manner of death he should die. This verse is certainly added by the author of the Gospel, John the apostle. (See Phil. 2:8). Christ's insistence upon his death provoked a reasonable question on the part of the Jews who were listenning to him, for they believed that the Christ who should come would be the king of an eternal kingdom, and hence, of course, be eternal. (See Dan. 7:13, 14; Psalm 110.) There seemed a contradiction between an eternal Christ of God, and a suffering Messiah who must die.

34. A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another; even as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. "There is a sense in which it was not a new commandment. In the Mosaic economy the word is found, 'Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind'; 'and thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself' (Lev. 19:18; Deut. 30: 6). This word for 'new' means something that is fresh, as opposed to that which is effete. 'I am giving you,' said Jesus, 'a command that is new in its inspiration.

35. By this all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another. It is certainly by our belief in Christ that we become his disciples, but it is by our love for one another that we become known to others as the disciples of Christ.

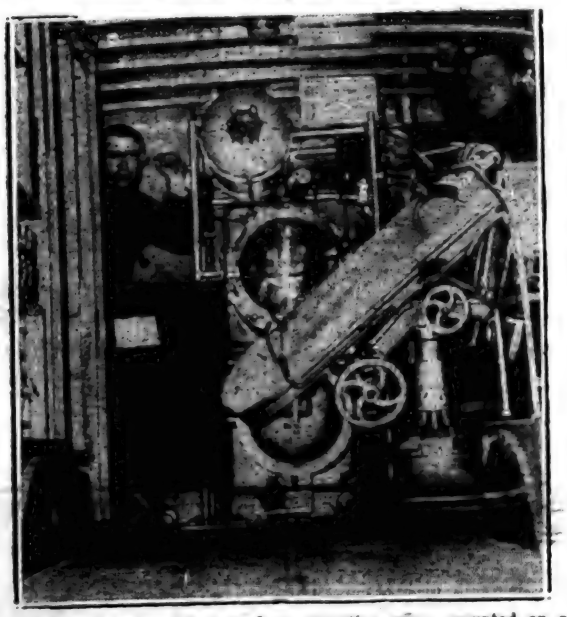
Movie-radic gossip

By DOROTHY

Any girl who can make an outstanding hit in a picture in which the smoothly expert Myrna Loy and William Powell appear is not just good, she is marvellous. That is what directors on the M. G. M. lot have been telling Dorothy McNulty ever since her appearance in "After the Thin Man" made audiences burst into spontaneous applause. In the midst of all the enthusiasm over her at the studio, everyone neglected to make sure that she had been put under contract. She didn't mention it because nobody asked her. And Paramount slyly came along and signed her up for their pictures.

Many actresses would be more than satisfied if they could sign a contract with Paramount guaranteeing them four hundred and fifty thousand dollars a year. But Carole Lombard insisted on adding clauses guaranteeing that Teddy Tetzlaff, her favorite cameraman, would always photograph her. And that Pat Drew, studio electrician, who lost a leg in a plane crash, would always be employed on her pictures.



Letters have poured into the Twentieth Century-Fox studios by the thousands, begging that Shirley Temple play winsome little girls parts instead of the smart-aleck, wise-beyond-her-years blues singer of recent pictures. Most of the letters came from mothers whose daughters model their behavior on Shirley's latest picture. Taking their advice to heart, the studio selected "Wee Willie Winkie" as Shirley's next picture. If she does any imitation of Alice Faye or Tony Martin singing, or of Bill Robinson dancing, it will be away from the camera.

These mice, to be different, all sing bass ..... Gary Cooper and George Raft are the latest camera fiends. They hang around Bing Crosby's set whenever they are not working on their own, snatching candid shots of the players. ..... Simone Simon takes all the jokes about her name with good humor. Dominion and Trade Quotas

Canada has certainly made full use of the quotas covering Canadian 700-pound cattle and potato shipments to the United States. Exports of both across the border had reached the quota limit last September, although potatoes continued to be sent through at the rate of 60c per hundredweight, or 15c above the Trade Agreement concession.

Canadian lumbermen, however, did not take full advantage of their generous quota allowance in the United States. Trade Agreement of 250 million board feet of Douglas fir and western hemlock. Instead, preliminary figures for the year indicate that they shipped well under 200 million board feet. Mainly on the Pacific coast, lumbermen did a $100 millions of business with the United States, because of the Agreement concessions.

Under the Imperial Agreements, we have the famous British bacon quota. By this quota, 2,500,000 hundredweight of Canadian hams and bacon per year may be shipped to England duty free. In the twelve months ending November, 1936, 1,4 million hundredweight had been taken by British buyers. Reason is that the Canadian packers have not yet been able to ship more, and British breakfasters are not fond of Canadian bacon to the ing November, 1936, ¼ million hundredweight per year. Canadian shippers are energetically trying to bring up production and to make Canadian bacon as popular in England as Danish which now holds first place.

The Canadian government does not make a habit of quotas. The system is artificial and hampering to natural trade. The only quota now in effect on Canadian imports is that on Russian anthracite coal.

Scantygrease Feels Name Is Undignified

KELSO, Wash.—The populace of Scantygrease has gone dignified. Citizens are tired of being "Scantygreasers," and, furthermore, they believe the name of their community no longer is accurately descriptive. So they have petitioned county commissioners to rename the town "Delameter." The region won its name half a century ago because fat was so scarce housewives used turnips to grease the frying pans.

About 55 per cent of the earth gets less than 20 inches of rainfall annually.

PROBLEMS OF EVERY DAY LIFE

By Dr. M. M. Lappin

SHY OF THE OPPOSITE SEX

Cases of young men and young women being shy when in the company of the opposite sex are quite numerous, but I have recently had to deal with a very extreme case indeed..

A young man tells me that he has been "afflicted—that is the word he uses — with blushing ever since he can remember. He has tried to overcome it, but cannot. In fact, he writes: "I seem to be getting worse. If I am in the company of women, or if I meet a young woman I know, or even if a girl's name is mentioned and I know the girl, I can feel myself going red all over .... I am often teased about it. How can I get rid of it?"

I have known such cases to be the outcome of a guilt-complex. In such cases, a cure is frequently affected by a frank facing up to the guilt and a firm determination not to err in the same connection again.

But the fact that this young man —he is twenty-six—has been "afflicted" ever since he can remember would seem to indicate that the trouble lies elsewhere. Perhaps he has been brought up in a very strict atmosphere and has unconsciously acquired a sense of shame in connection with sex. This is quite common. Very often it results in a subconscious fear of sex. If this is the case, then the cure lies in frankly acknowledging the necessity of sex and adopting a right attitude toward the opposite sex.

I wish we could get parents to be careful not to impart, even unconsciously, wrong notions to their children. The sex element in humankind is essential to the propagation of the race. It is a gift of God and there is nothing shameful about it except only when we make it shameful. Like all other gifts, let it be rightly used and it is a blessing. Abuse it, and it can become a curse.

There is another matter. Perhaps this young man is too anxious to make a "good" impression upon the ladies. If this is the case, he should learn to think less of himself and of the impression he is making. He should be quite natural. Just himself! He should pursue his daily life with only one desire—to be the best kind of a man he can, and thereby make the best possible contribution to society.

Along Canada's Mining Highway

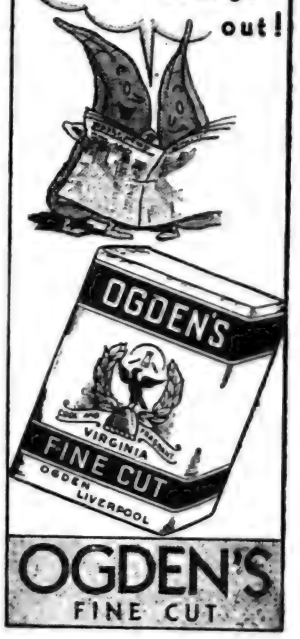
The Larder Lake section in Ontario (just west of the boundary) has recently furnished continuous mine news. Kerr Addison, Martin Bird and Upper Canada Mines have recently supplied news of major importance. A short review of the operating properties and properties is as follows:—

KERR ADDISON — Diamond drilling has indicated large tonnages of medium grade ores. Reports indicate an initial 500 ton mill installation. It is reported by the Northern Miner that the Company has $600,000 in its treasury. The Anglo-Huronian Company is known to have a substantial holding in the Company, with Mining Corporation, Nipissing and other mining interests said to have minor participations. The properties are located at the north end of the east arm of Larder Lake.

MARTIN BIRD is obtaining important ore values over big widths on the second level, with drifting proceeding on the first and third levels. The Company is well financed, with approximately $400,000 on hand. The Company's properties are located at the south end of the east arm of Larder Lake.

OMEGA MINES, located on the north shore of Larder Lake is milling low-grade ores on a 500 ton daily basis. The liability of the Company to the Castle Trethewey Company exceeds half a million dollars. Large tonnages and indications of higher-grade ores inspire optimism on the outlook.

UPPER CANADA MINES, located some miles to the west, has encountered good values over most important widths in recent diamond drilling. The Company is reliably reported to have close to $200,000 in the treasury. The 500 foot level should be reached by March 1st.



ORIOLE MINES, adjoining Upper Canada, is to be given an underground test in view of diamond drilling results, reported to be favourable and consistent.

PELANGIO LARDER LAKE have already started surface work on their 600-acre holdings half a mile to the north-east of Kerr Addison. Donald Lough, associated since the beginning with Martin Bird activities, is President-elect of the Company.

BARBER LARDER MINES, located about one mile to the west of the Kerr Addison, plans active operations to begin shortly. R. S. Potter is the President of this Company.

ARMISTICE MINES is another incorporation covering acreage to the west of Kerr Addison. WESLEY GOLD has holdings to the south east of Kerr Addison. Many other incorporations are under formation.

Canadians May Soon Be Living In Glass Houses

Architectural Revolution Bringing Simplicity, Brighter Color and New Design

Come the architectural revolution in Canada, people who live in glass houses will not have to undress in the dark. Also, they will be able to throw stones just like anyone else.

An impression of architectural trends gleaned from photographic exhibits of many outstanding works throughout the Dominion during the last two years indicates that glass blocks will be used more and more in Canadian homes and business structures.

The glass blocks admit a lovely light but can't been seen through. They provide an insulation that will keep a home warmer in winter, and cooler in summer. And they are practically unbreakable.

Canada has been slow to awaken to the new era in architecture which already is well advanced in Europe and many parts of the United States. This has been due partly to the depression which left building in a comatose condition.

But the revolution has taken seed in Canada. The younger people, particularly are interested in flat roofed homes which allow for sunbathing, complete simplicity of form, elimination of meaningless ornament, use of clearer, brighter colors in decorating of rooms, larger window areas, terraces, air conditioning and indirect lighting. They are simply an expression of an impulse toward a freer, more straight-forward life, with all the stuffy conventionalities and formalities eliminated. Also many new fabrics and building materials have been introduced which suggest new designs and forms.

Motor Horn Not Safety Servant

Writes the Toronto Telegram: The motorist who depends on the horn of his car to clear the way ahead of him is not likely to be the safest kind of a driver. He is inclined to rely too much on noise-provoked precaution on the part of the other fellow and too little on caution on his own part.

Aside from being a noise nuisance the horn tends to breed carelessness. It has been said in its defense that to abolish it or ban its use would be to abolish the possibility of giving warning in an emergency. This is not how abolition works out in actual experience in the Australian state of Tasmania.

There is a regulation in force there which forbids the use of motor horns within city boundaries. A report on its effects is most favorable. During the first full year of its operation the number of pedestrians killed by motor vehicles was seven, compared with twelve of the previous year, this reduction having taken place despite an increase in traffic. The report states that the application of the regulation has been the means of reducing the speed of motor vehicles in cities and towns and that drivers exercise a greater care when in busy areas. In addition, pedestrians are said to be more observant before leaving the sidewalks.

The evidence furnished by Tasmania indicates that the Anti-Noise Committee of City Council need not hesitate on the score of safety if it is convinced that in the interests of greater quiet in the city the blowing of motor horns should come under a complete ban.

GARDENING

By GORDON L. SMITH

ARTICLE NO. 1

Winter may linger or even return again later on, but the person who is determined to have a real garden this year is already making plans. After all, a garden is very similar to a house or library. It must be dreamed over and planned well in advance of actual operations if the full enjoyment and usefulness are going to be derived. Varieties will have to be selected, rough measurements made, some arrangement perhaps for getting seed started indoors. All of these things take a little time and it will be time well and enjoyably spent.

THESE WILL HELP

All that will be needed for these preliminary plans will be a pencil and paper, and a good seed catalogue. If a government bulletin on "Gardening" can be added, so much the better. The catalogue, however, is indispensable. It should be of Canadian origin, because the seeds and directions listed therein have been chosen with our own Canadian climate in view.

Catalogues today are more than mere lists of flowers and vegetables. Much other valuable information is given. For instance, along with the flower there is a description of color, height, time of blooming and some intimation whether the variety is frost resistant and if it is suited to sun or shade. All these points will prove of good service, especially to the beginner. If a mixed border is to be laid out, it is important that the smaller plants be placed in the front and one will want to know in advance whether the colors are going to match. Time of flowering, too, is good information to have because knowing that, it is possible to plan a continuous show of bloom right through the season.

WINTER DAMAGE

According to horticulturists, most damage occurs at this time to roses, perennials, fruit trees and other plants which winter outdoors. Warm days that tempt too early growth, with near zero nights immediately after, and cold, drying winds from the North or West are responsible. Very tender things will benefit from a light covering of straw, leaves or even old newspapers for a few weeks until Spring really arrives. Nature's own protection, snow, is often absent.

Farm Animals Need Bulky Feeds

Digestive Organs Are Made To Handle Such Feeds

Due to the fact that their digestive apparatus is made to handle coarse, rough, bulky feeds, farm stock, such as cattle and sheep, require such feeds. In nature such animals as these make up most of their ration from roughage feeds. The first compartment of the stomach of ruminants is one of the chief reasons why they can handle rough feeds satisfactorily.

In this compartment, known as the rumen or paunch, these feeds are stored for a time, moistened and soaked with water. During this time bacterial action digests considerable of the fibrous material in these roughage feeds. Without stopping a number of hours in the paunch, hard feeds, such as whole grains, and fibrous feeds, such as stalks and stems of plants, could not be properly prepared for efficient digestion.

Grain Mixed with Roughage

In feeding grain or such heavy concentrated feed, alone, without a mixture of roughage, it is liable to pass directly into the second compartment of the stomach. There is a question as to the efficiency of such a method of feeding for ruminants since these feeds may not receive the treatments in the paunch that would prepare them properly for later digestion.

It is becoming a practice of many stock farmers to recut or grain roughage crops and feed them mixed with ground grain. This is done to make the whole ration bulky in texture so that it will all be passed into the paunch or rumen for the most efficient digestion to take place. If heavy feeds, like ground grain, or if hard feeds, like corn or small grains, miss normal preparatory action in the paunch, much of such feed will be wasted. If, however, this material is fed mixed with recut or ground roughage so that the whole ration is light and bulky in nature and uniform in texture, it is probable that a large saving of feed material can be brought about in this way.

Breeding of Pure Bred Farm Stock

A farmer should never go into the pure-bred stock business unless he is a lover of stock. He should not go into the business unless he has an ambition to improve the breed which he selects, and in the selection of a breed, preference should go to the breed which one likes the best or which is already established in the community. He should not take up pure-bred stock unless he intends to breed and feed for improvement. The merit of the breed must be backed up by the feed bucket or deterioration soon begins, and, it must be admitted, there is nothing more pernicious than the scrub pure-bred. Then again a man scarcely makes a success of the pure-bred stock business unless he studies breed pedigrees, studies advertising, showing and all the other ins and outs of the business. Unless a man recognizes these factors to success it would be better for him to stay out of the pure-bred stock business.

St. Andrew's Y.P.S.

St. Andrew's Y.P.S. held another successful Fireside meeting Sunday evening with a large attendance in spite of inclement weather

The meeting opened with singing old favorite hymns, with Rev. John Y Fraser leading.

After the devotions the topic—"Serving God and Humanity in My Profession" was given by Miss E Hoople, representing the teaching Profession; Dr. O.T. Steen, medical, and Mrs. Alice Kaiser, R N., the nursing. Each address was given fully, and cleverly, and was greatly appreciated.

Mrs. Nellie Nicol sang "Take Time to be Holy" in her usual good manner. A prayer brought the meeting to a close

On Monday, Feb. 15th, a Box Social was held, with Knox Church Sixteen Y.P.S. as our guests. There was a good number present. The social part of the evening was spent in games and contests, which resulted in the highest score for ladies going to Mrs. King, and for gentlemen, to H. Burke

With Mr. Vic Johnston acting as Auctioneer, the boxes were distributed. After lunch, all joined hands and sang "Auld Lang Syne," which brought to a close another enjoyable evening—H. B.

At a meeting of the Churchville Cemetery Board last week it was decided to accept $30 from any plot holder wanting to make a final payment and be relieved of any further payment.

TRINITY CHURCH NOTES

The first of the Weekly Lenten gatherings, under the auspices of Trinity Church Sunday School, took place last Friday evening, Feb. 19th, in the Parish Hall. Slides on 'Alice in Wonderland' and Mickey Mouse were shown, and three reels of Moving Pictures were shown. The evening was very much enjoyed by the younger set of the town, also by the older ones. Similar programmes will be given each Friday evening during Lent, and all are invited to attend.

Services at Trinity Church on Sunday, February 21st, were conducted by Mr. D. Rouch, of Wycliffe College, Toronto.

On Monday evening, Feb. 22nd, the regular meeting of Trinity Church A.Y.P.A. was held in the Parish Hall. The attendance was small, but a very interesting Missionary programme was presented by the committee, Miss Jean Hammond, and Miss Gladys Dadd. The programme consisted of short impromtu speeches given by the members, on work being done by our missionaries, in Home and Foreign Missions. Discussions were presented on missionary giving. Bible charades were played, and some very interesting contests were given. The winners were Miss Hilda and Irene Bonham. The meeting was brought to a close with the serving of lunch.

The members of Trinity Church A.Y.P.A. are about to commence practice on a play, entitled "Home Ties", which will be presented immediately after Lent.

The Girls' Auxiliary of Trinity Church will meet next Monday night in the Parish Hall at 8 o'clock. The girls will continue the sewing on the quilts for twin beds which are on order, and there will be a short period of study. A full attendance is requested, and if possible bring along a new member.

Service next Sunday—Feb. 28th.
10 a.m.—Sunday School.
11 a.m.—Morning Prayer.
7 p.m.—Evening Prayer.

INTERMEDIATE SCHOOLS

C. Hersom

Before Confederation the schools were classified as either the common or the grammar schools. This division corresponds roughly with the distinction between our public and high schools. With Confederation came the public school, as we know it now, and its denominational parallel, the separate school.

The high schools have blossomed forth into three types, the Academic High School or Collegiate, which is a silly pretensious name peculiar to this province for a school which satisfies certain regulations of the department. Then there is the Vocational School, sometimes miscalled the Technical School. And finally, the Continuation School, which is a hybrid resulting from the crossing of a public school administration with a high school curriculum. This is our present system, or lay-out or set-up, terms indicative of whether you take it standing up or lying down.

On paper it is a clear-cut organization into primary and secondary education. As a matter of fact, it isn't anything of the sort. There are in the province nearly 1500 public schools offering pupils' courses which are taught in all the high schools and continuation schools. Perhaps it would be more exact to say that every high and continuation school is offering courses properly belong, both by tradition, and the highest judicial authority in the Empire, to the public school curriculum. The so-called lower school belongs to the common or public schools. This fact is significant in a discussion on intermediate schools.

It is now proposed to develop a three-class, rather than a two-class organization, viz.:

1. A junior public school for pupils from 5 to 11-plus, or from the kindergarten to the end of grade 6, senior third.

2. An intermediate school, established by a public or a separate school board, as a separate organization, but not necessarily in a separate building. This would be for adolescents from grades 7, 8, 9, 10, or under the old nomenclature, from junior fourth to the end of the lower school.

3. A secondary school which may be—

A. An academic high school.

B. A vocational school offering industrial or home-making courses.

C. A commercial school.

The Ontario intermediate school will have points in common with the English senior elementary and the American junior high schools. It takes its origin from the findings of the Hadow Report, i.e. the report of the Consultative Committee of the English Board of Education, re the Education of the Adolescent, 1926. The conclusions of the Hadow Report have had to pass through severe tests of the British Psychological Society before they were generally accepted by British educators.

When the child is passing through the period of adolescence, the accompanying physiological changes are such that there are sound educational reasons for separating them and giving them a school programme more varied and less intensive, more social and less individual, more interesting and less disciplinary, and richer in fusion subjects, than they could get in either the elementary or the high school.

It will also be a clearing house or distributing station. Teachers being with them for three or four years will be able to discover their antitudes and interests and hence be better able to direct them along the line of their probable future success. The pupil will be enabled to find himself.

Following this, the secondary school will have a more select group of students with which to deal. The academic school will not be cluttered up with boys and girls who are not disposed to abstract thinking. Similarly the vocational schools will be able to advance their courses along the line of truly technical education. In short, wastage will be lessened and more scholars and doers developed.

Trophies of a night "Picture Hunt"

THE "Treasure Hunt" and the "Scavenger Party," so popular in recent years as a form of amusement for night social gatherings, now have a rival in the "Picture Hunt."

Instead of going out to find concealed "treasures" or queer objects in the highways and byways, the participants go out with their cameras and bring back night photographs. The negatives are developed and printed while the contestants are at supper, dancing, or otherwise amusing themselves. Prizes are awarded to the takers of the most successful pictures.

Is this exciting? Each participant is given a considerable list of subjects from which he or she may make a choice of one or more—such as "Street Scene," "Waterfront Scene," Night Club," "Theater Entrance," "Traffic Policeman," "Hotel Chef" and the like.

All the "hunters" start out together and must return with their trophies within a given time. Arrangements are made with a photo finisher to receive the negatives, do a quick job and deliver the finished prints at the headquarters of the hunt before midnight. The pictures are then viewed and judged for prizes by a committee of non-participants.

While some of the subjects assigned may call for flash bulbs, super-sensitive film, and an ultra-fast lens, the scope of the hunt generally is broadened to include subjects that do not require all of these aids. For instance, a contestant owning an ordinary camera may successfully photograph on ordinary film a brilliantly illuminated street or skyscraper by making a time exposure. Again, such a picture as a theater entrance may be snapped without flash bulbs, if a fast lens and supersensitive film are used. Usually no limit is placed on the number of exposures for any subject. Under such rules, the field of the hunt is wide open to all types of equipment.

Picture hunting at night not only proves a test of picture-taking skill and judgment, but it offers interesting adventure, and each one's account of how his pictures were obtained proves a big part of the evening's fun.

Tried recently in New York by a group of "socialites," the picture-hunt idea has spread and is being adapted also to daytime picture hunting. The daytime hunt appeals especially to club, church and other social organizations. It winds up in the evening as the main feature of a dinner or supper meeting at which the pictures are displayed and judged. Subjects pertaining to the activities of the organization are assigned and the pictures, in addition to their pictorial interest, prove of considerable historical value to the organization.

Explorer Cook Saved by Note From Ben Franklin

Captain Cook, the great English explorer, might never have lived to tell of his discovery of the Hawaiian Islands had it not been for Benjamin Franklin. A photostatic copy of a letter written by Franklin and recently acquired by the Archives of Hawaii bears that out, states a writer in the Washington Post.

America and England were at war. Privateers were scouring the seas for English ships. Captain Cook, unaware that war had been declared, was on his way home from the South seas.

In this emergency, Benjamin Franklin, himself one of the great pioneer scientists and at that time minister to the Court of France, addressed a letter to American ship captains to spare the Cook vessel.

The letter reads in part as follows:

"This is therefore most earnestly to recommend to every one of you that in case the said ship, which is now expected (to arrive) soon in the European seas on her return, would happen to fall into your hands, you would not consider her as an enemy, nor suffer any plunder to be made of the effects contained in her . . . but that you would treat the same Captain Cook and his people with all civility and kindness, affording them as common friends to mankind all the assistance in your power."

Zimbabwe Once Center of the Largest Goldfields

The Zimbabwe ruins in Rhodesia lie about 400 miles north of Witwatersrand, the largest goldfield in the modern world. Zimbabwe seems to have been the center of the most extensive goldfields of the ancient world. Who built Great Zimbabwe and why its great civilization perished, are questions which have not been solved, says the Kansas City Times.

The ruins were discovered by the modern world only in 1867 and 1868, and were first explored in 1891. They are enclosed by a wall of unmortared granite blocks. In parts this wall is 30 feet high and 15 feet thick.

Some archeologists think the Phoenicians were the builders. Others think it was a city of those Sabaeans of southwest Arabia who have baffled archeologists since the middle of the Nineteenth century. Those mysterious miners of antiquity seem to have taken about $750,000,000 worth of gold out of southern Rhodesia and sent it somewhere out of Africa. Their caravan probably took it eastward to Sofala and whither they sent it thence, nobody knows.

There is one school of conjecture which places the heyday of Great Zimbabwe in the time of Solomon.

Pure Iron Unknown

Although about 700,000,000 tons of iron are in use in the United States, not an ounce of chemically pure iron has ever been produced, states a writer in the New York Herald-Tribune. If the production of a quantity of pure iron could be accomplished, a revolution in the iron and steel industries would be likely to result from its investigation. The properties of pure iron are unknown and are merely guessed at on the basis of samples of high degrees of purity. The purest samples produced show unusual properties. Those made by methods used for determining the atomic weight of iron, by purification in a hydrogen flame, are immune to rust. Even when placed in pure water and oxygen for several months they showed no sign of rusting.

The Bachelor's Degree

The title of bachelor was not a degree at the time of its first appearance, in the Thirteenth century, but merely indicated that its possessor had fulfilled certain preliminary requirements for the degree of doctor or master. As the medieval courses varied from four years in arts to fourteen in theology, the importance of the preliminary title varied much among the different faculties. In the higher faculties, and eventually in arts, it took on the significance of a degree, except in France, where to the present day it represents merely the completion of a secondary education.

Harvesting Sponges

Sponges are obtained by dredging, the better kinds by divers, while in shallow water they are collected with a long-handled pronged fork. The sponges are then placed in fresh water for a time, and this causes the fleshy covering to decay, leaving the skeletons as we know them, to be washed out and cleaned. The best toilet sponges come from the Mediterranean, Florida, and the West Indies.

How Kayak Is Built

A kayak is made by covering a light wooden framework with seal skins. A hole is pierced in the center of the top of the boat and the kayaker laces himself securely when seated to prevent the entrance of water. The kayak is propelled like a canoe by a double-bladed paddle. Kayaks are about sixteen feet long and of about sixteen inches beam amidships.

Balsam and Spruce

The needles of a balsam are longer and straighter than those of a spruce and may or may not be pointed at the end. They are arranged widespread on the branchlets in two tiers and have silver linings. They are soft and fragrant. The cones are cylindrical and smeared with pitch. The bark is dotted with blisters, which [illegible] resin.

STAR RUBY

By Louise Jerrold

Albertine Tevans, shopgirl, falls in love with Dennis Maxwell, jewellery salesman, but is bothered by his mysterious actions. He speaks once of being on the lookout for a man with a drooping eyelid. Albertine's rich great-aunt Celia Tevans invites her for a visit. Before she leaves, Dennis gives her a star ruby to keep for him. At her aunt's estate are two other guests—Countess Yelena Loupakoff and her brother, Count Michael. Then, Dennis arrives to show some rubies to Aunt Celia. He makes Albertine pretend they are strangers to each other, and pays ardent attention to the Countess. The houseman, Bates, who always wears dark glasses, gets drunk one evening, and Albertine catches him without his glasses on. He has a drooping eyelid! In the middle of that night, she hears a scuffle in Denny's room.

CHAPTER IX

A light suddenly showed from beneath Denny's closed door. Then Albertine heard his voice.

"Sorry, old man," he was saying, "but you'll agree that it was the natural thing for me to do when I found you in here."

The door opened, and Count Michael backed out into the hall.

"Last week in New York, I awoke on a hotel fire-escape." He laughed ruefully. "This sleep-walking habit will be the death of me yet."

Dennis appeared in the doorway. "It might easily have been that tonight. I pack a wallop."

Michael nursed his cheek. "What is it you Americans say—you're telling me!"

Albertine stole back to her room unnoticed. When, at last, she was in bed, a thought struck her. With rubies worth a fortune in his keeping, why hadn't Dennis locked his door?

Yelena's low mocking laugh, out in the hall, awakened her next morning. Then she heard Dennis' deep voice, heard the two pass along the hall. Albertine jumped out of bed, and began to dress feverishly.

She decided to visit her aunt's room before going down to breakfast. Bates, sober but pallid, was adjusting Aunt Celia's breakfast rack as she entered the room.

"Bates," the old lady was saying, "I shall be very much interested in your explanation for not answering my bell last night."

"The Countess asked me to take her driving for an hour."

"It was for longer than an hour, wasn't it, Bates?" Albertine inquired, from just inside the doorway.

He turned his head quickly, but made no answer. He bent over Aunt Celia's tray and deftly poured cream into her coffee.

"Bates," Aunt Celia said irritably, "take off those dark glasses! I can't stand them when you're fussing over things this close to me!"

He dropped two lumps of sugar into her cup.

"Will there be anything else, madam?" he inquired.

"You heard my aunt," Albertine said. "If you won't take off those glasses, I will!"

She reached out and snatched the glasses from his eyes. Bates blinked.

"Poppycock!" Aunt Celia exclaimed, squinting up at him, "I can't see a thing wrong with your eyes."

But Albertine did. "I shouldn't have done that," she said. "I'm sorry."

"That is quite all right, Miss," Bates replied, putting on his glasses again.

"Bring Miss Albertine's breakfast here, too. At once, Bates," said Aunt Celia.

He left, with his curious, cat-like tread.

"How are you this morning, Aunt Celia?" Albertine inquired.

"Better. Better. Well enough for a drive this afternoon. Would you like to come along?"

"I'd—I'd love to," Albertine stammered, remembering the request Denny had made of her.

"I've been thinking," Aunt Celia announced, sipping her orange juice, "that you should know the combination of that safe of mine. Just in case something should happen to me sooner than we expect."

"Please—" Albertine began.

"Listen carefully—six to the left, three to the right, seven to the left, then four to the right. See if you can open it. No, wait—here's Bates with your tray."

"Seven—nine—six—four."

"Whatever are you mumbling, Albertine?" Aunt Celia asked sharply. "That will be all, Bates."

Albertine waited until the door had closed on him before she whispered, "That was to confuse him in case he heard you telling me the combination. My numbers would drive yours out of his head."

"Poppycock! Bates is a houseman, not a burglar. Eat your breakfast, and then see if you can remember how to open the safe."

But when Albertine later pushed aside the old tapestry piece that concealed the safe, it was already open! How careless of Aunt Celia, or—she caught her breath—someone else. Aunt Celia mustn't know, was her instant thought. With her back to her aunt, she went through the motions of spinning the dial, then swung the little door wide open.

"Very good," Aunt Celia approved. "Now, take away my tray, and put the jewels here on the breakfast rack."

Albertine saw the long black jewel case still in the safe. But were the jewels still there? She brought the case to the bed, and had a tense moment of suspense while Aunt Celia's thin old fingers fumbled for the spring.

"My pretties," murmured Aunt Celia, and Albertine breathed again. "Aren't they lovely, my dear? I want you to find that Mr. Maxwell and send him up here. Tell him to bring the rubies with him."

Albertine found Dennis with Yelena in the rose garden.

"Good morning!" she called gaily. Too gaily, she realized. "I'm sorry to interrupt, but Aunt Celia wants to see Mr. Maxwell."

Yelena lifted her eyebrows, then started toward the house with Dennis. But he paused beside Albertine, letting Yelena go on alone.

"I must see you, Blue Eyes," he whispered urgently. "Walk as far as the fountain with me."

A thicket of bushes soon hid them from the house.

"Albertine, there is something else you can do for me—something you must do if I'm to put this deal across with your aunt. I want the combination of her safe."

Albertin shrank away from him. "Denny!" she gasped.

He put a finger silently beneath her chin and lifted her face.

"Don't you trust me?" he asked.

"But—there is so much that I do not understand. It—it isn't just a matter of trusting you. It's like breaking faith with Aunt Celia. As a matter of fact, she did tell me the combination of the safe not more than thirty minutes ago."

He gripped her shoulder excitedly. "Think it over, darling! I respect your reason—but think it over! And as I asked you last night, get her out of the house for an hour or more today—"

"We are going driving—this afternoon," Albertine said slowly. "Oh, Denny, can't you tell me what all this mystery is about?"

"It isn't a mystery—it's a game. A game that I'm out to win!" he replied and was gone.

Yellow Journalism

Writes the Manchester Guardian—For the second time this week the Home Secretary was asked in Parliament whether he could take any steps to end the increasing intrusion of the press on the private affairs of citizens and the frequent exploitation of the grief of the bereaved in the interests of a "story." It is humiliating to English journalism that such questions should have to be asked. When Colonel Lindbergh and his family were driven from the United States by the pestering of the "tabloid" press, English journalism promised him immunity from such attentions here, and, after the first excitement of his arrival, gave it him. Today a section of it is falling ever farther into the habit of sensationalising the private sorrows of its own citizens—the obscure as well as the eminent, if only some "sob stuff" can be extracted from them—with a callousness as great as any that the "yellow" journalism of any other country can show.

The Japanese have the strongest hearts in the world, reports a committee established to study national health conditions after the army complained the race was deteriorating physically.

Only one Japanese in 100,000 dies annually of heart disease, the committee says, as compared to eight in America, England and Italy and 15.3 in France.

Another's Misfortune, Another's Gain

How one industry sometimes benefits from the difficulties of another has been demonstrated recently in Southern California in interesting fashion, observes the Galt Reporter.

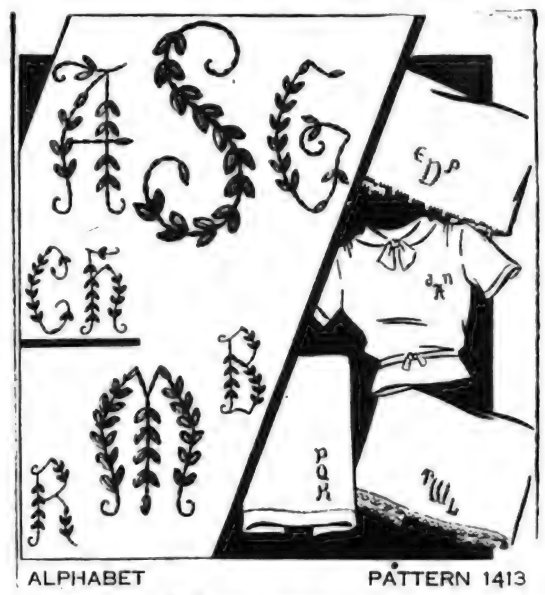
The orange-growing areas of California have experienced dangerously low temperatures this winter and, in the efforts to keep frost away from the blossoms, the owners of plantations have restored to many kinds of artificial heat-throwers. But the most convenient and effective contraption is the oil pot. During 20 days of dangerous weather a total of four million barrels of oil were used to heat the orchards. That is more than twice the total oil production in Canada in a year. It is not impressive as regards production in the United States. It would mean about one and one-third day's production in the States but it all helps in the total output.

The assumption seems to be that oranges are going to be more expensive as a result of these extra winter costs in the producing areas. It is said that the prices in Canada have advanced ten cents a dozen. However, the regions in which oranges can be grown are now nearer to Canada than ever before because of the rapid transportation presently available. While Spain has gone into eclipse as a source of supply, such countries as South Africa and Palestine are potential exporters to Canada. It is not likely that price increases, because of the California frost difficulties, will become so serious as to greatly curtail the supply.

Says Job Sordid For Girl Typists

Head Policewoman Doesn't Think Police Job Just The Thing

DETROIT.—Six sweet young typists supplied by the National Youth Administration to work in the Police Department Women's Division are getting experience, as is the intention of the National Youth Act, but Miss Eleanore Hutzel, head policewoman, feels that it isn't the right kind.



"These young women have been extremely helpful," she said recently, "but they are all under 25 and that makes it difficult. Some of the reports on crime that have to be typed in the Women's Division are rather sordid. Naturally, with girls so young, we have to pick assignments for them and this makes it difficult."

Miss Hutzel has asked the Mayor for an appropriation for one mature stenographer to take the places of the six tender ones.

City Boy to Farm

Even in such a young country as Canada urban development has set in apace and already there is a generation which does not know much about farm life. Kitchener school pupils have been started on interesting tours, parties of them being taken to farms and dairies as part of their school work. Thus they will discover really where milk and eggs come from and not as one city boy figured from egg plants and bottles.—Niagara Falls Review.

Writing Book On Keeping War Gas From Houses

LONDON— A detailed handbook on how to protect private houses against gas attacks "is in an advanced state of preparation," Geoffrey Lloyd, Parliamentary Under Secretary for the Home Office, told the Houseof Commons recently.

In response to questions concerning the protection of citizens from gas, Lloyd declared:—

"The adaption of rooms and other places as air raid shelters would for the most part, be carried out when the risk of an air attack appeared imminent.

"Information on steps to be taken is contained, as regards industrial purposes, in a handbook for factories and business purposes already published by the Air Raid Precautions Department.

"In regard to private dwellings, a certain amount of information has already been given in a handbook called "Personal Protection Against Gas."

Lloyd revealed that two regional stations capable of storing 4,000,000 gas masks had already been created in London and Manchester as part of the Government's campaign to equip all citizens with gas masks.

Eleven similar stations will be built elsewhere, in addition to a series of local stations capable of storing 35,000 masks.

A bill to raise the re-enlistment period of army volunteers from one years to five was laid before the House.

The exiled Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia has decided to enter his 8-year-old son, Prince Makonnen, in King's College at Taunton, Devonshire, England.

Famous in a Famous Hotel

Don't misunderstand—its the upper crust of society we were talking about and Coconut Carmel Pie is right at home in one of New York's most famous hotels where smart people meet amid beautiful surroundings. It is a very popular dessert among cosmopolitan people who know and love good food and it will be just as popular in your own home.

Here is the recipe as given by the pastry chief of this well-known hotel and you can't go wrong if you follow his rules. However, there is one point on which he insists—that you use the right kind of coconut. It can be either southern style or premium shred coconut, but it must be well packaged and come to you tender and moist. Picture it, crisp, pastry, russet-gold caramel custard, fluffy whipped cream and cool, tender shreds of coconut to top it off.

Coconut Caramel Pie

¾ cup sugar
5 tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon salt
2 cups milk
3 egg yolks, slightly beaten
1-3 cup sugar, caramelized
1 tablespoon butter
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 baked 9-inch pie shell
½ cup cream, whipped and sweetened
½ cup coconut.

Combine sugar, flour, and salt in top of double boiler; add milk and egg yolks, mixing thoroughly. Place over rapidly boiling water and cook 10 minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from fire, but allow to remain over hot water.

Caramelize sugar by placing 1-3 cup sugar in iron skillet over a medium flame and stirring constantly until melted and straw-colored. Add at once to thickened mixture, stirring until blended; add butter and vanilla. Cool. Turn into pie shell. Garnish with a ring of whipped cream and sprinkle cream with coconut.

Helpful Hints

To keep chamois gloves nice and soft after washing them, add a teaspoonful of olive oil to the water when washing them.

To sew a button on a garment, when it is subjected to excessive strain, sew a small button on the underside of the cloth. This will add strength and prevent the larger button from pulling off.

To clean a tall, slender vase that has become discolored on the inside and is too narrow in diameter to get a cloth down into it, soak a few tea leaves in vinegar, put this in the vase, and keep shaking it until the discoloration has disappeared.

The best utensil to use for baking green peppers, apples, or tomatoes, is the muffin pan. They are easy to remove, and will keep their shape much better than if cooked close together in a baking tin.

To take proper care of the window sash cords, to make them wear longer, and also to make the window raise and lower easier, dust the cords occasionally, then rub with a well-greased cloth.

To protect the forefinger from stains, as well as cuts, when necessary to pare a large quantity of fruit or vegetables, wrap a strip of adhesive tape around the forefinger.

The best kind of duster to use for plush and mohair furniture is a chamois wrung out of cold water.

Testimonial

Smith was giving a dinner-party to his boss, and to celebrate the occasion he bought a duck from an old woman who was famed for the birds she reared on her farm.

But the next day Smith was round at the farm to complain.

"Why," protested the old woman, "there wasn't anything wrong with the bird, was there?"

"Wrong!" cried Smith. "It was no good at all."

"Well, it ought to have been good," said the other. "That duck won first prize at the local poultry show for ten years in succession."

How to EASE a COLD

TWO SIMPLE RULES

Instead of buying costly medicines for a cold, try the way almost any doctor you ask will approve as the modern way — "ASPIRIN."

The way you use it is this: Two "Aspirin" tablets the moment you feel a cold coming on, taken with a full glass of water. Repeat, if necessary, according to directions in package. If throat is sore, gargle with three "Aspirin" tablets in ½ glass of water for almost instant relief. The "Aspirin" acts to fight fever, aches and pains of a cold and the cold itself. Relief comes quickly and you have wonderful comfort.

• "Aspirin" tablets are made in Canada by the Bayer Company, Limited, of Windsor, Ontario.

Prefer Canadian Cars

When King Edward VIII abdicated and crossed the Channel, he took with him the motor car of Canadian manufacture which he has been using for some time and this he is now employing during his stay in Austria. Canadian cars are, indeed, popular with individuals of high rank in the United Kingdom. Not so long ago, the King's brother, the Duke of Kent, took delivery of a sedan of the same make as that which the Duke of Windsor is using, and more recently a straight eight built in Ontario has been ordered by Lord Elphinstone, brother-in-law of Queen Elizabeth. Moreover, Lord Bessborough, a former Governor-General of Canada, who is now devoting himself to his English business interests, has become owner of a similar machine. When it is remembered that these and many other cars of Canadian manufacture are being sold in England in competition with the best that the United Kingdom and the Continent can produce, it is indeed a tribute to their quality, reliability and beauty that they should be given the preference. — Brockville Recorder and Times.

Fickle Fame

Fame serves up more evidence of her fickleness. Just a few days ago one-time film star Marie Prevost died in obscurity after trying futilely to make a comeback.

And just the other day a crippled woman mounted a court witness stand in New York and said: "I am Gertrude Ederle." It was a name emblazoned in newspaper headlines the world over just eleven years ago, following her Amazonian feat of swimming the English Channel.

Two years after her exploit, fame began to desert Miss Ederle. She became an obscure swimming instructor. Then fate struck its cruelest blow. In court, during her suit for damages, she told how she had spent the last several years in torment, because of a fall in an apartment house.

From such stories as these, people who have never achieved fame may draw a grain of consolation. Apparently, to paraphrase a sporting idiom "The higher you go the harder you fall."—The Sherbrooke Record.

Wise Precaution

The question of an admittance fee to see the Dionne quintuplets has been seriously considered. There will be general endorsation of the view taken by Dr. Dafoe. "If we run a theatre and charge admission, the public has rights. We would have to keep open day by day. If the children are not well and have to be guarded we will not keep open for the public." The report comes today that the Quints have the "sniffles" and the public is barred.—St. Catharines Standard.

Intellectual Ties

The number of Canadian students in the universities of Paris has been growing considerably for some time. A despatch from the Havas Agency reports on this: "An increase of 20 per cent. in the number of Canadians studying in Paris this year has been estimated. Twenty of them are studying medicine and about thirty taking literary courses. Canadians and Frenchmen fraternize at the University and accustom themselves to the manners and the thought of the two countries." At the Congress of the French press held in Quebec in 1934 on the occasion of the fourth centenary of Canada personages like MM. Flandin, Marchandeau, Franc-Nohain and others insisted upon the advantages of promoting the best and most solid intellectual relations between Canada and France. Our students who are working in the City of Light can, if they will, work successfully to create these necessary ties of intellectual sympathy. Canadians will certainly gain something and the French will certainly lose nothing.— The Sherbrooke La Tribune.

Short And Merry

Someone has wisely said that the man who drives his car at 60 miles an hour with one hand while he lights a cigarette with the other is not in line for old age pension. — Kitchener Record.

Cold Facts

"Every four minutes" says a medical item, "An American dies of a disease caused by the common cold." It must be very monotonous for the average person in the United States.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

Acid-Throwing

It is not certain that Hon. Charles Cox, Mayor of Port Arthur, is doing the right thing in failing to lay a charge against the woman who is alleged to have thrown acid in his face and thereby endangered his eye-sight. No sense of gallantry should obtain in a case of this kind, a very serious criminal offence. It is alleged that because the Mayor of Port Arthur was taking a certain stand against high school salaries, the method of throwing acid in his face was taken. The seriousness of the offence gives inducement to cranks at any time to go and do likewise. Public men have a right to be protected, and invoking the law would serve that purpose, no matter what the penalty might be on judicial review of the case.

A case of acid-throwing cannot be lightly set aside, not even by the victim.—St. Catharines' Standard.

No Privacy

Edward was on the verge of tears when he greeted his sister, the Princess Mary. No doubt the photographers on the spot will preserve his expression for posterity, but it does seem that, in the circumstances, a little of the privacy which is the right of common people might have been spared for this touching reunion.—Toronto Globe and Mail.

True To Life

"Do you think you can make a good portrait of my wife?"

"My friend, I can make it so lifelike that you'll jump every time you see it."—The Fort William Times Journal.

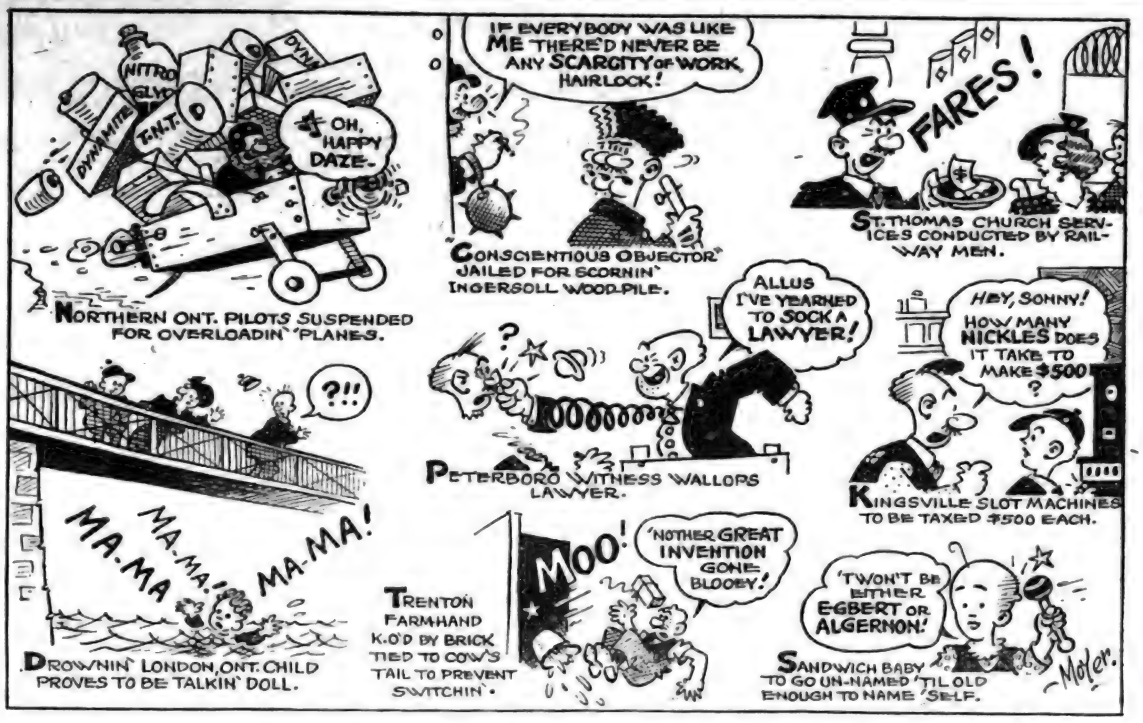
Roads To New Mine Fields

One of the features of the Dominion Government's policy which has come in for a good deal of favorable comment in this part of the country is the policy of giving assistance to mining roads, roads which will assist to open up new mining fields, increase the country's mineral production and so provide more work. Quite a bit has already been done in that connection in Algoma, and there can be no doubt but that this work has played its part in the development which has taken place in the last year or so in the Goudreau and Michipicoten fields. And the same is true in other parts of Northern Ontario and other provinces as well. But there is scope for more work along the same lines.—Sault Ste. Marie Star.

Sound And Fact

Windsor reports the lowest relief list in five years and that sounds most encouraging until it is realized that the Border City is still looking after 18,713 persons who are without any source of income.—Peterboro Examiner.

THE EMPIRE



Intelligent Immigration

No such danger threatens in the case of those who cross the ocean young—young enough to be able to grow up into good citizens of the Dominion in which they are settled. So far from appreciating the necessity of migration in youth, however, opposition speakers attacked it with some passion. Their zeal to prevent child drudgery did them credit, but they were fighting an imaginary bogey. The necessity of giving youth a proper training in its new circumstances before it enters a Dominion labor market is now recognized, and, as our Melbourne correspondent has just pointed out, the success of the first Fairbridge Farm School has shown how the problem can be solved. It is by the encouragement of this and similar schemes through financial assistance as the new Bill provides, that the advantages of youth-migration can be secured and its drawbacks avoided. But the wider implications of these projects must not be overlooked. If the Dominions wish their new settlers to be young and readily assimilable, then they too must take thought for their future. Migration and development must go hand in hand.—London Times.

Unemployment in U.S.A. Decreases By 477,000

NEW YORK—Unemployed workers in the United States in December, 1936, totalled 8,399,000. A decrease of 477,000, or 5.4 per cent from November and a drop of 1,844,000 from December, 1935, the National Industrial Conference Board estimated recently. The board is a statistical organization supported by large industrial concerns.

Western Ontario May Be Linked Later On To Trans-Canada Route

Plans Given To Aid Wheat

For Commission—Opinions Are Varied at Half-way Mark

WINNIPEG.—Schemes to assist Canada's wheat industry, lend assistance to producers and develop foreign markets have been placed before the Turgeon royal grain commission which stands adjourned until its resumption in Vancouver about the end of this month.

In the 1,200,000 words of evidence already written into the records during Winnipeg and Saskatoon sittings, the commission has heard arguments for and against various forms of marketing. Causes of declines of wheat and flour exports and numerous views on various phases of the industry have been submitted.

Tariffs' embargoes and quotas by European countries and general contraction of world trade were blamed for reduction of wheat exports. Among contributing factors were cited Canada's textile tariffs which were declared to have reduced purchasing power in European countries which bought Canadian wheat.

Reciprocal trade treaties, stabilization of exchange and vigorous advertising and sales policies were advocated as steps to extend Canadian wheat sales. Open competition had to be met and quality standards had to be maintained, witnesses declared. Importance of foreign markets to the wheat and flour industry was generally recognized.

Marketing methods brought out wide discussion. Representations were made on behalf of various kinds of wheat boards, pools and the open market and futures method although submissions of the wheat pools themselves have still to be made. Guaranteed prices were proposed as an aid to farmers and opposed on the ground they offered nothing to farmers who had no crop to sell.

STRATFORD. — As a part of Western Ontario, Stratford may yet benefit from the Trans-Canada air mail service which is being inaugurated by the Dominion this summer, although immediate plans do not include Western Ontario, according to a communication obtained from a government official by City Engineer W. H. Riehl.

"It is reasonable to suppose that in time Western Ontario will be linked with the Toronto line," writes J. R. K. Main, of Ottawa, assistant inspector for the superintendent of airways, who replied to a recent inquiry by Mr. Riehl as to their air mail plans for this area.

Mr. Main, late in January, had inquired about the airport license here.

At that time he wrote: "It is to be hoped that the great improvement in the aviation industry will bring merited rewards to those municipalities which, like your own, have struggled to keep airports in operation during the period of depression."

This struck such a sympathetic note that Mr. Riehl was tempted to find out on his own just what the present plans of the trans-Canada air service may be, as far as this district is concerned.

Don't Be Too "Brave"

The doctors say that while the influenza that is prevalent is of a mild type it is capable of being far from mild if foolishly dealt with. They will tell you not to try to fight the flu and go ahead as if you were quite all right. They will tell you to go to bed and rest it off. Even if one feels he cannot afford to lose a day or two doing this he can take a piece of paper and work out his problem, showing that it would be better to take a day or two off in February, 1937, than take off all 1937-38-39 and the rest of the 20th century. Where your own health is concerned don't be afraid to be scared.—Toronto Star.

Must Find Market For Pure Seed

Necessity Stressed by Dr. G. I Christie to Seed Growers Association

TORONTO. — Necessity of finding markets in Ontario for pure seed was stressed by Dr. G. I Christie, president of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, in an address before the Ontario Field Crop and Seed Growers Association.

Speaking before the association annual luncheon, the college president said the government must help to find markets for the seed. Indifference of a minority of farmers, he added, should not be allowed to interfere at all with progressive farmers interested in producing maximum yields.

Seed-cleaning plants in Ontario were proving of great assistance. He assured the members both the college and the experimental farms would continue field crop experiments in an effort to produce continued pure strains in seeds already developed.

L. H. Hanlan referred to the great progress made in northern Ontario in good seed growing.

"We will soon be in a position to supply all Ontario with its seed requirements, particularly where early maturing of the crop is necessary," he said. "The quality of our seed is constantly being improved and at local and international shows northern Ontario is winning an increasing number of high awards."

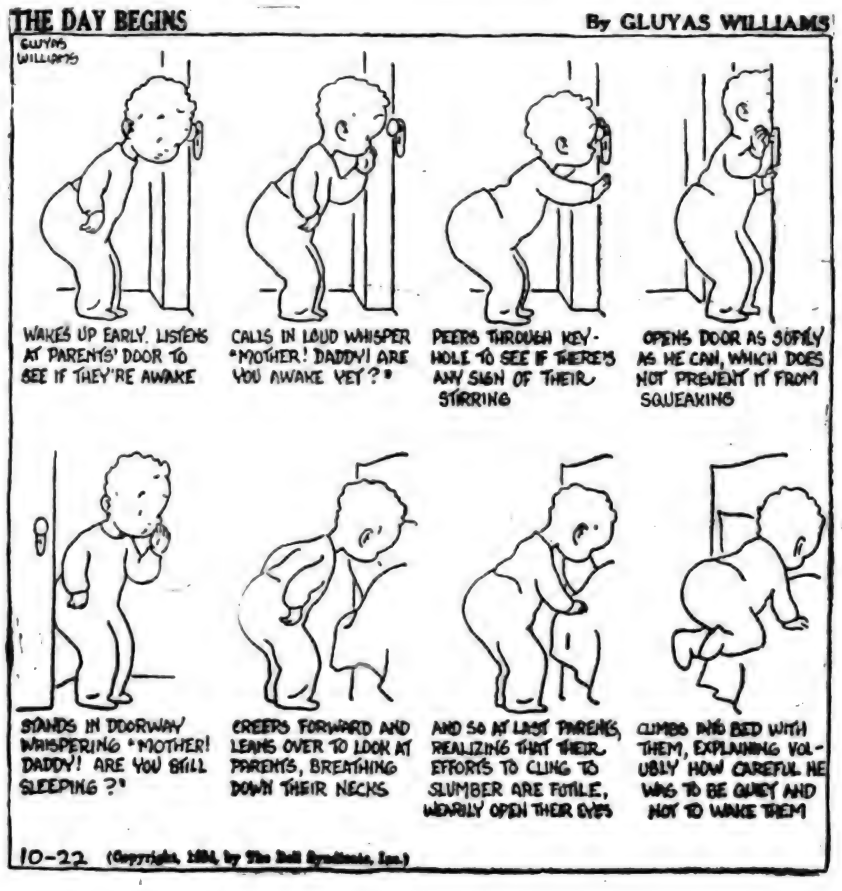
Elliott Moses, member of the association from the Six Nations Reservation, Brantford, told the delegates interest of the Indian farmers in fine seed was exemplified through establishment at the Deseronto reservation last year of a seed plant by the Mohawks. He said the Six Nations Indians were installing a plant this year.

Farm Products Seen As Motor Fuel Base

Would Take Cars of Surplus, B.C. Chemist Says

VANCOUVER — Motor fuel will provide the solution to Canada's problem of surplus agricultural products, Dr. J. Allan Harris, research chemist at the University of British Columbia, believes.

Motor fuel made from grain, potatoes, apples, pears, cherries and strawberries he placed in the key position. Next he predicted building materials, rayon and lacquer made from hay and straw. Artichokes and dahlias would produce sugar.



A blend of only 10 per cent would account for 50,000,000 gallons of alcohol and remove 28,500,000 bushels of grain each year from the annual surplus, the professor said. In addition to the above mentioned, alcohol can be distilled from any surplus agricultural product.

With a reference to dwindling exports the young scientist observed that "even if everybody stuffed themselves the collective stomachs of the world are not large enough to absorb all the farm products of today."

Scientists look upon the farmer as a primary producer, not only in the first commodity of life, food, but in the first phase of industry, raw materials, he said. With decreasing natural resources they expect agriculture to produce the bases of practically everything.

DROUGHT PROMOTES BUTTER

Butter production in Saskatchewan's drought area last year increased 22 per cent figures submitted to the Saskatchewan Dairymen's Association convention showed. The reason: Calves milked the cows when the crops were good. Last year the farmers attended to this chore.

REACHING THE GOAL

Consumption, as tuberculosis of the lungs is commonly called, is a wasting ailment; stubborn to master, requiring treatment and care over a long period of time. It can seldom be cured at home. Then, too, it is a communicable disease, especially dangerous to young children.

This was fully realized by the founders of the National Sanitarium Association, when forty years ago they erected the first hospital in Canada for the treatment of this disease.

This venture met with much opposition and even ridicule, for at that time it was firmly believed that tuberculosis was incurable. It was just one of those things which had to be, so why bother about it.

However, it was not long before the regimen of this small hospital began to show results—people were actually being cured—going home and talking about it.

Such was the small beginning of the Muskoka, the Toronto and the Queen Mary Hospitals for Consumptives, which now provide for more than one thousand patients.

The progress made and the change in outlook is reflected by these and the many other fine sanatoria throughout the Dominion, and by the large number of public and private organizations which to-day are sparing no effort to overcome tuberculosis.

The results have been that thousands upon thousands have been given a chance to get well who but for hospital treatment would have been left without hope, and the mortality from this disease has been reduced by 75%.

With tuberculosis ousted from the premier position to seventh place as the cause of death, there is cause for congratulation, but there is also the danger of the feeling of self complacency and the slackening of effort. With the goal in sight, this would indeed be a calamity, for tuberculosis will not halt its advance unless it is forced to do so. This can only be accomplished with the continued co-operation of the public at large.

The Trustees of the Muskoka, the Toronto and the Queen Mary Hospitals for Consumptives are determined that, so far as lies within their power, no one who suffers from tuberculosis shall be denied a chance to get well. If you would help in this great life saving work, please send a gift to National Sanitarium Association, 223 College Street, Toronto.

We know that spring at last is here

Art of Hiking

This is the time of the year when some people enjoy hiking through the country. So to get into the swing of things we planned such a day.

For two weeks we had laid careful plans. Many laughed at us when we said that hiking was a great sport, even Commodore Sassafrass laughed so hard that he couldn't shovel out his rowboat for the Armchair Yacht Club At Home dance. Nevertheless the day came for our journey.

We were up at the very first crack of dawn (about eleven-thirty). We had planned a trip in the glorious sunlight. But what was that noise, the janitor shaking the ashes? Yes, of course, but the other noise, what was that?

We sprang to the window to see what was the matter (tore open the sash) and low and behold it was raining. But what of a few harmless raindrops. The famous slogan, "Man or Mouse" appeared before us. That was enough. We donned our rubber boots, rain coat and battered fedora and were off.

Our route was down Yonge Street. There were three ways of getting down this thoroughfare. We could swing ourselves from tree to tree like Tarzan but somewhere around Bloor street you run out of trees, we could climb on top of a street car and go downtown in Buck Rogers style or we could borrow Little Sally's roller skates.

Reaching Queen street we darted into Woolworth's to have a bite to eat and read the morning newspaper over the next customer's shoulder. Thanking Mildred for the extra piece of cake, we hurried out to continue our hiking.

On to Richmond street and then we rambled right over to the familiar old movie playhouse. The doorman smiled warmly and we proceeded at once to our favourite seat.

The picture turned out to be a swell musicale. And so the wonderful day passed. Just think of it, how much better to be at the theatre than in some stuffy office.

So when the lovely days come again, the Maestro urges all the lads to forget business problems, asphalt sidewalks and wives and go forth into the vast outdoors.

Remember Nature is calling, the birds are whistling and the breezes dance and run after you. So does the bill collector.

In Addition

The Highway Inter-Church Softball League will hold its meeting at Port Credit on Monday, March the Eighth, with everything in full swing. Further details will be announced later.

BOOK REVIEWS

Boys are still reading Peck's Bad Boy and chuckling over it, and boys will continue to do so for generations to come. It is the kind of book that stays young, even though it was written more than a generation ago, for boys are much the same in all ages.

Solemn, pretentious, uncomprehending grown-ups will always be the butt of their wit and their mischief. It has been so in all past time, and will be so until boys cease to be boys and become angels.

The late Governor Peck of Wisconsin understood that, and made his son George the hero of the book. Mr. Peck lives in Chicago and is an old friend of Perkins Bull, and an admirer of his works. About Mr. Bull's Book on Birds, he writes . . .

16 February, 1937.

"My dear Mr. Bull:—

"It gives me great pleasure to commend you on the artistic, painstaking and educational results of your ornithological effort.

"FROM HUMMINGBIRD TO EAGLE intrigued me greatly since, through its pages I renewed acquaintance with many intimates of the field that tested my prowess over a long period of active years.

"The volume should be a decided help as well as a great pleasure to every bird lover and I congratulate you accordingly".

"Wishing you continued success and happiness, I am pleased to remain

Most cordially yours,
(sgnd) Geo. W. Peck."

Green, White and Yellow Colors of Mexico's Flag

The colors of the Mexican flag, green, white and red, are symbolical of the aspirations of Mexico at the time it began its life as an independent nation. However, states an authority in the Washington Post, the meaning of the national coat of arms is much more deeply rooted in the history, in the traditions and in the personality of the country. The eagle which perched upon a cactus plant, strangling a serpent, is rich in meaning, rich in symbolism. For centuries on end it has lived in the hearts of the Mexicans, in the hearts of the people who descended from the first settlers of the Valley of Mexico; and, besides being very much alive in cherished traditions, it may have lived in reality; it must have lived in reality.

In the beginning of the Fourteenth century the Aztecs, an Indian tribe, wandered into the rich valley of Mexico from the north, and spread throughout that part of the country. In 1325, having halted on the shore of the principal lake, they beheld, perched upon a cactus plant, a royal eagle of extraordinary size and beauty, with a serpent in its talons and its broad wings opened to the sun. This was considered an excellent omen by the priests and the place was chosen as the site of a great Aztec city. The foundations of this future metropolis were laid at once by sinking piles into the shallows, for the low marshes were half buried in water. Such were the beginnings of the Great Tenochtitlan, capital of a mighty empire whose degree of civilization astounded the conquering Spaniards led by Cortez into Mexico.

During colonial times the nopal and the eagle appeared at various times as decorative motives in the coat of arms of the City of Mexico. When independence was attained in 1821 the tricolored flag was adopted, and an eagle perched upon the nopal (cactus plant) and strangling a serpent, became the national coat of arms.

Smaller the Body, More Rapid the Heart Beat

The heart beats 100 times a minute in a small child and on an average of 72 times a minute in an adult, observes a writer in the Chicago Tribune. Apparently, with some exceptions, the smaller the body the more rapid the pulse. In a mouse, for instance, the heart beats from 500 to 1,000 times a minute, and in a horse only 30 times a minute.

The human heart pumps about 500 gallons of blood a day in an adult. During a normal lifetime it beats about two and a half billion times and moves a total of nearly thirty-five million gallons of blood. It never rests; that is, it never rests completely. The moments between its beats, when it relaxes and fills with the liquid so vital to life, are the periods of least strain. The slower the heart beat, within a healthy range, of course, the less the strain. That is why the heart of the calmly relaxed person or the sleeping person is having a much easier time of it than that of the person who is dashing up a flight of stairs. Plenty of rest and relaxation, therefore, are extremely important in maintaining the heart in an efficient condition.

Reducing Gold Compounds

When solutions of soluble gold compounds are treated with reducing substances, gold is usually precipitated in the form of a very fine powder. This powder, says a writer in the Chicago Tribune, is generally of a dark red color. When tin chloride is used as the reducing agent the resulting precipitate of tin oxide and gold, known as purple of Cassius, is of the color indicated by its name. It possesses little importance, but it formerly exerted a peculiar fascination upon the alchemists, who were accustomed to attribute all manner of amazing therapeutic properties to the product.

The Royal Observatory

King Charles II had the Royal observatory built in 1675 so that John Flamsteed, leading British astronomer of the day, could "apply himself with the utmost care and diligence to the recording of the tables and the heavens and the places of the fixed stars." Seventeenth-century navigators were sorely confused as to matters of geographic and stellar location, and it was to bring order to their upset world that "Greenwich Mean Time" and uniform latitude and longitude were developed by royal decree.

Draw Papers for Brides

Youths and bachelors in Poland observe the Festival of St. Catherine, which in France is celebrated only by unmarried girls. On the eve of the Festival Polish lads who wish to determine their future mates write on slips of paper the names of all the women, married or single, they know. These they place under their pillows, and on first awakening next morning they draw out a slip at random. This one, according to superstition, contains the name of the wife-to-be.

The Mariposa Lily

The Mariposa lily is a tulip-like perennial with simple or somewhat branched stem, one-half foot to four feet tall, rising from coated corms and bearing a few narrow leaves, and showy white, yellow, lilac or bluish flowers, often spotted or marked in the center. The three large, broad petals, one to two inches long, usually bear a conspicuous basal gland. It is sometimes called the wild tulip of California.

Juvenile Hockey

(Simpson & Sampson)

Last Wednesday the Streetsville Juveniles met Weston High School at Willowdale and defeated them by a score of 3—2.

The winning goal was scored by Les Longworth with only a minute and a half left to play. The other two goals were scored by J. Rice.

On Saturday Earl Haig Juveniles defeated Streetsvills by a score of 4—0.

It would help a whole lot if the boys had a few more supporters — Why not turn out and help the boys?

Friday night Streetsville Juveniles clashed with Lambton Kirgsway and after a close game the score was 1—0 in favor of Streetsville. Honors for the goal go to Simpson, scored in first period. A mix up in the second period involved Bill Evans Frank Reid and Yours Truly.

A Dance will be held Wednesday March 17th (see advertisement elsewhere in this issue) by the Juveniles to raise funds, which, at present, stand at zero. Keep the date open Everyone welcome.

The Open Column

Last week's floods should serve as an apt illustration of agricultural representative Cliff Graham's drive for reforestation of the county. A cloudburst in the northern end of the county reached streams so quickly, and swelled them to such heights that hundreds of dollars of damage was done. Had there been a reasonable percentage of forest on the lands where the downpour occurred, the swelling of the streams would have been delayed sufficiently to keep the water levels down and allow the water to get away more gradually, or at least, so the reports of practical engineers who have studied the situation would have us believe.

Roman parents were noted for their strictness and insistance on discipline. We hear of a parent who adopted the Roman system this week. His son was accused by a traffic officer of shattering the speed limit into decimal fractions, so the father came into court and urged that his son's driving permit be cancelled to teach the young man a lesson.

Since we wrote a brief item about cameras, one of our (ahem) admirers loaned us his pet picture-snatcher, which cost considerably less than $50, and for which he make great claims. We were very dubious about its capabilities, but amazed ourselves by taking some fairly decent snapshots in the Maple Leaf Gardens the other night, when Georgetown midgets were performing for the Toronto fans.

Discussing children and their arrival in this world of pain with a Peel doctor the other day, we were told that conditions surrounding childbirth, in many cases, have retrogressed to much the same level as that existing during the Great War and its immediate aftermath. He said that, in one week of his practice, five children had been born, one after the other, with minor deformities, and that the number of normal births under his attention had decreased pitifully during the past three years, in proportion to the sub-normal deliveries.

He attributed this condition partially to the fact that many of the mothers under his care had been wives of relief recipients, and had not been properly nourished, with the result that their children were not normal. Which condition, if it were to be remedied, would bring up a very delicate question, to wit: Is it the duty of the governments, Dominion, Provincial and municipal, to provide sufficient sustenance for the unemployed that this condition would be removed, or is it the duty of the unemployed to voluntarily submit to sterilization to avoid having children whom they cannot support? It is our opinion that, if the present unemployment situation continues much longer, that this question will have to be seriously considered, and that its consideration will be one of the bitterest legislative battles ever fought in the Dominion.

UNITED CHURCH NOTES

The meeting of the W.M.S. last Tuesday at Mrs. W. N. Atkinson's was a most interesting one. About thirty women were in attendance. The president, Mrs. Lundy was in the chair. Mrs. Rogerson led in the bible study. Mrs. Bond sang; Mrs. Jones gave the talk on the study book. Many helpful thoughts came out in answer to the roll call. Mrs. Lamb, Mrs. Dingwall, Mrs. Watson and Mrs. Rogerson led in the devotions. A little play on stewardship entitled "Waked Up" was splendidly presented by Mrs. MacArthur, Mrs. Evans, Mrs. Sinclair, Mrs. J. D. Switzer, Mrs. Adams and Mrs. Jourdan. Mrs. Caslor read recent news from Lawrence Dolby and Mrs. Steen told of recent letters from Bessie. Mrs. Watson commenced a map study of the W.M.S. fields and missionaries and on her suggestion a round robin letter was written to Bessie Steen. Mrs. Dowling, supply work convener called for volunteers for a quilting bee to be held at her home on Thursday. Committees were appointed to arrange for the annual 17th of March social gathering. Plans for co-operating in the "Kingdom of God" Movement were discussed and the leaflets distributed. At Mrs. Temple's suggestion a little collection was taken to provide 6 copies of "World Friends" for the Mission Band. It was agreed that the Easter Thank-offering should be given at the regular meeting in April to be held at Mrs. Wagner's. It is expected that Dr. Sundar Gwaiquad, an Indian woman doctor at present in Canada, will speak at the morning service on a Sunday in April. At the conclusion of the meeting all enjoyed a cup of tea together and went away feeling that it had been good to be there.

17TH OF MARCH

Will all the O'Dooleys and the Murphys and the Flannigans and others of the same nationality get out their good clothes for the annual celebration of the 17th of Ireland to be held in the School Room of the United Church in aid of the supply work of the Woman's Missionary Society Wednesday, March 17th at 8 o'clock sharp. Everybody come and welcome.

THE EDITOR TOLD THE TRUTH

A delightful feature of a newspaper man's work is that he always looks on the bright side. For this he is frequently criticized for coloring up his stories, not telling the truth, and so on, but he does it because he has to most of the time.

Weekly newspapers, particularly the personal and society columns, often seem sweet on nearly everybody. The columns sometimes head like a kind of congratulational society all around. It isn't that the newspaper columnist is necessarily a liar, but has a large heart and is capable of perceiving the good points in everyone. The business makes him optimistic and if he tones some things up to make them more presentable, there really isn't any harm done, and it sometimes saves funeral expenses.

The story is told of the Missouri editor who announced that just for one issue he would tell the truth. Here are a few items from that issue:

John Bonin, the laziest merchant in town, made a trip to Belleview yesterday. John Doyle, our grocery man, is doing a poor business; his store is dirty, dusty and noxiously odoriferous; how can be expect to do much? Rev. Sty the sermon was punk; if the Rev. gentleman would live up a little closer to what he preaches, he'd have a bigger congregation. Rove Sonkey died last Saturday at his home in this place. The doctor gave it out as heart failure; the fact is, he was drunk, and whiskey is what killed him; his home was a rented shack on Rowdy Street. Married—Sylvia Rhode and James Canaban, last Saturday evening in the parsonage; the bride is a very ordinary town girl who doesn't know any more than a rabbit about cooking and who has never helped her mother three days in her life. She is not a beauty by any means and has a gait like a fat duck. The groom is well known here as an up-to-date loafer who has been living on the old folks all his life. They will have a hard time while they live together, and the News has no congratulations to offer."

It was the last issue the Missouri editor ever printed.

District News

Mr. and Mrs. George Trueman, of Malton, are leaving shortly to make their home with a daughter in Buffalo.

Stephen Hill passed away in Toronto last week, and was buried in Erindale cemetery. He was a son of the late Thomas Hill of Streetsville. Henry Hill of Brampton is a brother.

The W.A. of Cooksville United church served a splendid supper one night last week to about 70 people in the S.S. room. Rev. G. M. Chidley was chairman. Speakers were Rev. R. J. Irwin and Mr. Harshman of Toronto. Mr. Bibby was the soloist and Mr. Leonard presided at the piano for the sing-song.

The ice harvest at Erindale has not been very good this winter. When the men had a chance to cut some on the pond their saw broke through the ice and was submerged in about 15 feet of water. The saw was recovered after some difficulty, but the weather has been so mild that there is no good ice to cut.

The Streetsville Legion had a very successful dance last Friday night at "The Dugout", with the Harmony Orchestra supplying the music.

UNITED CHURCH

The Rev. Ernest Thomas, D.D., of Toronto, addressed a large gathering of young people in the United Church Streetsville, Monday night, on the subject of "Christian Marriage—and before." He dealt with a difficult question ably and discerningly and if one felt at times a sense of disagreement there was always the feeling that a master of diction, of Biblical research and a man with an amazing understanding of literature and events was frankly facing one of the most needful of the studies of life.

Mr. Thomas made plain that there is a difference between marriage and Christian marriage. There can be no divorce in Christian marriage. There may be divorce in marriage but not in Christian marriage which contemplates a Unity growing to a complete personality and triumphing over differences, foibles, trials in the achievement of its end.

The competitor in a race loses all sense of spectators in his eager outlay of physical prowess and strength to make a record or to win the race. The Christian marriage calls for a similar concentration of will and dedication. Nothing is allowed to interfere with the attainment of the objective.

The speaker dealt with marriage as a sacrament and with fine simile and historical data held that Christian marriage is a Sacrament, an outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual grace, a sacred mystery and union of being. He said it is also indelible, it leaves an indelible impression upon the life.

He strongly deprecated frivolity in the face of the possibilities to be achieved in Christian marriage. With humour, apt illustration he thrilled his hearers for an hour and a half.

A number of the Anglican Y.P. Society attended and expressed pleasure at the opportunity to hear the distinguished speaker.

COMMUNITY CLUB

At the last meeting, held at Mrs. W. Hamilton's, Mrs. Cordingly gave a talk on Labor Saving Devices, acquainting us with the many conveniences used in our modern homes. The prizes winners at the euchre held at Mrs. J. Miller's were: Mrs. W. Hamilton and Billy Miller. Lucky prize went to Mrs. Marchant. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Workman on March 10th.

District News

Business seems to be improving in many ways in Streetsville. The McFarren Brick Yards have started operations again and the Dominion Sash took on several men this week. There is not much unemployment in the village now, and things are looking brighter for the days that are ahead.

The community sale at the home of J. H. Beattie, fifth line west, yesterday, was a good success, and fair prices realized.

The Customs Office at Oakville is to be closed April 1st.

A son was born at Peel Memorial Hospital on Feb. 26th, to Mr. and Mrs. King Hollingshead, Streetsville.

Donald Campbell Armstrong and Miss Bessie Irene Fullerton were married at Brampton on Feb. 27, by Rev. W. A. Watson.

Kilwinning Lodge, Toronto, visited Streetsville Masonic Lodge Tuesday night, when their officers exemplified degree work. The visitors also supplied talent for the program which followed the "fourth" degree. Wor. Bro. Ed. Roxboro, W.M., presided.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Manes, who intend moving from Brampton to Streetsville, were presented with a beautiful sa'in-bound blanket and salad bowl by the euchre club.

BOOK REVIEWS

Miss Jessie Oliver, Superintendent, The Cedarvale School for Girls, Georgetown, Ontario, writes Mr. Perkins Bull as follows:

"'From Hummingbird to Eagle' will be of infinite value in becoming better acquainted with our feathered friends, the birds.

Our girls having come fom the city do take a real interest in the birds and animal life."

Perkins Bull's cartographer and his secretary have recently returned from Ann Arbor, Michigan, where they have been making reproductions of early maps, to be used in FROM REVOLUTION TO REPULSION which Mr. Bull is now working on.

These maps are of peculiar value and interest, for they show exactly where, in the 13 colonies, the British emigrants of a century and a half or two centuries ago, first settled when they emigrated from the Motherland.

"SALADA"

GREEN TEA

STAR RUBY

By Louise Jerrold

Albertine Tevans, shopgirl, falls in love with Dennis Maxwell, jewellery salesman, but is bothered by his mysterious actions. He speaks once of being on the lookout for a man with a drooping eyelid. Albertine's rich great-aunt Celia Tevans invites her for a visit. Before she leaves, Dennis gives her a star ruby to keep for him. At her aunt's estate are two other guests—Countess Yelena Loupakoff and her brother, Count Michael. Then, Dennis arrives to show some rubies to Aunt Celia. He makes Albertine pretend they are strangers to each other, and pays ardent attention to the Countess. The houseman, Bates, who always wears dark glasses, gets drunk one evening, and Albertine catches him without his glasses on. He has a drooping eyelid! In the middle of that night, she hears a scuffle in Denny's room.

CHAPTER X

Michael monopolized Albertine until lunch. She wished she could get rid of him, but didn't know how. As for Yelena, Albertine did not see her again until noon. And Dennis was closeted with Aunt Celia until Bates announced lunch.

"Your aunt is having a tray sent up to her room," Dennis informed Albertine. "She wants to rest a little longer before her ride this afternoon."

Albertine intercepted a glance Yelena flashed to Michael, but could make nothing of it.

Dennis she noticed seemed thoughtful and depressed at lunch. She had decided, during the morning, to trust him with the combination of her aunt's safe but, when she smiled at him to convey to him her decision in his favor, he didn't seem to notice.

After lunch, she managed to get him alone a moment to whisper, "About the combination—" but he quickly interrupted with "Never mind—I've got what I want." Then, the Russians joined them.

An hour later, Albertine and Aunt Celia set out for their drive.

"Mr. Maxwell is leaving us tonight," Aunt Celia said abruptly.

The car swerved. Aunt Celia glared at the back of Bates' head.

"I've decided not to buy the rubies, after all," she explained.

So Denny had failed to make the sale. That, Albertine thought, accounted for the way he had acted during lunch. He was going back to Detroit, taking her heart along with the rubies. And her pearls, she remembered suddenly. She must ask him for her pearls. And she must make him take back that mysterious star ruby.

When they reached the village, Bates brought the car to a stop in front of the drug store.

"Just a refill of my regular prescription," Aunt Celia instructed him.

As he entered the shop, the State policeman whom Albertine had seen at the depot came out and walked over to the car.

'How are you, Miss Tevans?" Have not seen you since you got back from New York."

Aunt Celia beamed upon him. "I want to introduce you to my niece, Miss Albertine Tevans," she said. "She is going to live with me."

Bob Fletcher looked a trifle flustered—probably, Albertine suspected, because he had taken her for a maid on the day of her arrival.

"You haven't been to see me lately," Aunt Celia said severely.

"I knew you had company, and I was afraid I'd be butting in."

"Poppycock!" said the old lady. "You know better than that. Come as often as you can. I hope you and Albertine will be friends."

"I hope so, too."

The young policeman smiled, tipped his cap, and departed.

"Nice boy," Aunt Celia commented.

They drove for more than an hour. Albertine felt relieved when she heard her aunt finally order Bates to turn back. She was impatient to see Dennis and have a talk with him before he left.

Home again, she saw from her bedroom window that Dennis was alone in the garden. Hurriedly, she went down to him, only to find that Yelena had joined him.

"Aunt Celia tells me you are leaving tonight," Albertine said.

"I was just trying to persuade him to show me the ruby collection before he goes," Yelena remarked. "I love jewels."

"The Countess," Albertine told Dennis, "has a beautiful sapphire necklace."

"Sapphires?" He looked at Yelena. "They would be lovely on you. Won't you please wear the necklace tonight?"

"The clasp is broken," the Countess said carelessly.

"Aunt Celia was so generous to give me that string of pearls." Albertine tried to speak casually, tried not to glance at Denny, although she had spoken for his benefit—to remind him that he had not returned the necklace.

"Pearls," said Yelena, "are perfect on the very young, don't you think, my Dennis? Personally, I prefer more vivid jewels—like rubies. You are going to show them to me aren't you?"

"If you will show me your sapphires," Dennis countered.

In the queer brief silence that followed Albertine looked uncertainly from one to the other.

"Star rubies are awfully valuable, aren't they?" she said at last, to break the silence.

"A two-carat pigeon-blood ruby of conventional cut is worth upwards of six thousand dollars," Yelena answered. "And a star—" She made an expressive little gesture.

"The countess is well informed," Dennis commented. "Quite a few rubies have histories, Miss Albertine. If you are really interested, I would like to tell you about one in particular some time."

His smile had an indefinable secret quality. Albertine's heart leaped.

"But—you're going away tonight!"

"So I am," Dennis replied. "Shall we all go back to the house now and see what Count Michael is up to?"

Denny didn't want to be alone with her, Albertine thought. Consciousness of the fact grew during the succeeding hours when she saw how definitely he avoided her.

Disconsolately, she was dressing for dinner when an unsigned note was thrust beneath her door.

"Keep it. I beg of you, until I can explain," she read.

On the dresser before her, was the star ruby. She had taken it from its hiding place and wrapped it in a bit of tissue paper, with the intention of getting it to Dennis somehow. He had apparently anticipated that. With a sigh, she put the jewel back in the powder puff.

When she was dressed, she went down to the drawing room, praying that Aunt Celia would not notice that her pearls were missing. But Bates was late in announcing dinner, and Aunt Celia had ample time to discover their absence.

Squinting up at her niece she asked sharply, "Your necklace? Why aren't you wearing your necklace?"

Albertine's eyes flew appealingly to Dennis, who was lighting a cigarette from a match the Count was holding.

"The pearls needed cleaning," he told the old lady. "I'm taking them back to Detroit with me."

The Count made a slight exclamation. "The match," he murmured. "It burned my fingers."

"Dinner is served," Bates announced at that moment.

Denny was taking a ten o'clock train, Albertine learned. She miserably watched the hands of the clock creep toward that hour. Dinner. Coffee in the drawing room. Music.

Shortly after nine, Aunt Celia ordered Bates to bring the car around. Five minutes later, without the slightest warning, the lights went out.

Victoria in Film

London Correspondent in the Ottawa Journal writes:—The veto on dramatization of Queen Victoria expires next June, and already more than half-a-dozen stage a film versions of a momentous reign are in a busy state of preparation. Producers realize that few actresses are fit to undertake the big role. They must be neither tall nor equipped with the modern slim silhouette, they must combine regal dignity with almost the suburban simplicity, and they must speak the Queen's English. At least that is the popular conception to which the box office will play up. Actually Queen Victoria talked German in the family circle, and recent biographical estimate, as in the case of her 16th century compeer, Good Queen Bess, attributes the lustre of her reign most of all to the great statesmen and distinguished captains who ennobled it. But highbrow history cannot hope to compete with the popular potency of the film screen. And Queen Victoria's fame is certainly secure so far as it rests on her intense respectability. Under her regime the Smart Set wore red flannel at least metaphorically.

Blast Away Fallen Rock At Niagara Falls, N.Y.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y.—A face-blasting operation on the American Falls was considered as a means of enhancing the beauty of the towering cataract. Engineers said the first major task, if the work were attempted, would be to divert the course of the roaring waterfall to permit dynamiters to function.

Rob Roy MacLeod, president of a civil group proposing the operation, said it would remove a huge pile of rocks accumulated at the foot of the Falls in a series of rock slides. Scientists attribute the slides to centuries of "weathering."

The blasts would be so arranged as to blow the heap into the deep water of the lower river.

In addition to marring the Gorge scenery the rock pile has shortened the sheer drop of the waters by many feet.

Small rock slides have been common in the Niagara Gorge, but the slide piled up at the foot of the American cataract tore huge chunks out of the brink.

Another major slide weakened Table Rock, near the Canadian Horseshoe Falls. The rock, named as a lure for honey-mooners, was blasted into the Gorge last July.

Careless Driver As Deadly As Revolver

Writes the Kirkland Northern News — Whenever someone shoots someone else with a revolver, everyone says "Dear me, revolvers are very dangerous things and should not be allowed; we thought you had to register or something. Hang the brute!"

But when someone, either by reason of hard liquor, stupidity or recklessness, piles up a car and provides three or four jobs for the undertaker, nearly everyone says "My, my, what a sad accident. And the driver was killed, poor fellow!"

The point behind that while revolvers and automatic pistols are fairly well controlled, automobiles and the trucks are not as yet regarded by the law as possible instruments of death, not sufficiently, at least.

Most any half-baked youth, or short-sighted individual, or nervous person or even a person subject to heart attacks can obtain a driver's license. The examination is perfunctory and the attitude seems to be "you can drive it, and heaven help you if you hurt anybody."

Until the public is made to realize that there is almost as much responsibility in driving a car or truck as there is in driving a locomotive, and that equal safeguards should be applied, the traffic death toll will continue.

Even "Hankies" Undergo Changes

LONDON— Milady has a new problem to contend with. The handkerchief committee of the Whole-sale Textile Association has taken steps to standardize production of handkerchiefs and to increase the size from nine to 10 inches square.

Buyers for leading wholesale firms claim the larger 'chief has been in demand for some time, but were unable to offer any reason other than it might be due to the outbreak of influenza.

The Bells of Hope Street

What happened at Number 13 Hope Street, Edinburgh, Scotland, on March 3rd, 1847, should have set that thoroughfare amongst the immortals, but most of us know little about it. The Bell family lived at that address when Alexander Graham Bell (who was to invent the telephone 27 years later at Brantford, Ontario) was born.

Bell's grandfather, his father, and his uncle were all specialists in the art of speech production—of vocal physiology. The inventor's own interest in that subject began at an early age. To his early training Bell attributes his later ability to discover the principle of telephony and to translate that principle into a practical mechanism which has profoundly influenced human history.

Giving Nature a Chance

At the convention of the Ontario Hunters' Game Protective Association in Toronto one enthusiastic delegate said he was to embark shortly upon an experiment to show how a countryside can be made to produce wild life. He stated that his work would centre in King Township, near Toronto.

There are few people in Ontario who will not wish him well. The more of wild life this Province possesses the greater will be the influx of tourists, some to shoot during the hunting season, more to operate cameras at other times. Someone has said that tourists are more interested in live deer and rabbits, and partridges and pheasants, than in dead ones, and this being so we should have in Ontario more of these animals and birds, plus the wild duck and the wild goose. See what a public attraction Jack Miners' sanctuary is!—Renfrew Mercury.

Diphtheria Clinic

Dr. C. J. Hamilton, Medical Officer of Health, has opened a free clinic for the inoculation of Cornwall children against diphtheria. He hopes that within a few weeks, every child in Cornwall, rich or poor, will have been immunized against the dread disease.—Cornwall Standard Freeholder.

Worth Preserving

The gift of Henry Ford, a complete set of the famous old McGuffey readers, for so many years in common use in the schools of the United States, has been presented to the library of the University of Western Ontario. These reprints, published at the expense of the motor magnate, will thus be available to show future genorations what and how their ancestors first learned to read. We hope that the same thing is being done for the readers which used to be employed in the schools of Ontario. Educationists of the future will lose something if they are not familiar with the adventures of Sam and Ned at the dam, the visit of May and Ann to the woods where the sap was being gathered and boiled, the sad story of what befell Ben's pet kid when it was attacked Ned's dog, and the gay ride of Tom and Ann in the gig.—Brockville Recorder.

Reaches Other Places in Time

The popular question to ask your neighbor on the streets these days is: "Have you had the 'flu yet?" If he answers negatively he is one of the lucky ones, as an epidemic of mild influenza has been sweeping over the town. Attendance at the schools has fallen away; the staffs of business houses and stores have been decimated, in some cases to the point where it is no longer a minor annoyance but a serious problem with which to cope.. Public health nurses are being kept busy and the physicians, for the last week or ten days, have had little rest. Among the victims of the epidemic is the school attendance officer.—Orillia Packet.

A Word For the Strap

They restored order in the Guelph Reformatory with the strap. In other words the lads who thought themselves "tough" were given a sound thrashing. Many self-styled humanitarians will protest violently at such brutality If they had ever seen an angry mob milling round, they wouldn't. Mob violence can only be met with violence of some sort, and we feel that the reformatory authorities showed great restraint in handling the situation. In some penal institutions not in Canada, machine guns would have been barking, and there would have been quite a few funerals. The thrashings may have knocked a little sense into the young chaps who still have a chance to make good after they leave the place.—Northern News.

Cannon-Fodder

A merchant told us the other day of a customer who had just informed him that he would not be paying his bill this month because the money was going into oil stock. From another quarter we heard of a lady who had offered to sell some property for a quarter its real value—to raise money for a flyer in the oil market. This, we think, is emphatically the sort of money that should not be used for speculation.

There are people—such as the successful oil companies—whose natural business it is to prospect for oil. There are funds— such as the surplus savings of debt-free and prosperous citizens—which should quite properly be available to finance such exploration. The tragedy of any boom is that it usually goes on long after the legitimate speculator has deemed the risk too great for him and got out.

The cannon-fodder of the stock market are the little people who are tempted to go on and on for the very human reason that it is so much easier and more exciting to gamble than to save.— Calgary Herald.

Red Flannel

To help "put them over" (the red doo dads we mean)—the fancy name of "snuggles" has been coined for them. But red woollies by ony other name will still be just red woollies. The motive for the throw-back to Victorian days is that girls and women are taking more to the outdoor life in Winter, and as silks and satins are not very warm, the sensible thing is to revert to thick, serviceable undies.

The new "snuggles" are like the old-fashioned bathing suits, too. They are all of a piece extending from the neck to the ankles and are intended to protect the feminine epidermis from the consequences of a tumble into the snowbanks when ski-ing or skating. Silkies would not do that.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

Epic of the North

An epic of the north marked by remarkable endurance and friendly devotion, and in which the airplane played a part as it does so often in that region, comes from Lac du Bonnet, Manitoba.

A man died and his friend determined that he should have Christian burial. It was a hundred miles to the nearest settlement. The friend set out through the wilderness and 24 days later arrived at his destination. The despatch tells he encountered blizzards and for days at a time had to seek what shelter he might from the force of the storm. Through forest and over frozen lakes he fought his way and eventually triumphed.

Then an airplane took off and returned with the remains of the dead man. As an illustration of stark courage and of devotion to a friend this man's record stands high in the annals of a region where these great virtues are conspicuous.—Saint John Telegraph-Journal.

Sporting Comment
By KEN EDWARDS

Napoleon Lajoie is probably the only ball player who ever signed a contract on the back of an envelope.

Ty Cobb, Jr., son of the greatest baseball player that ever lived is the University of Georgia's new court coach.

Did you know about "toughy" Eddie Shore; at the top of National Hockey League fame for many years . . . . he led his own orchestra before his hockey debut, saxaphoning all the way . . . look out, maybe Vallee is tough, and we don't know it.

It has been my privilege in the past to talk with all kinds of speed demons, holders of records on land and water (including Sir Malcolm Campbell, the man who drives faster than a bullet), but never have I had a tete a tete with a parachute jumper, nevertheless, I have gathered facts that should be of interest.

John Tranum, an Englishman, fell 17,500 feet before pulling the rip-cord of his parachute. One would probably think a jump like this would mistaken, as I was. Gene Austin, vet-mistakes, as I was. Gene Austin, veteran jumper, stepped off a plane at 20,000 feet, falling 16,000 feet before doing anything about it and received $50 as per contract.

Austin says he travelled 120 miles an hour in this jump. He says after about 1,500 feet you take your first somersault, and reminds us not to pull the rip-cord unless we are horizontal to th earth and facing it, otherwise we will experience a terrific jolt . . . say, wait a minute, who's doing this? . . . thanks just the same, Gene. Happy landing.

Rules Millar Will Valid

TORONTO.—Upholding the decision of Mr. Justice Middleton, court of appeal at Osgoode Hall recently ruled the "baby-race" clause of the Charles Vance Millar will valid and held that mothers of illegitimate children are not entitled to share.

The clause leaves the half million dollar residue of the eccentric lawyer's estate to the mother giving birth in Toronto to the most children within 10 years from Millar's death as shown by registration under the Vital Statistics Act.

Appeals of I. F. Hellmuth and Samuel Factor, on behalf of relatives attacking the validity of the clause on the grounds that it offended against public policy, and of John R. Cartwright on behalf of Mrs. Pauline May Clarke, were dismissed.

In delivering the judgment of the full court Chief Justice N. W. Rowell indicated the findings were unanimous. He pointed out that Mr. Justice Middleton had held that in the clause under consideration the word "children" meant legitimate children and did not include illegitimate children.

Relax Restrictions on Lumber Exports

REGINA.—A bill to relax restrictions on shipments of timber from Saskatchewan for pulp and paper manufacturing was given second reading in the Legislature this week.

The bill would enable the Province to salvage burned-over timber that is fast deteriorating. It is designed to bring to completion negotiations which have been in progress between the Government and certain Wisconsin interests.

Existing legislation does not permit export of timber for pulp and paper manufacture. The bill would restrict shipments to timbers that would deteriorate rapidly.

Need Riot Says Mother

FORT ERIE.—Treatment accorded her 17-year-old son Harold in school here brought Mrs. Morley Spratt before the Fort Erie board of education with the remark: "What we need is a riot like in Guelph in our high school."

If such a riot occurred, she said, there would be an investigation "and cleaning up."

She said her son had to stand in a hallway for 35 minutes one day because he misbehaved.

Principal H. E. Thompson said Spratt's teacher found him shooting paper balls with an elastic band. He said the case was being investigated.

Toxoid Campaign

RICHMOND HILL. — Within the next few weeks it is expected that every school child and every pre-school child in this village will have received the complete course of anti-diphtheria toxoid. One of the largest groups to turn out so far was toxoided at the public school Monday and Dr. Rolph L. Langstaff medical officer of health, stated that the village is now in a fair way to cut down the danger of any serious epidemic to a minimum. "The parents of the younger children have shown a lively interest in the matter," saide one of the teachers, "and seldom has a movement been promoted showing such an excellent response."

Favour Strike

TORONTO. — Following a meeting ni the Labor Temple of members of the International Brotherhood of Maintenance - of - Way Employees working on the Canaian National Railways, H R. Dancy, Chairman of the union, stated there was a pronounced feeling among the men in favor of a strike to secure a restoration of their wage-cuts.

The meeting Dancy stated, had been called to explain the statement issued recently along with the ballot sent to all members of the seventeen unions working for the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways. The ballots must be returned by March 15, he said.

"The maintenance - of - way employees are receiving $19.68 for a week of 48 hours. There are other railroad workers earning less. While I cannot say so officially, the workers are in favor of a strike," said Dancy.

Hungry Strikers Refuse Pies

LOS ANGELES. — Ten men went hungry in a pie factoy this week.

Conducting a "sit-down" strike for 25 per cent. wage increases, they have had no food from the outside and now decline to eat the company product. There are dietic as well as moral reasons for this, they said:

We won't touch a non-union pie." said Paul Magyar.

Safety Move

EDMONTON, Alta. — Two-way voice wireless equipment probably will be installed by Royal Canadian Corps of Signals at Chipewyan, Alta., and Goldfields, Sask., early in the spring in an effort to increase safety and accuracy in northern commercial flying, it was announced here by Major J. Genet.

Chipewyan is about 375 miles northeast of Edmonton and Goldfields is in the Lake Athabaska region.

Collins Bay Felons Heard

KINGSTON. — Twenty-six prisoners of the Collins Bay branch of Portsmouth Penitentiary testified this week before the Federa Royal Commission probing the penal system of Canada.

Their evidence was submitted to the Commission behind locked doors in Collins Bay Allan Fraser, Secretary of the Commission, refused to divulge any portion of the testimony.

Duke of Windsor

VIENNA. — The Duke of Windsor talked with his youngest brother, the Duke of Kent last Wednesday for the first time since his abdication. The Royal brothers, hurrying to a hotel from separate trains, were visibly affected by their meeting. An adjutant reported they immediately punged into discussion of Edward's plans. The Duke of Windsor is still surveying the field of many possible castles and villas but the final decision on his future home, informed sources said, will be made with Mrs. Wallis Simpson's aid.

$20,000,000 For Equipment

MONTREAL. — Expenditure of more than $20,000,000 for equipment in 1937 is announced by the Canadian Pacific Railway. The building program includes 50 locomotives, 30 passnger and express cars, and 3,600 freight carriers of various types.

Contracts already have been let for the equipment and actual work, in some cases has started, the railway announced.

Famous Editor Passes

NEY YORK. — Unable to combat pulmonary congestion following a heavy cold, Rollo Ogden, 81, editor of the New York Times since 1922, died here this week.

Famous with the profession of journalism, Ogden's name was not well known to the general public because his work was done in the editorial columns of the Times, where writers are anonymous. Throughout his long service in journalism, he was associated with only three newspapers — the Times, the New York Evening Post and, for a time, the Manchester Guardian of England, for which he was New York correspondent.

Oliva Dionne Appreciates Act of Government

CALLANDER, Ont. — In two sentences, Oliva Dionne confirmed an announcement in the Ontaio Legislature that he had become "one of the keenest advocates of continued Governmental protection and assistance" for his quintuplet children.

At his home across the road from Dafoe Nursery, where the quints live apart from the rest of the family, Dionne said: "We appreciate the protection of the Government. We couldn't get along without it."

It was the first admission by the slender father that he agreed in any way with Ontario legislation under which all business and personal arrangements for the quints are in the hands of a board of guardians. A member of the board, Dionne seldom, if ever, attended a meeting of the board.

Cattle King Dead

CALGARY. — Senator Patrick Burns, 81, pioneer and last of the West's great cattle kings, died on Wednesday.

Although ill for the past two years, Senator Burns died unexpectedly from the effects of a cold which afflicted him ten days ago.

Born in Oshawa, Ont., Senator Burns came West without a penny. He built a fortune in the cattle industry, owning extensive ranches and establishing the packing company bearing his name. His nephew, John Burns, now heads the company.

Tariff Exemptions Hit Manufacturers Cattlemen Optimistic

Cotton and Wool Duties Slashed — Downward Revisions on Silk, Wearing Apparel and Knitted Goods Also in Effect — Continuous Free Admission of Canadian Wheat Into British Market.

OTTAWA. — Leading textile manufacturers contend that the new tariff policy, granting more favorable terms on cotton and wool to British producers, will seriously injure the Canadian industries.

On cotton gabardines from Britain, the duty is being reduced from 22 1-2 to 12 1-2 per cent; on woven fabrics of cotton there is a reduction from 15 to 12 1-2 per cent; on handkerchiefs from Britain the duty is cut from 25 to 15 per cent; on woven fabrics for covering books it is reduced from 25 to 15 per cent; on rovings, yarns and warps of vegetable fibres, Canada cuts the duty from 20 to 17 1-2 per cent; on rovings, yarns and warps wholly of jute, the reduction is from 27 1-2 to 25; on cordage from 20 to 17 1-2, on woven or braided fabrics from 25 to 22 1-2; on linen fire-hose it is reduced from 25 to 15; on clothing, wearing apparel and articles made from woven fabrics, and all textile manufactured of vegetable fibres, but not containing wool, the duty on British goods reduced from 25 per cent plus 3 cents per pound specific duty, to 25 per cent. The specific duty of 3 cents per pound which Mr. Bennett introduced is completely discarded.

Duty Abolished

On British woven dress linens, Canada completely abolishes the restricted free entry into the United Kingdom for all products except eggs, poultry, butter, cheese and other milk products, with regard to which certain reservations made in the old agreement are continued.

Broadly speaking, unrestricted free entry of all other Canadian products is of estimable benefit not only to the agricultural industry of Canada, but to mining and manufacturing. It means continued free admission of Canadian wheat into the British market, and this item alone accounted for $154,000,000 last year. It includes wheat flour, barley, oats and other grains and grain products of which Britain bought more than $20,000,000 from Canada last year.

It provides for preferred admission of Canadian apples, tobacco, fruits, bacon and hams, of which Britain took some $30,000,000 last year. It means $60,000,000 to $70,000,000 on minerals and metal products, about $3,000,000 worth of automobiles and $5,000,000 to $1,000,000 of automobile products, including nearly $3,000,000 on rubber boots and shoes, based on last year's exports.

Britain guarantees to Canada margins of preference on a scheduled list, including lumber and wood products, which guarantees an annual market of $25,000,000 or more, and preferential entry for Canadian salmon and other fish, which means not less than $5,000,000 per annum to Canadian producers.

Another important concession guarantees Canada against any increase in the British duty on motor cars and parts In this connection, it has been agreed that the Empire content requirement will not be raised above 50 per cent. This is of immense importance to the Canadian automobile industry, since it means that 49 per cent. of the content of their vehicles may be of American origin and they will still qualify for tariff preference in the United Kingdom.

Of major importance to Canadian farmers and packers is the assurance Britain gives of the opportunity for expansion of bacon and ham exports to the Old Country to the annual maximum of 280,000,000 pounds. The British market took $25,000,000 worth of these Canadian products last year and the quota leaves ample room for enlargement of this trade in the next three and a half years. The new pact also safeguards Canadian exports of cattle and meat within the framework of the United Kingdom program for regulation of meat supplies.

Pennies Provide Marriage Licenses

ROCHESTER, Ind.— Two young couples had to wait an hour while County Cerk Kline Reed counted the 936 pennies they gave him for two marriage licenses.

CAT PORTRAITS

Did the photographer say, "Watch the birdie"? This command ought to mean something to a cat, but, as a matter of fact, these poses were obtained by dangling a bright object near the camera.

IT is natural for an amateur photographer, according to his tastes and interests, to become intrigued with one kind of picture subject: animals, machinery, trees, skyscrapers, wild life, marine views, and what not. The result, often, is that he finds himself pursuing a fascinating hobby within a hobby—searching for and photographing interesting types of his favorite picture subject.

One of the most enjoyable and challenging of one-subject hobbies is making portraits of cats. You soon learn that the mature cat is an animal of many expressions, and that he rarely fails to reward you with an interesting one. You discover, also, that cats have individuality, even those of the same breed. Consequently, in making cat portraits you obtain a variety of distinctive studies.

Sometimes—and this is the challenging part of cat photography—you need something more than photographic skill to be successful. When it comes to posing for the camera, the feline is often a perverse creature. Dogs beyond the puppy stage are generally obedient, but, to keep a cat in front of the lens, it is usually necessary to entertain him. Even then, Thomas is likely to "take a walk" out of the view finder, with complete indifference to what you say to him or about him. He has a mind of his own. Hence, there will be times when you will need Christian patience and an assistant to recover the cat. Especially outdoors, when Thomas is in a lively mood, you may find that the best you can get is 9/10 backyard and 1/10 cat. On the other hand, Thomas loves to lie in the sun, especially after a good meal, and then, usually, you find him a most tractable model.

Inside the house the chances are always good because here a cat is generally quieter and disappearing acts can be prevented. Here, too, you can more easily arrange a contrasting background. The surest way to catch a pose is to use a flash bulb. Floodlight lamps seem to cause most cats to lie down and bask. Cats, however, being inquisitive, like to look out of windows for long periods, giving you a chance to creep up on them and snap a good picture by daylight.

A most useful "accessory before the fact" for cat pictures is a portrait attachment over your regular lens permitting close-ups within arm's length. But, if you do not use a portrait attachment, be sure your focus is correct so that the image of the cat will be quite sharp. Then you can mask out the surrounding part of the negative to obtain a big-image enlargement as in the pictures shown above.

Remember that the typical physical characteristics of cats are their whiskers and the liquid gleam in their eyes. The one needs a contrasting background; the other, it must be confessed, needs luck with the light reflections. If you succeed in revealing both, you are a good cat photographer.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of my dear daughter, Ruth Marion Greig, who passed away March 7th, 1936.

There is a face that lingers forever
There is a voice we are longing to hear,
There's a smile we'll remember forever
Though we try to forget every tear.
There's a sad but sweet remembrance,
There's a memory fond and true.
There's a token of affection dear,
And heart ache, dear Ruth, for you.

Lovingly remembered by Mother and others.

"Underground Railroad" Name Originated in Ohio

The incident that is credited with having led to the coining of the term "Underground Railroad" took place in Ohio in 1818. In that year, says a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, a negro by the name of Tice Davids escaped from his plantation in Kentucky and was making his way toward Ohio.

Reaching the shore of the Ohio river, with his master in close pursuit, the fugitive knew that there was no other path for him but to jump in the water and strike out for the opposite side. After some time the master located a skiff and started out across the river in pursuit, all the while keeping his eyes on the escaping negro. Almost until he reached the Ohio shore the slave-master followed the fugitive with his eyes, but by the time he got out of the skiff and onto the land he lost track of the negro who had disappeared—somewhere.

The truth of the disappearance was that a group of abolitionists in Ripley, seeing the negro swimming breathlessly toward the shore, gave him a hand and hurried him away over the hills of Brown county, and he was guided from one station to another until he reached northern Ohio. Near Sandusky he settled down to spend his days in freedom.

Finding no trace of the missing negro after a thorough search in the vicinity of Ripley, the master spurted: "That fellow must have gone off on an underground road."

This incident and the master's remark became popular among the abolitionists who soon adopted the term "Underground Railroad" for their system of helping runaway slaves.

First U. S. Machine-Made Paper Delaware Product

The great development of paper-making machinery and its introduction into the industry here dates back to the first quarter of the Nineteenth century. The first machine-made paper manufactured in the United States was made by Thomas Gilpen in 1817 on a cylinder machine in Brandywine, Del. The first Fourdrinier machine made in this country was made in 1829. In Europe machinery was utilized in the paper-making industry from about the year 1770.

Rag paper, which was known to the Chinese before the Christian era began, was introduced into Europe by the Saracens in the Eighth century, first through Spain, then France, Holland, Italy, Germany and England. The Saracens or Arabs are thought to have learned the art when they captured the Chinese city of Samarcand in 704, A. D.

There was little demand for paper at first in the American colonies, with few books printed, no newspapers for some time, and little personal correspondence. Parchment was still in use, while the paper that was required was imported from Europe. The first paper mill in this country was built in 1690 in Germantown, Pa.

Athens Stands in Great Cup

Modern Athens stands in a great cup with mountains on three sides and the coastline on the fourth. It has grown out around Mt. Lykabettos, which rises sharply out of the cup, and the busy city makes a sharp contrast with its classic ruins, which look down serenely on it from the Acropolis. Athens is an outdoor city, where home is only the place to spend one's siesta or to sleep, and much of the buying and selling of its merchants is carried on in the streets. The Greeks are as fond of their siesta as the spaniards are, and at noon all shops close until 3 p. m., staying open later at night to make up for lost time. Dinner is not served until 9, and 2 a. m. is no later to an Athenian than midnight is to an American.

First Ruler of Bavaria

Prince Luitpold, the first ruler of Bavaria, came to the throne of this German state on June 7, 1886. Ludwig II and Otto I, sons of Maximilian, the former ruler, were declared insane, and Luitpold was given the regency. Ludwig had ruled under another regency, but upon his deposition committed suicide. During the long rule of Luitpold Bavaria shared the common prosperity of Germany; but it was long before she forgot her traditional racial and religious antagonism toward Prussia. This feud in the German Confederacy lasted until Ludwig III became king on November 5, 1913, upon his father's death.

Apple Pie an Old Standby

Apple pie has stood the taste test of appreciation for the last four centuries and is still the first choice of all pies. The greatest amount proportionally of the sixty million spent annually for baker's pies is spent for apple pie. There is no figure available on the number of pies made in homes and in the smaller restaurants and tearooms, but visits to different parts of our country show that apple pie is the favored one among pies everywhere. In the early building days of New England it was served as a breakfast dessert—a custom still in vogue in some homes of that section.

Value of Cod Liver Oil

Among other things, the cod has a very valuable liver which, when boiled down, yields that delectable cod liver oil. This, like spinach, is supposed to be of great benefit to babies and children who are not very fond of it, but they get it "in the sun." It is put up in glass or capsules and sold as "bottled sunshine."

Charlie Caves Wins a Gold Watch in Toronto

On Sunday night we were listening to the broadcast from Toronto over the radio and were pleased to hear that Mr. Charlie Caves of Streetsville had won a gold watch in a guessing contest conducted by the People's Credit Jewellers. Contestants were to guess the number of old watches piled in the window and whoever guessed nearest to the number was to receive a new gold watch. Now Charlie is a lucky boy —but he did not do the guessing. He was lucky in this way—he had a nice young lady who did the guessing for him and put his name on the lucky ticket. So it was a surprise for both parties. Charlie was notified about his good luck and was present at the broadcasting station when the announcement was made. He was requested to step up to the "mike" and say a few words, which he did. He thanked the Jewellers for the nice watch and hoped that others would be as lucky as he had been.

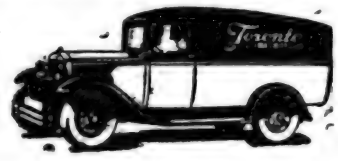
In Memoriam



In loving memory of my dear mother Annie Harrison, who passed away March 8, 1936

One beautiful eve at the close of the day,
A voice was calling, that seemed to say
"Ye that are weary come and rest,
Lay down your head upon my breast
Come, follow me, and I will guide
Thy footsteps on the Jordan's side"
My mother heard the sweet command
And gently took the Savior's hand

Ever remembered by daughter,
Ethel

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON X.
Life Here and Hereafter Through Christ
(John 14: 1—15: 27)
Printed Text John 14: 1—15

Golden Text:—I am the way, and the truth, and the life: no one cometh unto the Father, but by me.—John 14:6.

The Lesson In Its Setting.

Time:—Thursday evening, April 6, A.D. 30.

Place:— The discourse in chapter 14 was given in the upper room where the Lord's Supper was instituted; the discourse in chapter 15 was spoken on the way from the upper room to the Garden of Gethsemane.

Let not your heart be troubled:—The heart is the seat of feeling and of faith. Christ's own heart at times knew deep agitation (John 12: 27; 13: 21; 11: 33). The disciples were naturally troubled because they knew that that night a great crisis was impending and certainly they must have known that Christ was now about to be slain; probably it was dawning on them that Judas Iscariot was on some wicked mission; certainly they knew that Peter was soon to deny the Lord.

Believe in God, believe also in me:—It is with the heart that men believe unto righteousness, and, consequently, to quiet the heart in an hour of trouble and fear, some object of belief must be presented. There is no use in trying to comfort other people unless you have something to present to them upon which they can lean, or, better, some one to whom they can look with trust and confidence.

In my Father's house:—The word here translated "house" is the one used throughout the New Testament for any ordinary home (e.g., Matt. 2: 11; 7: 24; 8; 14, etc.), though it refers more to the household or family living in a particular house than the building itself. Fatherhood speaks of home and love. A father on earth would naturally belong to some home and our Father in Heaven has His home. Christ knew about the Father's house because He had come down from the Father (John 3: 13; 6: 33, 38, 41, 50, 51, 58).

Are many mansions:— The word here translated "mansions" comes from a word from which derives the verb "remain," and means, literally, "abiding places." "Heaven is a true home."

If it were not so, I would have told you. "Of course he would. It was his nature to tell men everything it was necessary for them to know. He would not allow his friends to go on holding delusions when a word from him would set them free."

For I go to prepare a place for you:—The word here translated "prepare" simply means "to make ready," and, of course, to make ready before something is needed.

And if I go and prepare a place for you, I come again:—This promise to return refers to the Second Advent of our Lord. He went away in bodily form, visible to those who stood with him on the mount from which he ascended; there is no Scripture for believing that our Lord is not today in bodily form, still a man, and of course, God. He will return as he went away. This is exactly what the angels announced to the up-looking disciples on the very day of Christ's ascension (Acts 1. 10, 11)..

And will receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also:—With this statement compare 1 Thess. 4: 15—17. When a father of a home is compelled to go into some far-removed state, or another country, to establish a new residence, he makes every plan to bring his wife and beloved children to that place as soon as circumstances allow. Love always longs for those beloved to be near.

And whither I go, ye know the way:—"Heaven is Christ, and the way to Heaven is also Christ. They are not to be translated to Heaven at once; and so the knowledge of the way to it and assurance that they are travelling on it,—sure of reaching the end,—are even more important for them to contemplate.

Thomas saith unto him, Lord, we know not whither thou goest; how know we the way? :— "His question here has a melancholy tone combined with some dullness of apprehension, but there is honesty of purpose in it. He owns his ignorance and asks for an explanation."

Jesus saith unto him, I am the way:—This verse is one of the most inexhaustible sentences ever spoken by the teacher come from God. "The pronoun is emphatic; I and no other." He is the way between Heaven and earth; the way to the Father's house; the way home; the way that leads to eternal glory (Heb. 10: 19—22). He does not point the way—he IS the way.

And the truth:—"If we desire to know God in his essential attributes, we need but study Jesus Christ.

If ye had known me, ye would have known my Father also:— "The emphasis in the first clause is on 'known;' in the second on 'Father.' The meaning is: "If ye had recognized Me, ye would have known My Father also."

From henceforth ye know him, and have seen him:—"The announcement which Christ had made had placed the nature of the Father in a clear light. The disciples could no longer doubt as to his character or purpose. In this sense they had 'seen the Father' though God is indeed invisible (1: 18)."

Philip saith unto him, Lord, show us the Father, and it sufficeth us:—The Lord had been speaking about the Father's home, with its many abiding places, and then he adds that the disciples HAVE seen the Father. Philip responds to this announcement immediately as though his heart cried out: "Only make that true that I have really seen God and it will be enough." After all, it is the great cry of the human heart to be assured of the reality and the character of a loving Father in Heaven. This the Lord Jesus came to reveal. In him we know the Father in Heaven.

Jesus saith unto him, Have I been so long time with you, and dost thou not know me, Philip? "God is holiness and love; the real manifestation of these moral perfections can only consist in a moral life such that in it, in its acts and words, the moral perfection of the divine character shall shine forth.

He that hath seen me hath seen the Father; how sayest thou, Show us the Father?;—This sentence most unmistakably makes Christ speak of himself as equal with the Father. "A Christian, even a perfect one, would not say, 'He who has seen me has seen the Christ.' How much less could a man, even a perfect man, say, 'He who has seen me, has seen the Father'!" In Christ dwelt all the fullness of the Godhead bodily (Col. 2: 9).

Believest thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? the words that I say unto you I speak not from myself: but the Father abiding in me doeth his works: — Christ first asks a question and then answers it, both in the same sentence. The fact that God was in him, and he in God the Father, both working as one, the Son revealing the Father, and the Father accomplishing his purpose through the Son, is proved both in the fact that the very words of Christ were the words of God which he had received from his Father, and the words that he did were accomplished by the power of God working through him.

Believe me that I am the Father, and the Father in me: or else believe me for the very words' sake:—Christ's wonderful ministry presents more than enough evidence to prove his absolute deity and the Gospel records of his life are a mighty argument for proving and a plea for believing him to be the Son of God.

Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that

And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name:—"Prayer is now to be the channel through which that power is to be received for their work."

I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto the Father:— We should be very careful to observe that Christ did not say that greater "miracles" than he performed would his followers perform. The word here translated "work" is not the Greek word meaning "a sign" or a "miracle," such as we find in 2: 11; 11: 47; 12: 18, 37, etc., but simply the word meaning "work," "deed," "business." "the things that men can do with the power that man possesses," in the case of Christians, with the power that God gives them.

That will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son:—"Every answer to prayer He gives will have this as its object: when there is no prospect of this object being obtained, He will not answer. It follows as a matter of course that this must be with us, as with Jesus, the essential element in our petitions the glory of the Father must be the aim and end, the very soul and life of our prayer."

If ye shall ask anything in my name, that will I do:— "To ask in the name of one is to use his name as a plea, as a recommendation why our request should be granted. It is sinking personal claims and advancing the claims and merits of another.

If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments:—There are wonderful privileges in the Christian life, and precious promises, to all who believe in the Lord Jesus; but there are also obligations. Of course, if we do not love the Lord Jesus, we are not his; if we do truly love him, we shall love to do what he asks us to do. A son is not in fellowship with his father if he is continually disobeying him, and we are not in fellowship with our Lord if we are living in disobedience to him.

Has Laugh for Death

Declaring that old age holds more terrors for her than death, Miss Daly Spoke, 26, has joined the "Suicide Squad, new organization of stunt women employed by British movie studios. She says that she wants to be dead by the time she's 32.

Hal Roach isn't content with keeping audiences giggling at his two-reel comedies. He has sent for Constance Bennett, dragging her back from her long vacation in New York, and has started production on a big feature picture. It is to be a drawing-room comedy, very smart, swift and very swanky. It must be that he heard Constance in that broadcast of "Private Lives" that convinced everyone she had a real flair for high comedy.

When you see Eddie Robinson and Bette Davis in "Kid Galahad" take a good look at the handsome giant who plays the heavyweight champion. That is Bill Haade, one of the most extraordinary characters the studios have ever found. Not so long ago he was a steel worker in New York and very proud of his job. A theatrical producer came along and got him to play on the stage in a short-lived play called "Iron Men." When that closed Warner Brothers sent for him.

Margot Grahame is proudly displaying a new ring to her friends these days. It is made up of linked hearts of sapphires and diamonds and was once the property of Sarah Bernhardt, to Ellen Terry as a tribute to that great lady's artistry on the stage. Ellen Terry left it to her daughter-in-law, Julia Neilson, who in turn gave it to an English actress, Mary Glynne. Mary Glynne passed it on to her protegee — who is Margot Grahame.

ODDS AND ENDS — Charles Boyer is the most envied leading man in Hollywood, for in rapid succession in his next four pictures he will play opposite Garbo, then Sylvia Sidney, Ginger Rogers, and Claudette Colbert. — Between "Show Boat" broadcasts, Lanny Ross is giving concerts of classical songs. Eddie Robinson is asking for more pleasant roles on the screen, because his three-year-old son thinks he is a movie-goer and he doesn't want to antagonize him — Helen Jepson didn't sign that contract with Grand National after all: she signed to make pictures with Sam Goldwyn instead. The latest word from London is that the British people like Zasu Pitts best of all the American stars who have gone there to make pictures.

Coronation Seats Prices Are Fixed

LONDON — Right Hon. Ramsay MacDonald, Lord President of the Council, announced in the House of Commons recently that the charges for uncovered seats on Government stands lining the Coronation route, would be 15 shillings each ($3.75).

Covered seats will cost 22 shillings and sixpence ($5.60). These seats will not be sold to the general public but to groups of persons to whom they are to be allotted.

Farm Problems

Conducted by
PROFESSOR HENRY G. BELL
with the co-operation of the various departments of Ontario Agricultural College

1. Question: "I would appreciate your advice regarding pastures. Would it pay me to fertilize an old and partly worn out pasture, and if so, how would you recommend applying it?" —F. O., Kent County.

Answer:—On fields where there is still a good bottom of grasses and some White Clover, the pasture may be improved without ploughing by applying a light dressing of well-rotted manure supplemented by a fertilizer suitable to the soil requirements.

On fields where the stand of grass is poor, plough and crop for one, or preferably two years, and clean of weeds; use a hoe crop or summer fallow the year before seeding down, and add a good dressing of barnyard manure. Pasture requires a soil rich in humus which enables it to retain mosture.

Where the establishment of a good pasture is the main objective, it is advisable to apply only part of the fertilizer with the nurse crop and part in the early fall as a top dressing on the new seedlings, which lessens winter killing and holds the legumes which are [illegible] nitrogen [illegible] If all the fertilizer is applied at the time of seeding, the nurse crop should either be sown thinly or cut or pastured off early, or none used at all. A heavy nurse crop left until maturity will tend to weaken the young seedlings.

On well manured heavy soils in good fertility apply 250 to 375 lbs. per acre of 20 per cent Superphosphate. On heavy loams which respond to nitrogen and potash, apply the same amounts of 2-16-6 fertilizer and on the lighter loams use a 2-12-10 mixture.

In all cases the soils should be tested for acidity and agricultural lime applied according to the soil requirements, preferably several weeks before seeding. Manure is high nitrogen and potash and low in phosphoric acid so that when heavy applications of manure are made either in preparing the seed bed or top dressing of pastures, the addition of nitrogen and potash are not so important and may be dispensed with, and either Superphosphate or a mixed fertilizer high in phosphoric acid may be used.

2. Question:—"I would be pleased to know the best [illegible] early sweet corn on light soil. Have been using 4-8-6. This land is light. Would it be wise to add 500 lbs. of tankage to a ton of fertilizer?" — R. J. P., Simcoe County.

Answer:— We would recommend that you use 2-12-10 fertilizer. This would be in addition to barnyard manure and I believe would be better adapted to sweet corn under your conditions than 4-8-6, since light soil is notably short of phosphoric acid and potash. I note that you inquire regarding the use of 500 lbs. of tankage to the ton of fertilizer for corn. This would prolong the supply of nitrogen, but I doubt very much whether the increase would pay for the investment. If I had any other recommendations to make for your condition, I believe it would be 4-8-10 or 5-8-7, preferably the latter, instead of 2-12-10. This recommendation would be made only on the assumption that you did not have much manure to use on this crop. 5-8-7 at 750-1,000 lbs. per acre should give you good results [illegible]versity, which mentions that straw may be turned into manure by the on sweet corn.

3. Question:—"There is a note in 'The Country Gentleman,' for February, 1937, (page 86) on 'Making addition of a nitrogen fertilizer and Lime, and the pile kept moist for a period of two or three months. He then states that the same thing can be accomplished by spreading the straw on the field and ploughing it under with the fertilizer and Lime. Also that such crops as mature rye, cornstalks, etc., may be similarly treated and ploughed under, and that "a good crop of mature rye ploughed under with 500 lbs. of nitrogen fertilizer and the same amount of Lime will produce an effect equal to that of ten tons of animal manure."

The part about it which is confusing is the mixture of Lime and nitrogen fertilizer together in the pile or in the ground. Will you not lose large quantities of nitrogen" If we can do this, why do we not mix our Lime and fertilizer in the drill? I never thought I could do this, and to be sure, asked one of your men (I think an O.A.C. man), who was [illegible] ploughing match at Merryvale Farm (F. J. O'Connor's), a couple of years ago, and his answer was an emphatic "No." Also a table given in Ontario Department of Agriculture Bulletin 322 (1926), page 37, states Lime should not be mixed with Ammonium Sulphate Barnyard manure and most of the nitrates." —D. F. McK., York County.

Answer:—Regarding the making of synthetic manure, I wish to say that this is an accomplishment of recent years. Various formulae are used, but the one which has given good results following an investigation by Missouri Station is as follows:

Ammonium Sulphate, (20 per cent nitrogen). 45 parts by weight; Superphosphate 20 per cent (P 205) 15 parts by weight; Lime (pulverized), 40 parts by weight.

This mixture is applied at the rate of 150 lbs. to the ton of dry straw. The purpose of adding the chemicals is to speed up the rotting process.

The rotting of the straw is caused by bacteria and other microorganisms. The straw serves as food and energy for these organisms. The nitrogen and phosphoric acid are necessary for their growth and activity, and the Lime neutralizes the organic acids formed during decay.

The compost piles consist of a layer of straw one foot thick and about 10 feet square. Sprinkle on this layer, about one fifth of the mixture of chemicals to be used, then spread another layer of one-foot straw, repeat until all the chemicals have been used. Make the pile with a sort of saucer top to it so that it will catch and hold water rather than shed it. After the compost heap is made, it should be kept well supplied with moisture by sprinkling with a hose or some other means. If water can be added so as to hasten the rotting process, the manure should be formed in four to five months. One ton of dried straw will produce about 2½ tons of wet manure, at a cost of approximately 70 cents a ton of wet manure. This synthetic manure has been found equal or superior to barnyard manure in increasing crop yields. Other plant materials, besides straw [illegible]

In fact, a mixture of corn stalks, weed, etc., can be used. Mixed in the quantities recommended, it has been found that there is not the loss of nitrogen that one would expect because the Lime is relatively inactive chemically and functions only as an acid neutralizer. Sulphate of Ammonia and Superphosphate will hasten decay of the straw and of course help balance the plant food content of the manure.

I do not remember the instance, but undoubtedly I was the spokesman at the Ploughing Match on Merryvale Farm. What I had in mind was mixing of active lime with barnyard manure. This would cause the liberation of free nitrogen if lime was added in any large quantity, through excessive bacterial action. With regard to adding lime to commercial fertilizer, the addition of this lime would cause reversion of the phosphoric acid to the three-lime or insoluble form. This is chemically the same as was the raw rock from which the Superphosphate was made. The quotation from Bulletin No. 322 is correct, in that it is not good practice to add active lime to Ammonium Sulphate, barnyard manure or moist nitrates. The addition of lime to the two pure chemicals will cause each one to lose nitrogen as it will when added to manure.

Undeserving Gain Favors

BIRMINGHAM, ENG., — When a woman pleaded for her husband who was said to have "made a mess of life," the Birmingham Recorder (E. W. Cave, K.C.,) remarked: "The worse a man is, the greater affection he very often seems to inspire in a woman."

Arthur Leslie Evans, aged 21, and Elizabeth Lucy Evans, aged 20, who were only married last March, pleaded guilty to stealing from a house where they had lodged and breaking and entering another.

The recorder sentenced the man to 18 months' hard labour, commenting: "You got an honest girl to marry you and this is what you have done for her. I am sorry for her. You have made a mess of her life." Mrs. Evans was bound over.

"Study the past and you will see that the Congress and the crowds were always arguing irrelevant and unimportant issues while the real revolution was going on quietly in the laboratory."

GARDENING

By GORDON L. SMITH

ARTICLE NO. 2

Informal planting, say the experts, is the most suitable for the average flower garden True, it is possible with very large grounds and skilled help to do something with straight, clipped rows and borders. But in the average case planting irregularly in clumps will produce the most pleasing effects. Such planting too, will add an air of spaciousness, giving even tiny backyard gardens the appearance of much larger affairs.

Set Off By A Lawn

Where at all possible there should be a bit of a lawn in the foreground with an irregularly shaped bed of flowers around the edges and, possibly, groups of shrubs set at the corners. Screening of harsh, straight lines about the house and drives with clumps of flowers and shrubs and an occasional trailing vine over verandahs or garages will bring the whole thing together It will give the home the appearance of being part of the landscape rather than some rigid affair sticking out of the earth.

Vegetable Rows Straight

Vegetables on the other hand, should be planted in straight rows. But here, too, a little planning will help. There are a great many new varieties now available in Canada and by the liberal use of some of these newer things, and by adopting the rule to make at least three sowings of each variety a week or ten days apart, production can be materially increased. The big advantage of the vegetable garden right at the door is freshness, but to get full value in this respect it is important to have a new supply coming along frequently. Therefore, the modern gardener instead of planting all his peas, lettuce, or carrots on the same day, puts some in the first week and more a little later.

Turpentine Shortage

Twenty years ago the vast tonds of the Carolinas, Georgias, Alabama and Florida produced millions of gallons of turpentine from their slash-pine forests. In an ignorant effort to prevent fires the forest owners burned over the land year after year destroying not only all inflammable debris but the young trees as well

The inevitable shortage of new methods of refining the slash-pine search for substitutes, and scientists soon perfected the various alcohol-base paints now in general use

Modern developments in the methods of efining the slash pine pulp has made its demand for paper-making greater than the supply The U. S. Government, therefore is making loans to the stricken South-Eastern States, and re-afforestation is being taken scientifically in hand. In a few years' time, experts predict, pulp, to the value of 100,000,000 dollars will be produced by the forest lands that once produced the nation's turpentine.

No Substitute For Family Worship

Judge McKay, Port Arthur, Gives His Experiences

PORT ARTHUR, — "The words of William E. Gladstone, the great British statesman, who said, "There are no great issues. There is but one great issue, and that is to get the truths of the Bible into the hearts of the people" are as applicable today as they were when he uttered them. There is no substitute for family worship in the home."

This from Judge John McKay, junior judge of the District of Thunder Bay, uttered as he sat in his office in the District Court in a discussion concerning his views on religion and a review of the component principles which have, under his guidance and experience, led to the establishment and success of five Presbyterian Sunday Schools in Port Arthur.

From the mother church, First Presbyterian, Cameron Street, three has shot out during the past few years four strong tentacles in the Gresley Park, Jumbo Gardens, Oliver Road and Helen Street sectors of the city in an embrace of the worthwhile doctrines of Sunday school work.

Judge McKay believes there is no substitute for family worship in the home. No adult need have qualms about memorizing and reciting the golden texts. Personal evangelism is most important to a young Christian. It is his opinion that a young Christian cannot grow sturdy in religion until he has experienced personal evangelism. He spoke also favourably of a tithing — the setting aside of a spiritual offering at regular times — and described the practice as making for a co-partnership with God which had ought to be established at an early age. It taught children thrift, too, he said.

Judge McKay said he agreed with Roger Babson that money put into the work of the church was an enduring investment.

Exodus of 150,000 Worst of This Age

Canadian Doctor Describes Horrors of Malaga Evacuation

VALENCIA.—Dr. Norman Bethune, of Montreal, recently described the flight of 150,000 men, women and children from Malaga as "the most terrible evacuation of a city in modern times."

Malaga, Southern Spain seaport, was captured February 8 by the insurgents in the Spanish Civil War.

Dr. Bethune, head of the Spanish-American Blood Transfusion Institute, said he witnessed the evacuation during a trip from Barcelona with a truck-load of refrigerated blood for transfusions.

"Imagine 150,000 men, women and children setting out for safety to a town situated more than 100 miles away with only one road to take on a journey requiring five days and five nights at least," he said.

"There was no food to be found in the villages and there was no trains or buses to transport them

"They staggered and stumbled, with cut and bruised feet, along the white flint road while the Fascists (insurgents) bombed them from the air and from the sea.

"There were thousands o children.

"We counted at least 5,000 under 10 years of age, at least 1,000 of them barefoot and many clad only in single garments.

Become Dense Stream

"The incessant stream of people became so dense we barely could force our cars through th m.

"We met so many distressed women and children we decided to turn back and start transporting the worst cas s to safety.

"But it was difficult to choose which to take.

"Our car was beseiged by a mob of frantic mothers and fathers who, with tired, outstretched arms, held up to us their children with their faces swollen and congested by four days of sun and dust.

"How could we choose between a child dying of dysentery and a mother stolidly watching us with great sunken eyes, carrying against her open breast her child born on the road two days before?

"Many old people simply gave up the struggle and laid down beside the road to wait for death.

"We first decided to take only children and others. Then the separation of fathers and children, husbands and wives became too cruel to bear. We finished by transporting to Almeria the families with the largest number of children and children without parents.

"On the evening of the 12th, when the little seaport of Almeria was completely filled with refugees who thought they had reached a haven of safety, German and Italian airplanes dropped 10 bombs in the very centre of town where efugees were sleeping huddled so closely together on the main street that an automobile could pass only with great difficulty.

"After the planes passed I picked up three dead children from the pavement where they had been standing in line waiting for a cup of preserved milk and a handful of dry bread, the only food some of them had for days.

"The street was a shambles of dead and dying, lighted only by the orange glare of burning buildings. In the semi-darkness the moans of wounded children and the shrieks of agonized mothers rose in a massed cry higher and higher to a pitch of intolerable intensity."

Women Secretaries Cramp Bosses' Style

NEW ORLEANS — Men soon may turn the tables and replace women as secretaries — because "a lot of bosses like to sweet around the office."

Robert Hoppock, assistant director of the National Occupational Conference, told the conference that bosses "don't want women stenographers or secretaries to cramp their style."

"It's getting increasingly harder in many cities to find male secretaries and stenographers," Hoppock added.

SHE WAS AFRAID TO SHAKE HANDS

Rheumatism in Joints Caused Her Intense Pain

Read this letter from a woman describing the manner in which she was affected by rheumatism.

"For several years," she writes, "I suffered with rheumatism of the joints especially in my hands, and this caused me intense pain. I was even afraid to shake hands with anyone, for it made me suffer terribly. I began taking Kruschen Salts regularly, and after a little while my pains disappeared completely. I am naturally delighted with Kruschen." — (Miss) K.

The pains and stiffness of rheumatism are frequently caused by deposits of uric acid in the muscles and joints. The numerous salts in Kruschen assist in stimulating your liver and kidneys to healthy, regular action, and so help them to get rid of this excess uric acid.

The Worst of Jutland

The real tea drinker cannot go very long without his tea! Alfred Noyes tells a delightful story about one of them. During the war he was writing up important incidents and was assigned to interview sailors right after the battle of Jutland.

He found a sailor who had been sent aloft, and had to stay there during the whole engagement with half-ton shells hurtling past his head. Thinking to get an exciting "story" from him, Mr. Noyes asked him to describe his sensations during those terrifying hours.

All the man said was: "Well, of course, I had to miss my tea!"

One Way of Thinking

The president of a firm of cleaners and renovators held up a garment for his foreman's inspection.

"You see what I mean, Wiffle," he said, "and look the other dresses bear me out. Look" — he turned over a pile and brought several articles of ladies' wear into view — "notice how those dresses that were re-colored by the older men are streaked and spotted, while these here" — he indicated the pile on the left — "which were done by the younger lads are perfect."

"Ah, yes," said the foreman. "The old fellows have lost their eyesight for such work. I'd get rid of them, but it's a hard thing for me to do. For some of them have been with us forty years or more."

"I know," remarked the president, "but they must go. Remember, old fellow, that only the young dye good!"

Along Canada's Mining Highway

Mining properties from Coast to Coast known either as producers of base metals or to contain base metal ores received marked stimulation during the past week by price advances in copper, lead and zinc to new high records for many years.

Mining Corporation's important subsidiary, Normetals, formerly Abana, announced financing rights to shareholders at 75 cents a share. With the further announcement that the property would be placed on production in July on a 250-ton daily basis, the shares attained a market price of over $3 per share. Mining Corporation will own close to three million Normetal shares on the completion of the financing. Mining Corporation is further interested in Base Metals through its large shareholding in Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting and its control of Base Metals Mining Corporation, with properties in British Columbia. The Company's holdings of gold equities are also substantial. Mining Corporation is conceded to have most able and efficient management.

The important development in oil was the listing of the shares of United Oils on the Toronto Stock Exchange. In addition to holdings in Turner Valley, including a holding immediately adjoining the Foundation well, the Company has extensive holdings in other Alberta oil fields.

Philosophy On Clothes Stated

NEW YORK.—Frank Chapman, recently designated one of America's best-dressed men, airily swung his snakewood walking stick with a shark's tooth head and summed up his clothes philosophy. "You've got to wear clothes, so why not enjoy it?"

Chapman, who is a singer and sportsman, is the strong, dark and handsome half of "America's best-dressed couple," his beautiful wife, Gladys Swarthout, opera singer and movie actress—who sometimes buys a suit from the same bolt of cloth he has chosen—has twice been on the New York designers' list of "ten best-dressed women."

The secret of her success with clothes is: she dresses to please her husband. His sartorial success hinges on his idea of deriving pleasure and comfort from dress "since you've got to dress."

There is about Chapman's wardrobe a certain intrepidity.

He dares to wear thin black wool socks, instead of silk, with his dinner clothes.

He dares to wear a striped coat and waistcoat with plain trousers, instead of a plain cutaway and striped trousers—and a wine-colored silk grosgain waistcoat under his dinner jacket, instead of whatever it is other men wear.

For these ideas, Chapman was cited as one of "16 male fashion leaders" by the Merchant Tailors' Designers Association.

He wears with his wine-colored silk waistcoat star ruby studs. His dinner clothes are midnight blue. In the coat lapel goes a wine-colored carnation with a matching carnation on his overcoat.

Then white pigskin gloves, black patent leather pumps, a walking stick with a cigarette lighter in the top—and the total effect is a splendid sight.

No fop, no beau brummel at heart is Chapman. He refuses to wear a wing collar—wears instead a modified sport shirt.

One of his favorite outfits is a "bowling suit"—he calls it that because he wore it once to a bowling party—of brown check.

It has a "cubbing coat," but what that is, only men seem to know.

Chapman wears with this suit a yellow and black tie having a dragon print, and gay yellow and black socks. Offhand, one would think it rather loud, but men seem to be wearing these things.

He is not, in general, a loud dresser.

He is not an extravagant dresser. He believes it is possible for men to dress presentably on $150 a year—if they have a few things to start with.

Last but not least, his overcoat. It is of wonderfully soft navy blue cashmere—just the kind of coat a lady enjoys when she weeps on a man's shoulder.

THE LEAFS ARE FLYING

The Leafs were flying high last Saturday evening when they trimmed Tommy Gorman's Maroons down at the Carlton Street ice plant.

It was rather a rough affair in spots. The Conacher brothers especially were hoisting each other around with the greatest of ease in the penalty box. In fact the brotherly love mix-up went so far that the little men in blue (the cops as they are called) stepped into the box in order to iron out said Conachers. Harvey Jackson pushed two quick goals past Mister Beveridge in the Montreal net, while Finnigan of the up and at 'em Finnigans, sailed right through the defense to score his first counter of the season without aid of an umbrella.

The Maple Leafs have real team spirit and the old Maestro believes that this factor alone will carry them to the Stanley Cup. There's plenty of kidding among the players in the local camp and everybody is in on the fun, which to us is a very good sign of team work. Even when Conny Smythe appeared recently in Boston wearing top hat, white tie and tails and the scribes that be-tagged him hockey's Fred Astaire, he shared the joke with members of his outfit.

Lately this department has been wondering why Dick Irvin's puck chasers were so anxious to make second place in the international section, when the third spot would catch the play-offs just as well. Suddenly it dawned upon us that the second place lads get a larger slice of the proceeds. Thus the boys of the Maple Leaf are winging right along seeking that extra cash to buy food for the summer kitchen.

MUSIC IN THE AIR

As the election of officers for the Song Writers' Association takes place to-day and our old pal Willie Whopper, the pianist, is hammering out the ivories for a position on the executive board, we think it about high time we went musical.

To begin with those two new tunes, "Shimming On Park Avenue" and "You're Laughing At Me" both from Dick Powell's new flicker On The Avenue, have got the old maestro all adither. The lads and lassies around our favorite lunch counter still think "Trust In Me" rates top spot, although the "Organ Grinder's Swing" rambles right along. Guy Lombardo and his orchestra have our call as the best band on the air waves to-day, with Ina Leaf's organ melodies running a close second. As to our choice of dance halls, well any good hall will do as long as the floor boards have been steamed out and the corners nailed down.

However we will be back next week with our regular sport page. In fact these are just a few lines to let the sport and gals, who have been staying awake night wondering what has come over us lately know that the Old Maestro is still very much with the Review.

REACHING THE GOAL

Consumption, as tuberculosis of the lungs is commonly called, is a wasting ailment; stubborn to master, requiring treatment and care over a long period of time. It can seldom be cured at home. Then, too, it is a communicable disease, especially dangerous to young children.

This was fully realized by the founders of the National Sanitarium Association, when forty years ago they erected the first hospital in Canada for the treatment of this disease.

This venture met with much opposition and even ridicule, for at that time it was firmly believed that tuberculosis was incurable. It was just one of those things which had to be, so why bother about it.

However, it was not long before the regimen of this small hospital began to show results—people were actually being cured—going home and talking about it.

Such was the small beginning of the Muskoka, the Toronto and the Queen Mary Hospitals for Consumptives, which now provide for more than one thousand patients.

The progress made and the change in outlook is reflected by these and the many other fine sanatoria throughout the Dominion, and by the large number of public and private organizations which to-day are sparing no effort to overcome tuberculosis.

The results have been that thousands upon thousands have been given a chance to get well, who but for hospital treatment, would have been left without hope, and the mortality from this disease has been reduced by 75%.

With tuberculosis ousted from the premier position to seventh place as the cause of death, there is cause for congratulation, but there is also the danger of the feeling of self complacency and the slackening of effort. With the goal in sight, this would indeed be a calamity, for tuberculosis will not halt its advance unless it is forced to do so. This can only be accomplished with the continued co-operation of the public at large.

The Trustees of the Muskoka, the Toronto and the Queen Mary Hospitals for Consumptives are determined that, so far as lies within their power, no one who suffers from tuberculosis shall be denied a chance to get well. If you would help in this great life saving work, please send a gift to National Sanitarium Association, 223 College Street, Toronto.

Mr. Wm. Perkins Bull, K.C., has been asked to speak on his historical work at Niagara Falls on 6th April.

He will deal particularly with the period before 1812, and the families who came into Peel prior to that time and when the various townships were first opened for settlement.

COOKSVILLE

Pursuant to instructions of the Provincial Government that a complete "purge" of relief rolls should be made, Toronto township council, at a special meeting at Cooksville, appointed two more relief investigators. They are Bert McBride, Malton and Joseph Jones, Cooksville, who will co-operate with the initial appointee, A. E. Kilpatrick of Derry West.

The councillors had little to say about the relief situation in the township, but it was made clear that all who refuse to work will be expunged from the relief rolls as soon as they are detected. The deadline for single men has been set at May 1st, after which they must shift for themselves.

All relief recipients in the township will be re-registered with even greater attention to details of their conditions, and information given by the would-be relief recipients will be completely checked by the investigators.

The financial situation of the township in relation to relief costs was not discussed at any length and councillors declined to make any comment on the possible effects of the recent announcements on provincial and federal grants issued by the Department of Welfare.

CANADIAN LEGION

On Monday night, March 2nd, there was a merry time at the "Dug-Out," in Streetsville. It was "opening night" for the veterans, and a large number were present. They came from Acton, Islington, Georgetown, Brampton, Oakville and Mimico, and the whole of Zone 13 was represented. A splendid program was given, sponsored by the Rennie Entertainers of Toronto. About 300 were present and old friends and comrades spent a pleasant time together.

The Canadian Legion will hold another big dance this Friday night at the "Dug-Out". Come and dance to the New Harmony Orchestra on the best floor in town.

PUBLIC LIBRARY BOARD

At the annual meeting of the Streetsville Public Library Board, last week, officers were re-elected as follows: Chairman, Rev. J. Y. Fraser; sec.-treas., R. Langmaid. The new member of the Board is Rev. T. D. Jones, and the lady members are: Mrs. C. P. MacArthur, Mrs. W. D. Lindsay and Miss M. Peck.

A letter of appreciation was sent to Rev. R. J. W. Perry and Mr. William Couse, who had served many years on the Board.

The Open Column

So Old Man Leacock's boy Steve, is going to discover the West for Messrs. Wright, McCullagh, et al. This discovery business, particularly by a man as well known and widely recognized, visually and verbally, as Steve makes us smile a bit with sardonic amusement. In the first place, the West was there long before any humorists found it. Its inhabitants the Redmen, were not humorously inclined, unless you consider the removal of large portions of your back hair, including your scalp, as a practical joke. The men who won it over to the white race were not humorists, unless you consider it a choice quip to shoot someone else in the breakfast, to prevent their extending you the same compliment. And the men who run the West today, if our digestion of newspaper facts and fancies is good, are very far from being humorists. If they were, they would have seen the joke in Alberta, and Aberhart would still be teaching school.

So, in our opinion, Steve Leacock is in for one ah—deuce of a time when he tries to discover the West. He is going, as a sort of glorified tourist, to inspect the sociology, industry and agriculture of the Western plains and muskegs, with prominent leaders in each of these fields as his guides, cicerones, and, unless our guess is less lucky than usual, as genial camoflageurs of the things that Steve shouldn't see. We remember the legend of a reporter who went North to discover the mines. Rumor has it that he spent the time in a hotel, well lubricated, while men who knew a bit about mining, and the things a reporter shouldn't see in mines, provided the material for his discovery of mines. His stories passed across in a large way, particularly with the miners, who chuckled gently to themselves.

Don't misunderstand us. We like Steve's writings. No doubt we would like Steve if we had ever had the opportunity of meeting him. The nearest we got to a personal introduction was a few stereotyped formalities with Steve's brother, up at Aurora, and we liked him, so, as far as we are concerned the Leacocks are a very fine family. But it does seem very silly for a man to discover something that everyone has known about for a long, long time.

The fair thing to do, it seems to us, while Mr. Leacock is journalistically exiled from his home town, Montreal, to discover Montreal for him and for the rest of the reading public, as represented by "The Review". We have discovered Montreal three times, having spent varying periods of not more than two days in that city while enroute to other points. And we must admit that the sooner we were enroute again, the better we liked Montreal.

The discovery begins: The entry to Montreal, from the West, is accomplished over a series of bridges and an astonishing variety of roads. A few miles of these roads are marvellously good. The remainder is marvellously bad. Unlike its sister province, Ontario, Quebec pays for its bridges by direct collections from the travelling public. You must pay fifty cents to enter the island on which Montreal is built. You must also pay fifty cents to leave. The latter donation is well spent.

Once on the island, the motorists may wind through some slightly picturesque outskirts of the city proper, and would enjoy the view of the St. Lawrence if he once dared take his eyes from the narrow, winding road. Our first visit to Montreal must have been announced by the Chamber of Commerce. We were met by a large traffic policeman. He sold us a ticket to something or other which would occur long after we had left the city.

Entry to the central portion of the city may be accomplished, not without trepidation, by several avenues. Through Westmount, the going is much cleaner, and less tortuous. Along the river, the pavements are poor, the directions almost inextricable, and the neighborhoods downright dirty.

Once arrived at some haven of refuge, in the form of a hotel or tourist rooming rouse, the traveller is safe as long as his sense of direction is good. The policemen of the city are reasonably polite, even if some of them are rather unintelligible to a person whose only language is English.

During the summer season entertainment of the more moral sort seems difficult to find. The other type of amusement was, when we discovered Montreal, displayed with a blatant disregard for legal restraint, but we hear that that sort of thing is all cleared up. But, in the summer season, there are few good picture shows available. A street that appears to be the city's main amusement avenue resolves itself into a cheap honky-tonk district. The English families who have money have left the city, as have the French nobles, and the remainder of the population appears to be too tired, after a hard day's work, to go out and spend their meager wages. For amusements, we prefer Toronto.

Montreal shines, from a sight-seeing angle, however, if you don't mind having the greater part of your "sights" all of one kind. Visitors to such attractions as the Notre Dame Cathedral and the Oratory of St. Joseph are treated with unfailing courtesy and allowed a great deal of freedom. There is, however, much more determined organization in Montreal than in Toronto to pry the last reluctant penny from the grip of the sight-seer. The tourist cannot go to the top of Mount Royal in his own car. He must walk, take a street car, or hire a cabriolet, driven by a somewhat asthmatic but willing horse. This latter mode of transportation is invigorating, but expensive. The view from the top of the mountain, particularly at dusk, is worth this expense.

Lastly (although several large volumes could be written on Montreal without exhausting its possibilities) the food obtainable in the city ranges from excellent to terrible, as it does in most large cities. The most memorable feature of a meal in Montreal is the hospitals tax, which, along with many other irritating little grafts, goes to swell the treasury of a province that, much older than Ontario, is far from being as well developed in proportion to its industrial expansion. Its roads are bad, in the main, the Montreal-Quebec road being a monument to many differing unsuccessful theories about road construction, and the general agricultural development appears, on cursory examination, to be backward.

Mr. Leacock will not thank us for "discovering" his city for him. Neither will anyone else. But if Mr. Leacock can go out and "discover" the West, we can discover Montreal.

ACCIDENT LEADS TO MAJOR INDUSTRY

A cow kicking over a lamp, they say, started the Chicago fire. A spider climbing a thread brought Bruce of Scotland victory. But these and many other like historical incidents pale before the story of the housewife whose carelessness founded one of the most important phases of the Canadian fish industry.

Away back in a Scottish village a housewife left a haddock hanging from the rafters of her cottage as she went out for the day. She had left it too near the peat fire, however, and when she returned the fish was all dried by the smoke from the fire. She decided to cook it anyway and the result was so appetizing that the news spread like wildfire and smoked fish became a national delicacy.

Today the popularity of smoked fish has spread everywhere and the appetite for this delicacy has founded Canadian organizations of international repute, some of which have been established for a century and more.

The Canadian climate has been found ideal for the production of this delicacy and other cured fish and today the Dominion holds a foremost place in world trade in the export of dried, smoked, and pickled fish.

FIDELITY

"To God, thy country, and thy friend be true, then thou'lt ne'er be false to any one."—Vaughan.

"Fidelity finds its reward and its strength in exalted purpose."—Mary Baker Eddy.

"Trust reposed on noble natures obliges them the more."—Dryden.

"The way to fill a large sphere is to glorify a small one. There is no large sphere; you are your sphere."—Edward Braislin.

"Nothing is more noble, nothing is more venerable than fidelity. Faithfulness and truth are the most sacred excellences and endowments of the human mind."—Cicero.

"It goes far towards making a man faithful to let him understand that you think him so."—Seneca.

LET US SMILE

Wifie was vigorously powdering her face before going out.

"Why do you go to all that trouble?" asked hubby, who was waiting impatiently.

"Modesty, my dear," was the reply.

"Modesty?"

"Yes, I've no desire to shine in public."

ENGAGEMENTS

The engagement is announced of Elnora Marguerite, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert McKay, Port Credit, to Charles Henry Curtis, son of Mrs. S. Thompson and the late Mr. John Henry Curtis. The marriage will take place quietly early in April.

In another column in this paper will be found an advertisement by the Department of Agriculture calling attention to the danger of farmers using seed without having germination tests made of it. A careful perusal of this advertisement may be of very great value to many of our farmers. We know that most farmers are particular about sowing good seed free from weed seeds and with a high germination test but sometimes these matters are left off until it is too near sowing time to have these tests properly made, and so this advertisement will just call their attention to the necessity of having this work done in good time before seeding begins.

The latest farm sale reported this week consists of 50 acres on the north side of the Dundas highway between Dixie and Cooksville. The deal was negotiated by the C. R. Purcell Company, farm realtors, and the property is known as the old Clarkson homestead.

The residence on the farm contain 9 rooms, and has a four-car garage. The house is built of stone and stucco while the barn, 200 feet in length, is at present used for the culture of mushrooms, the building having been used for this purpose recently through the installation of a hot water heating system.

The property is essentially a fruit farm, about 12 acres, apple and pear orchard now in full bearing.

The vendor in the deal was George W. Clarkson and the purchaser, William J. McIntyre, of Toronto. The latter is going to establish a permanent residence on the farm for himself and his family. The farm is known as part of lot 3, 1st concession north of Dundas street in Toronto Township.

Alfred Hillmer, Oakville's veteran fire chief, was honored last week at a social evening and presented with a large purse of gold by his fellow-townsmen.

The body of a premature baby was found below the bridge on the Dundas Highway at the Sixteen Mile Creek, in Trafalgar, one day last week. Provincial officers are investigating the matter.

Several ladies of W.M.S. of United Church were invited to the home of Mrs. J. Dowling last Thursday and Friday afternoons when they quilted a quilt, the Dresden Plate pattern. The quilt will be offered for sale at St. Patrick's tea on March 17th at United Church, Streetsville.

Fire did $500 damage to the old Hotel at Cheltenham, Peel County, on Sunday. A bucket brigade was formed by villagers and they saved the adjoining buildings. The tenant is William Wilson, a butcher.

The Mission Band of Wesley Church was held on Saturday afternoon in the Public School, with the superintendent, Mrs. E. F. Wilson, in charge. The organization will be known as "Brighten the Corner" Mission Band. The members also chose Miss Margaret Scrimgeour, of Trinidad, and a personal friend of the leader, as their missionary, to whom they will write. The members continued their journey by aeroplane from France to Palestine. A small working model of the map of Palestine was used as an illustration. Hugh Gibson was appointed usher for the next three months. On Wednesday, March 31st, the Band will entertain their mothers and friends in the Sunday School room.

We regret the illness of Mrs. G. Bentley at the home of her sister, Mrs. K. Skinner, at Port Credit. Mrs. Bently visited her sister three weeks ago and was taken ill with the flu while there. Her daughter, Miss Irene Bentley, is with her.

Owing to the funeral of Mrs. Thompson Post, Trafalgar, on Sunday afternoon, service at Wesley Church was withdrawn. Many relatives and friends from Snider's attended the funeral. Our sympathy is extended to the bereaved family.

The funeral of Mrs. Thompson Post, formerly Miss Fannie Stokoe, was held on Sunday afternoon from the Post homestead, Postville, Trafalgar. Rev. H. S. Lovering, minister of Munn's United Church, of which deceased was a member, conducted the service. Although Mrs. Post had been ill for several months, her passing was very sudden early Friday morning, March 5th. The funeral was largely attended by relatives and friends. Mrs. Post is survived by her husband, three daughters, Mrs. Elmer Downs, Milton, Mrs. Burnese Huber, Dunnville, Miss Laura, at home, and two sons, Herbert T., Hornby, and Fred, at home. Mrs. John McGowan, Dundas Highway, Trafalgar, is a sister. Interment was in the Post family plot, Munn's Cemetery. The pallbearers were Walter McGowan, Trafalgar, George Birdsall and Roy Stokoe, Toronto, nephews of deceased, and Clarence Fish and W. H. Post, Oakville, and Wilfrid Pickering, Snider's, nephews of Mr. Post.

"SALADA" TEA

STAR RUBY

By Louise Jerrold

Albertine Tevans, shopgirl, falls in love with Dennis Maxwell, jewellery salesman, but is bothered by his mysterious actions. He speaks once of being on the lookout for a man with a drooping eyelid. Albertine's righ great-aunt Celia Tevans invites her for a visit. Before she leaves, Dennis gives her a star ruby to keep for him. At her aunt's estate are two other guests—Countess Yelena Loupakoff and her brother, Count Michael. Then, Dennis arrives to show some rubies to Aunt Celia. He makes Albertine pretend they are strangers to each other, and pays ardent attention to the Countess. The houseman, Bates, who always wears dark glasses, gets drunk one evening, and Albertine catches him without his glasses on. He has a drooping eyelid! In the middle of that night, she hears a scuffle in Denny's room.

CHAPTER XI

In a few minutes, Bates came hurrying in with candles. Should he telephone the village for an electrician? Aunt Celia gave him a number to call and he left the room.

Michael remembered that he had a flashlight in his luggage and went to get it. And Yelena, pleading a headache went with him for a tablet.

Fifteen minutes passed. Neither Michael nor Yelena had returned. And Bates had not yet brought the car around. Finally, Dennis grew impatient.

"I' sorry," he apologized, "but I must be starting for the train. I'll go see what's happened to Bates."

A search however revealed no sign of the houseman.

— "And where are Michael and Yelena?" Albertine said.

Aunt Celia looked at her blankly. "That's right, where are they?"

Denny glanced at his watch. "It's absolutely necessary that I catch that train," he said nervously. "Isn't there anyone else who could drive me to the depot? The cook or the gardener?"

"I will!" Albertine was all eagerness.

"But I can't have you coming back alone at this time of night," Dennis said, almost curtly.

"She needn't come back alone," said Aunt Celia. "Bob Fletcher hides out for speeders this side of the bridge just before you cross the railroad tracks. You two could pick him up there on your way, and he could escort Albertine back here with his motorcycle."

Dennis grabbed his bag. "Then we had better get under way."

He and Albertine hurried out to the garage and climbed into the limousine. Albertine took the wheel, competently backed the car into the driveway and was soon headed for the highway.

"Denny," she said. "It's awfully queer about Bates and the Russians."

Not so queer. They've all vamoosed, cleared out — that's all."

She turned a second to stare at him.

"But why? And how could they have left without taking the car?"

"It's my guess that Bates sneaked all their luggage to the depot before dinner. You'll recall that he was late. He probably made arrangements in the village for someone to come and get them—picking them up outside the gates — so that we wouldn't hear the car. And as to why they all left so abruptly, I'd say that I was mixed up a bit in that."

"Denny — I caught Bates without those dark glasses last evening — he was drunk in the kitchen. And his — his right eyelid drooped. I meant to tell you this before — but it seemed so silly—"

"I saw him, too," Dennis interrupted.

"Then he's the man you've been looking for? But you said that man was sandy-haired. That's what fooled me—"

"Bates has dyed his hair," Dennis explained.

Albertine was struck by another thought. "Yelena told me Bates used to work for them!"

"He still does," Dennis said firmly, "but not exactly in the capacity of houseman and chauffeur. Step on the gas, Blue Eyes. I can't let George Zoland get away with it this time!"

George Zoland — is that Bates' real name?"

"Yes, Zoland, alias Bates, used to be employed by Tanman-Roan in the loose-stone department. He designed settings too, and made reproductions for the firm. Any number of our customers asked us to fake their originals for them — then owned the originals. Well, that was part of George's work and he was a whiz at it. But I never liked him. Too sly. Then he suddenly left about six months ago. And about that time he left, it was discovered that a very valuable diamond choker had been stolen from the shop and the circumstances pointed to me. I was convinced that George had made away with those diamonds and had framed me, but how was I to prove it? Mr. Tanman was good enough to believe my story, but the fellows I work with have never been entirely convinced. I knew I could never hope to be fully exonerated till I caught Zoland."

"I felt sure he couldn't disguise himself completely. That drooping eye lid of his would give him away. Well last week the insurance company that had stood the loss on the diamonds gave us the tip that one of their spotters in New York had located and investigated a man partly answering to Zoland's description. And there you have my reason for flying to New York, early this week. But I got there too late. I missed George and his gang."

"Gang?" Albertine said. "You mean Yelena and Michael?"

"Yes. This is the story as I got it in New York. We met the Russians — we'll call them that even though they aren't that part is as phony as their titles — in a down-at-the-heel boarding house where he went to hide after he left Detroit. The two were adventurers, and George took them on because it gave him a chance for a sweet set-up. He spent real money on them. Fine feathers for both Yelena and Michael — who, by the way aren't brother and sister — and a suite of rooms at an exclusive hotel where they posed as Russian aristocrats. I've got the straight dope on them up to that point — the rest is guess-work.

"It must have been at the hotel that they met your aunt. Of course, George would remember the name of Celia Tevans. She has been a customer of ours for years. He probably also found out about her defective eyesight before he went into this thing. At any rate he knew he had fallen into a good thing."

"Aunt Celia's collection!" Albertine gasped.

"Exactly," said Dennis. "She must have had it with her in New York for George evidently managed to make his duplicates before they all came here with Miss Tevans. I searched his room this afternoon, while he had you and your aunt out, but I couldn't find a thing."

"And that's why you wanted the combination to the safe! You wanted to see—"

"I didn't need the combination after all," he cut in. "Your aunt showed me her collection this morning and I also knew the worst. The fakes had been substituted. Besides, I'd already seen the "pearls" she'd given you. And you'll remember Yelena was cagey of that sapphire necklace of hers. She wouldn't wear it while I was there. Bogus stuff, of course."

"But did you know that you'd find Zoland here with Aunt Celia?"

"No." He and the pseudo-Russians had dropped from sight before I got to New York, and I didn't recognize him when I first got here. I thought he acted queerly, and the black glasses were unusual too, but the mustache and black hair put me off.

"Then, just before you came downstairs that night, I caught sight of Michael and Yelena — and things began to click for me — I'd got a pretty good description of them in New York. That's why I didn't want it known that I'd ever met you. I could not risk your being involved in this thing, little sweetheart — didn't want Zoland to think you were in the know, too."

The headlights of the limousine picked up a sharp curve in the highway. How dark and lonely the road looked, Albertine thought. She was glad that Bob Fletcher would be with her on the drive back.

She felt a sudden draft from the rear of the car, and half-turned her head — the glass partition was opening! Something cold and metallic was pressed against her neck. She screamed.

Ask Him Before Giving Your Child an Unknown Remedy

Practically any doctor you ask will warn: "Don't give your child unknown remedies without asking your doctor first."

When it comes to the widely used children's remedy — "milk of magnesia," the standard of the world is established. For over half a century many doctors have said "PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia." Safe for children. No other is "quite like it."

Keep this in mind, and say "PHILLIPS' MILK OF MAGNESIA" when you buy. Now also in tablet form. Get the form you prefer. But see that what you get is labeled "Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c

ULTIMATE ECONOMY

Almost anyone can bake a cake. Recipes are practically fool proof and all you have to do is follow the directions. Why is it then, that so many cakes are not light, fluffy and fine-textured as they should be, but just mediocre? They are not so bad that they can't be eaten perhaps, but nobody wants to eat them, and they go stale and have to be thrown out. On the other hand, a cake which is a masterpiece, is eaten up entirely and you know that is a saving instead of a waste.

Well, the difference between a good and just passable cake often lies in the flour used. So many women overlook the fact that to bake a cake you must have cake flour which is lighter, finer, and has a more delicate gluten than just ordinary flour. The best cake flour may cost a little more, but what a saving it is in the long run! Actual laboratory tests have proved that with fine cake flour you can cut in half the amount of eggs and butter used, and still get a perfect cake, whereas with ordinary flour and double the amount of eggs and butter, you still have a poor cake.

Try it yourself with this one-egg cake and a good brand of finely-milled cake flour. You can't help but notice the difference in taste, texture and cost.

ONE-EGG CAKE

2 cups sifted cake flour.
2 teaspoons baking powder.
¼ teaspoon salt.
1 teaspoon vanilla.
4 tablespoons butter or other shortening.
1 cup sugar.
1 egg, unbeaten.
¾ cup milk.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together well. Add egg and beat very thoroughly. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla. Bake in two greased 8-inch layer pans in moderate oven (375 deg. F.) 25 minutes. Spread Chocolate Orange Frosting between layers and on top and sides of cake.

CHOCOLATE ORANGE FROSTING

2 tablespoons grated orange rind.
2 cups sifted confectioner's sugar.
Dash of salt.
3 tablespoons orange juice (about).
4 tablespoons butter.
1½ squares unsweetened chocolate, melted.

Combine orange rind and butter; cream well. Add part of sugar gradually blending after each addition. Add chocolate and salt and mix well. Add remaining sugar, alternately with orange juice, until of right consistency to spread. Beat thoroughly after each addition.

TASTY FISH DISHES

Salmon Patties

Flake 1 pound can salmon, add 1 egg slightly beaten, 2 tablespoons cream, ½ teaspoon salt and a pinch of pepper. Mix and shape in 8 small flat cakes.

Dip in crumbs, then egg to which 2 tablespoons of water have been added and then crumbs again. Saute in hot fat until well browned on both sides. Place each cake on a slice of hot toast and serve with 2 cups of white sauce to which ½ cup of finely cut celery has been added.

Kedgeree

2 cups canned salmon, 4 tablespoons butter, 1 cup cooked rice, salt and pepper, 2 hard cooked eggs.

Free the fish from skin and bone. Melt butter in a saucepan, add the fish and stir gently. Put in the rice the white of the hard cooked eggs and season to taste with salt and pepper. Move gently over the fire until thoroughly hot, and serve on a flat dish with the yolks of the eggs, pressed through sieve, over the top.

Salmon Pasties

Chop fine 1 pound can salmon and 1 hard cooked egg. Stir 1 teaspoon moistened flour in ½ cup milk over slow fire. When thickened, beat in salmon, egg, 1 tablespoon butter, salt and pepper. Cool. Make a rich pie crust and cut the turnovers with a saucer upsidedown. Wet edges with cold water. Put a good tablespoon of salmon mixture on half of crust, fold over other half and press well together. Cut small slits on top brush with milk and bake in a quick oven.

Baked Salmon

One lb. can of salmon mixed with ½ cup cracker crumbs, one egg unbeaten.

Baked Noodles Yukon

Combine two tablespoons melted butter, one tablespoon flour, one teaspoon salt and one cup milk. Cook, stirring constantly until thick. Add two cups flaked salmon. Fill well oiled casserole with alternate layers creamed salmon and cooked noodles (2 cups). Sprinkle each layer with buttered bread crumbs (1 cup). Bake in a moderate over (375 degrees F.) 20-30 minutes.

Getting It Straight

Writes the New York Herald Tribune:—Gilbert ad Sullivan made this simple classification on the human race:

"Nature always does contrive
That every little boy and girl that's
Born into this world alive
Is either a little lib-er-al
Or else a little con-serv-a-tive."

—World Telegram editoral.

Gilbert never got his reputation from that kind of writing, and if Sullivan had been asked to act it the G. and S. quarrel would have occurred sooner. If the W.-T. wants to quote this again it might do it:

Now Nature always does contrive
That every boy and every gal
That's born into this world alive
Is either a little Liberal
Or else a little Conservative!

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON XI

Jesus Praying For His Disciples — John 16:1-17:26

Printed Text John 16:5-7; 17:14-26

GOLDEN TEXT — "That they may be one, even as we are." — John 17:22.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

Time — The discourse and prayer in these two chapters were all uttered on Thursday night of Passion Week, April 7th, A.D. 30.

Place — Both Jesus' teaching and his intercessory prayer here recorded were uttered on the way to the Garden of Gethsemane, either in the city itself or in the valley between the city and the Mount of Olives, or in both.

"But now I go unto him that sent me; and none of you asketh me, Whither goest thou?" The isolated questions of Peter and Thomas (13:36; 14:5) are not inconsistent with these words. Those questions were not asked with a view to the Lord's glory; and much had been said since which might have moved the disciples to a persistency of inquiry. But their thoughts were bent upon their own immediate loss and no one asked how this departure affected him; so completely had their own sorrow absorbed them.

"But because I have spoken these things unto you, sorrow hath filled your heart." Four times in John's Gospel does the word sorrow occur, all of them in this chapter (see also vs. 20, 21, 22).

"Nevertheless I tell you the truth. It is expedient for you that I go away for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I go, I will send him unto you." The word here translated "expedient" is the same word used by Caiaphas, the high priest, in speaking about the necessity for one man's dying for the people (John 11:50; 18:14). "The high line of politics," said Caiaphas, is that we get rid of him. The higher line of God's policy said Jesus is that I go. Thus all the folly and wickedness is at least resolved into the harmony of the divine government and the divine authority.

"I've given them thy word." (See Deut. 18:18, 19; Mal. 2:4, 6; John 7:16 5:24). "And the world hated them, because they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." The tenses are past, but the main reference assuredly is prophetic; we infer that here, as so frequently in this prayer, the Lord is speaking as if the future, which lay germinating in the present was the present already.

"I pray not that thou shouldest take them from the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil one." That is only evil to us, which can hurt the soul (Psalm 121:7) all the other things, which we may think evil, and call evil, shall work together for our good. The evil that can hurt the soul shall never come night our dwelling. No evil, no hurt, no loss, no spiritual evil can ever more prevail to injure the soul of any child of God, whether it arise from the evil one, or from the hatred of the world, or from our own poor wretched, fallen nature, or from the dominion or the consequences of sin.

"They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." Though we were born in the world, and live by the substance of the world physically, are educated in the world's schools, and transact business in the world's markets, yet we are delivered from the dominion of the ideals of the world (Rom. 12:2). We, by our faith, in Jesus Christ, have victory over the evil temptation of the world (1 John 5:4.

"Sanctify them in the truth; they word is truth." The petition in verse 15 may be said to be a negative one. That in this verse is the positive side of the same idea. (Cf. 10:36). The word of God in his Son is the disclosure to men of eternal truth; truth as to his origin, position, destiny, the truth as to his relationship to God himself and his Son, Jesus Christ; as to his relationship to brother men, his place here, his hope for the future.

"As thou didst send me into the world, even so sent I them into the world." God's one great concern for the world was that it should be saved; to achieve this tremendous purpose, he sent the Lord Jesus into the world. This same purpose in the heart of God remains today, and it is to this end that Christ sends us into the world, though of course our work in accomplishing God's plan is not identical with the work that Christ did.

"Ond for their sakes I sanctify myself, that they themselves also may be sanctified in truth." Christ made the truth actual in his own incarnate life, and his victory over sin and over the world, and his own holiness, are to be appropriated by us by the very Spirit of Christ who lives within us.

"Neither for these only do I pray, but for them also that believe on me through their word." The word of the disciples here referred to their work and testimony to the Lord Jesus Christ, the witness which they gave to his saving power. (See 4:39; Acts 1:8, 22).

"That they may be all be one; even as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be in us; that the world may believe that thou didst send me. And the glory which thou hast given me, I have given unto them; that they may be one, even as we are one. "I in them, and thou in me, that they may be perfected in one; that the world may know that thuo didst send me, and lovedst them even as thou lovedst me." No human brotherhood can exist apart from the common bond of the individuals to the Lord Jesus Christ, and the Christian unity should testify to its divine origin. The unbelief of the world if not occasioned, is largely strengthened and hardened by the disunion of the Christians. The glory of the Son, given him by the Father, can be nothing else than the Father's love; that love which constitutes us sons in Christ.

"Father, a desire that they also whom thou hast given me be with me where I am, and they may behold the glory, which thou hast given me; for thou lovedst me before the foundation of the world.' The will of Christ for his people includes two things, that they should be with him where he is (see 12:26; 14:3); and that they should behold his glory.

"O righteous Father, the world knew thee not, but I knew thee; and these knew that thou didst send me." "And I made known unto them thy name, and will make it known; that the love wherewith thou lovedst me may be in them, and I in them." All of Christ's redemptive work, all of his teaching and intercessory work, everything undertaken in the marvelous, unfathomable divine program of having men terminates in the perfection of love. What could be conceived more glorious, more exalted, and more satisfying even though we cannot fully comprehend it, than such a divine purpose for us as this — that the love with which God loves his only begotten Son might be in us, transforming us, energizing us, abiding through the endless ages of eternity, from which nothing will ever be able to separate us (Rom. 8:38, 39)?

BERLIN. — Doom of Europe in event of another war was predicted in dramatic fashion by General Hermann Wilhelm Goering.

"All front fighters who fought side by side and went through inferno are comparable to ancient heroes.

"In was the prime of the world's nations which fought in the last war and experienced its unspeakable horhors.

"In another war, the flower of nations will have to fight, and Europe will be destroyed if the best of all nations is wiped out.

Farm Problems

Conducted by

PROFESSOR HENRY G. BELL

with the co-operation of the various departments of Ontario Agricultural College

1. Question:—"I have a lot of wood ashes. Would it do to put on land now or would it leach out too much? I intend to put it on vegetable and root crops. Also, can you tell me anything about Gypsum or land plaster as it is commonly called? My father years ago used to sow it on red clover and on the turnips when nicely up. He said it kept the fly off. Does it help vegetable growth? I used to put it on my cut potatoes to dry or keep them from bleeding as it were, since we had to cut them quite awhile ahead when putting in 10 or 12 acres. I have not been able to get it the last few years."—T. C. F., Peel County.

Answer:—I would not advise you to put wood ashes on the land at this time. Too much available plantfood would leach out before growing time. Rather store the wood ashes so that neither rain nor snow can fall on it, and in the spring put it on the plowed ground and work it in by discing and harrowing. You are quite right in putting this on vegetable and root crops since it is relatively high in potash. It contains about thirty per cent lime which will tend to keep your soil sweet in reaction.

Gypsum is sulphate of lime, while Limestone is carbonate of lime. As you indicate, Gypsum use to be used in large quantities. It did not correct soil acidity, but it did let loose the potash out of the soil. That is why the crops were improved in yield and quality where it was applied, but its use is not to be recommended since its action in liberating potash resembles very closely the writing of cheques on a limited bank account. Gypsum does not put back any plantfood into the soil, but it does help let loose highly valuable potash. This is why it used to be considered valuable to dip cut potatoes in Gypsum. The potato crop is a lover of high potash fertilizer since potash is instrumental in forming the starch which fills the potato tuber.

You would do better to put your money into fertilizer suitable for potatoes rather than put on Gypsum which depletes your soil of potash.

2. Question:—"I am seeking information regarding the comparative values of the various farm manures such as poultry, sheep, swine, etc., as fertilizers. If you have available any information in respect to this, please send it to me as soon as possible. Also is it a fact that poultry manure is too strong to be used alone. I understand it can be used without harm by florists. I shall be very glad to receive this information." — C. O. H., Wenworth County.

Answer:— Herewith we present a table of analysis figures for various manures concerning which you inquire:

MANURES

Quantity, Composition and Value of Manure from Different Classes of Animals.

	horses	dairy cows	steers	sheep	swine	poultry
Lbs. manure produced per day per 1,000 lbs. live weight	35-45	70-80	40-50	30-40	40-50	30-40
Lbs. per ton, nitrogen	11.8	9.7	13.8	27.5	15.2	22.0
Phos. acid	5.6	5.4	5.6	9.9	9.5	17.0
Potash	14.6	9.4	10.5	22.7	14.6	11.2
Value per ton on basis of analysis	$2.57	$2.00	$2.57	$5.16	$3.17	$4.16
Tons manure produced per year 1,000 lbs. live weight	7.0	12.7	7.5	5.5	7.3	6.7

You will notice that these are in terms of pounds per ton of manure. Poultry manure is double as rich in nitrogen as horse manure, three times as rich in phosphoric acid and about the same in potash as is horse manure. If poultry manure were to be used alone on grain crops or on such crops as tomatoes, it would tend to grow too much straw or stalk, on account of the nitrogen. It can be easily balanced by adding superphosphate or better still, a phosphate-potash fertilizer, such as 0-12-10 or 0-12-15. Florists value poultry manure highly on account of its high nitrogen content. This is also true of sheep manure which florists and gardeners use extensively. You will notice that sheep manure is about twice as rich in potash as is poultry manure.

Movie-radio gossip

By DOROTHY

For months Cary Grant has gone around saying that if his Paramount contract would only come to an end, he would never sign another with anybody. He would just make pictures when he felt like it, and spend the rest of his time lying on the beach at Santa Monica or taking leisurely trips to England. But after watching his work in the new Grace Moore picture, Columbia officials didn't like his idea at all. They decided they must have him under contract. No one has ever been known to win an argument with Jack Cohn, the grand mogul of Columbia Pictures, so Cary signed the contract he offered.

Back in New York all the young stage players and all the dramatic school students go to see Greta Garbo in "Camille" over and over. Two girls who are living on a tiny budget that permits eating only now and then and never riding on a street car or bus had gone every day for six days and seen the picture at least 14 times. They were broke and hungry, but they felt they just had to see it again. So, they screwed up their courage and told the manager of the Capitol Theatre how much they were learning from watching her, and he arranged to let them in free.

Deanna Durbin, the 14-year-old sensation of Eddie Cantor's radio program and Universal's "Three Smart Girls," thinks New Yorkers aren't very good mathematicians. She realized her lifelong ambition of climbing the stairs inside the Statue of Liberty on her first visit to New York, a few weeks ago. But the sign at the foot of the steep, widing stairs said there were 161 steps, and Deanna counted 165. Determinedly she dragged her weary feet up the steps again, only to find that she was right the first time.

ODDS and ENDS:—Clark Gable's birthday on the "Parnell" set was a hilarious occasion. Fellow-players gave him a cake inscribed to the greatest actor in the world—Robert Taylor Joan Crawford has brushed out her curls, wears her hair very straight and plain and uses colorless nail polish. Judy Garland made a tremendous hit singing at a flood benefit, and will get some big film roles now.

Who Lost?— Who Gained?

The company has lost millions of dollars in trade, part of which has gone to its competitors while its plants were held by the strikers. More than 100,000 employes not in sympathy in other industries, have lost millions in wages Yet it is not apparent that John L. Lewis is troubled by the thought that his victories for labor do not balance the losses; nor can he recapture much of the public sympathy that may have been with him before this strike began.—New York Sun.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Henry Kirby

Since the death of her husband, five years ago, she had not enjoyed very good health. The severance of the bond of friendship and love that existed between them was too much for her to bear, and although she made a strong endeavour through Christian faith to face the battle of life alone. After his departure, the strain seemed too much for her and her health kept failing, even though she had the comforting companionship of her two daughters. On Sunday, Feb. 14th, she was stricken with a stroke from which she gradually declined, until the Angel of Death released her suffering on Thursday following. She had been living with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Cadeau, of Mount Dennis, from whose residence the funeral took place on Sat. 20th to the Anglican Cemetery at Markham. Before her marriage she was Maggie McClintock, second youngest sister of the late Alexander McClintock, Streetsville. She was of a very genial and light-hearted nature and was very highly thought of by all who knew her. She and her husband lived in Markham, 25 years ago, where he was finisher in the woollen mills, and here their family was raised. A short service was held at the home at Mount Dennis by Revs. Mackie and Johnson. Her former Rector took the Service in the little church at Markham. He had a very nice review of his pleasant memories of having her as a former member of his Parish. He reminded the friends and relatives that she and her husband brought their children to church instead of sending them as the custom is today. Her husband and daughter sang in the choir, while she was a faithful worker, as well. She was buried beside her husband in the family plot, near the church. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, showing the respect in which she was held. The pallbearers were six nephews. She is survived by one brother, Jas. H. McClintock, of West Toronto and one sister, Mrs. Samuel Gartley, of Hamilton, who, although she is 80 years of age, came to the funeral alone by bus; also two daughters, Mrs. C. Lily and Mrs. Cadeau, three grand children, many nephews and nieces. She was 71 years old.

ISLINGTON

James H. Beamish

Death occurred suddenly Monday night, March 8th, of James H. Beamish, well-known educationist and one-time member of Etobicoke Township Council, in his 69th year. Mr. Beamish Monday afternoon had attended the funeral of his brother-in-law in Toronto, and appeared in the best of health.

For 34 years he served as a public school teacher in various sections of the province and retired two years ago. He held the principalship of King George, F. H. Miller and Dennis Avenue Public Schools in York Township for a number of years, instituting many advantageous changes in school work.

Born in Trafalgar, he taught for a number of years in the rural sections of Ontario. He was a member of the Orange Lodge and a staunch Conservative, holding the presidency of the Islington Conservative Association for several years. He was also a member of the York Pioneers and took a leading part in the work of that organization.

Scores of children in this section will miss Mr. Beamish, as he was superintendent of the Sunday School of the Islington Presbyterian Church. He came to Islington 17 years ago and lately had taken an active part in the formation of an Etobicoke Industrial Commission seeking to bring industries to the municipality.

He is survived by his wife, who was Julia Steen; three daughters, Mrs. Walter Anderson, of Islington, and Muriel and Olive, at home, and two sons, Frank and Jim, at home. The funeral took place to-day, Thursday, from Victoria Presbyterian Church in Toronto, with Rev. Dr. McKerroll and Rev. J. Galloway officiating.

Deceased taught school at McCurdy's Corners, Trafalgar Twp., and at Erindale, previous to going to Toronto.

BOOK REVIEWS

Dr. Harcourt B. Church, of Aylmer East, Quebec, in writing Mr. Perkins Bull regarding FROM HUMINGBIRD TO EAGLE, says, in part:

"For the past sixteen years I have made a hobby of our local birds, have built houses for them and fed them. This hobby proves to me that birds are very intelligent and know their friends from strangers and enemies. Even the humming birds come very close to me when I am working in the garden. This species also appreciate the small vials of sweetened water which I hang about the garden.

With many thanks and kindest regards.

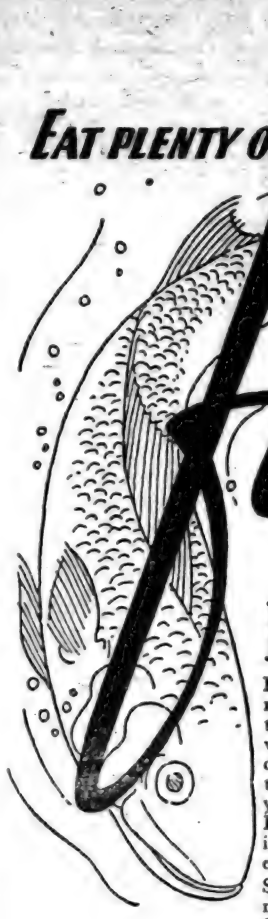
TRINITY CHURCH NOTES

A regular meeting of Trinity Church A.Y.P.A. was held on Monday evening, March 8th, in the Parish Hall. There was a good number in attendance, and Miss E. Hoople was the convener of the evening's programme. The meeting opened with hymn and prayer led by the President. The business part of the evening was held over until after the programme. The programme took the form of a very interesting puzzle, 'The Path of Life.' The basement of the hall was so arranged that we had to go through tunnels, over bridges, through narrow passages, around corners and many other such things. After doing a very interesting Biblical contest, the winners started to enter this 'Path Of Life.' Our only weapon was the Bible, and all along the way we were obliged to stop and answer certain questions taken from the words of Our Lord. It certainly was most interesting and quite appropriate for this season of Lent. The puzzle of finding our way through the many obstacles through Life took about one hour. The winners of the puzzle were Miss Hilda Haddon, Miss Ruby Sheppard, Mr. Edgar Steggall and Mr. Arthur Arch. After this part of the evening, the President took charge of the business meeting. Lunch was served, and the meeting closed with the Benediction.



The next meeting of the A.Y.P.A. will be held on March 22nd. This is the Monday of Holy Week, and the meeting will again take the form of a programme suitable for this period of the Church Year.

Slides and Moving Pictures were shown in Trinity Church Parish Hall last Friday evening, March 5th, under the auspices of the Sunday School. The Biblical slides were of the earliest Bible times, and another set on the Miracles wrought by Jesus. The Moving Pictures were of a comical nature, Mickey Mouse and Our Gang. There will be two more such evenings of Slides and Moving Pictures, and we hope that any who have not already seen these beautiful slides and pictures will not miss the opportunity, and to those who have seen them, and given their support, we ask you to continue to do so.

The Peel Deanery and District Local Council will hold their Annual Lenten Rally at St. Peter's Church, Erindale, on Thursday evening, March 11th, at 8 o'clock. Mr. Sproule, from the Church of the Messiah, Toronto, will be the special speaker. We hope that a good representation will be present from Trinity, Streetsville.

The services at Trinity Church on Sunday, March 7th, were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Beatty in the morning and by Mr. McKibbon from Wycliffe College in the evening. Both services on Sunday, March 14th, will be conducted by Mr. Kibblewhite, of Wycliffe College.

Peel Teachers' Association will hold their meeting at Trinity Church on Tuesday evening, March 16th. Sunday School Teachers from all parishes in the Deanery will be present.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

Night Snapshooting With Box Cameras

Thanks to more powerful artificial home lighting, owners of inexpensive slow lens cameras can now make snapshots indoors at night.

ARE you missing the fun of indoor snapshooting at night?

Maybe because you have an inexpensive camera, such as the box, fixed-focus type, you think that indoor picture-taking at night is not for you. Perhaps you still suppose that without an f.6.3 lens or faster, you have little chance for succeeding, except by making time exposures. Be happy that such is the case no longer. There is now available, for indoor instantaneous exposures in your home at night, a new and more powerful photographic flood light bulb (No. 2), and with two or three of these in your floor lamps, backed by inexpensive cardboard reflectors and with a roll of the fast supersensitive panchromatic film behind your lens, snapshots at night can be made even with the slower single lens cameras. The initial investment in these new bulbs is higher but, on the other hand, they last three times as long.

So, now that practically everybody can be in on the fun, consider the precious subjects that these more powerful lights permit a simple box camera to photograph—the children at their evening games or in their nighties going to bed, the family gathered around the fireplace, gay evening parties when friends come in, the pets, Dad raiding the ice-box, and what not.

One of the enjoyments of making pictures at night is that you can control the illumination. In doing this, however, care should be taken to obtain the right balance of light. Remember that usually you get a better picture with more illumination on one side of the subject than on the other. Either two flood light bulbs should be used on one side and one on the other, or, if only two are used, one should be placed closer to the subject than the other.

The light nearest the subject is the main light—the one which produces the high lights and shadows necessary for proper modeling of features. The other is used to balance the lighting—to illuminate features so that they will not be too dark. If this light is placed too close, faces will appear flat and lacking in roundness. On the other hand, if it is too far away, shadows on the side away from the main light will be too dark and the lighting will be harsh.

Suppose that you have placed a bulb in each of two bridge-type lamps with the shades replaced by the cardboard reflectors. You will probably get a good balance of lighting by having one lamp about three feet from the subject and the other about four. It is an excellent plan before you snap the picture to experiment with the lamps in different positions, watching the different lighting effects on the face or faces. Always use the largest diaphragm or stop opening. Slow lens cameras having adjustable shutter speeds should be set to take the picture at 1/25 second.

Juvenile Hockey

(Simpson & Sampson)

Last Friday at Ravina Rink the Streetsville Juveniles defeated the Areadians by a sore of 1—0. George Schnurr scored the goal in the 2nd period. The Evening Telegram spoke of it as a lucky shot. In our opinion, it was a very good shot, also a very valuable one

The following Monday, Streetsville boys joined battle with the Toronto Crusaders at Ravina Rink. After two periods of very fast hockey neither team could claim a goal. We wish to say however, that Streetsville lads had the better play from start to finish. An official report from the office of the T.H.L. informs us that Streetsville Juveniles are tied for second place in their group. Other teams in the group are Mt. Dennis Weston H. S. Lambton Kingsway and New Toronto. Mt. Dennis is the top team.

We have been asked many times by different people who play for Streetsville? The following is a complete line—up of the team—

Goal, J.Lumbers, Defence, George Schnurr, L. Hope, F.Reid, 1st line M. Redick, L. Longworth, J. Rice 2nd line, H. Wilson, B. Evans, N Potts.

A report from the Treasurer shows that he is now in debt for a bottle of red ink, which incidentally he is using to place entries on the debt side of the team's ledger. You can help him redeem this bottle of red ink by attending the Dance on 17th March

The Streetsville Juveniles are also entered in O.H.A play-offs and as soon as ice conditions permit it, they will meet Fairbanks Aces of Toronto at either Milton or Georgetown. There will be two games, and goals will count. You will remember that Streetsville Juveniles were eliminated from these play off games last year by Hamilton.

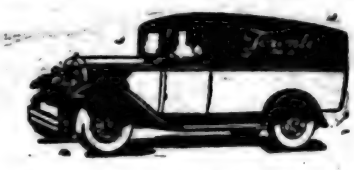
UNITED CHURCH NOTES



The Rev. George E. Forbes, B.A., of Weston, pleased all who gathered in the basement of the United Church, Streetsville, Monday night, with his travelogue. His coloured pictures of parts of Japan, Korea and China were amazing works of art and revealed countries revelling in beauties peculiar to the Orient. Mr. Forbes was eloquent in his praise of the mentality of the youthful Chinese and the reception accorded him everywhere he went was expressive of a desire to be understood, a wish that the people of Canada might know that missionary work is deeply appreciated. One group waited from 2 p.m. until after breakfast the next morning to meet a man who had known and had shaken hands with a beloved missionary long since deceased, but whose grave after 41 years was still visited by reverent and thankful people. Anecdote, story, history kept everyone taut with expectancy and all too soon the story ended. Yet Mr. Forbes had spoken for 1½ hours. He was accompanied on the trip to the Orient by his wife, but on Monday was accompanied by his son, who manipulated the lantern.

It is travelogue like this that educate the spirit and mind, provide people with a respect for other peoples and awakens the feeling of kinship with mankind.

This story ought to be told all over the land. It is enriching, instructing and inspiring, as well as pleasing.

SEED OATS

FARMERS BEWARE what seed grain you buy to sow this coming Spring. There is a great deal of grain being offered for sale in Ontario for feed. A grain shortage has resulted in a demand for Western Feed Oats. These oats are being sold for Feed but some farmers may re-clean them and use part of them for seed.

Germination Tests of samples of such oats have shown as low percentages as from 20% to 70%.

The Sowing of Such Seed may have disastrous results on the crops.

A survey of the grain held in Ontario would indicate there is sufficient good seed to be obtained at home, and all farmers who must purchase seed grain this year should make careful selection upon Germination Tests. A farmer can make a simple and accurate test at home by sprouting a number of kernels either between two sheets of dampened blotting paper or in a box of earth. The sample sprouted must be a fair average of the lot.

The broadcasting of the spanking of a London schoolboy was an arrant mistake, but each day, over radio, there can be heard far less salutary things.—Brantford Expositor.

Watch or Play

We note in an Ontario paper some discussion about a plan for a professional baseball league to include cities from 15,000 to 50,000, but the writer was somewhat skeptical about attendance at the games.

As a matter of fact, attendance at baseball and soccer games in many cities has fallen greatly in the past few years, for the very simple reason that the people who used to go and sit in the bleachers are now chasing a golf ball, swimming in one of the hundreds of public swimming pools or otherwise playing instead of watching others play. It is said that one of the reasons that hockey crowds at Montreal are somewhat disappointing this year is because so many people have taken up skiing and tobogganing.

It's a healthy sign when people would rather play and exert themselves than be content to sit in the bleachers and watch others play.—Lethbridge Herald

Her Special Train

A woman had a ticket to Haliburton, one cent a mile, as advertised at Toronto for Saturday last. The train stopped at Fenelon Falls, all got out except the woman. She insisted on the railway taking her to destination, a trip of 80 miles there and back. The railway carried out its contract, cheaper to have done so than to have faced a suit in court for failure. Getting a private train at one cent a mile does not happen every day.—St. Catharines Standard.

Tree Week?

The St. Thomas Horticultural Society is sponsoring a tree-planting campaign to mark Confederation Year. More power to the progressive society of that city; the effort should be emulated everywhere.—St. Catharines Standard.

Something Wrong

Blind River has 950 people still on relief, and yet cannot get enough men for the bush jobs offered. No wonder a physical fitness test of those on relief has been ordered, with the object of removing from the rolls those in shape to take the jobs offered.—Sault Ste. Marie Star.

High Hatting

Whatever may be said about royal personages, they know the art of wearing top-hats And they ave grace in handling them when they remove them from their heads. Moreover, so far as Britain is concerned, they are mighty well informed on how to keep high hats good condition, which is another art. This is to introduce a counter-blast to 'ampooners of top-hats in this country or in the United States. In the latter country they profess to despise kings, princes and top-hats, but worship them all. At every possible official opportunity the proud U citizen will appear in publi in ill-shaped, unfitting and unkempt high hats. At le the European top-hat looks worth wearing and seems to fit both circumstances and head. One of the better things Britons ever saw the present Duke of Windsor do was to manipulate his always well-groomed high hat. He seemed to be born to it as part of his station in life. Now the chief executive of the United States should send his to Madame Tussaud's and wear a soft felt hat. We hate to tell it to our U.S. lampooners but even Harvard cannot teach their notables the grace of wearing top-hats—and we are not high-hatting. — Brandon Sun.

A Necessity

Boston woman judge says wives have a right to work after marriage. Having washed the dishes, straightened up the house and put the kids to bed, most wives could tell her it isn't a "right" but a necessity.—Windsor Star.

Battle of the Highways

If as many people got killed in a war as get killed on our streets, we would be erecting new cenotaphs and memorials. Yet because the auto, not the bullet, takes them off we look on these fatalities without the horror with which we regard the battlefield. —Hamilton Spectator.

Raise More Horses

When farmers look around for a profitable crop to raise, horses should not be overlooked. Official information indicates that the horse crop is low in Canada, United States, Great Britain, the price high and the demand keen.

In the United States the decrease has amounted to 29 per cent. or over five million horses in the last ten years. It will not be until 1940 that the colt crop will equal the annual wastage and not until 1944 at least, would their horse-power be on the increase. Canadian horse breeders might be able to satisfy this market to a considerable extent if they turned their attention toward a consistent breeding program.—Victoria-Inverness Bulletin.

The Cost of Strikes

The dreary task of computing the cost of the General Motors sitdown strike is still going on. Tangible figures are hard to get, because so much of the loss does not reduce readily to dollars and cents; but one of the most conservative estimates puts the cash loss at about $84,000,000, divided equally between workers and the stockholders. Add to that the losses suffered by other companies which had to close down or go part-time operations because of the stoppage of General Motor orders, and you get a bill that must go well over $100,000,000. Rather a high price to pay, is it not, for failure to devise some system of mediation that would have brought strikers and management together at the very start, instead of after two months of struggle?—Sherbrooke Record.

What Is Horsepower?

A correspondent asks us to tell him how the horsepower, as a unit of power, originated. In the year 1770 Jas. Watt needed a measure which to state the rate at which his steam engine did its work. He hitched a strong horse to a pulley rope, at the end of which, down a mine shaft, he fastened a 150-pound weight. The horse drew it up, 220 feet per minute, so Watt multiplied 220 (feet) by 150 pounds) and got 33,000 (foot-pounds Thus one horsepower is the power required to lift 33,000 pounds one foot in one minute.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

Value of Personality

Employers examining applicants for jobs often like to find out what an applicant's intelligence quotient is before reaching a decision. The intelligence quotient is supposed to be a fairly accurate measure of a person's intellectual ability. Now, however, comes Mrs. Beatrice Hunter Cahill of Boston University's Department of Student Counselling to remark that a good personality quotient can be much more important than a good intelligence quotient. What she is driving at is the fact that a smart man can be a flat failure in this world unless he has the sort of personality that his chosen calling requires.—Guelph Mercury.

THE EMPIRE

Tell Your Banker

Do you desire that the children of Great Britain should grow sturdily and happily? Do you honour the memory of that great man and great King, George V? Do you retain still the emotion which the voice of King George V evoked in you when in his Christmas broadcast he spoke specially to the children? If you do—then tell your banker that he may transfer to the King George V Memorial Fund any odd shillings and pence standing in your bank account. You may have an overdraft. Tell your banker to transfer an amount equal to its shillings and pence. You may have no bank account. Then send to the fund what you can spare. By so doing you will give the children now, and for future generations, room to fill their lungs and stretch their legs, and you will help to honour worthily a great memory.—London Sunday Dispatch.

No Sentiment in Trade

It may be argued that in the ordinary course of events Great Britain would not merely have held her ground in the Australian market but would have increased her trade commensurately with Australia's increasing purchasing power. Apart from Imperial sentiment, she had a right to expect this, seeing that her expanded purchases of Australian primary products had been a major factor in creating this increased purchasing power. This is unassailable reasoning; but pure logic does not govern trade. The old instinct of buying in the cheapest market is still strong. It may be well that the savings effected by buying cheap Japanese textiles have enabled Australians to buy other British products. There are many compensations, direct and indirect, in the complex structure of international trade.—The Australasian.

Two rules we should always have ready:—that there is nothing good or evil save in the will; and that we are not to lead events, but to follow them.—Epictetus.

Urges Adoption Of Shorter Hours

Speaker Says Nurses Would Be More Alert and Efficient

OTTAWA. — Madelene Baker of London, Ont., told the registered nurses of Ottawa that more adequate service to the public, especially the sick, can be provided by adopting shorter hours. "This can be done by dividing the 24 hours into three eight-hour periods," she said.

"A nurse who is on duty for a period of 12 or more hours cannot be as alert and efficient as one who does not feel the fatigue of such a long period of duty," Miss Baker said. "The patient will therefore benefit in proportion as the nurse is less fatigued. This division of the time on duty also has the resulting benefit of more equal distribution of work among the nurses."

News in Review

No Debates Over the Air

OTTAWA— The country is to be spared both the tedium and expense of listening to the radio broadcast of debates in the House of Commons.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King brought applause and merriment from Parliamentarians when, orally replying to queries on the order paper from W. A. Tucker, a Saskatchewan Liberal, he stated: "The Government does not think it would be advisable to broadcast the debates of the House."

"What would be the annual cost of broadcasting the debates of the House of Commons from the short-wave station in Ottawa?" was the first part of Mr. Tucker's double-barrelled question and the second part of it was, "Has the Government given consideration to the desirability of broadcasting such debates in this way or otherwise?"

Trained Workers In Demand

WESTON— That there was a demand for the services of vocationally trained students was the information given Weston Board of Education by Principal E. H. G. Wordan of Weston High and Vocational school last week. The greatest demand, he added, was for those accustomed to carpentry, woodworking and motor mechanics.

Attendance reports showed that the day enrolment in the High and Vocational school was 847 with 454 attending night classes. With a registration of 850, attendance at King Street school averaged 310, while in Memorial school with a register of 614 the attendance was 285.

The report of the school nurse indicated twenty-nine school visits, eighty-nine home visits, 115 individual visits and 164 pupils examined. Announcement was made that after being dormant for six years, the High school annual publication, "The Running Tower," would be issued this year.

$113,330,199 In Subsidies

OTTAWA— Total cash subsidies and financial assistance given the Canadian Pacific Railway since its incorporation amounted to $113,330,199 an answer tabled in the House of Commons by Transport Minister Howe

Dominion cash aid, including subsidies to main projects and to acquired and leased lines amounted to $33,417,889, while cash consideration for lands given up by the C.P.R. was $10 186,321.

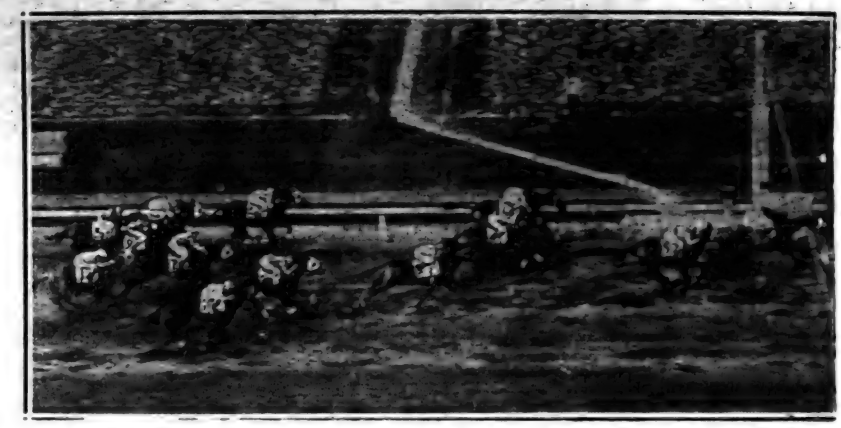
Home Loans, $1,501,167

OTTAWA — Figures issued by Finance Minister Dunning showed 1,883 loans have been made under the Home Improvement Loan Plan up to Jan. 31 in cities of 20,000 population or more.

Total amount of loans in these cities was $768,326 out of a total of $1,501,167 throughout Canada. Total number of loans made in Canada up to Jan. 31 was 3,959.



Montreal headed the list in total amount of loans, while Toronto had the largest number. Montreal's total number of loans was 251, with value of $137,712, while Toronto's total number of loans was 313 with value of $123,909.

500 Millions For Navy

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt's billion-dollar 1937-38 national defense program was formally set in motion this week when the House Naval Affairs Committee favorably reported a $526,555,428 navy appropriation bill, including $130,000,000 for new warships already under construction or to be laid down.

As soon as the naval bill is out of the way, a $416,000,000 measure to finance the army's activities will be introduced, the two together setting a peace-time record and carrying out the President's announced policy of a national defense second to none.

Kills Girl And Self

FORT WILLIAM— Because Victoria Rasseur, 16 year-old, attractive blond farm girl spurned his attentions, and because her father, John Rasseur, Blake Township farmer, refused to consent to his proposal of marriage, John Pelez, 38, a woodcutter, stabbed the girl fatally and then turned the stiletto-sharpened kitchen knife on himself, with fatal results.

The attack occurred in the commodious log farm house on the Rasseur homestead. The man died in 30 minutes and the girl lingered for six hours, when she died in McKellar Hospital.

$2,250,000 For New Roads

OTTAWA — Approximately $2,250,000 will be spent by the Dominion Government this year in cooperation with the Provinces in providing roads and other facilities to reduce transportation costs to and from the mining areas of Canada.

Hon. Thomas A. Crerar, Minister of Mines and Resources, is asking the House of Commons to vote an appropriation of $1,400,000 at the present session and as the arrangement is that the Provinces will spend $1 for every $2 provided by the Dominion, it is estimated that the total expenditure this year will be $2,500,000, as there was a portion of last year's vote of $1,500,000 unexpended.

Routes of the highways will be defined by the Federal and Provincial Ministers of Mines. There will also be provision for wharves and other facilities for airplane transportation to the mining districts. The actual road building work will be supervised by the Provinces.

35 Million On Relief

OTTAWA — Appropriations for unemployment and relief in the supplementary estimates tabled in the House of Commons totalled $16,288,400. In addition $19,500,000 was provided for monthly grants-in-aid for the Provinces.

The unemployment relief appropriation was divided as follows: Relief settlement agreements with Provincial Governments, $400,000; Federal contribution to Provincial and municipal relief projects, $7,331,000; agricultural re-establishment in co-operation with Provincial Governments, $52,500; contribution to farm employment and supplementary plans $3,283,500.

Outstanding claims for direct relief under Unemployment Relief Acts of previous years, $169,000; outstanding claims for drought area relief, $215,200; contribution toward the Greater Winnipeg sewage disposal scheme, $362,200; development and training projects for unemployed young people, $1,000,000; direct relief for the driedout areas, $2,000,000; administration expenses generally, $475,000, and unforeseen contingencies, $1,000,000.

Form Protective Union

TORONTO —Contending that the prices are 50 cents a hundred pounds higher than they should be, large consumers of sugar have formed the Canadian Sugar Consumers' Protective Union, and have established Walter Martin as their secretary in offices in the Northern Building here. Domestic consumers may join the union without fee, while promoters except labor unions to support the campaign, it was announced recently.

Triplets Born

NORTH BAY—Triplets were born to Mr. and Mrs. Jonathon Brown, whose North Bay home is approximately 12 miles from the birthplace of the Dionne quintuplets. Like the quints, the Brown babies are all girls.

They weighed more at birth than the Dionne five whose total weight, officially recorded seven days after their birth, May 28, 1934 was 10 pounds, 24½ ounces. The Brown threesome weighed an even 16 pounds.

Willed $380,000

KINGSTON— Queen's University has received $380,000 under the will of Dr. Agnes D. Crane of Smith's Falls. The money is to be used for the erection and support of a biochemistry building, it has been announced.

Dr. Crane, 75, and the last member of one of the leading families of Smith's Falls, was born in that town and educated at Queen's, where she graduated in medicine in 1888. She did post-graduate work in Europe, attending Dr. Bilbroth's famous English clinic in Vienna.

For World Peace

LOS ANGELES—An Anglo-Saxon alliance, backed by the armed forces of the United States and Great Britain, would constitute the best guarantee of world peace, said Viscount Graigavon upon his arrival here from Hawaii en route home.

"With their combined fleets, manpower, and finances, no combination of enemies would dare make war," he said. "Something like that was in the back of the head of our President Wilson. Folks say he died too soon. Perhaps, but our children's children will prove him right."

Fishing Season Opens

PORT DOVER— The fishing season opened at this Lake Erie port this week The lake has been free of ice practically all winter, and there is nothing to keep winter boats in harbor. There has been a very short respite between 1936 and 1937 fishing because of the extension granted at the close of last season by the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries.

Quints' Third Film

HOLLYWOOD — At the robust age of three years the Dionne quintuplets will star in their third motion picture this June.

A story for the five little sisters was prepared at a studio here recently which would offer acting opportunities the quints never have had before.

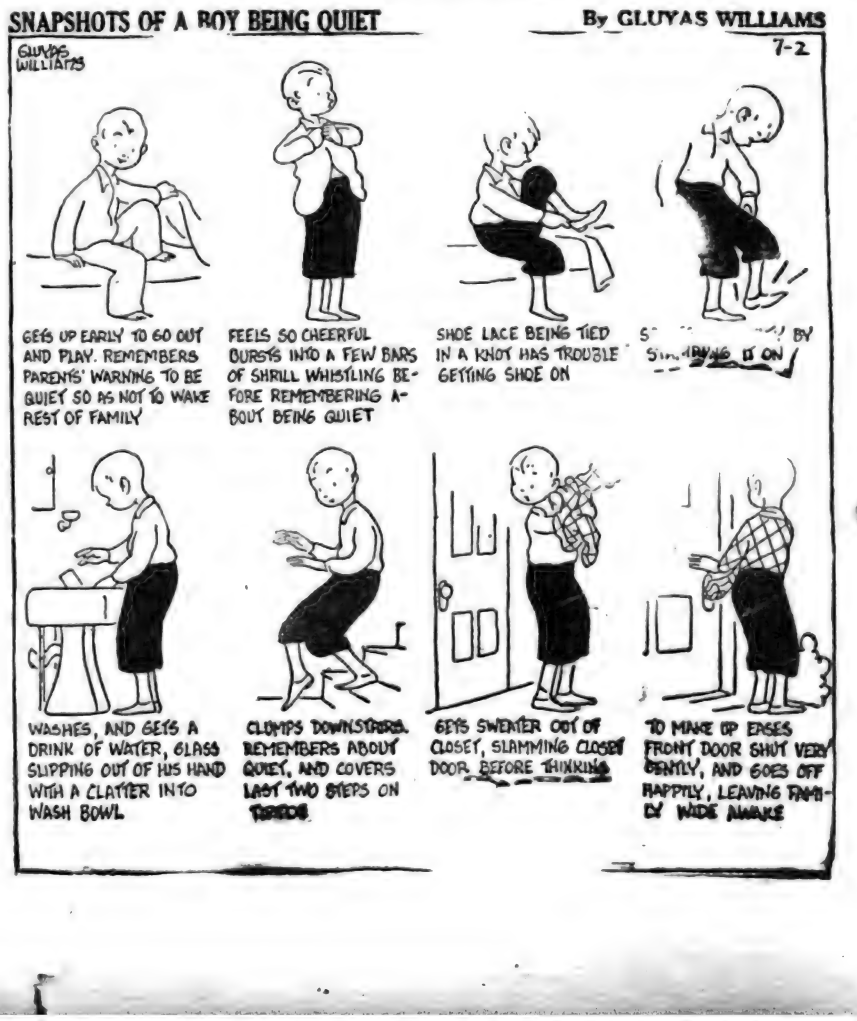
Last May 28, on their second birthday, the quints received $250,000 as down payment on a new three-picture contract running to the end of 1936.

Like no other stars in movie history, the quints, unable to come to Hollywood, have had Hollywood come to them for each picture.

To Wed At Home

KANSAS CITY—Mary Pickford, the Toronto-born film star, will marry Buddy Rogers in California —at least her future father-in-law thinks so.

Miss Pickford, wearing scarlet lounging pyjamas, with slippers and fingernails to match, apparently squelched rumors of a London wedding during a 30-minute stop-off here en route for London to join her fiance.



"I guess we'll have to have the whole family with us when we get married, won't we?" she asked Probate Judge Bert Rogers, who met her at the train.

"Yes, yes, yes" agreed Buddy's father, seemingly relieved because the remark eliminated an English locale for the nuptials.

GARDENING

By GORDON L. SMITH

ARTICLE NO. 3.

The main object of pruning, whether it be rose bushes, fruit trees or flowering shrubs, is to open up the centre of the growth so that sunshine and air may penetrate freely and also, of course, to produce a symmetrical plant. Naturally any dead or weak growth should be removed and also branches that rub against each other.

Early March until late in June, is usually considered the best time for this sort of work, but there are a few specific exreptions. Most of these are the early blooming shrubs, such as the Forsythia. These should be left until after blooming. Grapes must be pruned early in March to avoid excessive bleeding. Raspberries are pruned after the crop has produced and then all the year-old canes should be removed, leaving only the new shoots.

MAKING A HOT-BED

The best arrangement for starting seed indoors is a hot-bed, though where only a few plants of each variety are required a shallow box in a sunny window will be sufficient. A frame-work about 18 inches high, which contains two inches of fine garden soil on a layer of fresh, slightly strawy, horse manure or some other heat-producing material. In an open place and facing the south dig a pit of the same dimensions as the window-frame and about a foot deep. Into this put the manure. (If frost prevents digging, simply pile on top of the ground). The layer of manure should be about 18 inches thick when well pressed down. It is held in place by the sides of the pit and the frame. On top is placed two inches of light garden soil, preferably mixed with a little sand. The window is fitted snugly into place on top and should be about nine inches above the soil at the front and 15 inches at the back to allow rain to run off and also catch the full rays of the sun. At the first the soil will heat quite rapidly, but in about three days it will have cooled to around 80 degrees which is the proper temperature.

The seed is planted in rows about two inches apart, and the bed watered frequently. On warm days it will be necessary to ventilate by raising the window frame an inch or so. When the second set of leaves develop, thin. About three weeks before going outside, the seedlings are transplanted to a cold frame, which is the same as a hot-bed only without the heating manure. Here they are hardened thoroughly before being set out in their permanent quarters. When started in the house the procedure is practically the same, only of course, no heating material is needed. Boxes about three inches deep are filled with a mixture of sand and light soil and placed in a bright window where, preferably, there is a double glass to prevent cold draughts at night.

STOP GETTING UP NIGHTS
LOOK AND FEEL YOUNGER

Keep your kidneys free from waste matter, poisons and acid, and put healthy activity into kidneys and bladder and you'll live a healthier, happier and longer life.

One most efficient and harmless way to do this is to get from your druggist a 40-cent box of Gold Medal Haarlem Oil Capsules and take them as directed—the swift results will surprise you.

Besides getting up nights, some symptoms of kidney trouble are backache, moist palms, leg cramps, and puffy eyes. If you want real results, be sure to get GOLD MEDAL—the original and genuine—a grand kidney stimulant and diuretic—right from Haarlem in Holland. Give your kidneys a good cleaning once in a while.

Broadcast Bans

Mr. Gladstone Murray is entitled to much sympathy in his task of deciding what shall and what shall not be communicated to the public of Canada over the governmentally-owned ether. While he is a Canadian, a good deal of his recent life has been spent elsewhere, and he is probably unfamiliar with the changes of opinion which have taken place in Canada regarding the discussability of many subjects, including venereal disease, sterilization, sexual abnormality and the like, which were regarded as hopelessly improper when he last resided in the Dominion. None among all these subjects is now more respectable than sterilization, which is actually practised by at least one provincial government under a statute of several years' standing, and which has been long and courageously advocated by the Lieut.-Governor of another Province. A ruling which will prevent the members and supporters of the Alberta Governments pas. and present from defending on the air a statute which they have enacted and administered is rather obviously impractical.

It is true that an important religious body in Canada is opposed to sterilization, but we are quite confident that that body would never claim that the advocacy of sterilization constitutes an offensive criticism of a dogma of the Church, and is therefore repugnant to the most sacred feelings of its members.

Declare Food Is Not Cause of Bad Dreams

NEW WILMINGTON, Pa.—Amateur psychologists at Westminster College decided on the basis of questionnaires and experiments that:

Food does not cause bad dreams.

Women sleep more lightly and dream more than men, and remember their dreams more vividly.

Dreams do not forecast future events.

In a series of experiments members of psychology classes learned that external stimuli stimulate dreams which are definitely connected with the external forces.

For instance, ice-bags placed on the head of one victim caused her to dream that she was sick in a hospital and that the nurse was applying ice-packs. Another one dreamed she was caught in a freezing windstorm.

The research workers said they found that men were less susceptible to outside influences in their dreams.

Fish Never So Plentiful

BOSTON—On Boston's famed fish pier, greatest fish marketing wharf in the world, storage space is overtaxed these days as trawler captains and wholesale fish buyers shake their heads and exclaim in unison: "We never saw such a winter."

Because of open water everywhere, in harbors as well as lakes and rivers, explained Edmund L. Dunn, president of the New England Fish Exchange, the fresh water supply has been a constant one this winter, with every prospect of continuing.

Consumption of the fish throughout New England and the rest of the country, serviced by long trains of refrigerator cars and chains of trucks leaving here every few minutes, was expected to increase 25 per cent during Lent, but even that stepped-up demand will not seriously raid the big stores.

The usual ice conditions, snow blizzards and foul weather that raise the cost of fish, have been absent this year and consequently the prices are at rock bottom.

Of course, Mr. Dunn continued, a run of heavy storms at sea and a sudden freeze-up would change the picture overnight.

Along Canada's Mining Highway

In addition to the Kerr Addison, Martin Bird and Omega properties, which are conceded to be substantial mines in the making, numerous incorporations are being formed to develop the prospect areas in the Larder Lake district. The immediate vicinity of the Kerr Addison is the scene of the greatest activity.

Wesley Gold Mines, to the south-east of the Kerr Addison, the Chesterville and Pelangio properties to the east, and the Shaver property to the north-east, are new incorporations. Wesley Gold Mines are diamond drilling; Pelangio have men at work; and the Chesterville are also reported to have operations under way. To the west, Barber Larder and Armistice Gold are starting active developments.

Mr. C. S. Greenland is Consulting Engineer in charge of operations on the Pelangio and Barber Larder properties. He is particularly familiar with the district through his connection with the Martin Bird property. The Martin Bird is located some four miles to the south-west of the Kerr Addison.

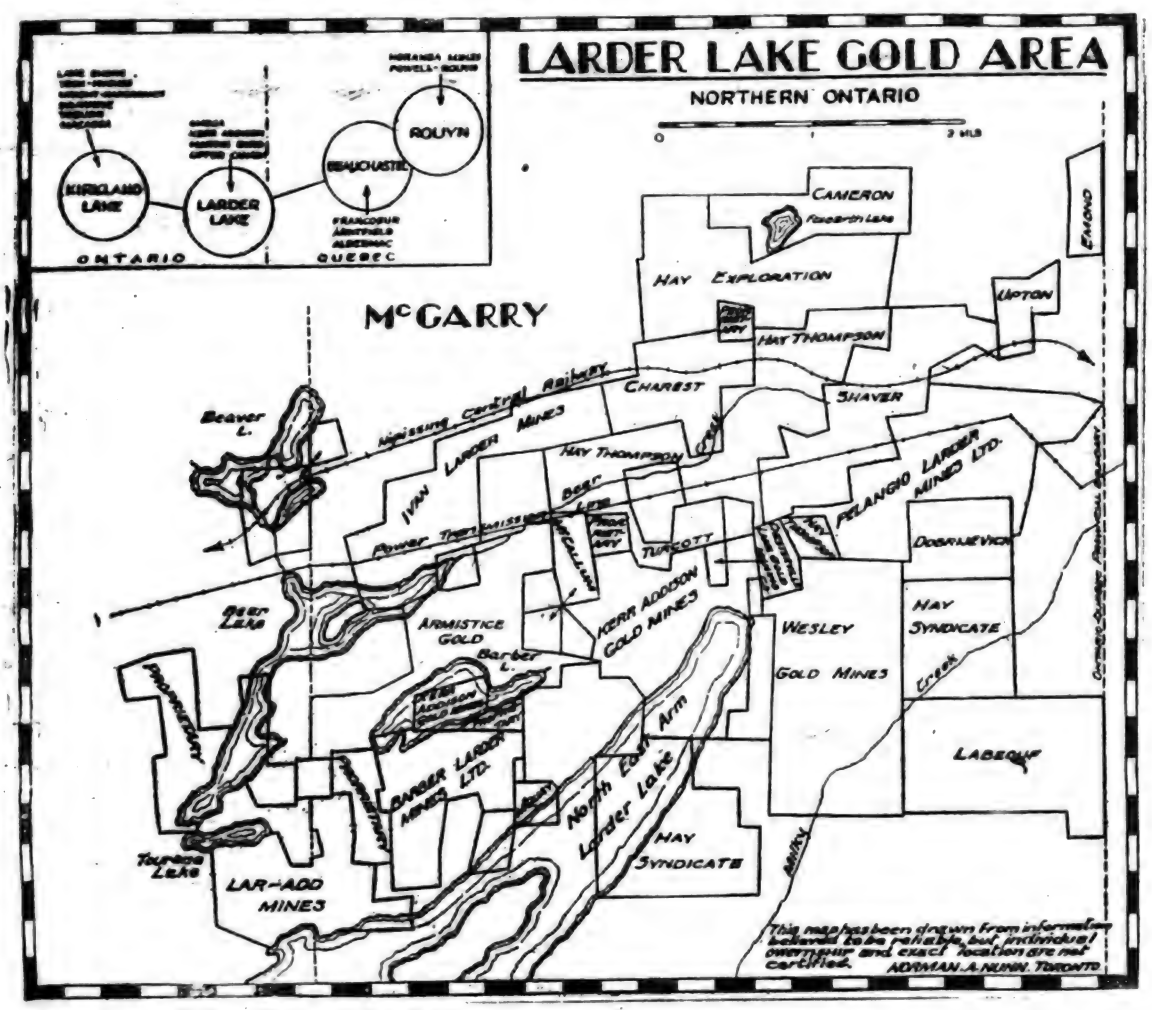
Dobbin Returning To Smaller Farms



HELENA, MONT. — Old Dobbin—despite his appetite—is running machinery right off small farms in Montana, W. J. Butler, state veterinarian said today.

Farmers are finding it cheaper, he explains, to use work horses.

"It is surprising," he said, "the number of good horses seen in use in western Montana, where farms run to the smaller sizes. The use of machinery has paid on some large farming operations, but by and large, the horses have proven best."

"The radio shows us that we are brothers and sisters the world over. Why must there be strife when there are so many of us with the same ideas?

DRUMQUIN

In the early hour of Tuesday morning of last week the last call came to a well and favorably known former resident of this district in the person of Jas. Coyne. The late Mr. Coyne had been in failing health for a year or more. The funeral was held from the home of his brother-in-law, Mr. J. F. Ford, Thursday afternoon, to Bethel Church Cemetery. There was a private service at the house, with a public service at the Church, where a large number of old friends and relatives gathered to pay their last token of respect. The bearers were three nephews, Wilbert, Clarence and Emerson Ford, Mr. Jno. Cook, Mr. Saul Cordingly and Mr. T. Douglas. The grand-nephews and little Billie Talyn were flower bearers. Rev. Eyre conducted the services. He leaves to mourn, a wife, one daughter, one sister, Mrs. T. Featherston, Churchville, and many other relatives.

John Lyster, one of our popular young men, met with a serious accident in Toronto Friday night, while assisting to unload machinery off his transport. The slipping of a prop was the cause of the accident. John suffers from a compound fracture of one leg above the ankle. He was taken to St. Michael's hospital. His many friends wish him a speedy recovery.

The meeting of Bethel Church Ladies' Society, which was to be held at the home of Mrs. W. Ford on Wednesday of last week, was postponed until this week, owing to the passing of the late James Coyne.

It is reported that several residents of the Eighth Line have signed up for hydro.

Bethel Church ladies are preparing to give a supper and concert in the near future. Look out for the date and keep it open.

Mr. Bert Fuller has the contract hauling stone and gravel for Mr. Cross, the new proprietor of the Coyne Estate.

THE DOUBLE-BARRED CROSS

International Symbol of the Crusade against Tuberculosis

As armies march across the pages of history, fighting for their rights or their wrongs as the case may be, one custom seems to have been common to them all: each carried flags and banners on which appeared the emblem of the cause. Good or bad, the cause was always blazoned forth in terms of heraldry which gradually became a highly specialized study. After the dawn of the Christian era the cross became a tremendously popular symbol and with this emblem upon their banner, many a doughty knight rode forth to do battle for his principles and to save or reclaim the Holy Land from the Infidel.

Crosses of all shapes, sizes and ornamentations have been used by innumerable families, cities, orders, guilds, nations and causes. The Spaniards found a religious symbol among the Aztecs which was very similar to our cross. The swastika of Hitlerism is an old symbol made of several crosses. Thus the habit of choosing emblems has carried over into our modern civilization and clubs and such peacetime associations still follow that age-old custom.

It was therefore quite the natural thing that as the war against tuberculosis gathered momentum, and nation after nation took up the cause, that some international emblem should be chosen which would be symbolic. The matter was given careful consideration for it was important that the symbol should be internationally accepted and have a universal appeal, and yet it should be decidedly distinct from any already adopted international symbol such as the Red Cross.

It would seem that the tuberculosis campaigners of the eighteen-nineties or thereabout, deliberately went out after a symbol that would have something like the significance and universal acceptance of the Red (Geneva) Cross, and yet be quite distinguishable from it. They had to avoid not only the Red Cross, but those of the various saints, George, Anthony, Andrew and so on. They had also to avoid the Celtic, the Greek, the Maltese and the Papal. In the words of Dr. D. A. Stewart, "After that, it would seem that what they thought they might require they went and took." And so we have the patriarchal cross, the Lorraine cross of the two crusades accomplished, now a symbol in every land of a new popular, enthusiastic and successful crusade against entrenched tuberculosis, a new crusade to win back for all the people of the world the Holy Land of Health."

This is the banner under which the Muskoka, the Toronto and the Queen Mary Hospitals for Consumptives have marched these many years—the banner under which they and other sanatorium and tuberculosis workers' organizations in the Province have won such marked success.

But victory can only be won with the continued effort and the financial support of the people at large.

Your contribution to National Sanitarium Association, 223 College St., Toronto will be greatly appreciated.

Horticulture

The officers of Streetsville Horticulture Society are busy these days getting new members, and lots of people are joining up. Why don't you come in, too? The object is to help beautify our town. The society is working on a good program now and are sending out a prospectus, in which paid up members are offered 75c worth of shrubs or plants FREE. The form sent out must be filled out and returned to the secretary by March 25th. Those who have not paid their membership for 1937 ($1.00) must send money with the form. There are 28 offers for you to choose from, and we think it is a splendid opportunity for you to get some bulbs or shrubs for the asking.

FLOWER SHOWS

The Society has decided to hold Three Flower Shows this year — two minor and one large show. A vase is to be presented to be held by the person making the largest number of points in these shows until the next flower show is held. If this vase is won three times consecutively by the same person it will become his property.

Boys' Work Class

Considerable interest has been aroused in the community in the boys' work commenced by Miss Beatrice Jones some weeks ago and now grown to a considerable group with a number of enthusiastic leaders and nearly forty equally enthusiastic boys.

The first meetings were sparcely attended, there being only two to one and three to the second. Then interest began to express itself and an effort was made to follow some cultural activity. Wood-work was chosen as the first worth while interest in craftsmanship.

Mr. H. Hope, being asked if he had any scraps of wood suitable for fret-work and simple wood work, was at once interested and not only provided some material but suggested that Mr. Maurice Atkinson might help. It was a happy thought indeed, for not only did Mr. Atkinson gladly assent but he brought to the task his knowledge of the craft and his enthusiasm for hobbies. Mr. Lamb was the second volunteer and quietly, efficiently they went to work. The next step was the amazing offer of the use of a bench in the mill for work and of the place as a meeting place. That opened the way for considerable growth. Any boy could come and senior youths and some young men became leaders, for with the growth of the group it was found advisable to have a leader for every five boys. Among these leaders we have Joe Burns, Mrs. Evans, Tom Plumb, Norman Workman, Russel Evans, Lloyd Green, beside those previously mentioned. The movement is organized as a boys' explorers movement and is affiliated with the Canadian Boys' Work Board. They have an opening and a closing ceremony, 100 copies of which were made by Joe Burns.

This boys' group has already accomplished some really astonishing results. One boy was offered 75 cents for one piece he had made, and was he proud!

Well, the idea is to make a display of some of the work done, and this is to be made Wednesday night, March 31st, when in a social evening parents and friends may gather in the United Church basement.

The Open Column

Having discovered Montreal for our readers, last week, we propose to do something big, this week, and discover New York, although, of course, it was there all the time. But we once went to New York, and, of course, came away again, so we feel that we are in a position to discover it very thoroughly for the reading public.

Without more ado, then: New York may be approached in many different ways, by motor-car, airplane, on foot, by boat, etc., and from many different directions, and also in many different frames of mind. Probably because of these differentiations, the natives of New York are very diverse, as practically all the natives are supposed to have been born in Sioux City, Iowa, Oshkosh, Michigan, or Philadelphia. None of the real New Yorkers were born in New York.

At any rate, driving into the city, down the bank of the Hudson through Yonkers, the visiting tourist is struck by the fact that there is a great deal of it (the city). Not all of it is New York, however, as some of the housing, traffic, etc., is the Bronx. The motorist is also apt to be struck (quite forcibly) by the traffic unless he has the eye of an eagle. When last we visited New York, along the uppermost reaches of Broadway, there was one stop-light every three blocks, suspended thirty feet above the road, and practically invisible. Fortunately, we drive by ear.

The tourist should stop in the exact centre of the city, say somewhere in the immediate vicinity of Times Square, and deliver his car to the tender mercies of a storage garage. Not that driving through New York traffic is such a tremendous strain on the nerves, but trying to find somewhere to park is, and so, too, is trying to get anywhere where you want to go. The central section of the city is made up of one-way streets, all running the other way. If you are willing, however, to camp where your car takes you, instead of staking out a claim at any particular hotel, and staying there, you might just as well drive around the city. You'll see a lot more of it that way.

Hotel accommodation is reasonable. Food in the restaurants, on the whole, is pretty good. It has to be, because the New Yorker, of course, is one of the most critical birds on the planet. Amusements are many and varied. They are all alike in one respect, however. You have to pay plenty for the more diversified attractions. Burlesque shows, (we blush), the big movie houses, and the great collection of nickel-pinching side-shows on the side-streets, cost very little.

But, if you want to spend money, go to a night club or a taxi dance. The latter entertainment may sound cheap enough, but to a parsimonious Canuck the entertainment may be cheap, but the price isn't. A couple of young Toronto blades, our companions in adventure, tried a taxi dance. They stayed twenty minutes, and paid $3.20 each. It spoiled their entire trip.

Coney Island is quite a spot, and a good run for your money, but there is practically nowhere to sit down. The subway packs a thrill—the first time. The Aquarium is interesting—at first. And so forth. New York is really quite a good spot to spend a holiday on a reasonable amount of money. The efforts of New York to entertain are calculated to please almost any pocket. But there is one really serious fault about the city. Walk through Times Square and its neighborhood for an hour, and you will see more homely, hopeless-looking people than you have seen in all the rest of your life put together.

COOKSVILLE

Well girls, the Highway League meeting is over and it proved a success in many ways. For instance, we now have a charming secretary-treasurer and an up-to-the-minute publicity manager. In other words dear people, Miss Beulah Tommey is the former and our own teammate, Selwyn Adamson, is the latter.

The old maestro predicts a very successful summer, as the lake is now much farther from the Motor Park diamond. For the past few weeks the water rose so high, that there was a rumour to the effect that the league would give up mushball locally and operate water polo games instead.

The main problem at present is to organize the girls' section since many places intend entering teams composed of the fair sex. Incidentally if anyone is interested we could write a book on the subject, "When two teams meet or when twenty-eight players, two managers, an umpire, nine spectators and the score keeper tackle the president." It certainly would make marvellous reading with every other sentence censored.

All in all the Highway League appears to be in for another remarkable coma, and happy season, for we believe the girls' loop alone will hold the old association together until the pig-skin artists appear on the gridiron to blow up the first football. However everybody concerned has been requested to go easy on the protests. There's a protest fee now lads.

To date we have only one team in the Credit. Enough said.

COMMUNITY CLUB

The last meeting was held at Mrs. Workman's. A nice lot of sewing was handed in, the beginning of another bale which will be sent to the needy. Letters of thanks were read from a number of sick ones in the district who had been remembered.

The vegetable contest was won by Mrs. C. May.

Mrs. Workman will have a social evening on Friday, March 19th.

The winners at the last euchre, held at Mrs. Williamson's, were Miss Dora McCarren and Mr. A. Ball; lucky prize winner, Mr. F. Durant.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. H. Lee on Wednesday, March 24th.

BARN MEETING

A barn meeting will be held under the auspices of the Peel Holstein Club on Tuesday, March 23. This meeting will be held on the farm of Mr. Albert Dolson, Lot 23, sixth line west, Chinguacousy Township (entrance 22 side-road). A very interesting program has been arranged for. Prof. G. S. Raithby of the Ontario Agricultural College and Mr. Byron Jenvey will be the guest speakers. A judging competition will be conducted. This competition will be divided into a junior and senior section and valuable prizes will be awarded.

LET US SMILE

Doctor—Well, Mrs. Smith Jones, did you give your husband the sleeping medicine I ordered?

Mrs. Jones—Yes, doctor. You said as much as would cover a five-cent piece, and as I didn't have one, I used five coppers. He has been sleeping peacefully for three days!

LADIES' BOWLING CLUB

At the annual meeting held at the club house on Thursday, March 11, the following officers were elected for 1937: Honorary president, Mrs. G. Bunt; president, Mrs. G. Jourdon; 1st vice-president, Mrs. E. Redick; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. C. R. Evans; sec.-treas., Mrs. F. Maas; assistant sec., Mrs. C. C. Meredith; auditors, Mrs. W. Couse, Mrs. A. B. Bruce.

DUNNING BUDGET

By Gordon Graydon M. P. for Peel

Part of Mr. Gordon Graydon's speech given in the House of Commons, Thursday, March 4:

After discussing general financial conditions in the dominion, Mr. Graydon proceeded:

"I desire to go a step further and refer to the riding which I have the honor of representing in this house. As most hon. members know, the County of Peel is predominantly agricultural, but with a substantial industrial development in Brampton, Port Credit and elsewhere. Therefore the new agreement entered into between the Dominion of Canada and the United Kingdom has a special significance and interest for the people of this constituency. Perhaps I might be pardoned for taking great pride in the work of the last administration in opening up markets for and expanding the trade of the agricultural people of Canada. I believe the farmers of Ontario and of the Dominion of Canada thoroughly appreciate the work done by the last administration in providing a market for their agricultural products in the United Kingdom. Even though the results of the last election might indicate otherwise, I believe this is true. When Mr. Rhodes, the Minister of Finance in the previous administration, brought down his budget on March 22, 1935, he stated that the export trade from Canada to the United Kingdom had increased by 52 per cent. since 1932. As every one recognized, that increase was attributable to the agreements entered into by our party. I shall be brief, but the particulars of these matters are so important as to warrant repetition. The Canada Year Book shows clearly that in 1935 agricultural and vegetable products to a total value of $127,500,000 were exported to the United Kingdom. This was an increase over the exportations for 1932, before the agreements were entered into, of $29,000,000. This was the increase in the amount which went into the pockets of the agricultural population of this Canada of ours. The year book goes on further with the story. In 1935 the exports from Canada to the United Kingdom of animals and animal products totalled $54,500,000, an advance of $22,000,000 over the 1932 figures.

In the County of Peel we realize the importance of what I have been saying with respect to the encouragement of farmers to make the best of their position in outside markets. Possibly no place in the whoel of Canada has a higher quality of a higher testing whole milk trade than the County of Peel, which supplies a large proportion of the whole milk consumed in the large metropolitan area of Toronto. The producers in my constituency have found that to maintain the whole milk market against all competitors in this large metropolitan area they must have clean and sanitary stables, and must follow various other regulations. Quality counts in the sale of agricultural as well as other products.

Value of Home Market

While we talk about the opening of our markets for our farm products, let us not disregard that greatest, safest and most convenient market which the farmer can have, the home market in Canada. I was surprised, as I am sure most hon. members must have been, to read the statistics showing the great percentage of our agricultural products actually consumed by our own people. I shall not attempt to give the list on an occasion of this kind, but on a great range of agricultural products not more than three per cent. of the entire Canadian production is exported, the balance being consumed at home. In the light of these figures it would seem that the purchasing power of Canada's urban districts is a most important thing for the farmer and must always be a major factor in farm success. Rural people realize more and more the great value of the working man and his family in the suburban and urban centres having a full pay envelope to make purchases of the products of the farmers of Canada. That is a most important factor.

The Sugar Tax

I have tried to appreciate the manifold problems which face the Minister of Finance (Mr. Dunning) in attempting to balance his budget and make an efficient job of financing this country, but I would urge that, with the picture he has painted of improved revenues and returning prosperity, which to a large extent is probably a reflex of world conditions, the one cent tax on sugar which has been in force since 1933 be removed once and for all. I realize that in 1933, due to the emergency created by world conditions, the government of the time, finding that it was almost impossible to raise enough money through the ordinary channels, resorted to an emergency tax of two cents per pound on sugar. The other day I was looking through Hansard and, noticing the remarks made with respect to that tax by many hon. members who now sit on the government side of the house, I felt sure they could not but agree with me in the statement that, while this tax was reduced in 1934 to one cent per pound, it is now time that the housewives of this country should receive from the government a really practical piece of encouragement and that this particular burden should be removed from shoulders which under present conditions are sometimes least able to bear it.

The young people of Knox Presbyterian Church, sixteen, entertained the young people of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church on Monday, March 15, at the home of Mr. Percy King, at a box social. Games were indulged. All report a very enjoyable and pleasant evening.

DIXIE

"Usefulness is the rent we pay for room on earth," declared Leslie Pallett, Jr., president of Table 18, K.R.T., in preaching the sermon at the annual church service of his group in Dixie Presbyterian Church Sunday night.

"How much are you worth to your fellowmen? What are you doing for him? How much better is society for you having lived?" asked the youthful speaker. "We should be helpers of our fellowmen—not his oppressor."

"There is unrest today that cannot be solved by dollars. But when you hear young men get up and stress service and spiritual things: things with eternal values, it augurs well for the future of this country. I am one of those men who has a 100 per cent. confidence in our youth," commented W. Earle Gordon, founder of the movement.

Don Pallett, vice-president of K.R.T., and farm director, gave a concise outline of the development and aims and purposes of the order. Lindsay Death presided. Jim Sherman read the scripture and Norman Clarke led in prayer.

The choir of Bethesda United Church, Dixie, under the direction of Mrs. Nellie Leuty, with Tony Brooks as organist, led the song service, with appropriate anthems and a male chorus. Mrs. Leuty was soloist of the occasion. A large congregation attended.

PERSONALS

Mr. Del. Wallace of Bradford is visiting friends in town.

Mrs. Vic Johnson entertained the Bridge Club on Tuesday evening.

Mrs. M. Lundy is with her brother, Mr. W. Fulton, of Brampton, who we are sorry to say is seriously ill.

UNITED CHURCH

Some note ought to be taken in our news columns of the expected visit of Mr. Tom Hall to Streetsville. He has been secured to assist in the evangelistic services to be held commencing next Sunday in the United Church.

These press notices reveal how Mr. Hall has been received. Detroit Free Press: "The famous bass soloist, Tom Hall, was perhaps the best of the evening in his selection and songs which brought repeated encores."

The New York Times: "Thomas Hall possesses a particularly mellow voice and delighted his audience with baritone solos." Border City Star: "Outstanding in dramatic excellence was the singing of Mr. Tom Hall, who took the part of Samuel." London News says: "Tom Hall, the well known local celebrity, always excels and commands enthusiastic receptions," etc.

Prepare to attend every meeting. Each one will be a treasured memory. Members of all the churches are invited for this is a part of the great inter-church movement for the evangelization of Canadian life.

STAR RUBY

By Louise Jerrold

CHAPTER XII

"A very pretty story." It was Yelena's voice, harsh, and entirely free of the Russian accent. "And it has a surprise ending! Just hand over the rubies, my gallant Irish friend!"

"And no monkey-business, either!" This from Michael, who had poked a gun nito Dennis' back while Yelena was covering Albertine. 'Zoland is back here, too."

Dennis laughed grimly. "Brave Michael, who takes no chances! You see, I was in the garden last night when you suggested to Yelena that Bates rob me while I slept—or should I say, while I was supposed to be drugged by the after-dinner coffee? And when Bates—or Zoland to you—turned out to be drunk, I had to listen to Yelena nerving you to do it yourself. And a fine job you made of it!"

"Quit stalling, Maxwell! There are three of us, and we've all got guns." That was Bates and, at the menace in his voice, Albertine's grip on the steering wheel tightened.

In the distance, the scattered lights of Tevansville twinkled feebly. If she could only get to the bridge! Bob Fletcher would be there. But they'd never let her — Albertine knew that.

Even Denny seemed to realize that the odds against him were too great. With a sinking heart, Albertine saw him reach into an inner pocket of his coat for the rubies. Tanman-Roan would surely believe the loss of the rubies was too much of a coincidence, following so closely on the heels of the diamond theft. They would think Denny and Bates—or Zoland—were confederates. Denny would be disgraced!

"Stop the car!" Bates rasped.

It was maddening. Albertine thought—the bridge and Bob Fletcher couldn't be more than a few minutes away. She decided swiftly.

"Brace yourself!" she whispered to Dennis.

Then, without lessening her speed, she deliberately ditched the car.

A terrific impact. Shattering of glass. Screams. Then, for Albertine, everything went black.

• • •

A monotonously insistent noise roused her to consciousness. She was lying jammed against the steering wheel, her weight pressing upon the horn button. The car was on its side, and against her lay the unconscious form of Denny, in a grotesquely crumpled position. There was dead silence in the back of the limousine. The others were evidently out, too.

She cried out for help, her voice mingling with the blare of the horn.

Far down the road, she saw a single light appear, poise in the air, disappear, then reappear again on the crest of a hill. She could hear the roar of a motorcycle as the light drew steadily nearer. Bob Fletcher!"

In a moment, he had reached the scene of the wreck. He leaped from his machine, dropped into the ditch and jerked open the right front door of the car, which was lying on its left side.

"I can't move!" Albertine's voice was sharp with fright. "See—see if this young man is all right."

Gently Fletcher pulled Dennis' inert form away from her. She slid back from the horn, stopping its bleating.

Then Denny groaned—that was music to her ears. He was alive!

"Albertine!" he called. "Albertine!"

"I'm all right." Her head ached intolerably. Her whole body ached, for that matter. "Mr. Fletcher, take a look in the back of the car."

"What's left of it, you mean," Bob Fletcher said grimly. "Who's in there?"

"Three crooks who were holding us up. That's why I ditched the car."

• • •

The policeman was staring into the rear of the limousine.

"I heard the infernal racket of the horn and decided I'd better see what was what."

He started lifting the three unconscious jewel thieves out of the tonneau of the front of the car, his left arm dangling at his side. Albertine followed him.

"Need any help, officer?" asked Dennis.

"All of 'em are alive, but out. Say! One of them is Miss Tevans' chauffeur, and the other two look like those Russians who came back from New York with her!"

"Russians, my eye!" Dennis said shortly. "Fakers and jewel thieves. And the chauffeur was the brains of the outfit. They swiped Miss Tevans' entire collection."

Bob pawed among the robes and the debris.

"Would this be it?" he asked. In his hand was a flat black leather case. "Anyway, I'll just take charge of it."

In a moment, he had also dug out the three guns. Then he and Dennis and Albertine worked over the three bandits, who were still unconscious. Dennis' bag yielded first-aid bandages in the form of handkerchiefs. Zoland appeared to be the most badly injured of the three.

"Know how to handle a gun?" Bob Fletcher asked Albertine at last. "I've got to get help from the village."

"I can bluff," she answered quite gamely.

Dennis glanced at the three unconscious forms lying on the robes of the car on the embankment.

"I don't think," he said, "that our patients are likely to bother us much for awhile."

"I'll make it snappy,' the policeman promised as he straddled his motorcycle. With a roar, the machine was off.

• • •

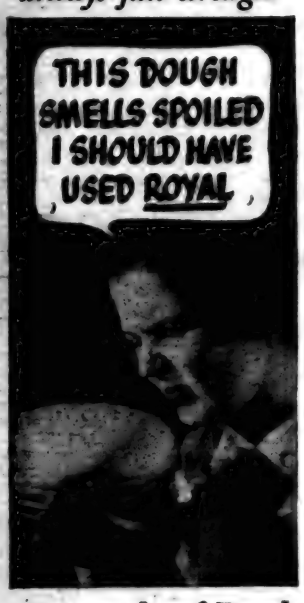
Albertine's fingers hovered over Dennis' injured arm.

"If I had killed you—" she said tremulously. "It was a crazy thing for me to do, but all I could think about was the rubies, and what it meant to you to keep them safe."

"There are things dearer than jewels." Carrying her fingers to his lips, he kissed them. "The Irish are funny, Blue Eyes—you can't finish them off in a smashup of this kind, but I've heard tell of them dying of a broken heart."

He seemed to be waiting for her to say something. She looked up at him—a question in her eyes.

"I laid my heart in your hand back in Detroit. I mean the star ruby that my grandfather brought back from Burma. As a young man, he gave it to the girl who became my grandmother, and in turn, Father gave it to Mother. It's a family tradition, you might say. I couldn't explain before, with the shadow of that other thing hanging over me—I could not honorably ask you to marry me. But I am asking you now, little sweetheart."



"Denny," she whispered, swaying toward him. "Oh, Denny!"

With his unhurt arm, he crushed her to him.

Beauty Recipe Produces Health

Exercises Should Be Added to Good Night's Sleep Every Night

The very best spring tonic for hair and skin and figure beauty is made like this:

To nine hours sleep every night for a month, add 15 minutes of setting-up exercise once a day and a diet of more vegetables and salads than desserts, starchy or fried foods.

Mix with a pleasant disposition, and, for seasoning, a systematic nightly skin routine to suit individual requirements. Take this regularly, and you'll find that spring blues are something you won't catch, that any such concoction as sulphur and molasses is something you won't need.

If you haven't taken seriously conscientious beauticians' remarks about health being the true foundation of real beauty, do so just for a month and see what happens.

Until you have exercised properly every day for four weeks, you can't possibly have any idea of how much better setting-up routines make you feel. Eat the right kind of food and you'll have a clearer head and lighter feet. Sleep more hours to convince yourself that rest makes for sparkling eyes and a sweeter smile.

Remember that skin which is cleansed, lubricated and stimulated faithfully night after night will stay young and attractive. Improper cleaning causes blackheads, blemishes and dinginess. Dryness is a forerunner of fine lines and wrinkles. Open pores and sallowness often are the result of sluggish circulation, so don't under-estimate the importance of stimulating tonics and lotions.

Make up your mind to be gloriously healthy, so you'll feel well and look prettier all the time. Unless there is something organically wrong, in which case you ought to see a doctor immediately, you can attain all by yourself the kind of glowing health that makes for sparkling eyes, clear skin, beautiful hair and a supple and slender figure.

Canada Sends Gold To Britain, U.S.

Northern Ireland Gets Territorials

LONDON—The Government have decided to station three companies of territorial troops in County Antrim, the first ever posted in Northern Ireland. The War Office said the move, in line with the new defence program, would provide artillery, engineers and air corps reserves.

Simultaneous campaign was under way to increase territorial troop recruiting. Enlistments now total 7,998 officers and 133,668 men, which is short of the strength authorized by 1,960 officers and 53,532 men.

Woman's World

By Mair M. Morgan

A ALAD FCR SUPPER

Until you have tried most of them yourself, you can hardly believe that such a variety of delightful dishes can be made from quick-setting jelly. There is a little booklet on the market now which contains recipes for hundreds of novel ways of serving quick-setting jelly and combining it with fruits, vegetables and meat. The illustrations are beautiful and its all one can do to keep from rushing right into the kitchen and making them all, just to prove to yourself that it can be done.

Because quick-setting jelly can be purchased in so many distinct and delightful flavors, is easily and quickly made, it is a boon to the housewife who wants to make a little bit go a long way. When you have something left over and can't serve it alone, it often makes a perfect dessert, salad or entre when combined and molded with jelly.

Of course we have all used quick-setting jelly as a dessert combined with fruit and topped with whipped cream, but it is perfectly at home in a salad as you will discover when you serve this Supper Salad Ring.

1 package quick-setting lime jelly, 1 cup hot water, 1-8 teaspoon salt, 1½ cups grapefruit sections, 1 cup grapefruit juice and water, Tuna fish salad.

Dissolve jelly in hot water. Sprinkle salt over grapefruit; drain thoroughly, add water to juice to make 1 cup, and add to jelly. Chill. When slightly thickened, fold in grapefruit. Turn into ring and mold; chill until firm. Unmold. Garnish with celery leaves. Fill centre with tuna fish salad. Serve with mayonnaise. Serves 6.

CULINARY INSPIRATIONS

Springtime—and with it new culinary inspirations—is just around the corner. When appetites need tempting these recipes will tempt them:

Savoy Pudding

4 egg yolks, slightly beaten, 3 tablespoons sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, 2-3-4 cups milk, 1 package lemon-flavored gelatine, lady fingers or strips of cake, 1 cup sliced canned apricots, 1½ cups shredded coconut.

Combine egg yolks, sugar and milk, in top of double boiler. Place over rapidly boiling water and cook until mixture coats spoon, stirring constantly. Remove from boiling water; add gelatin and stir until it is dissolved. Turn part into mold, making 1 inch layer, and chill until firm. Chill remaining custard mixture until slightly thickened; then dip lady fingers into part of mixture and line sides of mold. Fill centre of mold with alternate layers of apricots, remaining custard, and coconut. Chill until firm. Unmold. Garnish with additional apricot halves and whipped cream. Serves 8.

Daffodil Cake

1 cup sifted cake flour, 1 cup egg whites, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon cream of tartar, 1¼ cups sifted sugar, ½ teaspoon vanilla, ½ teaspoon orange extract, 4 egg yolks, beaten until thick and lemon colored.

Sift flour once, measure, and sift four times. Beat egg whites and salt with flat wire whisk. When foamy, add cream of tartar, and continue beating until eggs are stiff enough to hold up in peaks, but not dry. Fold in sugar carefully, 2 tablespoons at a time, until all is used. Sift a small amount of flour over mixture and fold in carefully, continue until all is used. Divide batter in two parts. To one, fold in vanilla. To other, fold in orange extract and egg yolks beaten with 2 additional tablespoons sugar. Put mixtures by tablespoons into large ungreased angel food pan, alternating yellow and white. Pan should be only ½ full. Bake in slow oven (275° F.); after 30 minutes increase heat slightly to 325° F. and bake 50 minutes onger. Invert on rack until cake is cold.

Spiced Steak.

2 pounds round or chuck steak, cut 1 inch thick, 2 tablespoons lard, ½ cup vinegar, 2 tablespoons brown sugar, ½ cup meat stock, 1 tablespoon flour, salt and pepper.

Cut the steak into pieces suitable for individual servings. Brown them on both sides in hot lard. Add meat stock, vinegar, and brown sugar, and let simmer until tender, forty-five minutes to an hour. Remove to a hot platter and thicken liquid with flour smoothed in cold water.

Practical Ideas Appeal Strongly

Younger Generation Imbued With Material Training Principal Says

MONTREAL, — A practical-minded group of people, particularly the young ones, has been developed in Canada, Dr. R. C. Wallace, principal and vice-chancellor of Queep's University, told the Women's Canadian Club here.

Dr. Wallace said that as an educator he had an uneasy feeling 'we are going into professional and practical and material training too much and those old subjects at the root of education — the classics, philosophy, mathematics and particularly the humanities are beginning to take second place in our minds."

In Canada there is responsibility of using its material wealth for betterment of civilization, the university head pointed out. It may be, he suggested, there are other things more fundamental and in neglecting them "we shall be the losers."

Offence of Horns

We are reminded that here in New York unnecessary horn honking is illegal after 11 o'clock at night. It should be made illegal at any time, and, in addition, the city (or, in our case, the state) should emulate the example set by Buenos Aires, which requires official approval of the type of horn installed before it will license an automobile. For the sake of the community peace and self-respect let's crack down on honking in general, and especially the sort that makes us jump. — New York Herald Tribune.

Dominion-Wide Accord Reached on Securities Law

Protection For Public Is Assured—Toronto Meeting Asks That Companies Act Be Under Provincial Jurisdiction—Rules Are Laid Down

TORONTO.—Complete accord on the minimum essentials of effective securities fraud prevention laws and their administration all over Canada was reached by the conference of Dominion and Provincial officials convened at Toronto last week by W. P. J. O'Meara, K.C., Assistant Under-Secretary of State. And therefore this has been the most momentous conference yet held in Canada with regard to company or securities legislation, because few thought a basis for common action could be decided on so soon. But experts from every part of the Dominion pooled their experience and were able to find in the midst of diversity of opinion, common ground for co-operative action in every Province.

The meeting in Toronto was an outgrowth of the meeting of the Dominion-Provincial Committee on company law in Canada in Ottawa last November. On the question of getting a uniform Companies Act for Dominion and all the Provinces the first real spadework was then done, but differences of opinion on many points have to be ironed out and sub-committees will work on these at various times throughout 1937 with the object of having draft legislation ready for Parliament and Legislatures by 1938.

Set Forth Minimum Needs

The need of affording in the meantime the greatest possible protection to the Canadian investing public led to the conference in Toronto last week. The decisions made at this conference do not need new legislation in many cases. In most Provinces the power already exists to put them into immediate effect by means of regulations or by simply deciding on the new policy. They are the minimum requirements for effective securities fraud prevention, and each Province can go much further if it wishes. Some of them definitely intend to do so.

About the much-discussed proposal for a Dominion Securities Commission, the conference is understood to have been unanimous. After considerable discussion a resolution was passed to the effect that a Federal Commission is neither necessary nor desirable. The results desired can be obtained, it was decided, by co-operation between the Dominion and each Provincial Securities Commission. Legislation is asked to bring the Dominion Companies Act under the jurisdiction of each Provincial Commission for administration purposes in its region. All Securities Acts in the Dominion for all practical purposes are uniform now, but it is considered important that in future there should be common consideration by Securities Commissions of all the Provinces of amendments considered necessary to the Securities Acts so that uniformity in administration can be maintained.

Two Countries Represented

The conference of Dominion and Provincial officials administering the laws relating to the prevention of fraud in connection with securities included the following:

Prince Edward Island—P. S. Fielding, Deputy Provincial Secretary.

Nova Scotia—F. F. Mathers, Deputy Attorney-General, and H. J. Egan, C. A., Registrar, Securities Act.

New Brunswick—E. B. McLatchy, counsel, Department of Attorney-General.

Quebec—Hon. T. J. Coonan, K.C., Minister without portfolio; Adolph Routhier, K.C., Solicitor to Securities Department; J. X. Mercier, Attorney-Department of Mines; and H. Oughtred, Accountant-Investigator.

Ontario—John M. Godfrey, K.C., Securities Commissioner; W. A. Brant, Registrar, Securities Act; and G. Frank Beer.

Manitoba—W. R. Cottingham, K.C., Chairman, Municipal and Public Utilities Board; and A. B. Lawford, Registrar, Securities Act.

Saskatchewan—A. B. Lawford, at the request of A. E. Fisher, represented Saskatchewan.

Alberta—A. A. Carpenter, Chairman Public Utilities Commission.

British Columbia—H. G. Garrett, Superintendent of Brokers.

The representatives of the Dominion were: E. H. Coleman, K.C., Under-Secretary of State; W. P. J. O'Meara, K.C., Assistant Under-Secretary of State; and K. R. Daly, senior solicitor, Department of Mines and Resources.

The Securities and Exchange Commission was represented by: Baldwin B. Bane, chief, Registration Division, Washington; Ernest Angell, Regional Administrator, New York; and W. W. Prager, Chief Regional Attorney, New York.

Hon. A. W. Roebuck, Attorney-General, welcomed the visitors at the opening meeting.

SPORT REPORTER

By KEN EDWARDS

Hi folks! Here are just a few facts that are worth placing in that old scrapbook, from time to time:

Did you know, by any chance, that Mr. Seagram's horse, "Inferno," was the greatest race horse to ever win the King's Plate. Also, when "Inferno's" remains were sent to the Veterinary College for autopsy, it was discovered that the great racer's big heart weighed 17 pounds—just about five more than the heart of the average blood horse.

Interesting, too, is the fact that Belle Mahone, which won the Plate in 1917, is the oldest living King's Plate winner.

If you don't believe in ghosts, maybe you lean towards fairy tales. . . .—

Do you remember Milo? Well, he is said to have been the greatest of all wrestlers. Milo could actually carry an ox about on his shoulders and write his name on a wall with a 100-pound weight hanging from his wrist. . . Oh me, a glass of water, Hives! . . . .

Time marches on, and with it more "believe it or nots", to find that Strangler Lewis of modern-day wrestling, once threw an 1800-pound steer on his farm!

Send any interesting sport facts to Ken. Edwards c-o Wilson Publishing, 73 Adelaide St., W., Toronto, and the sender's name will be published in this column along with the fact given. Thank you.

Taxi Owner Found Dead In Ditch

Kitchener Sportsman's Murder Baffles Police—$17 Remaining in Pockets Ruling Out Robbery Theory—Car Half Off Road Near By

KITCHENER—Local and Provincial police are faced with one of the most baffling murder mysteries in this city's history following the discovery early Sunday morning of the body of Lawrence Hewitt, 30-year-old taxicab proprietor and prominent Kitchener sportsman.

Shot through the heart with a .32-calibre bullet, Hewitt was found shortly after 2 a.m., sprawled in the muddy ditch beside the Kitchener-Preston Highway, two miles east of here and near Centreville. Half off the road was his sedan car, its light switch turned on and the battery dead. A robbery theory was blasted when the police found in the dead man's pockets $17 in bills and a few cents in cash. Hewitt was extremely popular here and, so far as his family is aware, he had no enemies.

Called Out by Telephone

At 10 o'clock Sunday night the telephone rang in his home, where he sat listening to a hockey broadcast with his wife and Bernard McGinnis, a close friend. After answering the telephone, he returned to the room and announced that he had to go after a fare because one of his two drivers was out on a call and the other was off duty. "I'll be back in five minutes," he said. Then he put on his coat and went out. It was the last time he was seen alive. An effort was made to trace the mysterious call that took the young man away from his home and lured him to his death, but telephone officials were unable to throw any light upon its origin.

Didn't Catch Conversation

McGinnis declared he was unable to catch any of Hewitt's conversation while he was answering the mysterious call. "The radio was going pretty loudly," said he, "and drowned out his words. The telephone is in another room. He was not speaking very long before he returned. I didn't think there was anything unusual about the call, because he often went out on runs while I was there.

Now Regarded As "Human Beings"

OTTAWA. — "Generalization on the subject of sex are going out," Nellie McClung, widely known canadian authoress, said in a recent interview. Such phrases as "so like a woman," and "the eternal mystery of woman" are heard less frequently in these days, she said.

"If women have accomplished anything by emancipation it is to be regarded as human beings, not as creatures of moods, whose actions will always be baffling and beyond understanding to more man. Some of the stupidest women have built up a reputation of mystery and cleverness on just such a theory."

Mrs. McClung disagrees with the theory that men writers have a better insight into the character of women than women writers. "If a writer has a deep understanding of human nature, it will include an understanding of both sexes," she said.

The scarcity of Canadian writers may be due in part, Mrs. McClung things, to the fact that "people do things under the impulse of hatred," and Canada being a country without any great national problems lacks the nationalistic spirit that so often produces writers.

"Take the hatred of England from the Irish," she said, "and their writing would be poorer."

She believed, nevertheless, that Canada with its pioneer background offers a great field for writers, and is enthusiastic about the crop of young writers she believes Canada is producing today.

Walkerton Couple Married 54 Years

Walkerton.—Mr. and Mrs. William Denny celebrated the fifty-fourth anniversary of their wedding Sunday, and for the event all members of their family, six sons and two daughters, were present at a dinner served and the bride and groom of over a half century ago were at home to receive the felicitations of their family and friends.

Mr. William Denny, who celebrated his natal day in March, was born in Brant and is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Denny, who pioneered there. For fifty years after graduating from the rural school Mr. Denny carried on farming and threshing business. For the last 23 years he has been engineer with the Canada Spool and Bobbin ompany. His bride, the former Miss Mary Sparling, was born in Brock Township, June 19, 1864. Following their marriage by Rev. Mr. Moffat, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Walkerton, they took up residence on the old Denny homestead, where they lived until their removal to Walkerton about a quarter century ago.

War Not Inevitable Says Dr. Royden

Woman Minister Discusses How Cause of Peace May Best Be Served

HALIFAX. — Dr. A. Maude Royden of London, England, only woman to hold a doctor of divinity degree in the Church of England, said here last week she did not believe "war is inevitable in Europe."

En route to England after a tour of America in the interests of the national emergency peace campaign of the United States, Dr. Royden said the best way women could contribute to the cause of the peace was "by joining organizations committed to that cause and when anyone says war is inevitable, challenge their statement."

Dr. Royden who preached at Deer Park United Church Toronto last summer, conducted services at St. Andrew's United here before sailing for England.

Higher Wages Seen

Toronto.—"A province can only be prosperous as long as the people in that province are prosperous," asserted Elroy Robson, president of the National Labor Council of Toronto, this week in commenting on the statement of Hon. Arthur Roebuck that "any industry which cannot pay the minimum to be set by the government can go out of business or out of the province."

"Any exploitation of the workers by finance or capital that causes poverty and misery among the people is not good for the province, not good for the capital nor for the people," Mr. Robson added.

The minimum wage law now before the legislature is good, in his opinion. "The legislation on the whole is good for the great masses or workers, but it should be adequately policed," Mr. Robson stated. "The best way to police it would be to include a clause giving workers in industry the right to organize and provide a very severe penalty on any employer who discriminates against workers, either directly or indirectly for becoming members in trade unions."

Insomnia is increasing in England, where one person in every 20 suffers from sleeplessness. This is four times the figure for 30 years ago.

Junior Farmers Judge

Georgetown. — Close competition in all classes marked the Halton County Seed Fair and Junior Farmers' Judging competition held in the Town Hall on Saturday. Christie, President of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph; Professor E. J. Zavitz and J. E. Whitelock, Halton County Agricultural representative Dr. Christie congratulated the exhibitors at the fair, on the high standards of the products displayed, and the capability of the entrants in the judging competition.

Farmer's Wife Writes Winning Play

Regina.—A grey-haired farm woman, her husband and a boy and a girl from the Marshall Dramatic Club will represent Saskatchewan at the Dominion Drama Festival in Ottawa next month.

George de Warfaz of London Saturday selected as the best of eight plays presented in the Saskatchewan Regional Festival the offering "Relief," written and directed by Mrs. Fred Bicknell, who also took a role. Mr. Bicknell, Archie McArthur and Anne McIntyre complete the cast.

The four represent a club of only ten members fostering the drama in the hamlet of Marshall, with a population of seventy-five. It lies near the Alberta border, 250 miles northwest of Saskatoon.

Canada Will Shun War

London.—Canadian and Australian soldiers are unlikely ever again to come to Europe to fight, the Sunday Times said Sunday in an editorial on the Imperial conference to be held after the Coronation.

Stressing its view that international affairs and Imperial defense will take up most of the conference's time, the newspaper says the Dominion's reject the doctrine that "peace is one and indivisible," at least in its more inflexible forms.

"Here," the editorial continues, "their view accords substantially with that of the British Government. "No more Canadian or Australian army corps are likely to travel overseas, even for France or for Flanders."

Even The "First Lady of the U.S." Carries a Gun

Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt Has It For Protection When Motoring Alone

NEW ORLEANS, Ma. Franklin D. Roosevelt said recently she hates guns but carries one when she motors alone.

Lecturing here on "A Day in the White House," she was ushered about New Orleans by a nescort of two armed city detectives, assigned by her hosts—but not at her request.

She explained she never has guards in New York or Washington "where everybody knows me."

"I go about just as anybody else" she said. "However, when I travel there are usually special guards furnished me. But they are not detailed at my request. I would much prefer to go without them."

In reply to a question, Mrs. Roosevelt said bodily harm "never enters my mind."

"I do carry a pistol with me when I ride alone in my automobile," she added, "but only then."

"Can you use it?" a questioner asked.

"Well," she said with a smile, "I had the same training with a pistol that the New York National Guard has. Certainly I can use it."

But a little later on, she confided, "I hate guns."

The President's wife wore a wine-colored gown with a flowered hat and a short veil.

She told of her daily life and that of Mr. Roosevelt in the White House. She said she believed people were interested because the White House "belongs to the people."

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

Silhouettes and "Silly-Ettes"

With a camera, a sheet, and a floodlight bulb, here is how anyone can rival the funny page artist.

NO WINTER season of picture-taking can be complete unless you have made indoor silhouette pictures and tested your originality, imagination and ingenuity in devising interesting scenes and poses. Making silhouettes is fairly simple if you follow directions, but ideas for subjects! There is where you can display the talent of a movie director, scene painter, stage carpenter and comic artist combined.

The essential set-up is merely a sheet stretched tightly across a doorway between two rooms, a photographic flood light or flash light bulb in a floor lamp in one room and your subject and camera in front of the sheet in the other room. It is the white sheet and the illumination which, of course, place your scene in silhouette, and thus in silhouette it is recorded on the film, provided you give the proper exposure. A word or two on this:

If you use flood light bulbs (one No. 2 bulb or two No. 1 bulbs) and your camera is of the single lens or box type, expose for about two seconds with the largest stop. If it has a double lens with stop f.8, expose for about one second. If your camera has an f.6.3 lens, expose for about one-half second at f.6.3. The camera must, of course, be on a firm support and set for "time." The light and camera should be so placed that a line drawn between the light and the lens will pass through the center of the scene. If you prefer to use a flash bulb, set your camera at "time," flash the bulb and close the shutter.

Now consider the endless possibilities for silhouette pictures. Don't stop merely at silhouette portraits, interesting as they may be. Devise amusing story-telling pictures. Get a laugh out of them and give your friends a laugh. You can do this by using appropriate objects, combining them in silhouette in front of the sheet with your human figure. You are not limited to objects placed in front of the sheet, however. With black or dark gray cardboard or heavy paper you may fashion all sorts of figures, pin them on the sheet and create additional scenery. By posing your human figure in conjunction with them you can produce the most absurd situations. Indeed you can perform miracles. For example, you may show Dad juggling an innumerable number of billiard balls, the balls in reality being discs on the sheet. You can depict a fairy story to illustrate a Mother Goose rhyme, such as a witch flying across the face of the moon or a great big spider frightening little Miss Muffett. You can create the illusion of six-year old Jimmie landing a voracious shark, twisting a lion's tail or defying an elephant.

"Silly-ettes," if you want to call them that, but a collection of them in your album will be far more amusing to you and your friends than many pages of professional comics.

UNITED CHURCH NOTES

We believe Easter Sunday will be memorable in many ways. The choir, under the direction of Mr. G. Jourdan, is making provision for special music and added to this will be the contribution of Mr. Thos. Hall.

The sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered at the morning service Easter Sunday.

Easter Monday night we are to have a concert by the Elmvale Concert Orchestra, assisted by a few gold medalist artists from Toronto and district. This orchestra is composed of some 25 players and is coming largely because of the interest created by the exchange of pastors and the desire to have fellowship.

The Rev. Thos. Powell, D.D., Superintendent of Missions for Alberta, is to be with us April 4.

The district executive of Peel Women's Institute met in Brampton on Friday afternoon, March 12, to make plans for the county convention to be held in May.

Mrs. A. B. Smith, President of Peel County, occupied the chair.

Before the business commenced the ladies were favored with short addresses from Mr. David Wilson, President of Peel Memorial Hospital, and Mr. J. J. Jamieson, Treasurer of Peel County. These gentlemen told of their plans for the extension of the hospital and hoped for continued co-operation of the Women's Institutes. The convention contest this year is to make a house dress, the owner to come prepared to wear her dress. Prizes of $3, $2 and $1 respectively offered. Miss Collins of the Dept. of Agriculture will be the judge. Mrs. Dorrington gave a splendid report of the provincial convention held in Toronto in November, at which over 700 ladies attended. The president announced that two new branches had been added to our list, namely, Brampton West and Coronation. This makes twenty-one Women's Institues Branches in Peel County. All are looking forward to a splendid convention.

Letter to the Editor

Editor Review

Dear Sir—In November, 1925, I convened a meeting of Overseas Veterans in my home. We organized on a three-fold platform : one part was the erection of a Memorial. We carried on meetings regularly in your hall. We had happy meetings and had, or were entitled to, the support of the community. I was President until 1931. Cpt. Rev. W. T. McCree was Treasurer until he left the village in 1932. Mr. W.H. Davis was secretary. The late General Lessard had occupied the position of Hon. President.

The good name and welfare of the Veterans has always been and still is very dear to me. It is with intense pain and disappointment that I hear on every side of recent doings which have scandalised the village. I am not a kill joy, as I think people here know, but in respect for those who were associated with me in the early days, particularly General Lessard and Capt. Rev. W.T. McCree, and myself, as still Hon. Pres., as well as to those citizens who loyally helped us, I wish to state that a complete account of recent proceedings should be investigated.

Yours faithfully

Juvenile Hockey

(Simpson & Sampson)

On Wednesday Mar 10, Streetsville Juveniles engaged Lambton—Kingsway in a battle for 2nd place in the group standing at Willowdale Rink. In last weeks Review the game was briefly reported as a victory for Streetsville. This much was correct, but the final score was 5—0, not 3—0.

The first period of the game was very fast and Streetsville's first line Rice, Redick and Longworth, deserve special mention for their combination—Frank Reid started the ball rolling when he drove one past the goalie on a pass from the corner. Then Ike Redick turned on the steam and bulged the net twice, making the score at the end of the first period 3—0.

In second period, both Schnurr and Hope scored on solo rushes. When period was nearly over, Lambton—Kingsway, seeing they were outplayed, decided to fight. In the resulting free-for-all, nearly every player on both teams became involved. Thus ended a hectic game and one that will be remembered by Streetsville Juveniles

Last Tuesday night Streetsville Juveniles played at Georgetown in defense of the challenge cup that they won last year. The final score was 4—0 after three periods of fast hockey. G. Schnurr, L. Hope and Simpson netted one goal each for Streetsville in the first period. In the second period, Ike Redick scored the only and last goal of the game.

There is just one more game to be played at Georgetown and the result of it will decide who will have the custody of the cup for this year. This game with Glenwilliams will be played very soon. We don't know the exact date.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON XII
JOHN'S PICTURE OF THE TRIAL AND CRUCIFIXATION
John 18:1 — 19:42
Printed Text — John 19:4-9; 14-18, 25-30

Golden Text — "Hereby know we love, because he laid down his life for us. — 1 John, 3:16.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

Time — The arrest of Jesus took place some time late on Thursday night, April 7th, A.D. 30. Christ was crucified in the third hour of the next day, Friday (Mark 15:25), and he expired approximately six hours later, which would be about three o'clock that afternoon (Mark 15:33). Burial took place that day.

Place — Christ was arested in the Garden of Gethsemane, which was on the lower slope of the Mount of Olives opposite and east of Jerusalem.

"And Pilate went out again, and he saith unto them, Behold, I bring him out to you, that ye may know that I find no crime in him." If the charge had seemed reasonably, the governor would naturally have let the law take its course. That he had not done so, but brought the accused out again, was a clear proof that he held the charge against him to be groundless. His words are an appeal at once, to the sense of humanity, and to the sense of justice in Christ's accusers.

"Jesus therefore came out, wearing the crown of thorns and the purple garment." We cannot help but think in reading these words, of a time yet to come when the Lord Jesus, will be seen crowned with glory and honour (Heb. 2:7, 9); when upon his head there will be many crowns forever (Rev. 19:12); and he will be clothed with a garment down to the foot, and girt about at the breasts with a golden girdle" (Rev. 1:13). "And Pilate saith unto them, Behold the man!" Pilate spoke more truly than he knew. His words were probably uttered in contempt, but they really are an acknowledgment that the only periect man was the one who stood before them.

"When therefore the chief priests and the officers saw him, they cried out, saying, Crucify him, crucify him! Pilate saith unto them, Take him yourselves, and crucify him; for I find no crime in him. The Jews answered him, We have a law, and by that law he ought to die, because he made himself the Son of God." It is sometimes said that Christ never declared himself to be the Son of God in a way that no other men could be sons of God, but such a conclusion is co tradicted by such words as are found in John 5:18 and 10:30, 33, and by the plain manner in which the Jews brought accusation against the Christ, which accusation our Lord never denied.

"When Pilate therefore heard this saying, he was the more afraid." The fact that Christ was said to have claimed a divine origin naturally deepened the strange fear which his presence inspired; Pilate not only was afraid but he was more afraid.

"And he entered into the Praetorium again." This word appeared previously in 18:28 (and also in Matt. 27:27 and Mark 15:16). Here it probably means the official residence of the procurator, though where Pilate's residence was in Jerusalem during the time of our Lord is not quite certain.

"And saith unto Jesus, Whence art thou? But Jesus gave him no answer." (Cf. Matt. 7:6; 27:12-14). Pilate would not have understood our Lord had Christ answered his question, and furthermore, the question had nothing to do with Christ's guilt. As Pilate continued to question the Lord Jesus and as Christ quietly spoke to him, more and more the Roman official became conscious of the greatness, as well as of the innocence of the one who stood before him, and he sought again to deliver the Lord. But the Jews very shrewdly reminded him that Christ had called himself a King, that thus he was a rival of Caesar, and that if Pilate should release a man making such caims, he would not be Caesar's friend. Of one thing Pilate was certainly afraid — offending the powers in Rome by whom he had been give nall the lucrative positions which he had held.

"Now it was the Preparation of the passover; it was about the sixth hour and he saith unto the Jews, Behold, your King! They therefore cried out, Away with him, away with him, and crucify him? Pilate saith unto them, Shall I crucify your King? The chief priests answered, We have no king, but Caesar." About six o'clock on Friday morning, Pilate brought Jesus out, and, himself sitting down on the judgement seat, presented Christ to the Jews as their king. It is strange to hear Jews, who chafed under the yoke of the Roman government, and whose true king must needs be of the line of David, so easily forgetting all their past history and their present shame as to say they would have no king but Caesar, as uncircumcised, pagan, godless Gentile.

"Then therefore he delivered him unto them to be crucified." In none of the Gospels does it appear that Pilate pronounced sentence on Jesus: he perhaps purposely avoided doing so. But in delivering him over to the priests, he does not allow them to act for themselves — he delivered the Lord to be crucified.

"They took Jesus therefore; and he went out, bearing the cross for himself, unto the place called the place of a skull, which is called in Hebrew Golgotha: 18. Where they crucified him and two others on either side one, and Jesus in the midst." The picture of the Son of God walking out the Holy City, the city of Melchizedek, the city of David, the city of the great line of prophets, his head and body bruised and bleeding, and carrying on his shoulder the crushing weight of the wooden cross, and knowing in his heart that shortly he would himself be stretched upon it, is a scene calling more for meditation than exposition.

"These things therefore the soldiers did. But there were standing by the cross of Jesus his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the wife of Clopas, and Mary Magdalene. When Jesus therefore saw his mother, and the disciple standing by whom he loved, he saith unto his mother, Woman, behold thy son! Then saith he to the disciple, Behold thy mother! And from that hour the disciple took her unto his own home." The first cry from the cross was a prayer for God to forgive those who had crucified him (Luke 23:34); the second utterance was to the thief crucified with him (Luke 23:); the third cry was the one here given, words to Mary and to John the Apostle. It is recorded only in John's Gospel. By making provision for his mother's comfort, Jesus fulfilled the commandment, "Honor thy father and thy mother" (Ex. 20:12), and thus, from the pulpit of his cross preaches to all ages a sermon on the Fifth Commandment.

"After this Jesus, knowing that all things are now finished, that the scripture might be accomplished, saith, I thirst. There was set there a vessel full of vinegar, so they put a sponge full of the vinegar upon hyssop, and brought it to his mouth." The fourth cry from the cross is not recorded by John (see Matt. 27:46, 47); the fifth cry, "I thirst," is recorded in none of the Gospels except in John. This incident should be carefully distinguished from the one recorded in Matt. 27:34; Mark 15:23; and Luke 23:36. The Holy Spirit led John to st in this in dent a fulfillment of Psalm 69:21. The vinegar was a sour wine drink made by the soldiers. The branch of hyssop was from a plant possibly one and one-half feet high on the end of which the sponge was placed. In his love he suffered men and women to minister unto him and at the last received gently and humbly this solace from a foe.

"When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, he said, It is finished, and he bowed his head, and gave up his spirit." This is the sixth cry from the cross, and is found only in John's Gospel. So many men have come to the end of life conscious that they have not at all completed the work they had expected to do. Victor Hugo said: 'Life is too short for a man to carry out all that he has planned.' Danton, about to be guillotined said: 'I leave it all in a frightful welter.' It is Christ's declaration that the final revelation of God has been given, that all alienation between God and man has ended, that all other religious rites and ordinances are abrogated, and that henceforth there is only one Mediator between God and man, the man Christ Jesus.

Movie Star Dust Radio

By VIRGINIA DALE

Actors are apt to be a pretty gloomy and pessimistic lot when you know them well. They are always worrying because the career of an actor is apt to be short, always pointing out men in the extra ranks who only a few years ago were stars. Now they have suddenly discovered that their worries were imaginary. Jack Holt, after twenty-four years in pictures, just signed a new contract with Columbia to make six Westerns a year. He is as popular as ever, maybe more so.

Jack Holt

For weeks Clark Gable has been completely mystified by receiving high offers for the decrepit old Ford Carole Lombard sent him as a valentine last year Now the truth is out. A Mr. Brown of Richmond, Virginia, wants to buy it to exhibit at County Fairs. But Clark won't sell unless Carole gives him permission.

Instead of raving about Henry Fonda and Sylvia Sidney in the gripping, tragic "You Only Live Once." Hollywoodians come out of the theatre making up silly couplets. That is what the company gets for dispensing with grammar in the title. One of Henry's best friends said, "'You Live Only Once' may be better grammar, but 'You Only Live Once' is elegant drammer." Another one, playing with the same idea, said, "'You Live Only Once' may be more grammatical, but 'You Only Live Once' is very dramatical."

Over at the Paramount studio you are just a wallflower if you don't know your American history. Directors, players, authors and any visitors who happen to be around swap stories about pioneer days, and anyone brash enough to mention current events, like who won the second race at Santa Anita, or what happened last night at a cafe, is quickly squelched.

To the great success of "The Plainsman" goes the credit—or the blame—for all this pride in the past. The company is so enthusiastic over that picture, and the forthcoming 'Maid of Salem" that they are delving into history for their next big production, "Jessie Lewis,' the story of the early days of the Wells-Fargo express.

Gift To R.C.M.P. Mystifies Many

Legacy of $75,000 Cannot Be Explained By Relatives

LONDON.—Relatives of Miss Audrey Carden, of Knightsbridge, London, are unable to explain a bequest of $75,000 to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, revealed in her will.

Sir James MacBrien, commissioner of the R.C.M.P. in Ottawa last week announced an Edinburgh lawyer had advised him of the bequest but had not informed him of the reason the money was left. N. S. Sargeaunt, of Ashby, Hants, uncle of Miss Carden, is equally in the dark, he discloses in a letter to the Canadian Press.

Sargeaunt wrote that Miss Carden was the only daughter of Sir John Craven Carden, Bart., of Templemore Abbey, County Tipperary. Her mother wa a daughter of Sir Valentine Baker.

It is understood that during the Great War Miss Carden drove an ambulance and in her will included legacies to two women who were with her at that time. She is also believed to have left a sum of money to a fire brigade.

Her next-of-kin is believed to be a 10-year-old boy, the present baronet and a son of her only brother who was killed in a plane crash in Kent last year.

London Foresees Big Year for Lace

Both Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth Are Very Fond of It

LONDON, Eng. — It will be a great year for lace, as both Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth are very fond of it. Hence the series of little lace suits that Stiebel is showing for Ascot. He makes them over silk wearable and not at all "lacy" or foundations. The effect is almost like that of a very heavy monotone brocade. These suits are extremely wearable and not at all "lacy" or fragile. One is a delicate creamy lace over rose silk, resulting in a very subtle dusty pink; other combinations are red lace over gray, or blue over blue. They are shown with black accessories.

Cost Is Varied

Justice Minister Gives Penitentiary Figures Across Canada

OTTAWA —The percapita daily cost of maintenance of prisoners in Canadian penitentiaries ranges from $4.43 at Collin's Bay down to $1.74 at Kingston Penitentiary, Justice Minister Lapointe indicated in a reply tabled in the House of Commons, in answer to Douglas G. Ross (Cons., Toronto, St. Paul's.).

The average cost for all penitentiaries is $2.33. Others are: St. Vincent de Paul, $1.85; Dorchester $2.11; Manitoba, $2.84; British Columbia, $2.58; Saskatchewan, $2.56.

The high cost at Collin's Bay was partly due to capital expenditures on buildings and equipment the last annual report of the Superintendent of Penitentiaries shows. While actual maintenance of convicts costs from 34 cents at Dorchester to 44 cents at British Columbia, capital expenditures per capita range from 14 cents at Kingston, to $1.05 at British Columbia, and $1.38 at Collin's Bay. Staff and administration costs vary almost as widely from 97 cents per day per prisoner at St. Vincent de Paul and $1.01 at Kingston to $2.24 at Collin's Bay.

On January 31, 1937, Mr. Lapointe stated in his reply. 3,124 prisoners were confined in Canadian penitentiaries as follows: Kingston, 719; St. Vincent de Paul, 883; Dorchester, 364; Manitoba, 291; Saskatchewan, 390; British Columbia, 275; Collin's Bay, 202. In addition there were 123 prisoners on the register of the different penitentiaries but not included in the above total.

FARM NOTES

Conducted by PROFESSOR HENRY G. BELL
With the Co-Operation of the Various Departments of the Ontario Agricultural College.

1. Question:— "Will you please tell me what can do for Cut Worm or Wire Worm "—H. H., York County.

Answer:— Almost every Spring cutworms do considerable damage to corn, cabbage, tomatoes, tobacco and some other crops by cutting them off at the ground. The insects work at night and hide by day just beneath the surface of the soil or under rubbish or any good covering. They are stout, smooth caterpillars and when at rest are usually curled up into a circle.

To control them use a poison bait. There are several formulae for this but the following is about as good as any:—

Bran	25 lbs.
Paris green or fine white arsenic	1 lb.
Cheap molasses	1 qt.
Water enough to moisten, about	3 gals.
Bran	5 lbs.
Paris green or fine white arsenic	3 ozs
Cheap Molasses	½ qt.
Water enough to moisten, about	½ gal.

Mix the bran and Paris green thoroughly until the green can be seen everywhere through the bran. Add the molasses to the water, stir, then pour the sweetened liquid over the poisoned bran and mix until all is moistened and will fall almost like sawdust through the fingers.

If the plants have been set out and are being attacked, drop a small quantity of the bait—one-quarter of a teaspoonful—alongside each plant. Do this late in the evening so that it will be fresh when the worms begin to feed. If the plants have not yet been set out and cutworms are known to be in the soil, prepare the ground well and then an evening or two before setting out the plants, scatter the bait thinly, as one would do in sowing grain, over the plot or field. The cutworms will feed upon this and be killed before they can do any damage

One application is usually sufficient to control any ordinary outbreak and when scattered thinly, the larger quantity will cover about one acre.

CAUTION: Do not inhale the dust from the poison when mixing, and beware that cattle or other domestic animals do not get access to the bait.

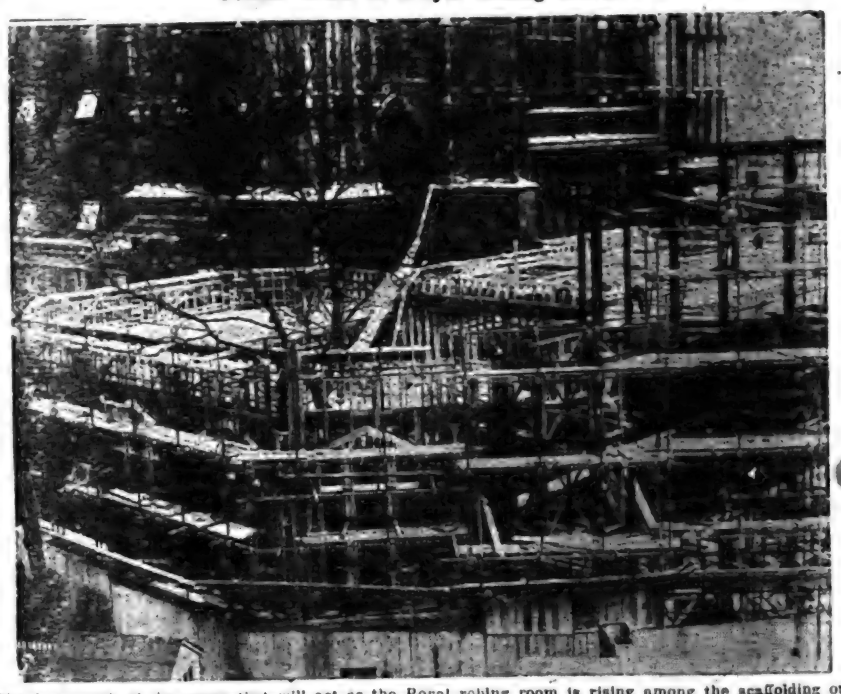
WIRE WORMS

The chief methods to keep free of wireworms is by practising a short rotation of crops. This removes the main breeding places; namely, the old pastures and meadows. When breaking up such a field, a good practice to follow is either to plough it early, work it up and sow wheat the same fall or, if this cannot be done, plough it later in the fall and next spring sow oats or barley. In either case, put in red or sweet clover in the spring. Next year take off the clover, plough early and put in wheat, adding a clover again the following spring; or oats or barley with a clover may again be used. After this crop of clover has been harvested or ploughed under, usually a crop may follow.

Peas, buckwheat and flax, being like clover, very little attacked by wire-worms may also be used in the rotation until the soil is free from the worms. Alfalfa, too, is seldom injured but does not work well into a rotation.

Corn and potatoes being very susceptible should never be planted in any soil which is known to contain wireworms.

It has been observed that wireworms are usually worse in poorly drained soil, hence tile draining will probably also be of value, at least in assisting plant growth.



The more rapidly the plants grow, especially in spring, the less likely they are to be killed by wireworms; hence before planting the field, prepar the soil well and, if poor, add commercial fertilizer and lime where needed.

Baits may sometimes be used on a small scale, especially in gardens and green houses, to capture the wireworms. Potatoes may be placed about three inches deep in the soil and 10 feet apart. Stick a short wire painted into each potato to mark its position Examine the potatoes once a week and destroy the wireworms present. Replace the potatoes and repeat. This may be done for three weeks in succession and would result in getting rid of many of the wireworms. It should be begun in spring as soon as the ground is warm and the wireworms have come up, as can be determined with a shovel.

If the sun suddenly ceased to exist, all the planets would be pulled toward the planet Jupiter, and would continue their revolving around it.

Some kinds of bacteria have such astonishing vitality that they have been kept at a temperature of 33 degrees F. below zero for six months and yet lived.

HIS BACKACHE WAS UNBEARABLE

Kruschen Brought Him Relief from Pain

This man of 31 was prematurely aged by backache, when he should have been enjoying the best years of his life. Here he tells how Kruschen helped to restore him to health, after months of pain:—

"I was in hospital for ten weeks, owing to kidney trouble. When I was discharged I felt like an old man, although I am only 31. If I stooped to do anything it was agony to straighten up again. Several people advised me to try Kruschen Salts. I tried them and found they gave me relief from pain and I felt better in every way. I cycle 28 miles a day to and from work, and shall keep up the daily dose of Kruschen because I can now do the journey to and from work and not feel any the worse for it."—S. V.C.

When the internal organs cease to do their work properly, impurities begin to accumulate in the system, and cause troublesome symptoms. Kruschen Salts help to stimulate the liver and excretory organs to healthy, regular activity, and thus assist them to rid the system of harmful impurities.

Accident Leads To New Industry

Carlessness of Housewife Brings First Smoked Haddock

A cow kicking over a lamp, they say started the Chicago fire. A spider that was climbing a thread brought Bruce of Scotland victory. But these and a great many other like historical incidents pale before the story of the housewife whose carelessness founded one of the most important phases of the Canadian fish industry.

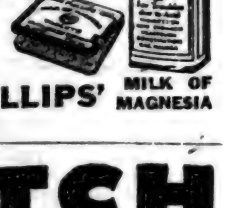
Away back in a Scottish village a housewife left a haddock hanging on the rafters of her cottage as she went out for the day. She had left it too near the peat fire, however, and when she returned the fish was all dried by the smoke from the fire. She decided to cook it anyway, and the result was so appetizing that the news spread like wildfire and smoked fish became a national delicacy.

Today the popularity of smoked fish has spread everywhere and the appetite for this delicacy has founded Canadian organizations of international repute, some of which have been established for a century or more.

The Canadian climate has been found ideal for the production of this delicacy and other cured fish and today the Dominion holds a foremost place in the world trade in the export of dried, smoked and pickled fish.

Here's that Fast "Phillips" Way

To Alkalize Stomach Quickly



On all sides, people are learning that the way to gain almost incredibly quick relief, from stomach condition arising from overacidity, is to alkalize the stomach quickly with Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

You take either two teaspoons of the liquid Phillips' after meals; or two Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets. Almost instantly "acid indigestion" goes, gas from hyperacidity, "acid - headaches" — from over-indulgence in food or smoking — and nausea are relieved.

In Your Garden

By GORDON L. SMITH

(ARTICLE 4.)

When purchasing supplies, authorities emphasize importance of obtaining fresh nursery stock and from a reliable Canadian source. Roots and stems of good nursery stock are moist and pliable, and in the case of shrubs and vines, the upper growth will show evidence of plenty of green, live buds. They are stored and usually sold from cool, darkened quarters. Before planting it is well to trim back the upper growth somewhat to offset any shearing off of the roots, and it is not advisable to allow too much blooming of the plants the first year.

EARLY PLANTING

Most nursery stock, which term includes perennial plants, rose bushes, shrubbery, vines and fruit and ornamental trees, should be planted just as soon as the soil is fit to work. In order to avoid disappointment in securing special varieties, orders should be placed early. Upon receipt, if it is impossible to plant, the stock should be covered with damp earth or placed in some cool, moist place until moved to permanent quarters outside.

FLOWERS FOR BOUQUETS

Experienced gardeners advise growing a portion of suitable annual flowers in straight rows among the vegetables or in a special cutting garden when an abundance of bouquets is wanted. Some well designed beds of mixed annuals are spoiled if too many flowers are picked and, then again, there are certain things like sweet peas, for instance, that have little attractive foliage but beautiful blooms. These might as well be grown behind the regular beds.

REALLY FRESH VEGETABLES

The time spent in raising a vegetable garden is easily justified. Some grow supplies to help out with the family budget. Others think it's fun, and watch every green sprout that peeps out of the ground of a morning early in Spring. Some garden for the exercise it gives them. Growing exhibition specimens is another reason.

There is nothing, however, that compares with the zest of the gardener who grows his vegetables because he wants the real thing for his table. Crisp, fresh lettuce and radishes, tender corn, fully ripened tomatoes may be had only by the one who grows them, and can walk out into the garden an hour before dinner-time and pull or pick what the next meal will comprise.

Alleged WIT

Any fool can see with his eyes, the wise man strives to see with his brain.

When a man loses anything else he advertises for it. But when he loses his head he stops advertising.

What this country needs just now: What this country needs isn't any more liberty but less people who take liberties with our liberty.

What this country needs isn't a job for every man but a real man for every job.

What this country needs isn't to get more taxes from the people but for the people to get more from the taxes.

What this country needs is not more mile of territory but more miles to the gallon.

What this country needs is more tractors and less detractors.

What this country needs is not more young men making speed but more young men planting spuds.

What this country needs is more paint in the old place and less on the young face.

What this country needs isn't a lower rate of interest on money but a higher interest in work.

What this country needs is to follow the footsteps of the fathers instead of the footsteps of the dancing master.

A Gardener's joy:
Watching the vines run,
Brushing the harrow's teeth.

HOME !

Home is not a spacious mansion with wide lawn and shaded street,
Only when you hear the patter of a darling baby's feet.
Home is where a happy mother watching o'er her child at play,
Praying that her child may always be as pure as on this day.
Home is where a babe will nestle in a mother's arms to hold;
Just one ounce of sweet contentment beats a ton of minted gold.

ALMOST A WRECK!

MANY folks are thin and pale —they're weak, feel tired, logy and dull. This condition should not be overlooked. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a tonic which increases the appetite, eliminates poisons from the intestines, and tones up the digestive system. Read this: Chas. Ackworth of 172 Grey St., London, Ont., said: "A few years ago I was almost a wreck—my appetite was gone, I slept poorly and felt mean all over; in fact, my general condition needed attention. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery was recommended and before long my digestive system was in good order and I felt well and strong again." Druggists everywhere.

English Mothers Want More Daughters

Do mothers want more baby girls? Do married couples want larger families?

Thousands of women members of the National Council for Equal Citizenship want to know the answers to these questions — because they are preparing a More Daughters and Bigger Family campaign says the London (Eng.) Daily Herald.

Mrs. Eva Hubback president of the Council mother of two daughters and one son will launch the campaign in May by putting a "Bigger Family" resolution before 300 delegates to the annual meeting.

Women members are alarmed at the falling birth-rate and in particular at the decrease in births of the girls.

As the secretary of the Council said, "We must have more baby girls if women are to get better conditions for themselves or even to keep the equalities women have already won."

So the deleegates to the annual meeting will be asked to pass a resolution containing the following points.

To make widely known the facts implied in contemporary statistics, in the hope that parents may recognize their responsibilities to the community.

That greater social prestige may be accorded to larger families instead of to small ones as at present.

A scheme of family allowances and to provid such increase of social services as will make the economic position of people with children at the least as favourable as that of children couples.

Provision of better maternity services to diminish maternal mortality.

The Council will also suggest running a parallel campaign to give information regarding spacing of families.

"We expect a heated debate on all this" the secretary said "but we feel sure that the solution will be carried."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food don't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas blocks up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

Hordes of Insects Damage Birch Trees

Port Arthur.—A scourge of insects is threatening the valuable stands of white birch in Northern Ontario. Those who have travelled through the Rainy River and Kenora districts have noted numerous dead or dying trees, all virtims of insects.

Arthur Sitch, a lover of forests, who has travelled throhgh the area, declared here that some effort should be made to save the trees and exterminate the insects. Unless something were doe, the white birch might become extinct in two years, he said.

"Both from the standpoint of beauty and the commercial angle, we should try to save our birch trees," he said. "Birch is our only outstanding hardwood, now that the saw-fly has depleted the tamarac in the district. Unlike tamarac, birch rots soon after it is killed and so is not even of use for firewood."

The damage, he said, is being done by a species of beetle which lays its eggs under the bark of the birch trees. The insect pierces the bark, deposits eggs and departs. In due course the eggs produce a small, boring insect about an inch and a quarter in length.

This is the insect that does the damage. Feeding off the tender inner bark of the birch, the borer girdles the tree trunk, eating the sapwood and cutting off the supply of sap. The tree dies within a comparatively short time, the uppermost branches first rotting away and spreading downward until every bit of the tree above the ringlike scar is dead.

100,000 Tons of Fish

Half a million tons of fish and sea products are taken out of Canadian waters—ocean, lake and river—every year by Canada's 70,000 commercial fishermen, says Capt. Frederick William Wallace, telling of Canada's Fish Story in the February issue of the C-I-L Oval. Herring from the Atlantic and the Pacific form the greater part of the catch with an average yield of more than 100,000 tons. Canada's fisheries produce over seventy kinds of marketable species, possibly more than any other country. British Columbia, according to Capt. Wallace, is responsible for one-third of the value of all Canadian fish production and most of it goes into cans for export to all parts of the world. In 1918 Canada's fish production was worth $60,000,000 but today, due to depressed conditions in foreign markets, the value is down to approximately $35,000,000. Home consumption of fish is only about 30 per cent of the total.

Along Canada's Mining Highway

From British Columbia word comes of favourable development results on Bralorne, with shaft sinking to lower levels announced. Acquisition of adjoining ground is said to be preliminary to an enlarged plan of development for Ymir Yankee Girl. Ontario mining interests now developing the old St. Eugene mine are reported as well satisfied with their efforts to revive this famous lead producer of early years.

Alberta appears to have a crude oil producer on the plains, with the announcement of success for the Plains Petroleums' drilling test thirty miles east of Lethbridge. Turner Valley reported further success with the bringing in of the Westside Well. Last reports on the Sunshine Well, now nearing completion, southwest of Lethbridge, are favourable.

Sherritt Gordon in Manitoba is preparing for production by mid-summer. An offering of shares to shareholders at $2.75 per share has been announced.

In the Patricia district of Ontario the Crowshore Mines, with properties adjoining Albany River, have obtained finances and are preparing for work. In the Long Lac Camp, Jellicoe is preparing for a major mining operation. Oro Plata controls Jellicoe and owns almost a share for share interest. Oro Plata has also extensive areas to the west of Jellicoe to come under early exploration. Hutchison Lake is nearing the second level in shaft sinking with development scheduled to proceed on two levels. Geraldton Long Lac adjoining, and Hutchinean Mines to the east, are expected to increase their activities with early spring.

In the Porcupine Camp, Preston East Dome is driving from the shaft towards the west ore zone indicated as over one thousand feet in length, in diamond drilling. The east zone will be developed later. The New Augarita property adjoining has obtained favourable results diamond drilling. The Virita property lies further east. This whole south zone is expected to receive intensive development.

In the Kirkland Lake Camp, Federal Kirkland's diamond drilling campaign is only nicely started. A drill is being set up to the north of the Sylvanite border.

The "hot spot" of new mining activity is still the Larder Lake Camp twenty miles east of Kirkland Lake. At least a dozen new mining enterprises have received substantial financing and will be actively operating in this field by early spring. Arjon is a new incorporation immediately adjoining Kerr Addison on the west. John Rogers, well-known mining engineer, is prominently identified. The Armistice Company, adjoining Arjon on the west, has a drill being set up ready for drilling. Barber Larder has a crew at work, with camp under construction. Adjoining Kerr Addison on the east is Chesterville Mines. Unconfirmed reports from the north are to the effect that this Company has obtained a big width of ore in the first drill hole. Pelangio, adjacent to the east, with one claim between, is actively doing surface work. Martin Bird has purchased adjoining acreage. Brubaker is forming a company.

In Quebec, the area to the north of Noranda, is particularly active. Waite Amulet has announced reopening. Powell Rouyn is reporting favourable underground results. Rouyn Reward has already obtained favourable results in its first diamond drill hole. Quebec Viking adjoining is preparing for work. Brownlee is doing further drilling and Quemont rumours on reopening are heard. Pontiac Rouyn financing is now under negotiation.

In Cadillac Township, Dempsey Cadillac has ore showing free gold at the first level.

A season without parallel in Canadian mining history is the expectation among mining men.

Queen Selects Favored Women

LONDON. — Seventeen noble-women will attend Queen Elizabeth when she walks through Westminster Abbey for her coronation May 12th.

When the Queen emerges in her coronation robes from the robing annex, which has been built just outside the Abbey, her train will be borne by six daughters of earls. Behind them will rank two ladies-in-waiting six maids of honor and two wome nof the cbedhamber. In close attendance upon her Majesty will be her mistress of the robes.

Although no appointment of these favored attendants have as yet been made, it is freely speculated that the most important place, that of the mistress of the robes, willed be filled either by the Duchess of Buccleuch, sister-in-law of the Duchess of Gloucester, or by the Duchess of Northumberland, a girlhood friend of the Queen.

CANADIAN PACIFIC

Silent Barriers—Canadian Epic

Depicting one of the most important chapters in Canada's romantic early history, Silent Barriers, film epic of the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway through the Rocky Mountains, had its world premiere under the patronage of Her Majesty the Queen Mother and Mrs. Stanley Baldwin in London, England, recently, and its Canadian premiere in Montreal. The picture, which will be shown in theatres across Canada in the near future, is based on Alan Sullivan's book, "The Great Divide", and recalls the tremendous struggle waged against Nature by the giants of pioneer railroading in Canada. The picture was made in the Canadian Rockies last summer. This Gaumont British production includes such stars as Richard Arlen, Barry MacKay, Antoinette Cellier, Lilli Palmer, and J. Farrell MacDonald, who relive the lives of pioneers who didn't know the meaning of the word "quit". The layout shows a scene from the picture, the arrival of a train at Moodyville. Inset Lilli Palmer, one of the beautiful stars of the picture.

BOOK REVIEWS

Ian B. Pollock, who is well known to readers of the Glasgow Daily Record as "John Peel", is a writer of distinction, an authority on horses and on sport in general. He is the author of a review of "From Rattlesnake Hunt to Hockey," and writes to Perkins Bull, K.C.:

"You will wonder, perhaps, how the book came into my possession?

"My friend Maurice Linden, 'Ships that Pass', at the Glasgow Evening News, received it from you, and as he knew of my interest in anything connected with Peel he passed it on in the hope that I might be able to give it a mention.

"He is now in Spain with the Scottish Ambulance Unit and before leaving asked me, if I was writing to convey to you his kindest regards.

"I did enjoy your book; it is a beautiful production and a credit to the publishers.

"The claims that Peel County takes its name from John Peel interested me very much. For several years now I have written on Hunting, Steeplechases, Show Jumping, Hacking—in fact all horse sports—under that pen name.

"Sorry I could not give it more space, as it deserved, but I will when the opportunity occurs refer to it again, especially the chapters devoted to horses.

"If you have any other publications where reference is made to horse-sports in Canada they would be of decided interest to me."

Our readers will recall Rev. H. V. Thompson, M.A., who was at Erindale in 1906. Mr. Thompson is now living at Niagara-on-the-Lake where Mr. Wm. Perkins Bull has been invited to address an open meeting regarding the results of his new and intensive research into the wanderings of United Empire Loyalists and their ancestors from their European homelands. He follows their lives in the thirteen colonies, and their settlement in and around Niagara-on-the-Lake and St. Catharines until at last he finds their descendants in Peel. In a letter to the speaker, Mr. Thompson writes: "Every success to you when you come here to address us on the U.E.L. people. It's a subject second to none in the advancement of the best interests of Canada and the Empire."

CONTROLLING TUBERCULOSIS

Everyone knows about diseases that at one time caused great loss of life and that have been brought under control in the last thirty or forty years as a result of modern public health methods. Typhoid fever is one illustration. Twenty-five or thirty years ago, it was not uncommon for cities to have death rates from typhoid ranging as high as 60 or 75 deaths out of every 100,000 living persons; to-day, it is almost a disgrace for a city to have a death rate of more than one or two per 100,000, and in many cities rates for typhoid for the last year were less than one.

Yellow fever is another plague of a generation or two ago when whole cities were quarantined because of it.

Diphtheria, the killer of children a few years ago, is to-day becoming a rare disease. Many communities have not had a death or even a case of diphtheria in several years, thanks to modern methods of immunization against this disease.

Smallpox, that scourge and terror of our forefathers, is now seldom heard of. And so it goes, these dread diseases which once decimated the population, are now practically eliminated.

Tuberculosis is still far from being conquered, but it is encouraging to note that more progress has been made in conquering this enemy during the first thirty-five years of this century than in all the centuries that went before. The death rate in Ontario in 1900, shortly after the National Sanitarium Association was organized, was estimated at 160 per 100,000. To-day it is 37.

It is a splendid showing and with the goal in sight we hopefully enter the last lap of the race, but as everyone knows, the last lap calls for the greatest effort and if we are to succeed in gaining the complete mastery over this plague as has been gained over others, we must strive as never before.

Given the necessary financial support, the Muskoka, the Toronto and the Queen Mary Hospitals for Consumptives will continue to lead the way.

Please send your gift to National Sanitarium Association, 223 College St., Toronto.

How Brazil Adopted Its Flag of Green and Yellow

The story of the Brazilian flag is rich in tradition. In its design, homage is paid to the historical heritage of the nation: To Portugal, the mother country; to the daring Portuguese navigators of the Fifteenth and Sixteenth centuries, one of whom discovered Brazil in the year 1500; to the proclamation of independence in 1822, and to the founders of the republic, which was established in 1889. The flag also symbolizes the richness of Brazil, and its brilliant future, observes a writer in the Washington Post.

In 1494, two years after the first voyage of Columbus, Portugal and Spain signed at Tordesillas, a Spanish city, a treaty in which the limits were set for the operations of each of the two nations in the New World. A Portuguese standard which appears in one of the maps drawn at that time has five blue spheres in a field of white. These colors are remembered and honored in the Brazilian flag and coat of arms.

The Brazilian national colors are green and yellow. The flag consists of a green rectangle (twice as long as it is wide) whose center is occupied by a rhombus, or diamond-shaped figure, yellow in color. The green represents the vegetable kingdom and the yellow the mineral. Within the diamond-shaped figure is found a blue sphere, with an idealized representation of the heavens at the capital of Brazil when the constellation of the Southern Cross is at the meridian. Besides the five white stars of this constellation, there are 16 others, the whole representing the 20 states of the Brazilian Federal Union and the city of Rio de Janeiro.

Tower of London Dates Back to Unhappy Times

The tower of London, situated on the banks of the Thames, is perhaps London's most interesting historical monument, says an authority in the Chicago Tribune. Surrounded by a moat, it dates back to the Roman period, and in turn has served the purposes of a fortress, a royal palace, and a state prison. It is a show place, museum, and military barracks.

The tower has been associated with the darkest scenes of English history. Its oldest part, the White tower, was built by William the Conqueror, outside what then were the walls of the city, to overawe the inhabitants within them. The walls of this Norman work are from 11 to 15 feet thick.

In the Wakefield tower, built by Henry III in 1200, lie the crown jewels. The memorial retains an atmosphere of grandeur and grimness unsurpassed in England. Anne Boleyn, mother of Queen Elizabeth, spent her last night there before being beheaded. The spot where she and many other personages were put to death may be seen by visitors.

Treaty Recorded on Rock

Comparatively few persons know that a full-blooded Iroquois Indian is allowed to hunt or fish anywhere in New York state at any time and that this fact is recorded in Indian symbolics on a large flat-surfaced rock near Smallwood, N. Y. The unique history in connection with this rock was brought out recently. The fishing and hunting concession was a part of the original pact between the Indians and the colonies. In 1926 a hunter kicked away some moss and discovered the symbolic pictures in stone, but not until some years later was its existence brought to light. Later a delegation of Indians visited the historic stone and assisted in the translation.

Formation of Quicksand

Quicksands usually occur on flat shores underlain by stiff clay or other impervious materials. They appear to be formed by the continued collection of water within the sand bank which is prevented from running off by the underlying impervious layer. The grains of quicksand have rounded surfaces. Quicksand is of very light weight. The infiltrated water separates and lubricates the particles, rendering them unable to support a heavy weight.

Brazil's Independence

Brazilian independence was proclaimed in 1822, and the country became an empire, its first ruler being Dom Pedro I, a son of the king of Portugal who had been regent of the kingdom of Brazil, and who led the movement for independence. When the republican form of government was adopted in 1889, homage was paid to the liberators by adopting a flag very similar to that of the extinct empire.

Letters to "Dead" Office

A letter sent to the "Dead Letter" office is opened and, if an address is given on the inside of the letter, it is mailed back to the sender. If there is no return address and the letter has nothing of value in it, it is destroyed. If the letter contains something of value a record of it is kept for one year. If no claim is made within one year the article is sold at auction or destroyed.

Speed of Sound

The speed with which sound travels through various materials varies greatly. In air, sound waves move 1,087 feet per second. They move through water nearly five times as fast as through air, and through hard dense materials such as steel and glass the sound waves travel from 15 to 20 times as fast as through air.

TO SPEAK AT NIAGARA

The story that Perkins Bull, K.C., the historian, will tell in his forthcoming volume on the United Empire Loyalists will be of profound interest to Canadians and Americans alike.

In his researches into the origins of the pioneers he has gone back over two centuries and traced their ancestors from the European homelands to the thirteen American colonies. He has followed them from where they settled, through the vicissitudes of pioneering and the American Revolution. Then after recounting their struggles and triumphs in the Niagara Peninsula, he tells the story of such of their descendants as settled in Peel.

Mr. Bull is to be the guest speaker at an open meeting at Niagara on April 6 under the auspices of the I.O.D.E.

PERSONALS

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Couse left Tuesday morning to spend a few days in New York.

Miss Mysia Graydon has returned from a week's visit with friends in Toronto.

Miss Kay Cannon, of Toronto, was the week-end guest of Dr. and Mrs. G. A. Montemurro.

Elmer Moore, Cooksville, fell at his home and fractured his left leg at the knee. He was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital, Toronto, for attention.

We would like to know if Streetsville Municipal Council is arranging for a proper celebration on Coronation Day.

Mr. W. B. Brookbank, Mr. Walter Matches (his son-in-law) and his father and two brothers of the Owen Sound district, motored to the Maple Leaf Stadium on Saturday and took in the hockey match between the Leafs and the Detroit Red Wings. They then motored to Streetsville, visited the McClintock Bros. and returned to Owen Sound. Mr. B. and his son-in-law expect to return to Saskatchewan soon, after having spent the winter in Ontario with friends and relatives.

HOCKEY

A heated contest was engaged in at the Milton Arena between two teams representing Mays Corners and Whaley's Corners. The game was a victory for Whaley's Corners, 3-2. As May's Corners were the victors in a previous game, the deciding game was played at Milton Wednesday, March 24. Full report later.

The Open Column

Credit where credit is due: Peel County Council concluded its March session, last week, in three days for the first time, if our memory serves, since E. W. McCulloch was warden. The first day was slack, the second slacker, but the third sitting was a busy one.

One noticeable change in county legislative struggles, these days, is the placid, smooth manner in which the equalization by-law is passed. It took all of twenty minutes, this time, to read the report and pass the by-law. A few years ago, it took months, and the services of the country judge were needed to satisfy everyone.

One subject that was argued at considerable length was that of public liability insurance. Apparently A. E. Wilson of the Globe Indemnity Co., Toronto, has squeezed out all or most of his competition. Councillors claimed that, as soon as competition had been forced to cease offering prices on liability insurance in their municipalities, the price, as quoted by Mr. Wilson, rose. Other councillors claimed that, in their respective bailiwicks, they had obtained a reduction of rates by reason of the small number of claims brought against their insurance.

Clerk David Wilson made a rather pertinent remark. He said that the day was not far distant when the municipalities would have to carry their own insurance. Mr. Wilson did not enlarge further on this subject, but conveyed the idea that there would have to be a fund created as a sinking fund for public liability claims.

Special Provincial legislation would be needed to proceed along these lines, as municipalities are not allowed to accumulate a surplus at the present time.

On the whole, the idea of municipal capital funds rather appeals to us. Perhaps we have mentioned that before. But why, if the banks can hold huge sums inactive, save for loans to government and municipal administrations, would it be any worse for municipalities to accumulate a surplus?

The best basis, probably, would be a direct relationship between the surplus capital fund and the assessment, or yearly levy of the municipality. Thus, if the annual expenditure of a town was, say, $100,000, why not permit that town to accumulate a capital fund of $100,000, derived from direct taxation in times when money was plentiful.

Suppose that Brampton had accumulated a capital fund during the flush times prior to 1930. When the depression arrived, the town put on a large program of public works as a relief measure, and while the type of construction might well be questioned as far as its benefit to the unemployed was concerned, the pavements and other works have greatly improved the appearance and property value of the town. Unfortunately, a considerable capital debt was created, a great many thousands of dollars of which was interest on the loan created by the sale of debentures.

ERINDALE

Representatives of most of the Anglican Young People's Associations of the Peel Deanery gathered at the annual Lenten rally at St. Peter's Church, Erindale, Thursday night, to hear Rev. W. R. Sproule of the Church of the Messiah, Toronto. Visitors were welcomed by Rev. G. F. Banks, rector of St. Peter's, and addresses were given at a luncheon which followed the service by Harvey Adamson, Erindale, Rev. R. W. Allen, Rural Dean, and Howard Pallett, Dixie, president of the Peel Local Council of the A.Y.P.A.

WEDDINGS

Robinson—Andrews

Brampton, March 22.—A quiet wedding took place in Christ Church of England Saturday, with Rev. R. W. Allen, rector of the church, officiating, when Miss Doris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Andrews, Brampton, married Arthur Robinson, son of Mr. D. B. Robinson and the late Mrs. Robinson, Brampton. Attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Robert McKay.

Hooper—Gollop

The marriage took place in Toronto on Saturday with Rev. William Allan officiating, of Mary Emily, daughter of Mrs. Gollop and the late Mr. T. Gollop of Cookstown, to Mr. Howard Charles Hooper, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Hooper of Brampton. The bride wore her going away costume, a blue figured crepe frock with navy coat trimmed with fox and navy accessories. The couple will live near Brampton.

LET US SMILE

"But this portrait makes me look so much older," objected Mrs. Grumpy Jones.

"That's the beauty of it, Madame," replied the artist. "Ten years from now it will be an even better likeness of you than it is today."

COOKSVILLE

Wide open gambling, with scores of cars and hundreds of dress-suited "fast set" Torontonians frequenting the place is a nightly occurrence at an establishment on the Centre Road between Cooksville and Port Credit, complaints of nearby residents affirm.

But Reeve E. D. Maguire of Toronto Township, in whose jurisdiction the establishment lies, knows nothing about it, he says. Neither does Deputy Reeve T. H. Graham, nor the provincial traffic officers who nightly see cars parked carefully side by side in a lot near the building which has become within the last year one of the favorite spots for Toronto's thrill-seekers.

"I've heard vague rumors about such a place, but none since I became reeve of Toronto Township," Reeve Maguire stated. "I've never had any complaints about such a place brought before council."

Toronto Township Constable Sid Belford, of Cooksville, admitted he had heard "there was such a place," but could say nothing else about it. "I've never been there, because it hasn't been brought officially to my attention, and I take my orders from Toronto Township council, but I have heard that such a place is operating," he admitted.

Constable Belford placed responsibility for any investigation into such an establishment on the Ontario Provincial Police, who usually do such work, or on the township council which might order him to conduct a raid if circumstances warranted, he said.

PEEL COUNTY COUNCIL

Peel County Council made the folfolowing grants at their March session: Peel and Dufferin Regiment $300; Salvation Army, $100; School fairs, Brampton, Inglewood, Caledon, Ebenezer, Bolton, Cooksville, $30 each; Junior Farmers' Association, $40; Junior Institute, $40; Agricultural office (statutory grant), $500.

A peculiar situation arose from the request of the agricultural societies of the county for increased grants. The County of Peel Agricultural Society, hoping to retain possession of the fair grounds at Brampton, asked for and received an increased grant, amounting to $500, as compared to $300 last year.

It was decided that, in the event that the County of Peel Agricultural Society held a fair this year, grants to societies holding fairs at Cooksville, Streetsville, Caledon and Bolton will receive an increase of $50 over their previous grants of $100, and that the Toronto Gore fair will be given $30 to make its grant an even $100. In the event that the county society cannot hold a fair, however, the grants will be maintained at the same level as last year.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The members of the Women's Institute enjoyed a very interesting meeting at their club room on Thursday, March 18th. Miss Mabel Graydon, the president, presided.

Choice linens, fine china, dainty laces and sturdy Irish ancestors were the Irish imports which answered the Roll Call.

Mrs. D. Lindsay, the district director gave the details and happenings at a recent meeting in Brampton. The report from that meeting includes plans for a large district meeting to be held in Brampton the latter part of May. All members of Institutes throughout the County have the privilege of entering in the House Dress competition. The popularity of the Women's Institutes continues as is evidenced by the recent organization of two new branches, making a total of twenty-one branches in Peel County.

"Long Live the Cheerful Caller" was the subject for the March motto. Mrs. G. E. Bunt gave this topic a most interesting interpretation.

Mrs. R. Langmaid led the discussion on Historical Research. She was ably assisted by Miss Reba Weylie, Mrs. John Atkinson and Mrs. D. Lindsay.

Miss Weylie gave the early history of the local Presbyterian Church. This church was established one hundred and thirteen years ago on property donated by the late Timothy Street. The Reverend Mr. Bell was the first pastor.

Mrs. John Atkinson followed with interesting Anglican Church History. Trinity Church has stood for ninety-two years on land donated by the late Henry Rutledge. The Rev. Mr. McGeorge was the first rector.

Mrs. D. Lindsay spoke on the early Methodist Church, which is now the United Church. It was built in 1848. Part of the present public school was built from the first church. The present one was built in 1874. The Rev. J. A. Starr was the first minister.

These interesting talks were greatly appreciated and enjoyed by all present.

A social chat was enjoyed over the teacups.

A cordial invitation is extended to all ladies to our next meeting which will be held in the club rooms on Thursday, April 15th.

CHAPTER I

A burst of cheers broke from the ice-hockey fans as once more the stranger got away with the puck and drove it before him on winged feet toward the opposite goal.

Claudia Townsend rose to her feet yelling with the rest, thumping on the rail with her excitement.

"Oh, for goodness sake, Claudia, do sit still!"

"But who is he?" she asked. He's a marvel. I hope they nail him for the Seattle team."

"Claudia," said the girl next her, "how wild your dear Wally would be to hear you'd transferred your affection to a stranger who happened to cut a dash on the ice!"

"He's not my Wally!" Claudia. "As for my affections they're not transferred anywhere. I just admire a good hockey player!"

"Claudia's heart is made of ice," said another girl. "If I had Wally Bornell trailing after me with all the Bornell dollars—"

"Look — he's got it again!" Claudia interrupted excitedly.

It was one of the first practise matches of the season, and association members, including the captain of the Seattle team, were sizing up players for the year's team.

After the game, Claudia hurried down with her party to greet the players. Wallace Bornell was waiting for her as usual.

"Oh, Wally, who's the brilliant stranger? He played marvelously!"

"Who d'you mean?" asked Wally, frowning.

"That man over these."

"That? Oh, that's Dick Whalen, an old college pal of mine from Portland. He turned up here yesterday.

"Do go and bring him here, Wally! I do so want to meet him!"

The frown on Wallace's forehead became more pronounced, but there was nothing for it but to move off, most unwillingly, to get Dick Whalen.

It was a reawakening of the old college-days rivalry between himself and Dick Whalen. Then, it had always been Whalen at the head of the class, Whalen elected captain of the baseball team over Wallace's head — always Whalen.

And now, here was Claudia taking an interest in him! Well, he would nip that interest in the bud pretty quick.

In a moment he had led Dick Whalen up to Claudia and her group.

"Mrs. Peters, may I introduce Mr. Whalen. Miss Townsend — Mr. Whalen!"

Claudia looked into a pair of rather shy blue eyes, and found herself to be strangely tongue-tied.

"Miss Townsend has been gasping with admiration at your play, Mr. Whalen," said Mrs. Peters for her.

"You were really wonderful," the girl said.

Dick Whalen looked down admiringly into her dark eyes and dewily fresh face. She was so full of life — her eyes spoke so eloquently.

"Come along Claudia," said Bornell taking her arm.

"But —" Claudia nudged Marylyn Peters' elbow.

"Won't you join us, Mr. Whalen?" Mrs. Peters hastened to ask.

"Yes, do!" Claudia added cordially.

So Wallace Bornell's evening was spoiled by the addition of Dick Whalen's company. It infuriated him to see the way Claudia hung on his very words — looked up into his eyes as they danced.

"Are you trying to turn Dick Whalen's head Claudia? Seriously, you don't know anything about him!"

"Well — do you?"

"I know that his folks are ranchers in a very small way. He struggles along as best he can, hasn't got a red cent now."

"And you have so much!" was the ironic comment.

"It's all yours if you say so, dear — said Wallace.

"Oh, Wally — please! I told you last time that I'l think it over if you escaped thankfully to the only seat that was vacant—next to Dick Whalen.

The music drew to a close, and she would give me till next summer."

"Do you ski?" she asked him.

"I used to a bit. Do you ski much around here?"

"Yes we have a ski club up on Mount Rainier. We'd be glad to have you come up next weekend."

"That's awfully kind of you, Miss Townsend, but you see, I'm not sure about staying in Seattle. I'm looking for a job here. But — will you come skating with me to-morrow? I know it's short notice—"

"I'll come." she nodded with a little smile.

Next day, Sunday, they went skating together. On Monday he telephoned, and on Tuesday they went skating again. On Wednesday they drove out in another direction, in Claudia's car, and had lunch at a wayside inn. By this time they knew each other very well, and found that knowledge ever more pleasing.

Wallace Bornell heard about their outings, and his old bitterness against Whalen developed into actual hate. Something must be done about it.

Wallace Bornell was a rich man and had not a little influence in his line. The Bornell Lumber Company's interest were wide and far-reaching.

An idea came to him suddenly, as he talked with his manager who had come south to see him from lumber camps in British Columbia.

"Look here, Braddock," he said. "Have you got an opening up there for a likely sort of all-round man? A chap of about my own age."

"No, I have not, Mr. Bornell!"

Wallace frowned. "If I say so, Braddock, a place must be found!"

"Well, if it's an order, Mr. Bornell."

"It is. You could put Mr. Whalen in the office at Burns Lake, or as he is handy on snow-shoes, you might send hi mout as overseer with the teams. Give him a good wage — two hundred a month, say."

"Two hundred — but, Mr. Bornell."

"Well, say a bit less then, but you make it good. I want this man out of the way. Braddock, for a time at the least."

Braddock pursed his lips knowingly and nodded slowly.

"I see, Mr. Bornell. Well — I guess we'll find a place for him."

"You start north on Saturday. Very well, Whalen shall go with you."

(To be continued)

Never Again

"Why won't you advertise?" asked the representative of a newspaper of a man in a small way of business in a small town.

"Because I'm agin' advertisin,'" the man answered

"But why are you against it?"

"It don't leave a man no time," was the reply. "I advertised wunst last summer and the consequence wuz I wuz so busy I didn't have time to go fishing the whole season!"

More than 700,000 bicycles were sold in the United States during the year 1935.

Best Books

Writes the Baltimore Sun: At a luncheon the American Booksellers Association announced its annual awards to five authors. It called Dr. Victor Heiser's work the most distinguished biography. Miss Mitchell's "Gone With the Wind" (of course) the best novel, and Van Wyck Brooks' "Flowering of New England" the most excellent piece of non-fiction. The "most original" book was Sella T. Lutes "The Country Kitchen" and the best "forgotten book," Norah Lofts' "I Met a Gypsy." Runner-up authors in each category were Malvina Hoffman, George Santayana, John Gunther, Joyce Carey and Elizabeth Goudge.

The selections are interesting for several reasons, but chiefly, I think, because of the fact that of these ten top-ranking books—by publishers' standards—exactly half were written by women. Indeed in the list of actual winners three out of five are women, even though the last has the dubious honor of having written the most distinguished "forgotten" book. Writing is, I imagine, the only trade, craft or profession in which at the end of a year women practitioners could thus break even and even outclass the men.

There is no question anyway, about their having established their claims to and obtained all of their "rights" in the field of literature.

BUY TWO and have enough

Christie's Biscuits

"THERE'S A CHRISTIE BISCUIT FOR EVERY TASTE"

This Modern Age

A head waiter in New York has been deploring the lessening use of the potato. It is a splendid vegetable and should contribute to the best of meals, but since women have been trying their best to be and remain slim they have shunned the potato because it is rich in starch. The head woiter was surprised to see how well women are in view of the scant eating they do. "Yet," said he, "I have only seen one woman faint this year."

The present writere has not seen a woman faint for years, yet when he was a boy, women and girls were fainting all over Ontario. In a small town, if a team of horses ran away along the main street one or two women would be almost sure to faint in the doorways of the leading dry-goods stores. At any gathering attended by excitement a woman would be likely to faint and be carried tenderly to one side for recoveery. At a funeral there would be faintings.

Another point is that women do not cry as much as they once did. If a man and his wife had a dispute the woman would win by bursting into tears. Perhaps, owing to the advancement in education they can win domestic disputes nowadays without resorting to tears. Be that as it may, the female of the species does not faint, does not cry, does not blush as she formerly did.

One does not like t. suggest that the shedding of tears was formerly more of an art than an evidence of grief. Instead the change that has come about may be largely due to abandoning of tight-laced corsets, the freeing of the female figure, the releasing of girls and women so that they can play games, take exercises, live much in the open and dwell at night in well-ventilated homes.—Toronto Star.

Sunspots May Mean Very Wet Summer

New York.—Sunspots surpassing in size, number and violence those of 1929, the summer when unprecedented rains flooded the Western "Dust Bowl," are predicted for this coming summer.

Already the spots, seen through the world's largest telescope at Mt. Wilson, California, exceed the 1929 average. They total now about a dozen daily, and bid fair to set a record for the present century.

Sun spots have been traced back 30,000 years, in 11 cycles, through tree ring changes due to greater or less rainfall, and gravel deposits due to melting glaciers.

They cause increased radio static, and are accompanied, near their edges, by bright flares of light, which cause short-wave radio to fade for 10 minutes to half an hour. Their cycles affect weather, crops and comfort.

Woman's World

A Peach Cake

Desserts are just about the hardest part of anything a woman has to do in the way of planning meals. Particularly is this so during the winter when the supply of fresh fruits is so limited and the family get tired of preserved fruits. But don't let it get you down and remember you don't have to serve the same thing over and over again. There are dozens of ways in which old favourites can be varied a little to surprise and please those present and here is an outstanding example of what can be done.

Some time ago we gave you the recipe for Peach Upsidedown Cake and we are so confident that it went over big with your family, that we want to give you another variation of it. Its almost like gilding the lily to add delicious rich chocolate to this delightful cake, but it is so good that you'll want to make and serve it right away.

For those of you who know the goodness of a perfect upsidedown cake, this will offer new fields to conquer and for those who have never tried this delicious combination of fruit and cake in a satisfying dessert, it will be making a new friend. A tip for the beginners from experienced cake makers is to be sure and use the best cake flour on the market. It must be light, and fine. And to further insure the successful outcome of this cake, get the best chocolate your grocer has. It can be obtained in 1 ounce squares which make for easy and accurate measuring.

Chocolate Upsidedown Cake

1 cup sifted cake flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspon salt
2-3 cup sugar
¼ cup softened butter
1 egg, well beaten
6 tablespoons milk
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 square unsweetened chocolate, melted.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, salt and sugar, and sift together three times. Add butter, combine egg, milk, and vanilla; add to flour mixture, stirring until all flour is dampened. Add chocolate and blend; then beat vigorously 1 minute.

Melt 3 tablespoons butter in 8x8x2 inch or deep 9-inch round pan; add sugar and cook and stir until thoroughly mixed. On this arrange peaches. Turn batter out of contents of pan. Bake in moderat oven (350 deg. F.) 50 minutes, or until done. Loosen cake from sides of pan with spatula. Turn upside down on dish with peaches on top. Serve warm with plain or whipped cream. Apricots, pears, pineapple or bananas may be substituted.

Spring Jelly-Making

Robins—and rhubarb! Who says spring isn't here already? The pink, crisp stalks of our earliest fresh fruit are now seen in all the markets, offering an inspiration for meal panners. Did you ever taste home-made rhubarb jam and jelly? These recipes preserve all of the natural flavor of the fruit itself:

Rhubarb Jam

3½ cups (2 lbs.) prepared fruit
4 cups (1 3-4lbs.) sugar
1 box powdered fruit pectin

To prepare fruit, trim and slice fine do not peel) about 2 pounds small red-stalked rhubarb. Add 1 cup sugar, mix, and let stand 15 minutes. This cup of sugar is in addition to the 4 cups specified above.

Measure 4 cups sugar into dry dish and set aside until needed. Measure prepared fruit into a 5- to 6-quart kettle, filling up last cup or fraction of cup with water if necessary; place over hottest fire. Add powdered fruit pectin, mix well, and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. At once pour in sugar, stirring constantly. (To reduce foaming, ¾ teaspoon butter may be added). Continue stirring, bring to a full rolling boil, and boil hard 1 minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once. Makes about 7 glasses (6 fluid ounces each).

Rhubarb Jelly

3½ cups (1 3-4 lbs.) juice
7½ cups (3 1-4 lbs.) sugar
1 bottle fruit pectin

To prepare juice, cut about 3 lbs. red-stalked rhubarb into 1-inch pieces and put through food chopper. Place fruit in jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice. Measure sugar and juice into large saucepan and mix. Bring to a boil over hottest fire and at once add bottled fruit pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard ½ minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once. Makes about 11 glasses (6 fluid ounces each).

The Trillium

What native bloom should Ontario adopt?

There is a difference of opinion on the subject, although the Ontario Horticultural Society sponsors the three-petalled lily, the trillium. The St. Thomas Times-Journal which represents a city which has become in recent years very much flower conscious, submits the following:

The Ontario Legislature is divided over a provincial floral emblem. We like the suggestion of Hon. George S. Henry that the question be settled by referring it to the school children of the province. A referendum of the pupils in the schools should not be difficult to take nor entail any great cost, it would give the pupils a feeling that they are worthy of being consulted and would have its educational effect as well.

There is very much to be said for the view as expressed. The love of flowers and the spirit of kindness to animals should be inculcated into the lives of all children, both boys and girls. — St. Catharines Standard.

The McIntosh Red

The facts of the case are that a certain John McIntosh, who came to Canada in 1801, bought a farm close to the St Lawrence in the county of Dundas which he subsequently exchanged for the west half of lot No. 9 in the fifth concession of Matilda, where he built a shack to which he moved his family.

While he was making a clearance on his new property, he discovered a few wild apple trees which were spared the axe. One of them was carefully tended by his son, Allen, who propagated and developed the species since known as the McIntosh Red and established a nursery at Dundela which served as a centre for McIntosh culture.

The McIntosh Red is now, of course, widely disseminated. It is still grown considerably in its native soil of Eastern Ontario, but in even greater numbers on the Pacific coast of both Canada and the United States, whence it is shipped to contribute to the food supply of more than one continent. — Brockville Recorder and Times.

$21,900,000 Windfall

The late James Couzens of Detroit, a Canadian by birth, left an estate worth $21,000,000. By way of succession tax the United States Government takes $18,500,000 and the state of Michigan $2,400,000. Windfalls of this sort are a great aid to budget-balancing. — Ottawa Journal.

Saturday Night

Ploughind and seeding operations generally may start in two weeks and spring will bring with it the full glory of the shopping on Saturday nights The sidewalks will be filled with people from eight till twelve o'clock. Saturday is a long wear yday for the people in the shops. Anyone who will try it for one day will cease wondering why the people who serve in shops are unable to attend church on Sunday morning. But a few have visits with good friends on Saturday evening and this seems to be a compensation for a week of hard work. In larger towns the farmers have to do their shopping earlier on Saturday nights, for the shop keepers are compelled to close earlier. — Port Rowan News.

Smiles of Spring

To the gardener, amateur or otherwise, March snows are just something which stand between him and good brown earth bursting into life in beds and borders. Anxiously the real flower lover is wondering how the tulips are doing under their cold white blanket. If really in earnest he is harassed by the thought that on down-to-zero days long chilly fingers may have reached his precious bulbs, and cruelly killed the jonquils.

Concern for growing things is deep in the minds of many quite unconscious of the feeling. Few pass a florist's display without a thrill of interest. Something blooming on a window sill never fails to appeal. A garden in full flower compels more than admiration — it makes life easier to accept. — Ottawa Journal.

Won't Slide for a While

There's a boy in Pontiac, Michigan who probably has been cured of the habit of sliding down the school bannisters. The other day he was indulging in his favorite pastime when a celluloid comb in his hip pocket caught fire, blistering him in such a spot that he is doing all his studying in an erect position. — Niagara Falls Review.

Looking Backward

As the fourth decade of the twentieth century draws nearer its close, we look back over many regrettable incidents, especially the conquest of Abyssinia, but we can console ourselves with the reflection that matters might have been worse. So long as the nations realise the cost of war they will refrain from embarking rashly on reckless adventure. There is yet hope that they will perceive clearly the great advantages to be gained by co-operation in promoting causes which concern the welfare of all. Greed, ambition and mutual distrust can produce nothing but disappointment in the long run. Belfast Telegraph.

No Chance

A Hollywood expert says that no man should propose who has not seen the girl's lips without makeup, as "the shape of a woman's mouth gives the whole story of her nature." On this basis, the true tendencies will seldom be known, as a speaker at a Rotary Club meeting in Montreal, in dealing with the cost of cosmetics, estimated that in one well-known university the co-eds used as much lipstick in one year "as would paint four good-sized barns." good-sized barns — Brantford Expositor.

Not Ready to Rust

The total number of railway passengers carried in England during November was over one hundred millions. The iron horse is not by any means yet ready to rust on the scrap heap. — Brantford Expositor.

Ban Them All

A despatch from St. Thomas states that since the imposition of the $.-100 license fee, there is not one slot machine left in that city. The St. Thomas authorities made it a point in their by-law to tax all machines whether they were in use or not. This provision is said to make the by-law doubly effective. — St. Catharines Standard.

THE EMPIRE

Population

That population problems are intimately tied up with economics normally intelligent people have long recognised. But that does not mean that those who govern our present system of society have achieved that recognition. To them Mr. Keynes has delivered a salutary reproof. A stationary or shrinking population can, he said, lead to a breakdown in distribution, increasing unemployment, and the final collapse of the capitalist system. Or it can make easy the raising of "the standard of life to what it should be." These are the alternatives. Which road are we to tread? —London Daily Herald.

For Higher Wages

What is the average wage in industry? Not many pub, club or cafe political arguments end without a clash on that question. Now the Ministry of Labour says it is 43s a week; at least that is the figure which results from a private census of two million workers in these trades: Textiles, clothing, brick, pottery, glass and chemicals. The figures are sixteen months out of date, and there has been some improvement. But the highest wage making the average given is 87s 10d, so that there's still plenty to do in levelling up wages.— London Daily Express.

The Right People Should Go Hungry

TORONTO. — All the problems in the world could be solved "if you would make the right people go hungry," Mrs. Nellie McClung, noted writer, told an audience recently.

Before any person served on an unemployment commission he should be made to look for a job for two weeks, sleep on park benches and have doors slammed in his face. Occasionally, she admitted, people got good ideas but they usually took them to a political party.

"You can divide a good apple until it's nothing but applesauce," she said. "You can saw a log so often it becomes sawdust. That's how it is with progressive people. If we could take one thing and act on it, we wouldn't have unemployment problems."

Mrs. McClung was at her best, however, in describing the life she enjoys in Victoria with its "quiet dignity." A cross-roads sign in Ontario reads just "cross-road" for the benefit of motorists. In Victoria it reads "intercommunicating highways." Where the sign reads "go slow" in Ontario, it says "proceed with caution" in Victoria. Someone had told her he'd seen a dog chasing a cat and they were both walking.

"But you see, people come to see if these things about Victoria's dignity are true," she said. "So, year by year our tourist trade is rising. I'm trying to show you there's a dividend in everything if you have enough of it."

Pensions at 40

OTTAWA—This week saw the bill to amend the Old Age Pensions Act, so blind persons at the age of 40 will receive pensions, was rushed through second and third readings at one sitting.

Finance Minister Dunning, piloting the measure, said he was anxious to get it through so that action on it might be taken by the Provincial Legislatures now in session. The pension scheme is a joint undertaking of the Dominion and Provinces, the Dominion contributing 75 per cent of the cost of pensions and the Provinces 25 per cent for the administration.

Plane Ambulance

EDMONTON — "Scotty" McLennan, Arctic trapper, rested in hospital here after flying 1,500 miles with Pilot Rudy Heuss in one of the North Country's longest ambulance flights.

McLennan, suffering gangrene following freezing of both feet, was brought from Burnside Harbor, on the Arctic coast.

Pilot Heuss flew 500 miles north from Great Bear Lake to get McLennan, then retraced his path, continuing to Edmonton. Two hundred miles of bleak Arctic coast, most feared by northern airmen due to bad flying conditions at any time of the year, were beaten.

Ideal Astronomer

NEW YORK—The weary salesgirl neatly folded another Easter handkerchief and looked up with a tired smile. "My idea of the perfect customer" she said:

She doesn't push and shove. She takes her turn being waited on. She doesn't muss up everything on the counter. She doesn't complain in a whiney voice to the floor walker when she returns merchandise and has to wait a few seconds for an O.K. on the return. And she never shouts at the salesgirl under any circumstances."

The "ideal" customer makes up her mind, at least partially, about what she is going to buy. When the salesgirl asks her 'May I help you" she can answer, "Yes, I am looking for a purse. I want it to carry with a dark brown tweed suit. And I want something that is large enough to hold lots of things. What have you for about $2?"

Canvassers Protected

TORONTO—The Province's minimum-wage-for-men legislation, before the Legislature for approval, is intended to apply to workers on commission, it was learned this week. An industry and labor board to establish rates and enforce the act's provisions will be given power to deal with this special phase.

Canvassers of all sorts who are paid commission will be affected. "And there will be no way of getting around it by having large concerns, depending on door-to-door solicitation, sell their goods to their salesmen and thus evading the the commission angle," it was explained.

211 Crossing Deaths

OTTAWA— Number of persons killed in railway crossing accidents in Canada during 1936, was 211, according to Transport Minister Howe. There were 243 accidents, the Minister stated. At protected crossings 113 persons were killed and 367 injured; at unprotected crossings 98 were killed and 322 injured.

Taxi Not Fast Enough

CHATHAM—Garnet Shuttleworth lost no time hurrying a colored woman to the hospital in his taxi in a race with the stork, but lost. The birth took place in the cab, with Dr. G. E. S. Beattie, being assisted by hospital nurses, who worked with flashlights.

Music in the Schools

TORONTO — Sir Ernest MacMillan, speaking in Toronto, and Edward Johnson, general manager of the Metropolitan Opera Association, speaking in New York, criticized the school music training system in Canada, and urged wider education in this field in all schools in the Dominion.

Mr. Johnson criticized what he termed the inadequacy of music instruction in the Dominion, and urged the building of concert halls in the cities and towns throughout Canada. His suggestions met with very prompt agreement from Sir Ernest MacMillan.

"School music in Canada leaves much to be desired," Sir Ernest said. "None will be more heartily in accord with him than those who are struggling with inadequate financial support to raise the standard of training. I am glad, however, that the present Ontario Department of Education is alive to the situation, and, judging by the public utterances of the Minister and Deputy Minister, we shall see an improvement in this Province before long. But there is no sense in our expecting to develop an adequate system of musical instruction without being prepared to spend money on it."

304 Have $50,000 Income

OTTAWA— National revenue figures disclose there were 304 Canadians with incomes of more than $50,000 per year who contributed $11,055,666 in income tax in the fiscal year ending March 31, 1936. Their average payments to the federal treasury amounted to $36,367 each.

Total number of individual income taxpayers was 199,102 and the total paid was $32,983,232. Those in the income class under $2,000 numbered 89,724 and contributed $987,387. In the $2,000 to $3,000 group there were 46,198 who paid $1,042,133.

Doe Shooting

TORONTO — Shooting of does would be permitted in Ontario under an amendment to the Game and Fisheries Act introduced by the Government in the Legislature this week.

The amendment would provide that two or more persons hunting deer together and holding licenses might kill one female of any age, or one male under one year for every two persons in the hunting party.

Another amendment would provide for the commercial raising of pheasants under license from the department.

Destruction of the dens of fur-bearing animals other than wolves, bears and skunks would be prohibited by another amendment.

The Government also moved to prohibit the use of snares for any purpose in Victoria, Peterborough, Hastings, Lennox, Addington, Frontenac, Leeds, Grenville, Peel and Carlton Counties.

How You're Going To Keep Daughters Down on the Farm

Ames, Iowa:—Iowa farm boys want their future wives to know their way around the chicken house and corn crib.

500 Children Killed In Texas Oil Explosion

Victims Caught By Falling Walls Parents Frantic—Martial Law In Force—Bricks Hurled Half a Mile Away By Force of Blast.

Overton, Tex.—More than 500 children and several score teachers were reported dead Thursday night as a result of a terrific gas explosion which shattered the New London school building near here.

Some estimates placed the death toll in excess of 600.

Mangled bodies were being held in a dozen communities in this teeming East Texas oil field. Hysterical parents and a growing army of relief workers choked the roads until martial law had to be declared.

The explosion occurred at 3.55 p.m. (E.S.T. Thursday and by 9 p.m. two churches in Overton and five in Henderson, as well as undertaking parlors and school buildings were filled with bodies and injured children.

A scattering of casualties also were reported in Kilgore and smaller communities.

Erupting suddenly with such a force that bricks were hurled a half-mile away, the building was torn apart and hours after the blast there were confused estimates of the dead. Principal Troy Durnan's figure was 670, and he estimated 300 bodies had then been recovered.

Governor James V. Allred of Texas declared martial law at the vicinity of the New London disaster after ordering troops to proceed there.

The Governor acted on information the State highway patrol and other officers were unable to control the throngs that blocked highways, and were reported impeding relief work.

Seven hundred pupils and forty teachers were in the building—most of them in the auditorium.

Witnesses said there was an earhammering explosion after the rumbling roar that preceded the blast. The roof then, they said, moved up, the walls crashed outward, and the roof fell into the wreckage, crushing those within.

Superintendent W. C. Shaw theorized that accumulated gas in a space between the floor of the building and the ground undoubtedly caused the explosion. The building was heated by gas-steam radiators, and there was no main boiler.

Raymond Bonner, clerk of the Tidewater Association Oil Company, who was standing on a porch near the school, said the building went up like a dynamite stump.

Ontario Grading Of Farm Products

Wide Powers Granted to Government Inspectors

Toronto.—Repeal of the present Marketing and Fair Industry Acts and the Government grading of a wide range of farm products is provided in a bill introduced in the Legislature by Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture.

Extensive powers of enforcement are taken by the Government in the bill. Inspectors will be able to enter any premises to inspect any farm product or they may stop any truck, boat or other conveyance at any time to make an inspection. Samples of goods for inspection are to be provided at the owner's expense. The inspector may also require production of any books, bills or records relating to products.

MANY PRODUCTS LISTED

The bill authorizes the Provinvial Cabinet to set grades for animals, meats, eggs, poultry, wool, dairy products, fruit, fruit products, maple products honey, tobacco and such other natural products of agriculture as the Cabinet may order.

The Cabinet is also authorized to empower the Agriculture Minister to establish grades for "such articles of food or drink manufactured or derived in whole or in part from any products as the Cabinet may designate."

The Crown may confiscate any farm product of which the owner is convicted of an offense under the act. Penalties range from $10 to $50 for first offenses and $50 to $100 thereafter. False information, obstruction of inspection and misrepresentation are punishable offenses.

An amendment to the Dairy Products Act and the Plant Diseases Act, 1937, which takes the place of the Fruit Pests Act, the Corn-Borer Act and the Barberry Shrub Act were also introduced by Mr. Marshall.

MAY CANCEL PERMITS

Under the amendment to the Dairy Products Act, it is provided that a building shall not be constructed or reconstructed for use as a cheese factory, creamery, milk or cream shipping or receiving station unless the Minister has granted permission in writing. The Milk Control Board must certify that such a building is required. The Minister may grant licenses for such establishments and may cancel or suspend the permits. Violation of the licensing provision shall incur a $10 fine every day of violation.

Under the Plant Diseases Act, permits must be obtained to operate a nursery. No person shall bring any plant or fruit infested with any disease into the Province, nor buy, sell or exchange such a plant. The Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council may upon recommendations of the Minister provide for inspection of nurseries, farms, orchards and market gardens, and may provide for seizure, removal, destruction and confiscation of any plant, fruit or container infested with a plant disease.

Horschel, Germany, requires newly-married couples to plant two fruit trees for the municipality to celebrate their wedding.

Sporting Comment
By KEN EDWARDS

Sport examination day, my lads. How many can "you" answer?

1. Who was the first person to swim the English Channel? — Captain Matthew Webb of England in 1875.

2. Who was known as the "Fighting Marine"? — Gene Tunney.

3. Who is known in the tennis world as "Poker Face?"—Helen Wills Moody.

4. What is a camel's record for the mile? — 3 min., and 40 seconds.

5. What is a birdie? — Making a hole in under par.

6. What is the technical definition of the word "green" — Twenty feet in any direction of the cup.

7. Do you know the name of the boxing champion who was a deacon of a church and who recited to himself the 144th Psalm before each contest? — He was Theodore "Tiger" Flowers, who took the middleweight crown from the late Harry Grebb.

Now for a few interesting facts that are worth placing in that old dog-eared scrap books of yours.

Some years ago there was a feather-weight champion named Eugene Criqui, who fought his way to a boxing title despite the fact that part of his jaw had been shot away in the Great War and he had a sheep nose bone grafted into the remaining part.

That old time battler, John L. Sullivan, toured the country playing Simon Legree in "Uncle Tom's Cabin".

It's a fact, too, that Hank Gowdy of the Boston Nationals was the first major league baseball player to enlist in the army after America entered the Great War.

Bear me out mascot — yes, the Brown University football team actually have a bear for their mascot.

And now friends in closing, here is a "Believe It or Not" that Ripley would bite his nails to get. Yes, and speaking of nails — did you know that the size of the finger-nails on the Statute of Liberty are 13 in. by 10 in.

We'll be knockin' on your door——so long.

THE OPEN COLUMN

Streetsville,
March 23, 1937.

Dear Mr. Editor:

Mr. Vipond's letter of last week prompts me to write. It may infer, and some people may imagine, that I was associated with events at the Legion Hall recently. I had nothing to do with the programme, knew nothing of its nature till that night, regretted very much that unforeseen incidents occurred, and absolutely disapproved of the character of the entertainment. For the three years I was president, there was no drinking; we produced good plays and tournaments, and had the respectful support of the town. For the past two years I have not been able to take an active part, but whenever I attended meetings, everything was orderly and respectable. Indeed, on the night in question, while I was present from 9.30 till 10.30 p.m., I saw no one drunk or any indecent performance. I went to assist welcome distinguished guests from Acton, Georgetown, Brampton and Port Credit. I left when many of them did and heard no voice of censure. What happened later I only know by heresay. I express the opinion of the majority of the local veterans that they were not responsible, they regret that the good name of the Legion is questioned, and trust that the critics may not be too severe in their denunciation of the Streetsville Post. Indeed, I know that some of the stories circulated are beyond the truth, as only too often happens in a small burg.

Yours truly,
C. P. McARTHUR.

Snider's

Miss Gladys Ayearst, Reg.N., who has been nursing in the home of her aunt, Mrs. A. Fish, for several weeks, returned to her home in Hamilton on Thursday of last week.

Mrs. G. Bentley is still ill at the home of her sister, Mrs. K. Skinner, Port Credit. We trust her condition may improve shortly.

Another native of the upper ninth line district, in the person of Mary Beamish, wife of Mr. George Gordon, clerk of Port Credit, passed away suddenly on Thursday last. Her funeral was held on Monday.

"It's an ill wind that blows nobody good". So the pupils of Snider's School felt on the 17th, St. Patrick's Day, when the very high wind prevailing tore the heavy school door from its fastenings and consequently the scholars enjoyed an unexpected holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Gibson entertained recently for little Bernice Pickering, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfrid Pickering, who was celebrating her first birthday. A birthday cake with one candle featured the celebration.

Mrs. Roy Fish entertained the W.M.S. of Wesley church at their March meeting. The special Easter worship service was used. Miss Grace Fish gave the report of the Temperance Convention held in Toronto recently. Mrs. H. S. Lovering reported the morning session and Mrs. Cecil Fish the afternoon session of the annual meeting of Halton Presbyterial W.M.S. which was held the previous week in Oakville. Mrs. C. Fish told the life story of two native Chinese missionary workers, Miss Wong and Miss Chee. Mrs. W. Doty contributed a solo and Phyllis Fish, Shirley Pickering and Eva Pickering sang "Ashgrove", a Welsh song, one of their public school selections. The Easter offering was taken. The Mission Band Superintendent announced a special Easter meeting of the Band to be held in the S.S. room of the church, to which the mothers and friends are invited. The April meeting of the W.M.S. will be held in the S.S. room, when a quilt for the supply bale will be quilted.

Miss Ruth Clifton is in Toronto for a few days, staying with her sister, Mrs. Chas. Cox, who has been ill and whose little son, Lorimer Cox, is seriously ill.

The special service on Good Friday for Trafalgar circuit will be held at the Wesley appointment at eleven o'clock. The minister will take for his text, "Lord, is it I".

Mrs. H. S. Lovering, Mrs. Roy Fish, Mrs. Cecil Fish, Mrs. E. F. Wilson, Miss A. Marshall and Miss Ruth Clifton were among the members of Wesley W.M.S. who attended morning and afternoon sessions of the Halton Presbyterial annual meeting held at Oakville. Mrs. R. Fish was a member of the Nomination Committee. For the coming year she is a member of the Finance Committee.

TRINITY CHURCH NOTES

Last Friday evening, March 19th, a goodly number of children and adults assembled in Trinity Church Parish Hall for the last showing of the slides and moving pictures which have been shown every Friday evening during Lent under the auspices of the Sunday School. The programme last week consisted of slides on the Bible characters, Joseph and Esther, and five reels of moving pictures, three of an educational nature, and two of Felix the Cat. The children enjoyed the community singing, conducted by Arthur Arch and Miss Mary Crozier. We take this opportunity of thanking all those who helped in any way, to make these evenings such a success.

Services last Sunday at Trinity Church were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Ockley, of St. Paul's Church, Bloor St., Toronto.

An A.Y.P.A. Lenten Service was held in Trinity Church on Tuesday evening, March 23rd, conducted by Rev. G. F. Banks, of Erindale. This service took the place of the regular A.Y. meeting, it being Holy Week, it was thought quite appropriate to have the meeting take such a form. Members of the congregation, as well as the A.Y.P.A. members, attended this service.

The Good-Friday service at Trinity Church, will be held at 8 o'clock in the evening. The service will be conducted by a Student from Wycliffe College, "The Story of the Cross" will be sung. All are invited to attend this service.

Services on Easter Sunday, March 28th, will be held as follows at Trinity Church:

10 a.m.—Sunday School and the Return of the Lenten Boxes.
11 a.m.—Morning Prayer and Holy Communion.
7 p.m.—Evening Prayer.

It is hoped that there will be a good attendance at all these services.

On Monday evening, March 29th, there will be a meeting of the Girls' Auxiliary in the Parish Hall at 7.45 promptly. Slides on the Study Book will be shown. These slides on Africa are very interesting, and it is urged that all the girls will be present. The time of meeting is 7.45 to 9 o'clock, so please be on time.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

The prize winning essays on the Winter Fair were sent to the manager of the Fair. In a letter, returning them to Mr. Couse, he complimented them very highly. Some of them will be published in our local paper. Following is one of the winners:

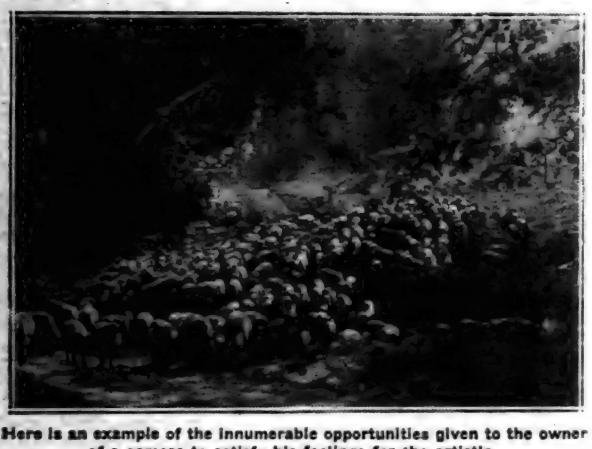
OUR VISIT TO THE ROYAL WINTER FAIR

Excitement ran high at Streetsville High School on Tuesday, November 24th. We were off to the Royal Winter Fair. Mr. Couse's interesting and instructive talk the previous afternoon on the history of this great show had filled us with enthusiasm. He told us how the small Horticultural Show of 1911 had, in 1922 developed into the Royal Winter Fair and of the growth and development of this organization in the past fifteen years. Now we were off to see it for ourselves.

As we entered the Coliseum what a gorgeous sight met our eyes. Words fail to describe the beauty of the flower show. One has to see the artistic arrangement and the magnificent bloom and plants to realize the splendour of it all. The rotating stand covered with large red roses exhibited by Dales, Brampton, was only one of the many beautiful exhibits.

Presently we found ourselves in the Dog Show and here again one has to see (for themselves) to realize just how many species there are in the canine family. I felt I would like to spend a long time among these interesting animals. The one thing that impressed me most was the luxurious furnishings of rugs, pillows and blankets which the owners had lavished on their pets. I wondered if some of these dogs would not be happier living in the country, rather than being pampered and fussed over in this way.

Next we visited the stables. Here we learned that $100,000 in prizes was to be distributed among the 16,000 entries at the Royal Winter Fair this year. That the cattle exhibits represented herds from eight provinces as well as several United States herds. That our Canadian horses competed with those from South America, United States, and Great Britain and that several of the live-stock judges had been chosen from other countries. As we listened to these and other comments we realized that this was no ordinary fair which we had the honour of attending.



The Ontario Agriculture College exhibit showed the different varieties of seed grain and potatoes and demonstrated the advantage of using different kinds of fertilizers. The Dominion Department of Agriculture featured the fattening, killing and dressing of poultry. The honey exhibit showed the different grades and the big polar bear made of bees' wax was interesting as was the grain and fruit display and many others but we must hurry on as the time has come to go to the arena for the evening performance.

What thrills awaited us here! The hunting horse which stopped suddenly sending its rider spinning over its head! The six horse teams dashing down the arena until we held our breath, fearing an accident but the drivers handled them so capably that we soon forgot our fears. The Musical Ride with those beautiful horses trained to keep perfect time to the music was a wonderful performance. Then came, what to me was the most interesting of all, the Pageant, "Speeding Down Through the Years". We saw the old covered wagons, the stage coaches and the first motor cars. We even learned amid roars of laughter how to persuade a balky mule to move. At the last the latest models of McLaughlin cars glided smoothly and quietly into view. What a contrast! We wondered if we really appreciate the advantages which we enjoy to-day.

You ask, "Has the visit been worthwhile?" Our answer is most emphatically, "Yes". Several times during the afternoon our good old school yell rang out through the Coliseum letting others know that the students of S.H.S. had accepted the invitation extended to them by the officials of the Royal Winter Fair whose 1936 slogan was, "Youth in Agriculture."

The SNAPSHOT GUILD
ART AND PHOTOGRAPHY

Here is an example of the innumerable opportunities given to the owner of a camera to satisfy his feelings for the artistic.

"WHAT can I do—I can't paint or draw," is often the complaint of persons who have strong feelings for the artistic and the desire to express them.

Not all these persons realize that within the past few years modern cameras and photographic materials have opened the door of artistic expression practically to everybody. Because of the capability of today's improved equipment to produce good photographs under a wide range of light conditions, and because no great difficulty is met in mastering the technique of photography, the desire to express artistic feelings by means of pictures is no longer limited by the refusal of one's brain to cooperate with a paint brush. And by pictures is not meant merely photographic records of places or people usually interesting only to those familiar with them, but pictures evoking pleasure for all who behold them, because of their universal appeal to the senses, emotions or imagination.

With a camera in his hand, reasonably good powers of observation are virtually all Mr. Average Man needs in order to satisfy his desire for artistic expression. These powers he may exercise by selecting artistic pictures from the inexhaustible supply already composed for him by Nature. It is a matter of seeing the picture and choosing the best viewpoint from which to photograph it. Or he may create his own artistic composition with movable objects and with light he is able to control. In either case, he may work with the same art factors as does the artist of pen or pencil—forms, masses, light and dark areas, interesting line, center of interest, balance—and obtain artistic composition on his negative. This anyone unskilled in drawing may do with a camera.

But he can go still farther in the satisfaction of his artistic tastes if he will master the technique of producing his own prints. In such things as the selection of the type of photographic paper suitable to the negative, the manipulation of light in the printing process, the masking of portions of the negative, and trimming the prints to improve the original composition, he is given still further opportunity for exercising his artistic talents.

Keep on wishing you could draw or paint, if you like, but don't be stopped by your inability to do so. Realize the possibilities of your camera. Appraise from the artistic standpoint reproductions of photographs in magazines and newspapers. Go to photographic exhibits, and observe how many pictures please the senses exceedingly because of their beauty, or arouse the emotions or stimulate the imagination. These are the purposes, we are told, of all art expression. With these purposes in view, see what you can do with your own camera. There are opportunities everywhere.

S.H.S. Oratory - Contest

WINNERS

Mary King — Herb Fellows

At the monthly meeting of the Literary Society held yesterday, the 1937 Oratory Contest took place. The new Vice President, Verna Sparling conducted the business. All were thrilled with two fine solos by Mr. Thos. Hall of Barrie, a visitor to our town. Miss Hicks capably accompanied Mr. Hall.

All the speeeches were of a high order. Competing for the Girl's medals were: Betty Reed, Fern Crozier, Margaret Quennell, Mary King and Verna Sparling.

The boys competing were: Orville Schnick, Jack Fellows, Herbert Fellows, Hugh Lamb and Edward Schnurr.

The judges who kindly gave of their time to be with us were: Mrs Lundy, Mr. J.B. Ross and Mr. Tom Hall.

Juvenile Hockey

(Simpson & Sampson)

The Streetsville Juveniles obtained second place in their group in T.H.L —Mount Dennis ended up in second place which means Streetsville and Mt. Dennis must play off in accordance with the T.H.L. rules

Two games have already been played, one last Friday, the other on Monday. These games, however both ended in a draw and will have to be replayed. A third game will be played at Ravina on Friday, at 1 p.m. The other games will probably be played some time next week.

The game last Friday with Mt Dennis at Ravina was a battle royal from start to finish. Penalties were frequent, and both teams tried to take advantage of them. Bill Evans, who now guards the Streetsville nets, played a good game, and L. Hope and G Schnurr both deserve a great deal of credit for their brilliant checking. The result of this hard fought game was no score for either team.

On Monday night the second game was played with Mt. Dennis. One whole period of fast hockey was played without either team scoring. Bill Evans again gave a great performance of net minding and Mount Dennis goalie also made some good stops. In second period G Schnurr scored for Streetsville and with only two minutes to play, Mt. Dennis tied the score, while Streetsville was a man short. Thus, the score at the end of the game was 1—1, although in our opinion, it should have been a victory for Streetsville.

Let's all turn out and help cheer our boys to victory Friday afternoon

St. Andrew's Y.P.S.

Mrs. R. Greig rendered a solo, very fitting for the address, in her usual good manner

The pronouncing of the benediction brought the meeting to a close.—HB

Euchre Winners

A most successful stag Euchre was held Monday evening last at the Bowling Club rooms. The usual good times which are characteristic of these parties were again in evidence. Everybody was in for a good night's fun and trying hard to win some of the good prizes, and there were lots of them. The winners were :—W. McCaugherty. St. Clair Pope, Dr. Montemurro, J. McLennan Omar Turney, Hec Graydon, Pat Ardagh, C. Cook, G.S. Jordan, A B Bruce, W. King.

The entertainment was supplied by the Burns Bros and Gene Redick which was greatly enjoyed by all.

The Ladies' and Men's Bowling Clubs are joining in a great Coronation Entertainment and Euchre to be held on Monday, April 19. Keep the date open for the first Coronation function in the village. The president is arranging for 100 prizes. Will you be one of the number to win a prize in honor of our King ?

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON XIII.

JOHN'S RECOLLECTIONS OF THE RISEN LORD—John 20: 19-29; 21: 20-24.

GOLDEN TEXT—I am the first and the last, and the Living one; and I was dead, and behold, I am alive for evermore. Revelation 1: 17, 18.

THE PLAN OF LESSON

TIME. — The resurrection itself occurred on Sunday, April 9, A.D. 30. The appearance to Thomas occurred the Sunday following, April 16, A.D. 30. The appearance at the Sea of Galilee occurred within thirty days after this, but we do not know exactly when.

PLACE. — The resurrection of Christ and his appearance to Mary Magdalene took place just outside the city wall in the garden near the tomb of Joseph of Arimataea; the two appearances to the disciples occurred in an upper room in Jerusalem. All the events recorded in chapter 21 took place on the shore of the Sea of Tiberias.

"When therefore it was evening, on that day, the first day of the week." Between the Lord's appearance to Mary Magdalene early in the morning and his appearance to the ten disciples that evening, two other appearances must be placed, though they are not given in John's Gospel, the appearance to Simon Peter (Luke 24: 34; I. Cor. 15: 5), and the memorable journey with two disciples on the road to Emmaus (Luke 24) "And when the doors were shut where the disciples were." It is not said how many were present. Judas was dead and Thomas was absent. Probably the other ten were present. "For fear of the Jews." (Cf. John 7:13.) Rumors of the resurrection had been spread and it was as yet uncertain what policy the popular leaders would adopt. "Jesus came and stood in the midst". How the Lord entered the room John does not tell us; the record assumes that his entrance was miraculous, and that it was not necessary for the doors to be unlocked and opened to admit him into their presence. Jesus came among them in such a way as to prove that new laws now ruled his body, that the earthly no longer was a limitation to it. "And said unto them, Peace be unto you." This was the ordinary greeting of one Jew to another; it was Christ's last word to his disciples in their sorrow before his Passion (John 16: 33). Now they had a new peace, in the confidence that many's greatest enemy, death, had been defeated, and that the one who had the keys of life and death was none other than their friend, servant and master.

"And when he had said this, he showed unto them his hands and his side. The disciples therefore were glad, when they saw the Lord." Our Lord did this to convince his disciples that he was the very same person who had been crucified and that he had risen with the same body in which he had died, as the parallel account in Luke (24: 39 indicates, It is I myself.

"Jesus therefore said to them again, Peace be unto you: as the Father hath sent me, even so send I you." (See John 17: 3, 23.) Christ had finished the work which the Father had given him to do on earth in his own person; henceforth he would work through others. The new commission is wider than the earlier one. (Matt. 10: 1-42, etc.), for it is not limited to the apostolate; the other disciples who were present are included and, with the eleven, they represent the whole church.

"And when he had said this, he breathed on them and said unto them, Receive ye the Holy Spirit." Christ's breathing upon the disciples would be an emblem of the Holy Spirit. This is, of course, a prophetic breathing, symbolic and suggestive. They did not receive the Holy Spirit then. In the course of these days, he told them to wait until they received the Spirit (Acts 1:4). He was indicating to them their responsibility in view of the resources at their disposal, telling them that they could not go except in one power, that of the Holy Spirit.

"Whose soever sins ye forgive, they are forgiven unto them; whose soever sins ye retain, they are retained." Has the church them the power to remit or retain? The answer is unquestionably, Yes. To any man, to any woman, to any youth, or maiden who, conscious of sin, repents towards God, and believes on the Lord Jesus Christ.

"But Thomas, one of the twelve, called Didymus,, was not with them when Jesus came." Thomas was absent because his was the nature that preferred to bury disappointment and desolation in solitude and silence.

"The other disciples therefore said unto him, We have seen the Lord. But he said unto them, Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and put my hand into his side, I will not believe." Thomas certainly was not afraid of being convinced that his Lord had arisen; on the contrary, he sought to be convinced that his Lord had arisen; on the contrary, he sought to be convinced of this and put himself in the way of conviction. He had doubted because he wished to believe. It is this which distinguishes Thomas and all right-minded doubters from thorough-going and depraved unbelievers.

"And after eight days." That is, the following Sunday night, April 16. "Again his disciples were within, and Thomas with them. Jesus cometh, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst and said, Peace be unto you." The fact that Thomas was present with the disciples indicates that he did not deliberately shun fellowship with those who were confident that Christ had come forth from the dead.

"Then saith he to Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and see my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and put it into my side; and be not faithless, but believing." The Lord is always willing to convince doubters of the reality of divine truth by every legitimate means.

"Thomas answered and said unto him, My Lord and my God." Most commentators believe that Thomas never accepted the invitation of Christ to reach forth his hand and put it into his side. He believed at once. The confession that came from the lips of Thomas was the most advanced ever made by any of the twelve during the time they were with Jesus.

"Jesus saith unto him, Because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed; blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed. Such conditions as Thomas required are unnecessary in order to have true and intelligent faith. Thomas himself ought to have believed in the testimony of the rest, convinced by all he had known and experienced of Christ in past days. Our Lord does not mean that faith has not its solid reasons, for faith is not blind acceptance of truth, nor the opposite of reason, but faith is the opposite of sight because it asserts what is not seen.

"Peter, turning about, seeth the disciple whom Jesus loved following; who also leaned back on his breast at the supper, and said, Lord, who is he that betrayeth thee? Peter therefore seeing him saith to Jesus, Lord, and what shall this man do? The same irrepressible Peter was not sobered into silence by the suggestion of his own end. The question indicates the natural wish to know the future of a friend, all the more natural after having been told something about his own future.

"Jesus saith unto him, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? follow thou me. This saying therefore went forth among the brethren, that that disciple should not die; yet Jesus said not unto him, that he should not die; but, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?" Jesus speaks as one who is Lord of life and death, whose will is supreme in earth and heaven. He also asserts the fact of his Second Coming.

"This is the disciple that beareth witness of these things, and wrote these things." The phrase may refer to the whole contents of the Gospel. "And we know that his witness is true." We probably refers to the Christians who surrounded John at Ephesus, who, having lived personally with John, know his sincerity and declare him incapable of relating anything false. The Gospel closes with a simple statement reminding us that its contents cover only a small portion of all the many things which Jesus did.

Shells For Britain Made in Hamilton

Ottawa.—Manufacture of 50,000 shells for the new universal gun being adopted by the British Army, and involving an expenditure of approximately $1,000,000 will be undertaken by the National Steel Car Company of Hamilton, Ont., Major K. S. Mackenzie, of the Royal Artillery, Woolwich, said here recently.

Major Mackenzie said he is in Canada to inspect the shells. Three civilians had been sent from England on the same mission and are now in Hamilton.

NEW YORK, — Unemployed workers in the United States in December, 1936, totalled 8,399,000, a decrease of 77,000 or 5.4 per cent from November and a drop of 1,344,000 from December, 1935, the National Industrial Conference Board estimated last week.

Movie-radio gossip

By DOROTHY

Clark Gable, who thinks that Robert Taylor is a great romantic actor, and Robert Taylor who thinks that Clark Gable is tops, have persuaded Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to let them make a picture together. The story selected is "Spurs of Pride," a military story of Percival Wren.

There is a serious shortage of beautiful chorus girls in Hollywood right now, because all the studios are making big musicals. Girls who could not even get a few days extra work while the studios were all busy on dramatic pictures, are now signing ten-week contracts calling for as much as $200 a week. Samuel Goldwyn's chief complaint about the beautiful girls who come to Hollywood seeking work is that they invariably try to look like some popular star instead of being beautiful in their own way. The one sure way not to get an engagement in one of his pictures is to have someone tell him that you look just like Virginia Bruce or Carole Lombard.

When Kathryn Witwer, popular MBS prima donna, first came to Chicago, to win fame and fortune she had exactly $5 in her purse and a little secretarial training which she traded for music lessons. First prize in a National Music Clubs Federation contest won her a chance to appear with Frederick Stock and also with Mary Garden at the Chicago Opera. After her successful opera debut her home town of Gary, Ind. sent her to Europe for further study.

ODDS and ENDS:—Marlene Dietrich has confided to a few close friends, who told several thousand other people, that Merle Oberon is going to marry Brian Aherne soon in London. Remember love scenes in "Beloved Enemy"? Evidently they weren't just acting. . . Ed Bergen, the ventriloquist who has made such an outstanding success on the Vallee hour, has been put under contract to make pictures for Warner Brothers. Barbara Stanwyck has a huge new ruby ring, a gift from Robert Taylor. Incidentally, when handed her check for $5,000 for a three-minute sketch on the radio recently, Barbara got the giggles. She suddenly recalled that just 12 years ago she was mightily pleased to get a night club job at $35 a week.

Flood Stories

The Fergus News-Record Recalls Some of the Queer Incidents

Now that the flood of February 21 is fading into the past and we have had a week to think over what we saw and heard, a few pictures to remain. Perhaps they are typical of the flood time anywhere. We didn't see them all, but we did see many of them, and the others were picked up from the persons who were on the spot. We have seen the river break up many times, but there is always an air of unreality when these disasters happen. We think of the following:

A man living with his family in a house, two or three efeet above the water, with the river rising quickly and steadily. He was warned to be ready to move, but he wouldn't go. Only after some persuasion would he promise that he would watch carefully and go if he had to. It was easy to believe that people along the Ohio had to be forced out of their houses.

Standing in the shelter of a group o feedars on that Sunday afternoon, for protection from the rain, and watching the upper edge of the ice jam in the third concession of West Garafraxa. There is a valley that might be used for a storage dam just three miles from Fergus.

A man sitting on his back step trying to revive a cold, wet hen, the only surviving bird of a flock of fifteen in a henhouse now under the ice.

A man chopping his way through four feet of ice in an attempt to reach his stable.

The queer Hallowe'en tricks played by the river in those places where house lacked bathrooms and indoor "conveniences" (as the ads say). One little outhouse was carried sixty feet or more and deposited, upside down, outside a kitchen door.

Seeing the water pouring around the end of a garage high on a hill into Fergus, and apparently far away from any flood danger.

Watching the erosion of fields on the hillsides a mile or two away. The chocolate fluid was pouring down down the hills and piling up against the fences at the bottom. Returning home and finding our own garden washed into deep furrows, with hyacinth and other bulbs washed out of their beds.

Seeing the Grand River rushing over familiar fields and roads, a hundred yards or more from the banks of the stream.

Seeing a couple scrubbing the filthy mud out of their house the day after. A quarter of an inch of chocolate goo had to be scraped off first and then two scrubbings after that. This was the good top soil from those fields upstream.

Noting how trees held out the ice—particularly cedar trees.

Kill! Kill! Kill!

On with the dance! Step on it; we are late! Hello, there are a couple of cars that have run into each other head on! Hurry past! There are dead and wounded people there on the grass. We might have to go to court as witnesses, or carry them to a hospital! Shoot the gas to her. You can pass that truck before we get to the top of the hill. Hurry! Gosh you almost hit that old lady! Why do people allow women as old as that to get out on the highway? They are all hen-minded. We might have hurt her. There is a hole you can break through in that line of traffic. Give her the gun! Gee, that was close! Did you hear that fellow swear? We didn't hit him. What's he got to complain about? Blow that horn and make that guy get over where he belongs! Why, the fool won't give us the right of way! He can't be going more than forty-five. How can he expect to stay on the pavement at that pace? Hit her up around the right side there! Boy, that scared him! Maybe that will teach him to keep over where he belongs! I thought for a minute we were going to turn turtle. Look, there's another accident! That car is on its top with its wheels in the air! Looks like a bug on its back, doesn't it? There was blood on the grass. Some one must have been badly hurt. Crazy fools, they don't know how to drive, yet they get right out into traffic. Watch that woman! She is driving all over the road! Run up alongside her and give her a blast on the horn! Whew! Didn't her fender nick ours when she swerved? I believe it did. Thank most particular about the milk she heaves she didn't lock fenders with us! It might have caused an accident. I hate women drivers! Cut around that fellow. Never mind the curve. There isn't anything coming. Crash!

Where am I? What has happened to me, doctor? My leg has been taken off? My God!

On Taking A Pig For A Walk

The Department of Scientific and Industrial Research in Britain is always finding out something or other. The latest bulletin say it has been demonstrated that if a pig is taken for a brisk walk of half a mile or so before being killed the bacon is better flavore' The walk is said to make the pig's tissues more alkaline and this has been found beneficial in the curing process observes the Peterboro Examiner.

The trouble would be in taking a young pig for a walk. One could do that with a horse or a cow, but a pig is different. It doe snot seem to appreciate human company unless at meal times or on some occasion when when one might be inclined to scratch the pig's back.

On the days when they used to ship pigs from the village there was opportunity to come into contact with a little cash recompense for exercising the degree of physical effort necessary in driving the pigs from the village weigh scales to the cattle yard at the station. There was a difference between the amount paid to the experienced pi driver and the one who was just learning the business. The boy with experience came with his own gad and he knew something of how to yell at the pigs and engineer heir turning at the right corner. He could earn 15 cents per shipping, and it was paid in cash. The driver who was yet an amateur in the estimation of the shippers had to be content with 10 cents.

Recol tion is that the pigs never did go at a brisk walk; it was always something like a dog walk. Apparently they did not know where they were going; it was the first time they had ever seen the main street of a village first time they had ever passed the band stand at the edge of the market square where musicians tooted sweet sounds on a Saturday evening; first time they had ever gone up the street that led to the whitewashed yard where they entrained. The first and the last time for all these experiences.

The belief was firmly established then that it is not possible to take a hog for a brisk walk; that belief we hold today. The hog does not understand what is meant by a brisk walk and we do not know how the thing could be explained to him. That is unless hogs know a great deal more today than when they were driven from the village weigh scales to the shipping yards of the Grand Trunk Railway, there to be picked up and attached to the "mixed" train which departed at 7.15 in the quiet hours of the evening.

Along Canada's Mining Highway

Quebec supplied most important news during the past week. The Quebec Manitou property, better known as the Golden Manitou, encountered high-grade gold-zinc ore in diamond drilling. It has been known that the contact that appears to be responsible for the large orebodies on the Lamaque continued easterly through the Golden Manitou and Fleming properties. The finding of the wide vein containing the above-mentioned high-grade sulphide ore points the way to a major mining development.

Ontario's Martin Bird property, located a few miles to the west of the Quebec boundary, supplied other important news. The finding of high-grade ore on the first level west added importantly to an already impressive large tonnage mine development.

The proving of a new oil field by the Plains Petroleum Company by the bringing in of a producing well on the Company's 6,000 acre tract located thirty miles east of Lethbridge and eighty miles south-east of Turner Valley is a development of probable far reaching importance.

GARDENING

By GORDON L. SMITH

ARTICLE NO. 5.

The seed catalogue is a thoroughly reliable guide for any gardener. It is illustrated with actual photographs. Those catalogues put out by the large firms contain much more than a mere mention of the many flowers and vegetables available in Canada. They specify important points, such as time of planting, resistance or lack of resistance to frost, height, color, season of blooming, whether scented, and also the suitability of the flower for cutting purposes. All of these points should be taken into consideration in planning a real garden, authorities state, as only with such knowledge can a comprehensive and practical scheme be worked out.

FLOWER PLANNING

For instance, little plants must not be hidden by tall things, and there should be as much bloom in the garden as possible from early June on. The most satisfactory planting, also, will give plenty of material for bouquets and there should be some plants noted for their scent. A good flower garden reflect the individual preference of the owner and there will be something to fit every occasion.

NEW VEGETABLES

With literally thousands of vegetable varieties and types available for gardens in nearly any part of Canada, it is a good policy to add at least something new and unfamiliar each season.

This may not be new advice to the gardener whose huge, luscious tomatoes take prizes in the Fall Shows, and whose corn is known about the neighborhood for its sweetness, but to those ordinary amateurs who grow a pea, bean, corn and tomato garden, with no variety from year to year, it should awaken a little curiosity.

Hrere are a few uncommon edibles which can be easily grown, and variety adds interest to vegetable gardening:— leek—a fine onion-like flavorer for soups and stews; marrow —is delicious when fried; chicory, or French endive — for winter salads; salsify or oyster plant—a root with a distinctive flavor which can be left in the ground over winter; and there are many others. Look for them in the new catelogues.

Largest Exporter Of Wheat in World

Canada Has That Distinction; Yearly Declines Since 1932

According to the International Institute of Agriculture, the gross world exports of wheat for the 10-year period 1926-35, reached their maximum in the years 1927, 1928, and 1931, when 740,453,520 bushels, 781,002,518 bushels, and 746,879,754 bushels, respectively were exported. Yearly declines are show in wheat exports for the years 1932 to 1935, the result largely of importing countries taking steps to become self-sufficient in regard to wheat production.

Canada is the largest exporter of wheat in the world, according to the five-year average (1926-1930). Canada's average for the five years was 256,862,886 bushels, compared with the Argentine average for the same period of 149,785,696 bushels. The United States was third with 116,210,230 bushels. During the last five years (1931 to 1935, inclusive) wheat exports from Canada averaged 189,779,890 bushels annually, again placing Canada as the leading wheat exporting country. For the first five-year period (1931-35), annual average exports from Argentina amounted to 144,481,566 bushels, placing Argentina again in second place, while Australia replaced the United States as third largest wheat exporter with an annual average of 101,217,302 bushels. The other principal wheat exporters in order of annual average during the last five-year period (1931-35) were as follows: Soviet Russia, United States, Hungary, Germany, Rumania, Algeria, France and French Morocco.

The world exports when divided into British Empire and Foreign countries for the five-year average (1931-35) amounted to 330,165,797 bushels (British Empire) and 363,352 bushels (foreign countries). In 1931 British Empire exports were 329,282,424 bushels, while those of foreign countries were 417,897,320 bushels. In 1932, exports of British Empire countries exceeded those of foreign countries, the former being 353,445,624 bushels, and the latter 281,436,436 bushels. Again in 1933, British Empire exports were greater, 310,113,523 bushels against 251,277,864 bushels from foreign countries. During 1934 and 1935, the opposite situation developed, although the excess was of a lesser degree.

A Lot of Snooping

Americans are reminded of a seldom-noted blessing by the experience, in no way unusual, of a traveler who has just arrived in London from Istanbul. He patiently compiled a log of official inspections endured at the eight borders he crossed, by two sets of inspectors at each. Sixteen times his baggage was ransacked, his passport inspected, his money checked and counted. Twice in the Balkans he was searched for firearms and explosives. In the 2,000-mile journey, 42 officials looked him and his belongings over. He traveled by sleeper train, but there were no scruples about interrupting travelers' slumbers. Our traveler passed all the inspections successfully; otherwise, he might now be languishing in a foreign jail.

All this is commonplace in Europe. The "See America First" campaigners could benefit their cause and show up some of the domestic faultfinders by calling attention to fault-finders by calling attention to our citizens' freedom from official snooping.

SPIRIT OF LOYALIST IS HELD NOT DEAD

W. Perkins Bull Says Faithfulness to Empire Is "In the Blood"

Once the "United Empire" bug gets into the blood it is there for life, accordng to William Perkins Bull, K.C., who was induced yesterday to discuss his recent researches into the great trek of the old "Loyalists" to this country from the southern colonies. For that reason his next book "From Revolution to Repulsion—taking in the period from the rebellion of the 13 colonies until the attempted American conquest of Canada—is calculated to reawaken the pride of a great many Canadians, he believed.

"My estimate is that there are about one million in Canada with United Empire Loyalist blood in their veins who don't know it," Mr. Bull declared. "My purpose has been to examine the fungus growth and the mistletoe on the family tree, so we know which is which. I want the glory of such patriotic progenitors to be enjoyed by, and enured to the benefit of, those whose birthright it is."

Explaining the lengthy researches of his staff in London, Eng., and at Baltimore, Toronto, Washington, Ottawa and in the Maritimes, Mr. Bull said he was convinced that a "fair history" had never been written about the Loyalists. All the descendants he had met in his lifetime, and all he could learn in other directions, had shown him that they were, sinewy, courageous people." On the other hand were the sentimental histories, he declared.

"There has been such a lot of sentimental twaddle, picturing them as a united group of sanctimonious mortals, that no one could blame the rebels for wanting to be rid of them. They weren't like that at all—they were just fine, upstanding men and women with a heart for their past.

"And we still have their spirit even stronger; because there is a more solid basis of reasoning underlying it today. At heart there is the utmost loyalty to Great Britain and the Empire right here in Canada," he declared.

AGE

"No wise man ever wished to be younger."—Swift.

"Life is eternal. We should find this out, and begin the demonstration thereof. Life and goodness are immortal. Let us then shape our views of existence into loveliness, freshness, and continuity, rather than into age and blight."—Mary Baker Eddy.

"The evening of a well spent life brings its lamps with it."—Joubert.

"Age sits with decent grace upon his visage, and worthwhile becomes his silver locks, who wears the marks of many years well spent, of virtue, truth, well tried, and wise experience."—Rowe.

"Like a morning dream, life becomes more and more bright the longer we live, and the reason of everything appears more clear. What has puzzled us before seems less mysterious and the crooked paths look straighter as we approach the end."—Richter.

"The golden age is before us, not behind us."—St. Simon.

NATIONAL FARM PAPER

An Influence in Over 300,000 Homes

When a national farm paper passes the 300,000 circulation mark, breaking an all-time Canadian record for this type of publication, it is indeed news! This tremendous distribution was attained by the Family Herald and Weekly Star during 1936 and it is computed that well over a million people now read the Family Herald regularly.

The responsibilities devolving upon the publishers of a paper read so widely are many and heavy. The publishers of the Family Herald and Weekly Star have ever been alive to these responsibilities, and the phenomenal growth in the distribution of this great farm paper is attributable largely to the uninterrupted maintenance of a high tone when so many other papers were sacrificing their principles to satisfy the demands of a minority who craved sensationalism.

Offered at popular prices (the rates are only $1.00 a year, or 4 years for $2.00) this comprehensive [illegible] within reach of all.

"Family Herald and Weekly Star" is a byword in the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific, the paper's other title, "Canadian [illegible] Magazine" is more [illegible] wide scope, for the Weekly Star may be regarded as one [illegible] Canada's greatest influences.

Camel Has Hard Battle; Can Endure Punishment

The camel's life is about as hard as any animal has to bear. It lives in the desert where blinding dust storms sting its eyes, and where water is scarce. The hot sands grind its feet. It must live days without food. And if nature had not been extraordinarily kind to it, probably not a single camel would be alive to lope over the desert today. But it is marvelously protected against these hardships, according to a writer in the Washington Star.

Its nostrils, for instance, are slanting, and it can close them in sandstorms so that part of the stinging dust is kept out and air still can get in.

Its lashes are thick and long and shade its eyes from the blazing sun and glaring sand almost as well as awnings would.

Its feet are padded with callouses against the blistering sand, and so are its elbows and knees and even its chest, so that it may kneel and lie down comfortably.

Its humps are life-giving cupboards where extra fat is stored for use during the hungriest days. Humpless camels couldn't live long.

But the camel doesn't starve if his teeth can help him, for they're sharp and pointed and as strong as steel and can chew the toughest shrubbery. And the camel can smell water across vast distances of sand.

Once he reaches an oasis (or pool) he not only slakes his thirst—he fills the pouches of his stomach with water besides. These pouches, which are really a part of his stomach, he may then close off to keep the water in storage against the thirst of another long, dry journey. The camel generally lives for 40 lean years.

Copenhagen Porcelain Is Marked With Wavy Lines

Royal Copenhagen porcelain has a regal background. The first attempts to found a pottery in Copenhagen are shrouded in mystery. Between 1730 and 1756 suitable kaolin was discovered on the Isle of Bornholm and pottery-making was started under the direction of Mehlhorn, a modeler from Meissen. But there is no definite information until about 1760, when a Frenchman named Lournier was making a soft paste at Copenhagen. These efforts were short-lived but may account for the French appearance of the porcelain, says a writer in the Kansas City Star.

In 1775, King Christian VII of Denmark gave the enterprise his support and the government took over the factory which had been re-established by Muller, a chemist who used the hard paste.

The Royal Copenhagen mark is three wavy lines, said to denote the three belts of sea which divide the islands of Zealand and Fuene from Jutland.

First Public High School

In 1821 Boston established the first public high school in the United States. This school, patterned after the academies, did not at first prepare for college; it offered, rather, a variety of courses of the modern (non-classical) and practical type. In 1827 the Massachusetts legislature passed a law requiring towns of a certain size to establish high schools. Few of the towns acted upon this law until Mann became secretary of the state board of education, but by 1850 Massachusetts had 64 public high schools—probably more than all the other states combined. The high schools later undertook to prepare pupils for college and thus combined the functions both of the old Latin grammar schools and of the private academies. In the country as a whole the high school made little progress until after the Civil war.

Oldest Botanic Gardens

The oldest botanic gardens in the new world are situated on the island of St. Vincent, in the Windward Islands. It was established in 1763 and it was to obtain breadfruit tree specimens for this garden in 1787 that the British naval vessel Bounty sailed to the South seas, where the famous mutiny on the Bounty occurred. Eventually Captain Bligh, of the Bounty, was brought back to St. Vincent with 530 choice specimens for the gardens.

First Trip of Fast Mail

On September 17, 1875, great crowds at Chicago welcomed the first fast mail train, which completed the run from New York in 26 hours—about half the previous postal time between the two cities. In addition to a car for guests, the train consisted of four especially designed and equipped postal cars, manned by a picked crew of clerks who handled, en route, more than 30 tons of mail matter.

Siam's Idols and Temples

Nothing, it seems, was spared when Siam set out to build idols and temples. The ideas were lavish; so were the results. Outstanding is the Wat Arun, but such idols as adorn the entrance to the Royal Imperial castle are typical of the work which the Siameso undertook to express themselves. Gorgeous coloring and exquisite carving are the chief characteristics.

Anchor Ice

Since water expands on freezing, ice is lighter than water and therefore forms on the surface and floats. Anchor ice, however, is sometimes found at the bottom of the river. It consists of an aggregation of small crystals or needles of ice frozen at the surface of rapid open water and probably carried below by the force of the stream.

EASTER SERVICES

Large congregations gathered in the United Church Easter Sunday, both morning and evening, to enjoy worship with the joy of Easter filling the soul. The Church was fittingly decorated with flowers, with Easter Lilies dominating the scheme. The choir did splendidly in three anthems under the leadership of Mr. G. S. Jourdan, with Mr. Herb Falconer at the organ. Mr. Tom Hall sang at the evening service.

The Communion of the Lord's supper was dispensed in the morning, with the assistance of the full Board of Session. The message was based upon the text, "The stone was rolled away because it was very great". Mr. Jones remarked that this was a strange reason to be given for the rolling away of the stone and sensed in the form of words used a message for every age and an encouragement to the church not to despair when fronted by difficulties seemingly insurmountable, since they that trust in the Lord shall never be confounded by the impossible. With God all things are possible. The stone represents the stumbling blocks impeding human progress. Idolatry, Slavery, the Grave, Sin, etc.

58TH WEDDING DAY
FOR STREETSVILLE COUPLE

On Friday Mr. and Mrs. Robert Charlton will observe the 58th anniversary of their wedding in Streetsville. Mr. Charlton is 86, and his bride of nearly three score years, 85, but both are in good health and take a bright, keen interest in the doings of the village.

Mr. Charlton was born in Downsview, York county, son of the late John Charlton. Coming to Peel, he married Sophia Gardner, daughter of the late John Gardner, one of the pioneer founders of Britannia United Church.

Their wedding service was performed at the bride's home by Rev. G. Gough, then pastor of the Britannia circuit. Of their families, Mr. and Mrs. Charlton were the only ones to celebrate their golden anniversary.

Following their marriage, they lived at London for two years, moved thence to Port Elgin, where they remained for seven years, and then settled at Meadowvale, where they farmed for 43 years before retiring to Streetsville. They are members of the Streetsville United Church.

The Open Column

Why can't we do as we like? This neat little question was raised by a learned gentleman the other day, apropos of an incident which was felt to shed little credit on the group of persons involved in it, although the circumstances surrounding the incident were neither greatly opposed to, nor greatly in accord with the spirit of the law. At any rate, nothing was done about the incident, so that it should be a safe one to discuss.

As far as the legal viewpoint is concerned, if the incident was in any measure opposed to the letter of the law, it was illegal. Whether this illegality amounted to a hill of beans is another matter. The occurrence in question hurt no one, of itself, and caused no monetary loss, of itself. Therefore, it might well be regarded as harmless, and, except for a legal quibble, quite the proper thing.

Unfortunately, it was in some respects opposed to the law. Even if a majority of persons considered that the law which was broken was a poor one, there is no authority for the breaking of the law. And again unfortunately, it takes a great deal of time to change some laws. Therefore, an illegal action is against the best interests of the community, insofar as the community, as a unit of the Dominion, made the law through its political representation.

If a man went out on the street and struck another man over the head, he is acting in a manner contrary to the manner prescribed by the community. And if the community says that a thing is wrong, it is wrong until the majority of the community decides that it isn't wrong, but right, or at least harmless.

So that's why we can't act as we wish. On the other hand, if we narrow the borders of our community, we can act as we wish within that community, so long as our actions in the smaller sphere are confined to that sphere, and do not affect persons beyond that sphere.

On the other hand, if things within the smaller circle get out of hand, and start impinging on the comfort, well-being, or interests of other people, then we have to take whatever sort of justice is handed out by the forces representing the average of opinion in the larger circle into which our little bit of fun leaked out. Get it?

LET US SMILE

The new farm laborer was sent to milk the cow, but as he was such a long time gone the farmer went to see how he was getting on. He found him feeding the cow with milk.

"Here," he called. "I said milk the cow—not feed it."

"Well," replied the novice, "I thought it came out a bit thin, so I'm putting it through again."

BRAMPTON
CONSERVATIVES MEET

Peel County Liberal-Conservative Association held their annual meeting in Brampton on Saturday, March 27th, and it was well-attended by people from all parts of the County. Mr. J. H. Pinchin, president, was in the chair.

Addresses were given by Col. Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Peel's candidate for the Toronto House; Sam. Charters, ex-M.P.; Harry Barber, M.P. for the Fraser River riding in British Columbia (an old Peel County boy), Gordon Graydon, M.P., and W. J. McKinney.

Several resolutions were passed and the retiring chairman was given much credit for the way he handled the office during his term.

Officers elected were: Pres., W. J. McKinney, Brampton; vice-presidents, W. K. Mara, Brampton; T. H. Moorehead, Brampton; Fred Holder, Sandhill; secretary, Harry Willis, Brampton; treasurer, Mrs. G. Corbett, Lorne Park.

SAVINGS FOR TELEPHONE USERS

The Bell Telephone Company announces miscellaneous rate reductions which they state will save telephone users of Ontario and Quebec upwards of $600,000 yearly. Reduced charges on rural telephones will save farmers $100,000 a year. Other important items on which charges are cut are for installing and moving telephones, for short-haul long distance calls, and for the hand type of telephone which after May 1st will cost only 15c instead of 30c per month more than the desk telephone. The expectation is that the reductions will lead to a still more widespread use of the telephone, increasing its value to all users.

Urges Sales of Farm Products

In a further effort on behalf of the dairy farmers Mr. Graydon, on Thursday last, spoke as follows:

I think I should not let this item pass without making a few remarks on the importance of the issue at stake. Those of us who were born and raised on dairy farms in Ontario, as I am proud to say I was myself, cannot but be seized of the importance of a matter so far-reaching in its effects as the item now under discussion. When one calculates that in a riding such as I represent, the county of Peel, for the last recorded year the production of milk reached the enormous total of 87,000,000 pounds, one gets some conception of the importance of this item to the dairy industry. Those of us who were conversant with the issue prior to 1930 when large importations of butter from New Zealand found their way into the markets of Canada, know full well the effect which that had upon the dairying industry here.

In the part of Ontario from which I come, the whole milk industry is the most important branch. We provide a large proportion of the milk for the great metropolitan market of Toronto. One of the major problems, and one which is most pressing with the farmers in that riding, is that of surplus milk. There is scarcely a milk association meeting anywhere in the neighborhood of Toronto or any of the large urban centres where this question of surplus milk does not arise year after year. One of the reasons why there is a surplus of milk is that the farmers seek the best and most convenient and most remunerative market for the product of the dairy cow. One cannot blame them for that. The fact is that the surplus milk which exists in such great quantities around Toronto must find a release through some channel, and one of the channels which I have heard suggested on many occasions, both when I was on the farm and since I have left it, is that, if the price of butter, cheese and other dairy products were higher in proportion to the price of milk, many dairy farmers would find it profitable to leave whole milk production and go into other lines of dairying. So, as was so forcibly shown to-night by the hon. member for Danforth (Mr. Harris) and others, it is a matter of much importance that the farmers and dairymen of this dominion should be seized of the grave consequences which come from the free entry of these oils competing with the product of the dairy cow. After all, it does not seem to me that we are likely to do much in the way of increasing the price of the dairy commodities which the farmers have to sell so long as we permit the competition of commodities produced under the conditions so clearly stated to-night by the hon. member for Danforth.

I often think that farmers do the least advertising of their products of any class in Canada. I am not referring, of course, to the hon. member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Ross) who is an excellent advertiser along certain lines. Someone just now suggests that he is not a farmer, but he has answered that point several times, and from his tremendous interest in wheat I am almost inclined to think that he must be engaged in some agricultural enterprise. In any event I do think that this vegetable oil industry, which produces the various brands of shortening and other vegetable oil products that are for sale in the country, very largely promotes the sale of those products through intensive advertising. I believe that this government, which from time to time spends money on things which it believes to be legitimate might give some consideration to spending some money in advertising our own agricultural products. The Minister of Agriculture looks very interested as he sits over there, and I am sure he would be the first to agree that wherever possible the products of the farm, particularly the dairy farm, ought to have some encouragement and assistance by way of advertising throughout the country. A couple of weeks ago I attended a little gathering at which I heard several housewives discussing vegetable oils in relation to the butter fat industry. An argument ensued, and it does appear to me that there is a grave division of opinion as to whether butter fat or vegetable oil is actually the best for the purposes of the housewife. I have come to the inescapable conclusion, however, that one of the reasons for the wide use of the different kinds of shortening is the extensive and intensive advertising which has been carried on.

We are all interested in farm affairs and agriculture in general. It may be a hackneyed phrase, but agriculture is still the backbone of this country. If you study the matter at all you will soon find that when the purchasing power of the farmer is reduced there is not very much business left in the country for anyone else. So I suggest to you, Mr. Chairman, that our farm products ought to be brought before the purchasing public by means of intensive advertising. I think we have a right to expect that the purchasing public, not only in this country but overseas as well, should be made acquainted with the excellent qualities of the products of our farms.

I leave this suggestion with the Minister of Agriculture to-night. I think he might very well give some study to the situation, because in many instances the merits of our agricultural products are not being properly brought before that great buying public from which the farmer must obtain his livelihood.

Further, by way of caution to the Minister of Finance, I think we ought to be very careful to see that the interests of the dairy farmer in the province of Ontario, as well as in every other province of this dominion are thoroughly protected against competition from products such as those which have been described and which are under discussion to-night, in order that the farmer of eastern Canada as well as the farmer of western Canada may receive a fair deal at the hands of the government of the day.

SUCCESSFUL MISSION

The Evangelistic services held in the United Church, Streetsville, this Easter, concluded Sunday evening with large congregations attending during the whole series. These services were held as a part of the Inter-Church movement looking for the Christianization of Canadian life and the Revs. J. Y. Fraser of the Presbyterian Church and T. D. Jones of the United Church were the speakers. The messages were arresting and helpful. The music was greatly helped by the services of Mr. Tom. Hall, the basso-baritone, who may be heard on the air where his is a popular voice. The two free-will offerings taken Tuesday and Friday evenings were sufficient to cover the cost of the meetings and to leave a small balance for the treasury of the Church.

The committee of arrangements were well pleased with the support of the people of the village and country and believe that a real contribution has been made to the devotional life of the congregations of the district.

The orchestra commenced about the middle of January, 1936. There were about 15 instruments in the first group, a few of which are absent tonight. Some players were added much later. The contra bass was commenced in March. The teacher has been Prof. Michael Angelo throughout and he has completely organized the orchestra.

The work of the orchestra is remarkable when it is remembered that the members of the orchestra began work only fourteen months ago, buying their instruments and commencing to take lessons. Some commenced even later than that. Yet these performers presented studies from the Masters and gave interpretations displaying advanced study of technique which would have been a credit to a much older organization. The visit was arranged to demonstrate what could be done within a year by players who are workers during the day and have as little leisure as average people but who devote a little time each day to instrumental study.

And it was a revelation of unity, tone, technique achieved under the baton of Prof. Michael Angelo, the Toronto musician.

Perhaps the chief glory of the program belongs to the generous friends of music who came to provide items to support the orchestra.

The contribution of these talented artists was very much appreciated and they gave without stint.

The enthusiastic crowd which filled the church greatly encouraged the local people who are trying to establish a church orchestra in Streetsville, for the proceeds of the evening will assist in providing music with which to start group work in the immediate future.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON 1

God the Creator — Genesis 1:1—2:25

Printed Text — Genesis 1:1-5, 26-31

Golden Text —"In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." Genesis 1:1.

The Lesson in Its Setting

Time — It is not known when the universe was created, nor is it definitely known when man was created. However long ago the creation of the universe, the creation of man did not take place before 5000 B.C. though the exact year of this will probably never be known. All ancient histories recognize that there are no records of human civilization antedating 4000 to 5000 B.B.

Place — There have been innumerable conjectures as to the location of the Garden of Eden, but, thus far, none of them have been generally accepted by the Bible scholars; all we can say is that it was probably located somewhere near the lower part of the Tigris and the Euphrates rivers.

"In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." There was no matter before the beginning, nor any planet in the heavens, nor any angel or created being. God was before any thing, or any created person. Every thing that is in the universe today has come from [illegible] thing before God, it might be that power or person could ultimately crush God, but, if all things have been made by God, then surely God is greater than all the universe, and, if his power is great enough to create, it is also sufficient to control it. God had no beginning. He was from eternity.

"And the earth was waste and void." (See Jer. 4:23 and Isa. 34: 11.) The word waste refers to the matter, and void to the form, and the phrase combining the two denotes a state of utter confusion and desolation, an absence of all that can furnish or people the land.

And darkness was upon the face of the deep." The conjunction indicates that the darkness is connected with the disorder of the previous phrase, and forms a part of the physical dearangement; the deep refers, of course, to the sea (Gen. 7:11; 8:2; Isra. 51:10, etc) "And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters." Here is the beginning of God's work in the restoration of that which has become chaotic. What the Holy Spirit began to do with the chaotic condition, bringing out of it the beauty of a new earth, he also has been sent to do in the human heart, bringing out of its chaos, due to sin, a new life, beautiful and orderly, like that of the Lord Jesus Christ.

"And God said, Let there be light: and there was light. Simply for God to utter his word brings into existence whatever God wills (John 1: 1-3; Eph. 3:9, Col. 1:16). The fact that God creates by a word is an indication not only of the case with which he accomplished his work, and of his omnipresence, but also of the fact that he works consciously and deliberately.

"And God saw the light, that it was good." That is, he examined and judged the newly finished product, investigated its nature and its properties, admired its excellency, and, in all these respects, he pronounced good. "And God divided the light from the darkness." Thus God allows darkness still to exist, but never again to become dominant.

And God called the light Day, and the darkness he called Night." The first word which we have in the Bible as proceeding from God is the word day. We, as followers of the Lord Jesus, are to walk honestly in the day (Rom. 13:13); we are the children of the day, not of the night. (1 Thess. 5:5. "And there was evening and there was morning, one day." It is significant that, as in the Genesis account of creation, light appeared on the first day, so in the new creation which we have in Jesus Christ, the Lord came forth from the darkness of the grave and death on the first day of the new week in the morning of the resurrection (Matt. 28:1; Mark 16:2; John 20:1, 19).

"And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness." The plural pronoun "us" certainly indicates that God took counsel with at least one other in this supreme, final work of creation, and we can believe he took counsel with no [illegible], but with the other two persons of the Godhead, the Son and the Holy Ghost. This is the only place in all the six days of creation concerning which we have a record of such a council; three times in the narrative of man's origin do we have the word create, both facts emphasizing the preeminent signi[illegible] particular aspect of creation above all preceding ones. "And let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the birds of the heavens, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth." "And God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them. Man lost perfect dominion over the creatures when he fell in sin; thousands of men and women every year are destroyed by the animal creation, especially in countries where gospel is not known, such as India and Africa. Dominion over the creatures will be restored to man during the Millennium (see Isa. 11:6-9).

"And God blessed them; and God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it, and have a dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the birds of the heavens and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth. And God said, Behold, I have given you every herb yielding seed, which is upon the face of the earth, and every tree, in which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; to you it shall be for food. And to every beast of the earth, and to every bird of the heavens, and to everything that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is life, I have given every green her for food; and it was so. Four things are to be discovered here: the Creator bestows a general blessnig upon the newly created pair, our first parents; he commands them to be fruitful and multiply that they might replenish the earth and bring it into perfect subjection; he gave them full dominion over all creatures beneath them; the Creator gave them herbs and trees for food. It would seem that originally man's diet was exclusively a vegetable one. It is not recorded that man ate the flesh of animals until after the flood.

"And God saw everything that he had made, and, behold, it was very good. And there was evening, and there was morning, the sixth day. Perhaps here we might just add a word about the meaning of the word day in the creation narrative. Many believe that this word, as used in the first chapter of Genesis, must meant a period of twenty-four hours. Others believe that it was used to indicate a long of period of time, perhaps geologic ages. We must remember that the word day has different meanings in different places and does not always mean a period of twenty-four hours; thus in Genesis, 1:5, it means only that part of a period of twenty-four hours in which the light shines; yet again, in the very same verse, both the morning and the evening are called one day. Again, in Genesis 2:4, the phrase the day refers to the entire period of creation. Elsewhere in the Bible the same phrase is used to indicate various periods of time (John 6:39, 44, 54; Rom. 8:19-23).

"Best-Dressed"

U.S.A. Fashion Academy Seeks to Make Women More Clothes Conscious

NEW YORK.—Hold your hats, here comes another list of "best-dressed women."

Emil A. Hartman, director of the Fashions Academy, has announced the 1937 winners of medals awarded by the Academy each spring to feminine fashion leaders. Like the other "best-dressed" lists, it was "the result of a poll of America's leading designers." The winners, chosen from eight fields:

Helen Gleason, stage; Carole Lombard, screen; Mrs. William Rhinelander Stewart, society; Dorothy Mae Kilgallen, adventure; Jessica Dragonette, radio; Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen Rhode, public life; Eve Symington, night clubs; Lily Pons, opera.

Among previous winners of the Academy awards were Mrs. Franklyn D. Roosevelt, Mrs. James A. Farley Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, Gladys Swarthout and Mrs. Harrison Williams—the perennial favorite of best-dressed lists.

Hartman said it is "unfair to hold any one person in the style lime-light too long," hence a new list now and then.

"We hope," he said, "through the medium of the selection of 'best-dressed women' to make American women more clothes conscious."

British ash is preferred to all others for airplane work and sports goods. The tendency of the trees in Great Britain, adds the writer, is to produce a fast-growing timber, and this presents the greatest difficulty to the extension of its use.

Movie-radio gossip

By DOROTHY

Everyone who enjoys madcap comedy will be pleased with the forthcoming "Love Is News." Tyrone Power, Don Ameche and Loretta Young play the leading roles, but there is another member of the cast who may interest you even more. Playing opposite Tyrone Power is a young lady named Carol Tevis who is an old, old favorite of yours. Never heard of her? Maybe not under that name, but surely you will recall that you have loved and cherished her for years when I tell you that she used to be the voice of Minnie Mouse.

All Hollywood is rejoicing because W. C. Fields is so far on the road to recovery, that he is able to have a few visitors now, walk around the sanitarium grounds, and even think about coming back to Paramount to work. During his illness he became one of the country's leading radio fans. All day and far into the night he was listening, and he thinks that curiosity about the next punch in the Jack Benny - Fred Allen feud helped to keep him alive. His other favorites are Easy Aces and Lum and Abner.

Zasu Pitts has come back from England where she made two pictures, paused in New York a short time and hustled into Hollywood to go to work at RKO. She loved sightseeing in England, particularly as her guide was the mellow-voiced Charles Laughton of innumerable film triumphs, including "Ruggles of Red Gap" in which she appeared. Laughton not only showed her around London, he gave her a pair of exquisite French antique vases for her new home. Incidentally, a radio sponsor is trying to get Zasu to devote all her time to radio programs.

ODDS and ENDS — John Barrymore looked at himself on the screen, and was so shocked that he went off to the desert with a physical trainer and went in for regular hours and exercise. After two weeks he emerged looking healthy and about ten years young . . . Gertrude Michael, fully recovered after a long hospital siege, is starting work in "There Goes My Girl," a newspaper story in which Lee Tracy, as usual, plays the star reporter . . . Paul Muni grew a beard for his part in "The Woman I Love" and was longing for the day when he could shave it off when he got the bad news that he will have to keep it months longer for his role in "The Life of Emile Zolo." . . . Shirley Temple has been promoted to the fourth grade, but she can console herself that she would be rated a senior in any singing, dancing or dramatic school.

FARM NOTES

Conducted by PROFESSOR HENRY G. BELL

With the Co-Operation of the Various Departments of the Ontario Agricultural College.

Question 1:—"How can I tell what analysis of fertilizer is most suitable for my farm? The most of it is heavy clay soil. What would be suitable to put on Old Meadow?" — G. Q., Perth County.

Answer:—The only way you can obtain fairly definite information as to the fertilizer mixture that is most suitable for your soils, is for you to send a sample of the soils to the Department of Chemistry, O.A.C., Guelph Ont., where by rapid methods we can test these soils far acidity and mineral content. Samples of soil should be taken at about plow depth from a number of places in the field. Mix these samples together and send about ½ pint of the mixed material for analysis. This is best sent in a cotton bag.

For Old Meadows, experiments have largely shown that 250 lbs. of 3-10-5 or 4-12-6 have given best results. This fertilizer should be applied broadcast over the meadow as soon as growth begins in the spring.

Question 2.—"I had intended to buy 20% Phosphate and mix Muriate of Potash together without filler, and sow thinner. I would like to know whether you think this will work satisfactorily or not. In case I want to add 2% nitrogen to it what material would you use, such as nitrate of soda and sulphate of ammonia?

How would you mix a good digestable mineral that is high in Phosphorus and Calcium? Would steamed bone meal be alright to use it"? — S. A., Bruce County.

Answer:—I would say that a mixture of 20% Phosphate and Muriate of Potash can be made for sowing as you indicate. You do not say in what quantities you plan to mix these, but I see no reason why the mixture should not give results.

The big point is to get it on evenly, which means that great care must be taken in the first place in the mixing of the phosphate and potash so that each pound, or gallon, will carry an equal proportion of plant nutrients. If you wish to add 2% nitrogen, you would have to add 200 lbs. of Sulphate of Ammonia, or 267 lbs. of Nitrate of Soda to the ton.

For a good digestible mineral mixture high in phosphorus and calcium, probably nothing supersedes steamed bone meal. This is good healthy bone, cooked with steam under pressure This practically removes all the protein and fat from the bone, and the bone is then dried and ground into fine white powder, and should be almost free of odor. Fertilizer bone meal should not be used for stock feeding, since in preparing fertilizer bone meal the meat is boiled under ordinary conditions to let loose the flesh from the bone. This does not kill disease germs as thoroughly as where the material is cooked under steam pressure. Some stock men advise the adding of a small amount of Iron Salt and Iodized Salt.

Question 3:—"Does Nitrate of Soda work more rapidly than Sulphate of Ammonia? Which one of the two is most satisfactory for spring crop?"—E. G. L., Grey County.

Answer:—Nitrate of Soda supplies nitrogen in a form that is immediately usable by crops. Nitrate of Soda is immediately soluble in soil mixture. Sulphate of Ammonia is likewise immediately soluble, but in very large part, the nitrogen supplied in Sulphate of Ammonia must undergo change in the soil to the nitrate form before it can be used by growing crops. Hence, its action has to wait for bacterial growth in the soil. It is therefore a little slower than Nitrate of Soda.

Sulphate of Ammonia leaves an acid reaction. If your soil is already acid, Sulphate of Ammonia will add to this trouble. Nitrate of Soda is [illegible] in reaction

HE DARE NOT MOVE IN BED

Nights Were Torture Through Lumbago

Only those who have suffered from lumbago know how exceedingly painful it can be. And when they discover a remedy for this complaint, they are anxious to pass on the good news to other sufferers. Let this man tell you how Kruschen brought him relief:—

"I had a bad attack of lumbago. When I got into bed I had to stay in that position—I could not move for pain. I didn't know what to take or what to do. I was advised to try Kruschen Salts and I am very grateful I did so. After taking a few doses I felt relief, and after taking one large bottle, I am glad to say that my lumbago had entirely gone, and I have not had the slightest trace of it coming back."—G. A. V.

Kruschen is a combination of numerous mineral salts which assist in stimulating your liver and kidneys to healthy, regular activity. They ensure internal cleanliness, and so help to keep the blood-stream pure.

For Level Crossings

A safety gate which gives promise of frustrating the attempts of motorists to "beat the flight" on drawbridges and railroad crossings, is being given rigorous winter tests by three railroads in the Middle West.

Costing $7,500 a pair, the gates are geared to stop vehicles travelling as fast as 100 miles an hour with perfect safety for both vehicles and occupants. Held aloft on a steel frame spanning the road, a wire-rope gate drops into place across the highway when released by automatic electric control. This is attached to a series of springs 200 feet long, set underneath the surface on both sides of the road. The springs are enclosed in pipes partly filled with oil and are of progressively heavier weight.

When the car strikes the flexible gate the light springs give first, minimizing the impact until heavier springs come into play, cushioning the car to a gradual stop. The inventor claims there is no recoil, as the spring pull is just enough to return the gate to normal position across the road when the car is backed up.—Renfrew Mercury.

Cattle Rustling Streamlined Today

Thieves Ingenious In Meeting Modern Conditions—Use Trucks For Speedy Work.

Cattle stealing during the last decade has attained a volume never previously registered.. The use of the motor truck and automobile has increased the returns of cattle rustling many fold.

Before the period of motor transportation thieves were able to steal relatively few cattle at a time and were forced to escape into inaccessible hideouts. Today, writes Edward N. Wentworth, director, Armour's Livestock Bureau, in "Armour," with fast trucks to speed across the State lines, distant markets are readily available and each thief, or band of thieves, may operate in one county this week and another next week.

Not only are the ranges and isolated herds pillaged, but the bandits run their trucks into farm buildings by day, when the owner is in the field, at the neighbors, or in town, and boldly haul away veal calves, dairy cows, horses, pigs or sheep. Their control becomes a problem of the farmer as much as of the rancher, although the damage to the latter is much more extensive.

SLAUGHTERED QUICKLY

An important activity of the modern cow thief is butchering. Under cover of darkness he captures and slaughters his animal, fully aware of its ownership, burns or destroys the hide, loads the meat into his rubber-tired vehicle, and whisks it away to peddle it in some remote construction, logging or mining camp, or in some small town in the next State.

On November 28, 1935, Harold Benson and Louis Speulda, ranch dwellers four miles north of Upton, Wyoming, were sentenced by Judge L. P. Ilsley of New Castle, Wyo., 3 hours after their arrest on charges of cattle killing. The two men pleaded guilty, Speulda getting one to two years at the State penitentiary and Benson, who was 22, getting an indefinite sentence at the Wyoming Industrial School.

Colorado seems to be a favorite locale for this type of activity, the various counties along the southern tier of the State averaging twenty-five to thirty cases of cattle theft on file each year. The cases are usually handled by the District Attorney at Durango. So successful has the incumbent District Attorney, James M. Noland, become that most defendants plead guilty.

Many cattle, however, are stolen monthly, two or three at a time, and they are promptly butchered. Throughout last autumn ranchers and cowboys, authorized as deputy sheriffs, patroled the ranges, and in some cases acted as vigilantes. This has decreased stealing somewhat, but never stops it entirely.

Livestock detectives and inspectors recently trailed rustlers from Osage, Wyoming, to Omaha, Nebraska, but were unable to catch them. It appeared that they had transported eight head of cattle in a truck over 600 miles.

At Pryor, Montana, in 1933, rustlers entered a ranchman't corral where he had some weaning calves, killed eighteen of them, skinned out and cut off the hindquarter, loaded them in a truck and drove away. The car was trailed seven miles by blood of the slaughtered animals then the trail disappeared on the main highway.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sick and the world looks punk.

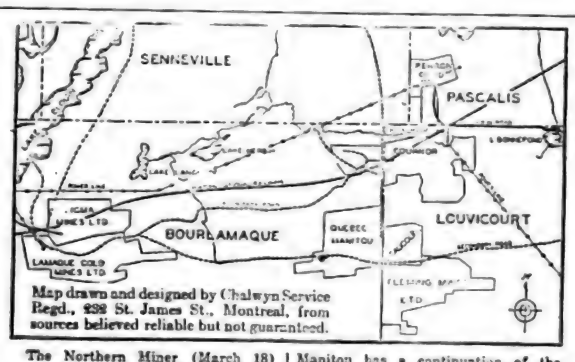
A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

In Your Garden

By GORDON L. SMITH

All experienced gardeners warn against working soil too early. With clay, it is especially dangerous to dig when there is too much moisture in the ground. Such soil is liable to puddle, and when drying out it may bake. In any case there is no advantage, and the work would have to be done over again later on. A good safe rule is to squeeze a handful of earth in the hand. If it compacts into a ball, the enthusiast is well advised to go back and read a book for a few days. On the other hand, if the soil simply crumbles when released by the hand it is fit for working.

SWEET SCENTED FLOWERS



Flower growers are rediscovering the charm of fragrance. For a long period, color schemes and changing styles of design have commanded so much attention that the old art of planting for scent was almost forgotten.

With the trend changing, however, the nose is competing with the eye in making final decisions on candidates for Spring plantin. The gardener who would be up-to-date must become acquainted with the plants to grow for fragrance.

For the same reason, perhaps, that the sense of smell is accentuated in the blind, we become more more conscious of garden fragrance when the brilliant light of the Summer day fades, and twilight makes of the garden a fairyland. Some flowers whose perfume is not detected in the daylight become fragrant at night. Others give off at night a perfume different from their daytime scent.

EARLY PLANTINGS

ing music lessons, and the other day the first of the garden peas will be among the earliest vegetables sown. These may be planted as soon as the ground is fit to work. All of the first named seeds should be sown at least three times, at intervals of ten days so that there will be succession of vegetables. The second group to go in will be carrots, beets, onions, potatoes, etc., which can stand a little frost, and then beans, corn and tomato, cabbage and cauliflower plants, etc., which kill with frost, and finally those hot weather vegetables like lima beans, squash well started, egg and pepper plants, cucumbers, melons and similar things. All garden rules, it should be remembered, however, are only approximate and should be varied a little to suit the local climate and individual preference.

A New Rose Makes Its Bow To Spring

NEW YORK—Equally beautiful at all times from its first budding to the final opening of the flower, the new "Queen Mary" rose, winner of the gold medal at the International Flower Show, pays a subtle tribute to the royal character for whom it is named. Most roses have moments at which they are lovlier than at other times, but the "Queen Mary" regal on its long stem unfolds very slowly keeping its long inner petals folded tightly over its heart until the last instant of blooming, when they open flat to reveal themselves delicately streaked with the sunshine gold of the corolla.

"Of a good strong habit" and "of good blood" are two of the phrases which the flower growers apply to the rose. It grows out-of-doors as in the greenhouse and if properly cared for it will last an unusually long time after being cut.

The rose was imported to this country from Europe where it has won certificates in Holland. It was awarded a certificate last fall at the New York Horticultural Society show and a gold medal at the recent Philadelphia exhibit.

Roosevelt Admits He Can Milk Cows

WASHINGTON. — President Roosevelt has settled a dispute between two small boys in Granton, N.Y., with the information that he has milked a cow, although he is only an amateur, "and is now considerably out of practice."

The boys, Cecil Francisco and Albert G. Monroe, wrote to the President in a childish scrawl on March 3 to settle their dispute, and were replied to by James Roosevelt, the President's son and secretary.

The letter from the boys follow: "We, that is, Cecil and I had a little dispute. He said that you never had milked a cow and I said you had. I wish you would be so kind as to let us know."

Secretary Roosevelt replied as follows:

"The President has asked me to answer your letter of March 3, and to tell you he has milked a cow, having learned when a small boy. However, he would like to emphasize that he never claimed to be an expert at it and is considerably out of practice. I hope this settles your little dispute and with best wishes to you both."

Cigarette Ads

"No, no, no," exclaimed Giovanni Martinelli, the opera star. "The pipe, the cigar the cigarettes!"

Reporters who had come to interview the famous singer hastily extinguished the three evils, when he explained that the smoke made his throat sore.

"But didn't you endorse a cigarette once?" asked a reporter.

"Si, si," admitted the smiling tenor, "But remember what I said. I said 'These cigarettes never make my throat sore.' And that is true. They never do."

"Because," a reporter suggested, "you never smoke them?"

"Si, si," laughed Martinelli. "I never smoke them. I never smoked anything in my life."

Use Caution

Now that house-cleaning time approaches it is well to bear in mind the dangers of using inflammable liquids in large quantities for cleaning purposes, about the house.

Every year fatalities occur because individuals insist on cleaning the hard-wood floors with gasoline or some other highly-explosive material. Such a practice is merely courting disaster and should be rigidly avoided.

If inflammable cleaning fluids are to be kept about the premises during house-cleaning time, they should be placed in safety containers, and used in small quantities remote from an open fire.

Avoid possible disaster by exercising every care when using such liquids about the house. It pays in the end.

An announcement of far-reaching importance to Scout leaders of Ontario was that at the recent Provincial Annual Meeting concerning the purchase of a 100-acre camp site near Acton, to be used as a permanent Gilwell Training centre. In developing the property it is planned to commemorate in some way the interest in Scouting of the late Fred J. Mann, and Col. R. W. Leonard, whose legacies made the purchase of the site possible.

"Scouting is a counteractive to one of the greatest dangers of modern life. The discoveries of science and the advancement in material apparatus of life have tended to mechanize society; to make everyone a cog in a great impersonal machine. But human society can never be mechanized, and if you try, it will cease to be human and cease to be society. Scouting cultivates the individual and the personality. It emphasizes initiative and encourages self-development. I believe that on us, the free democracies, there lies a special duty of insisting upon the immense importance of personality, for in many countries in the world this seems to be forgotten. And there is no better agent in this task than the Scout Movement."—Lord Tweedsmuir, at the Toronto District Annual meeting.

Dr. Dafoe Gets A Raise in Pay, Not Enough, Says Judge

NORTH BAY, Ont. — Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe got a raise in pay recently and a recommendation for further increases when North Hainsworth township, in which Callander and home of the Dionne quintuplets are situated, is able to pay.

Appealing a decision by the township council to reduce his salary of medical officer of health from $75 to $40, Dr. Dafoe was awarded a salary of $150 for 1937 Judge J. A. S. Plouffe also allowed the doctor $35 costs. $8 for witness fees, and certain disbursements in connection with witnesses.

He said no appeal would be taken against his judgment, which did not ignore Dr. Dafoe's request for $350 salary. In setting the amount at $150 he took into consideration the township's "poor" financial position he said.

"For 1937 I am going to make an order to fix Dr. Dafoe's remuneration at $150, which I don't think is an amount adequate for the value of his services, but which is just as much as the township can pay at this time," Judge Plouffe said.

Photographing Home Made Hollywood Miniature 'Sets'

This was not photographed in the wilderness but on a table top in the home of an amateur photographer. The "lake" is a mirror.

AS ALMOST every motion picture goer knows, the Hollywood studios are continually fooling us these days with scenes photographed in miniature, such as a village street, a castle in Spain, a rural winter snow scene, a ship at sea, an airplane wreck and what not else. So cleverly are these miniature "sets" designed and photographed that in the picture their lack of reality defies detection, and when we are let in on the secret, we do not mind at all. Indeed we admire the achievement.

Have you ever tried creating miniature scenes yourself and photographing them with your own camera? It's fun. Depending upon your skill, artistic ability and the materials you employ, you may construct and photograph miniature sets in your own home that will rival the semblance of reality achieved in Hollywood; or, if you prefer, you may create scenes of fantasy, comedy or burlesque to compare with a "shot" in an animated cartoon.

For a "still" camera, this is really nothing else than table-top photography, such as has long been practiced by amateurs, but which now is photographically much easier for the amateur than it used to be, because of the recent introduction for home use of more powerful artificial lighting. At least for table-top photography you can very cheaply with two or three of these brighter home flood light bulbs rival the lighting equipment of Hollywood studios, and, what is more, do good work with an inexpensive fixed-focus camera, provided you use a portrait attachment to secure the necessary close-up focus.

Constructing one of these sets requires, of course, a certain amount of time and patience, with the expense depending upon the materials you put into it. Very amusing scenes may be created, however, without introducing elaborate details. Here are a few suggestions for the materials:

White or light gray cardboard makes "sky"; a mirror makes a lake; twigs and small plants make trees and hedges; moss serves for grass; chalk, salt or flour for snow; toy automobiles, trains, boats, airplanes, houses, human and animal figures may be obtained at the five-and-dime store. If you are handy with tools, you can fashion various "props" yourself, using soft wood, or you can use plastic modeling materials.

A few points relative to the photography:

Working at close range, the depth of field of the lens is not likely to be great, so, in building your set, keep the elements within as short a distance, front to back, as possible. You get the best effects by using the lens at a small opening. Better make about three "shots" of a setting, varying the exposure time, to be sure of obtaining a perfect negative. Focus exactly.

You will have a lot of fun playing with the light. Sometimes a single strong flood light will give you what you want. Again, you may want one figure to stand out brilliantly with everything else subdued. For this a large piece of cardboard with a hole in it will provide a spotlight. Panchromatic film gives the best rendering.

TRINITY CHURCH NOTES

The W.A. of Trinity Church put on a very unique affair yesterday afternoon in the Parish Hall. Mrs Beck of Meadowvale, the chairman, introduced Mrs Staver, of Toronto who gave a very wonderful and interesting demonstration of weaving ...She introduced her subject by a talk on handicraft, showing how very profitable this work could be especially weaving. She demonstrated her patterns on a small loom, and had a wonderful display of beautifully woven articles.

After the demonstration closed the National Anthem was sung and the ladies repaired to the basement where a most delicious lunch was served. Altogether, the afternoon was very profitable and pleasant for those who attended.

HIGH SCHOOL ESSAY CONTEST

We print another of the prize winning essays on the Winter Fair. This one by Ferne Crozier obtained first award, donated by Mr. Wm. Couse.

At the Fifteenth Royal

The Royal Agricultural Winter Fair was established in 1922. The Dominion now has a fair truly national in its scope and character, devoted wholly to the display of agricultural live stock and products in open competition. In the comparatively short period of fifteen years, the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair has come to be recognized not only in Canada, but throughout the world as the national institution devoted to the promotion of the country's greatest industry—Agriculture.

The President, Gordon F. Perry, is well satisfied with the way in which all the provinces have responded and have sent in entries.

The horse exhibit was the biggest ever this year, there being one hundred more entries than last year. There were 750 horses in the breeding classes and eighty-six draft horses.

There was a particularly good turn out of dairy cattle this year. I found that the 880 entries in dairy cattle brought them up sixty-five head over last year. Except in Herefords, there was competition from American herds in all the breeding cattle classes. In every class—Holsteins, Ayrshires, Jerseys, Guernseys, Herefords, Shorthorns and Angus there were some excellent animals displayed which aroused more than usual interest.

Although the hog entry was low, there were five carloads of swine entered, three of these being from Ontario. In the breeding classes there was an increase in Yorkshires and Berkshires, but Tamworths were down a little. Mr. Featherston of Streetsville entered some remarkable swine which carried away their share of prizes.

The poultry classes also showed some reduction. From an agricultural standpoint the turkey class was the feature of the show so, (afterwards) after the awards had been placed there were scores of wonderfully good birds not in the money. The ducks and geese all deserved great admiration.

The grain show was about up to the usual. Samples of grass seeds were cut to five pounds, cereals remained the same size at the half bushel. The Ontario Agricultural College featured in its exhibit seed grain and seed potatoes.

And just in case anyone might think this was the whole show I might mention that there were 1,500 boxes of apples in competition. Barrels have not been called for at the Royal Winter Fair for some time, although many persons claim that Ontario is essentially a barrelled-apple province.

The prairies furnished a good bit of the one hundred entries of honey but have not ventured in the apple class yet. The exhibits were in the near approach to perfection although Mr. Couse did not have his prize honey entered.

For a moment I stood breathless at the pageantry of color in the Flower Show at the Royal Winter Fair. There were magnificent heads in the chrysanthemum houses — round and full with heavy curling petals that looked like sculptured locks of hair. Some were purest white, some dark red with their heads held erect on stout stems.

Pompons are growing in favour, those small, rounded flowers that are so beautifully decorative. Some of them were gold, some were white, some were bronze and coppery and some—quite new—were dark rose shading to a darker centre in a true mahogany.

Orchids! Oh, yes, I saw orchids! Some held a fragrance that reminded me of the sweetness of the scented water lily of our Canadian streams. At the "Royal" they put them in a bower of maiden-hair fern with water dropping from the rocks. Of course Canadian roses captured first prizes in New York, and Dale's exhibit from Brampton in its revolving basket was, without exaggeration a scene from heaven, which is beyond description.

The evening horse show performance is always a popular attraction and it provided plenty of thrills again this year, and the delightful pageant, "Speeding through the Years" was thrilling as well as comical.

Enough has been written to show that the "Royal" at Toronto has a tone of its own; it can not be described on paper; it must be "felt" to be properly appreciated. Although I have ommitted a great many "star" features, I think you will agree with me, when I say that—

The assembly of so much variety combined with high excellance under one roof and into one organization gives the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair a distinction not matched anywhere else in the world.

BOOK REVIEWS

The I.O.D.E. will hold an open meeting at Niagara-on-the-Lake on 6th April, when Perkins Bull, the eminent historian, will be guest speaker, and a number of Peel visitors will doubtless be in attendance. Mr. Bull's original researches into the lives, sufferings and achievements of the United Empire Loyalists will be the subject of his address. Facts new and surprising, unearthed from obscure and hitherto overlooked sources, will be contained in From Revolution to Repulsion, his forthcoming book on these founders of the English-speaking part of the Dominion of Canada.

"Mississippi Bubble" Was Disastrous Speculation

The "Mississippi Bubble" was a scheme devised by John Law, a famous Scotch financier who lived from 1671 to 1729. Under the patronage of the duke of Orleans, regent of France, he organized a project intended originally to liquidate the national debt of that country by developing, under an exclusive grant, the resources of the province of Louisiana and the commerce of the Mississippi, then claimed by the French.

The scheme was launched in 1716 with the establishment of a bank. In 1717 the West Indian company was organized with a capital of 200,000 shares of 500 livres each. The company was at first successful, and in 1719 obtained exclusive control of the trade to the East Indies, China and the South Seas, and all the possessions of the French East India company. The holders of West India shares seemed likely all to profit tremendously.

An additional issue of 5,000 shares was created, and so wild was the speculative craze that more than 300,000 persons applied for them. In consequence all of the shares rose to twenty times their original value, and at the height of the excitement in 1719 were nominally worth more than eighty times the amount of all the currency of France.

The company could not hope to make a satisfactory profit for those who had paid the preposterous prices which speculative demand had put upon the shares. Before a year was out the "bubble" burst and the shares sank to a tenth of their face value.

The whole enterprise was thus discredited, and the company was wound up, while Law was obliged to flee; he died in poverty in Venice.

So great were the losses, which were in France rather than England, that the collapse of the Mississippi scheme nearly precipitated a revolution. It is usually regarded as the most disastrous speculation of modern times.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Three Distinct Groups Make Up Cricket Family

There are comparatively few species of crickets, but they represent three quite distinct groups. These can be distinguished as True crickets, Mole crickets and Tree crickets, says an authority in the Montreal Herald.

Mole crickets are so called because they burrow in the ground like moles. The form of their bodies is fashioned for this kind of life. They feed upon the tender roots of various plants.

True crickets are the black creatures seen in the cracks in pavements, or in the paths in the fields. They are common everywhere, some even invading our houses. They usually feed upon plants, but some are predaceous. They lay their eggs in the autumn, usually in the ground and hatch the following summer.

The common name Tree cricket was applied to this group by the fact that they are apt to live in trees; but they are also found on shrubs, tall herbs or grass. The song of the Snowy Tree cricket is often mistaken for that of the Katydid.

The Nation's Songs

"Let me write the nation's songs and I care not who makes her laws" was written by a Scotch patriot, Andrew Fletcher of Saltoun, in his "Account of a Conversation Concerning a Right Regulation of Governments for the Common Good of Mankind," a letter written to the marquis of Montrose and others in 1703. The correct quotation is: "I knew a very wise man so much of Sir Christopher's sentiment that he believed if a man were permitted to make all the ballads he need not care who should make the laws of a nation. And we find that most of the ancient legislators thought they could not well reform the manners of any city without the help of a lyric, and sometimes of a dramatic poet."

Kangaroo Kitchen

In Australia the natives have been living off kangaroo meat for at least 10,000 years. Parts of kitchens believed to be that old were unearthed near Kingston, South Australia, some time ago. Shape of the ovens lends archeologists to believe they were for roasting kangaroos at ceremonies. So strangely man-like are these animals that it seems almost incredible that they should be eaten, but the fact remains that the Australian aborigines consider them a great delicacy. Vast herds of the beasts formerly roamed the great inland plains of the "island continent," but they have been largely killed off for their hides.

"Yellow Streak"

The meaning of "yellow streak" appears to have originated with the idea that things have yellowed through age, disease or other discoloration, just as a complexion may turn yellow through jaundice; hence the meaning of jaundiced or jealous, melancholy. A later development of this was in the sense of mean, contemptible, cowardly or craven. Another applied meaning is sensational, with regard to news or the press.

Trial of Socrates

At the trial of Socrates, time was divided by means of a water-clock, a kind of hour-glass, with water instead of sand, into three equal portions; the first, to the speech of the prosecutor, the second to that of the defendant and the third, if the verdict was "guilty," to the speech of the prosecutor, the reply of the defendant, together with the decision of the judges.

Juvenile Hockey

(Simpson & Sampson)

At Ravina Rink last Friday after noon Streetsville Juveniles met Mt Dennis for the third game of the play offs. A fast game resulted in an undeserved defeat for Streetsvile with a final score of the 4—2

Our boys had the best of the play through the entire game and many times the puck buzzed around the enemy's net. At the end of the first period, score was 1 o. At beginning of second period L Hope and George Schnurr each scored one goal putting Streetsville in the lead. Due to lack of subs our boys began to tire and Mt Dennis whipped in three goals. Despite the loss it was a good game and the team was cheered on by many local fans. The whole team may be praised for its fine work and Bill Evans did a good job tending the nets.

Last Saturday afternoon Streetsville Juveniles played off with Glen Williams at Georgetown. After three periods of fast Hockey the Glen Williams team admitted themselves beaten and the score proved it. The Streetsville lads bulged the Glen's nets five times while Glen managed to beat Bill Evans only once. Thus Streetsville has possession of the Georgetown cup for another year. The boys also expect to hold it next year as the majority will still be able to play in Juvenile class. The goal getters for Streetsville were L Longworth 2, G Schnurr Ike Redick and Simpson

On Monday evening the Streetsville Juveniles went into action for the fourth time with Mt Dennis at Ravina Rink in Toronto. The boys, however were fighting against great odds—They had only two subs. Their stalwart defenceman, L Hope, was temporarily out of the game. The result was a crushing defeat, the score at the end of the game being 5—0. The Streetsville Juveniles fought till the last — and when we say fought, we don't mean literally. There were several fights on the ice and a few of the spectators also exchanged blows. The game spelled the finish for Streetsville Juveniles in T.H.L. for this season, but the boys hope to be back next season—to win. They have shown themselves capable of playing hockey, even against great odds, and with this season's experience next year's task will be made a great deal easier.

Why Not Join a Church ?

This will be the subject of a sermon to be delivered at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Sunday evening by the minister Rev. J.Y. Fraser.

Are you one of those who say "I cannot join a Church because :

(1) It takes so much time to attend to religious matters
(2) There is so much mystery connected with religion
(3) Some in the Church are not what they ought to be
(4) My friends will ridicule me if I change my course of life.
(5) It costs too much money
(6) I might have to give up all the enjoyment of life
(7) I can be as good outside the Church as in it.

Dryer than the Sahara!

THE Sahara Desert has its oases — pools of refreshing water along the Caravan Route — but moisture in a telephone cable means Trouble. Consequently, one of the many important steps in the making of telephone cable is the expulsion of moisture. Here a length of cable comprising twelve hundred telephone circuits (2,400 wires) is shown leaving one of the huge ovens in the Montreal plant of the Northern Electric Company, Limited, where a temperature of 275° F. is maintained under a vacuum which removes every perceptible trace of moisture from the cable. The cable is then wheeled into an air-conditioned chamber at the rear which is dryer than the Sahara Desert; here it awaits its lead covering which is applied in a hot plastic state under several tons pressure without the cable again encountering the natural atmosphere; it is then ready for use.

Love Huntress

By H. GLYNN-WARD

Claudia Townsend meets Dick Whalen at a hockey game in Seattle one night. Her interest in Dick infuriates Wallace Bornell, rich young lumberman, who wants her to marry him. Wallace and Dick were college rivals, and now when Dick seems to be making progress with Claudia where Wallace has failed, Wallace grimly determines to get him out of the way. He orders Mr. Braddock, manager of one of his lumber camps in British Columbia, to offer Dick a job at the camp near Burns Lake.

CHPATER 11

The subject of Bornell's and Braddock's conversation, meanwhile, was plodding along a snowy trail in the woods twenty miles away— with Claudia Townsend.

"You will come up to our ski club, won't you?" she was saying. "Not this week-end, because I shall be away with dad in Victoria—but next week-end."

"It's no use telling you how I'd like it, Miss Townsend, but I—I just can't! To be candid with you— I haven't a cent. Seattle hasn't offered much—that is where jobs are concerned, though I shall always bless the day I came here, because I met you!"

Something in his voice caused Claudia to keep her eyes straight ahead, on the trail.

"I don't know why," she said presently, "you should continue to object to my name—Claudia? I can't very well call you Dick—"

"Don't make things difficult for me—Claudia!"

"I don't want to, Dick."

Whalen's eyes were thoughtful. "I've studied mining. If only I could tide things over till the summer when the mines open."

"I know—" she exclaimed. "Have you been to the Assay Office here in Seattle?"

"Sure They told me they'd keep me in mind."

"But you know Dad is Mining Recorder for the district. I happen to know there'll be a vacancy in the office next week! That's why we are going to Victoria. Dad wants to see a man for the job—some man who accepted it, then took another job. Dad will know on Friday afternoon. If the other man doesn't take it—why not you?"

Dick Whalen laughed.

"You'll be a little wizard if you arrange that! It's not so easy to persuade a man to take on a stranger."

She stopped and put the tip of her finger on his shoulder. "I'll use all the persuasion I've got on Dad to give you this job," she said, "because—well, I want you to stay in Seattle!"

He stood looking down at her for a moment, then turned resolutely away. He would have given much to take her in his arms and kiss that glowing little face.

"We must turn back now," she said. "I've got a lot of persuading to do—also a little packing. I shall wire you some time on Friday without fail, Dick."

"I'll be on the lookout all day Friday for your telegram."

"I wish we had on snowshoes so we could swish along for miles and miles—"

"Right away to heaven!" Dick added laughing. "We'd have to be north for that, far north where the air is like champagne and where the lakes and rivers are frozen and the snow three feet deep on the level . . ."

"It's really tremendously good of you, Wallace, but I— well, I well, I can't quite say for certain that I can go."

Dick Whalen was speaking, and it was in Wallace Bornell's office where the two of them, with Bornell's manager from the north, were seated. Dick had just been offered a job in the lumber camp at Burns Lake in central British Columbia.

"You'll like it up there, Mr. Whalen," Braddock put in. "Everything's in full swing. We get the logs out on sledges over the snow, and take them out across the lakes that are all froze solid."

"It sounds fine," Dick agreed.

"Well, then, that's settled," said Wallace. "We want you to travel north tomorrow with Mr. Braddock."

"Oh, I'm sorry, Wallace, but I can't give you a definite answer about this now. I've got the tentative offer of a job here."

"A job here? Does it pay as well? We'd be glad to make it worth your while, Dick! We want you!"

"Well— Wallace, if you care to stroll back to my hotel with me now, there may be a wire waiting for me. Then I can give you an answer at once."

* * *

Walking along the street, Bornell's dark face grew cloudy as he listened to Whalen's account of Miss Townsend's interference on his behalf.

"So," Wallace commented with a sarcastic smile, "she's roped you on her string, too, has she She's had me on it for a couple of years. Take my advise, Dick, old chap! Don't fall too hard for Claudia Townsend! She's probably forgotten you and your job already."

Dick Whalen felt hot and disgusted, but he said coolly:

"That so? Well, we'll not discuss Miss Townsend. Ah, here we are. Will you wait a moment while I see if there's a wire?"

Dick didn't know what to make of Wallace's comment. Was it jealousy that had prompted it? He had heard of nothing between Wallace and Claudia. Well, he couldn't afford to quarrel with a man who was offering him a darned good job.

He went to the desk, asked about the wire, and turned away didsappointed.

Bornell, meanwhile, was thinking that this business must be stopped— Dick and Claudia, thrown together here in Seattle! Somehow or other Claudia's telegram must be intercepted.

For the rest of that afternoon Wallace stuck close to Dick. Then he insisted on taking him to his club for dinner.

* * *

Dick accepted Wallace's invitation to dinner, but first they went back to the Metropole, Dick's hotel, in Wallace's car.

No wire had come yet for Whalen, he was told at the desk. He asked Wallace to wait while he went up to his room to change his clothes.

Wallace sat down in a corner chair in the big lounge.

All at once he looked up at the sound of a bell-boy's voice, calling out—"Whalen! . . . Whalen! . . . . Telegram for Mr. Whalen!"

Wallace's heart leaped. Dick had not yet had time to get up to his room, so they were paging him now down here!

He stared up and held out his hand, hailed the boy.

"Mr. Whalen?"

"Right," said Wallace, and the boy handed him the envelope.

It had been so easy! Wallace fingered the envelope, re-reading the address, "Mr. Richard Whalen" . . . Then he opened it. . . .

It was from Claudia.

"The other man has backed out, luckily. Dad says you can have the job. Be ready at Assay Office on Monday morning. Delighted. Cheerio —Claudia Townsend."

Wallace smiled grimly as he folded the telegram and put it in his pocketbook. He knew Claudia would not be back until Sunday night. Meanwhile Dick Whalen must be well on his way north, not knowing that the telegram had come, under the impression that Claudia had forgotten all about him. No one ever need know that the telegram had fallen into the wrong hands.

Don't Put All Your Eggs In One Basket

Granny, Who Is a Successful Business Executive, Advises Women To Seek Diversified Activity.

NUTLEY, N. J. — For a happy life, 79-year-old Mrs. Wilhelmina Wood advised women today to mix babies, business, love and sports.

"Don't put all your eggs in one basket," she said, "and remember the only formula for feminine independence—a synonym for happiness as a constant search for variety and diversified activity."

Tiny, gray-haired but spry, Scottish-born Mrs. Wood has followed her own formula, is a successful business executive after years devoted to raising a family of five boys and one girl.

She was a grandmother when she got her first job. Now a dyed-in-the-wool "career woman" she looks back on 15 years of daily nine-to-five routine. She is head of the assembly and inspection department of an instrument manufacturing company founded by a son. She started with the concern when it organized in 1923 and has not yet take no vacation.

"I have my after-office-hours activities," she said today, "and I'd be lost if I deserted my job for two weeks."

Doctor Suggests Holiday In Bed

Says There Are Thousands of People Who Don't Get Their Sleep

Dr. Alfred Cox, general secretary of the London Health Resorts Association, does not agree with the present distribution of holidays.

Speaking at the Institute of Hygiene on "Holidays in Winter," he said that the man who had to do necessary, dangerous, or disagreeable work, ought logically, to have the longest spell of holidays. The idle rich, who had done nothing to earn a holiday, ought either to be compelled to go on "kill'ing time" or, perhaps better still, be given a job of really hard work.

Dr. Cox advocated a holiday in bed. There were a good many thousands of people who never got sufficient sleep, he said.

Monoxide Danger Slight In Planes

Washington.—The deaths which result from carbon monoxide poisoning in automobiles and homes, aeronautics experts said this week, probably never will occur in airplanes.

"All the Spices of Araby"

In Arabia, when a man has eaten another man's salt, he is morally bound to do no harm to his host. Salt symbolizes the bond which exists between host and guest and it may be because the spices which go into this Arabian Ribbon Cake come from the East and still retain some of the mystic powers of that land or just because it is a swell cake worthy of approval on its own merits, but we predict that anyone who partakes of your Arabian Ribbon Cake will be bound to everlasting peace with you.

When you take the fragrant spices of Araby, take the most perfect and finely milled cake flour you can buy, take fruits and sugar, molasses and eggs and blend them together. You can't help but turn out the most delicious and flavorsome spice cake you have ever made. Your reputation will be made, too, and when the fragrant aroma of the Orient comes floating out of your oven, you will know that you have something fit for a Sheik, not to mention your own family. Perhaps you may even murmur, "Allah, be praised!"

ARABIAN RIBBON CAKE.

3 cups sifted cake flour, ¼ teaspoon salt; 1½ cups sugar, 1 cup milk, 1½ teaspoons cinnamon, ½ teaspoon mace, ¼ teaspoon cloves, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 2-3 cup butter or other shortening, 3 egg yolks, well beaten, 3 egg whites, stiffly beaten, 3 tablespoons dark molasses, ½ teaspoon nutmeg.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift together 3 times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg yolks and beat well. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Fold in egg white. Fill one greased 9-inch layer pan with 1-3 of mixture. To remaining mixture, add spices and molasses and blend. Turn into two greased 9-inch layer pans. Bake layers in moderate oven (375° F.) 20 to 25 minutes. Arrange white layer between spice layers. Spread Fruit Medley Filling between layers and Tart Lemon Frosting on top and sides of cake.

FRUIT MEDLEY FILLING

Combine in saucepan 1 cup each finely cut raisins and figs, ½ cup finely cut dates, 1 cup water, 2 tablespoons butter and dash of salt. Boil slowly 6 to 8 minutes, or until thick enough to spread, stirring constantly. Cool. Add 1 tablespoon lemon juice and ½ teaspoon grated lemon rind.

TART LEMON FROSTING

Cream together 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind and 4 tablespoons butter. Add gradually 3 cups sifted confectioners' sugar, alternately with 3 tablespoons lemon juice, beating thoroughly after each addition. Add dash of salt.

Wife-Beaters Buying Whips

Made For Purpose—Smaller Ones For Babies Sold at New York

New York.—Rescue of a 70-year-old leather worker from death by gas fumes disclosed last week that the manufacturer of cats-o'-nine-tails — the whips whose history dates back to the earliest days of piracy on the high seas—continues as a small industry on New York's crowded lower east side.

Benjamin Schwartz, who, except for a visit of a neighbor woman, would have been a victim of gas from his own unlighted stove, makes the whips and sells them to hawkers, who peddle them to mothers and husbands of the crowded tenement section.

Originally a Rumanian cobbler, Schwartz has been making the multithonged whips in his dingy shop for 15 years. Seemingly there has been no change in methods of child —or wife— discipline in that period, because business is still as good as it ever was.

Recommended for babies and little children, Schwartz said, is the light model, with eight thin strips of leather bound to a wooden handle. A more popular size is the second, with five bands of heavier leather.

The third size — his daughters explained it was generally used by husbands to keep their wives "in line" —was heavier and stronger than the other two. But, he said, it costs more.

The "whip man" is a familiar figure in east side streets, strolling along with a gross of the cats-o'-nine tails over his shoulder, calling out to Jewish housewives: "Fifty cents a conchickell," or "Five cents a whip."

Of all the people in the world, 40,000,000 speak Chinese, half that number speak English, 140,000,000 speak Russian, 80,000,000 speak German, and only 50,000,000 or so speak Italian.

Summary of the News

Practical Arithmetic

TORONTO.—More practical questions in the new public school arithmetic were demanded by the Ontario Ratepayers and Trustees association at the annual meeting in Toronto this week. Trustees from school section 10, Vasey township in Simcoe county pointed out that the questions used in the present book had no relation to the actual problems in arithmetic the children had to solve in every day life.

Three Die in Crossing Smash

Galt's worst recent tragedy early Friday claimed the lives of a young couple and a friend when a Canadian Pacific Railway passenger train smashed their automobile to wreckage at the Dundas Street crossing.

The dead. John Macey, 27, milk truck driver; his wife, Jessie Leeds Macey, 28, whom he married a year ago last November; and Miss Olive Moore, 51, all of Galt.

Coroner Ward Woolner, Ayr, opened an inquiry which was adjourned for hearing of evidence at a later date. Police said a string of freight cars, extending to the east, cut off Macey's view of the approaching train 60 feet back from the crossing which was unprotected, the watchman having gone off duty.

Easter Lily Demand

BRAMPTON.—With the shipping of Easter lilies from local conservatories almost completed, growers here are reporting a larger demand for their flowers than was the case last year. Every day, special coaches have been picked up here by passenger trains on both railway systems to haul the East, or flowers to retailers in points as far west as Edmonton and as far east as St. John's Newfoundland. According to growers, the volume of Easter lilies this year is much above that of the average year with a tremendous quantity of stock available.

$50 Newsprint Price

MONTREAL.—General Manager P. M. Box has announced Lake St. John Power and Paper Company will adopt a $50 newsprint contract price for the first half of 1938.

Wheat Boost

CHICAGO.—With European importations the heaviest since the Great War, actual re-entry of the United States into world export trade stimulated farmers' hopes for prosperity Saturday.

The highest domestic wheat prices in eight years gave the United States wheat crop to be harvested this summer its greatest value since 1929. An 800,000,000-bushel crop would be worth more than $1,000,000,000 at prevailing prices.

Wheat has advanced steadily—5 cents a bushel in the last week, 10 cents in a month—in the face of improving crop conditions. This week the arid Northwest, where last year's drought cut production drastically, received what was described as a "$1,000,000,000 snow."

Traders said that even a bumper crop might bring high prices because of the unusual demand from European nations, chiefly Great Britain, Germany and Italy, hich have been scouring bread-stuff-production countries for importations at the rate of almost 2,000,000 bushels a day for weeks.

Strike Ended

PETERBOROUGH. — Final settlement of the strike at the plant of the Peterborough Brinton Carpet Company, where 240 employees were out, was effected Friday. The workers agreed to accept a general 10 per cent. pay cut restoration which goes into effect immediately, and all hands will return to work.

The strike resulted from failure of the company to restore pay-cuts amounting to 2[illegible] per cent. made during the depression years, and reached a head when fifty-six weavers, members of the Brussels Carpet Weavers Union asked aid from the National Board of the Union.

Duke Accepts Plaque

OTTAWA.—Lionel Fosbery, Ottawa sculptor received a letter from the Duke of Windsor accepting a plaque of himself which Fosbery executed.

The plaque of the former King Edward VIII, a portrait in relief in bronze, is about five by six inches in size.

Pigeons Disrupt Time

BRANTFORD.—The march of time was halted for seventy minutes when pigeons which roost in the Postoffice tower here, after being locked out of their home in City Hall tower, perched on the hands of the clock and prevented them from making the usual turn.

A dozen pigeons were too much for the power of the clock. The occurrence was the second of the kind here, and stories of pigeon pie are being heard around the Post office, where the birds are proving a nuisance.

Coast Actors Praised

VANCOUVER.—For the second successive night Vancouver's Strolling Players won high praise from Adjudicator George de Warfaz, at the British Columbia regional drama festival on Thursday.

An excerpt from Rudolph Besier's "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," was described by Mr. de Warfaz as "an absolutely perfect production."

Coupled with credit to the amateur dramatic group which Wednesday won praise with Vincent Godefre's tragedy "The Widow of Ephesus," was the adjudicator's comment that either Gay Scriven, leading lady in both Strolling Player presentations, or Colin Lanrence, director of both plays and portrayer of Edward Moulton-Barrett in last night's effort, could "go to New York or London and win fame with any professional company."

Engineer Dies at Throttle

SUDBURY.—With his hand on the throttle, Engineer Edward Williams, 57, died of a heart attack en route from Sudbury to Markstay Friday afternoon. Fireman W. Antler was on the engine with him and rendered aid, but he soon learned that Williams had died almost instantly.

Williams had had twenty-five years of service with the C.P.R. The heart attack seized him nineteen miles east of Sudbury.

Seeding a Month Early

WINNIPEG.—About a month ahead of last year, wheat seeding has started in Southern Alberta, it was announced this week by the agricultural department of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Jack Barton, a farmer in the Taber irrigated district about 25 miles east of Lethbridge, has seeded 40 acres of wheat, the announcement said.

Elementary Economics

TORONTO.—Elementary economics and sociology were suggested as subjects for study in the high schools and collegiates of the province in a resolution from the Perth County association presented at the Ratepayers association meeting in Toronto at the O.E.A. this week.

War Fuel Supply

LONDON.—The recent discovery of new and plentiful oil deposits on the Island of Trinidad may make the West Indian colony Great Britain's main source of fuel supply in the event of war, the Sunday Chronicle reports.

British experts, the newspaper said, have discovered new oil deposits on the island.

Conscience-Stricken

SASKATOON. — Discussions over money matters by the Bedford Road Collegiate here brought forth a tiny piece of cheerful news.

The person who carried away tools and books some time ago sent a money order to clear his debt.

"I felt 'the call' and wished to clear the sin away," he wrote.

Temperance Education

More Temperance education in the schools of the province was recommended in a resolution passed by the Ontario Ratepayers Association.

Car Owner Pleads For Its "Borrower"

NIAGARA FALLS, ONT. — Bruce Biggar, manager of the Niagara Falls Co-operative Dairy, scoured the country roads to get his automobile and capture the thief, but in Magistrate's Court he made a strong plea for leniency on behalf of Nolan Eddy, 20, charged with the theft of the car.

As a result of Biggar's plea, the charge was reduced to "joy-riding," and Eddy was allowed to go on suspended sentence.

Agricultural Training Urged For Students

Ontario's primary and secondary schools, particularly rural schools, should emphasize training in agriculture, and devote more time to the study of current affairs and economics, W. G. Nixon, M.L.A., for Temiskaming told a group of friends here.

Youth will be served "plenty of disappointment" if they are taught early the problems of business, Mr. Nixon contended. He commended the programme of the Department of Education under Dr. J. L. Simpson. "People are beginning to realize that the curriculum was made for the pupil—not the other way round," Mr. Nixon said.

Discussing land settlement schemes of the past fifteen years, Mr. Nixon said that while conditions have changed, the pioneer farmer must be willing to work and he must have a love of the soil in his heart.

It is hoped to include cheese and butter in the pasteurization plan, but at a more opportune time.

Mayor Mitchell, while favoring pasteurization, voted with Councillor Lacoste against the resolution.

Death Rate Soars

OTTAWA. — Births registered in sixty-seven cities and towns having a population of 10,000 or more, during February, numbered 5,896, a decrease of 4 per cent., compared with 6,872 in February, 1,936, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported Saturday.

Marriages showed a decrease of 6 per cent., with 2,025 against 2,234, while an increase of 21 per cent. was shown in deaths, with 5,179, compared with 4,422 in February last year.

Speed Limit Up

TORONTO.—Ontario's new motoring speed limits—fifty miles per hour on the open highway and thirty miles per hour in all incorporated municipalities or "built up areas"—does not come into effect until May 24, Attorney-General Roebuck announced over the week-end.

The bill was given Royal assent in the Legislature on Thursday, March 25. Ordinarily, it would have been operative forthwith, but under legislation introduced earlier in the session by the Government its operation is indirectly held up for sixty days.

Municipalities will just have to put up with the thirty-mile limit prescribed for them, J. P. Bickell, registrar of motor vehicles, stated Saturday. They have no power themselves to reduce it, he added.

Ever since the legislation was passed in the House there has been considerable confusion regarding its date of effectiveness. Highways Department officials were certain its operation commenced at once. Not until the Attorney-General had his say was the air clear.

Modern Children Love Their Teacher Claims O.E.S. Pres.

Lord Tweedsmuir Opens Sessions of Educationalists in Toronto

With nearly six thousand delegates present representing all branches of educational activity in the province of Ontario Educational Association session for 1937 were opened at the University of Toronto on Monday evening by Lord Tweedsmuir.

Dwelling on the new attitudes towards education as compared with the old fashioned ideals in the school H. A. Griffin, president of the O. E. A. in his opening address, claimed that children no longer disliked school. The modern child, he declared, had no dislike of the teacher or the schoolhouse and the old fashioned truant officer was almost unnecessary for the modern school.

Said Mr. Griffin:

"The President's address, as indicated in the programme has resolved itself into some comments on education which might be entitled then and now. I was prompted in my selection of material by a word-picture given, over the radio by our own Denton Massey in his discourse —"The Young Man Goes to School" —The scene, we are told, took place near Boston. The facts were, that on the week end in question, the school burned down, and the 300 children stood in the street cheering as the flames demolished the building. "Alas", thought I "is this true of our schools?" If so — why? In the past, perhaps, but in this year of grace 1937 — decidedly not. Although realities have changed—the legend persists."

"The facts of the case to-day are —that instead of being armed with a book and a rod the teacher in your school has been carefully trained and visualizes what the children of the particular age and background need most. No longer does a uniform course of study and system of compulsory examinations keep our students either preparing for or passing these nerve-wrecking monsters. What was once a protracted hurdle race is now an all-absorbing process where the child participates to the full in expressing his opinions, taking part in discussion — and through instructon and suggestion builds up for himself a fund of facts hitherto crammed down his throat and disgorged on the examinations page."

"You say, "Is this so in our school?" "Is this the attitude of our teachers?" Yes, I am convinced that this 60-mile-an-hour system teaching and learning is absolete. So if you wish to be considered up-to-date in the tasks that confront us as educators, I hope you have come to this three-day Convention in a receptive frame of mind, prepared to listen, prepared to do your own thinking and finally return home and support modern trends in present-day education. Our complex system of living demands a change, our boys and girls deserve a "break" —and your teacher should be, and is, anxious to make the adjustments necessary. It is no longer true that half the world does not know how the other half lives. Radio, the film, fast-moving conveyances, along with the Press and reading material have made this an ever-shrinking world until we are neighbours, one to another. Since standing before you on this platform, it has been my privilege to attend two all-Canadian Education Association conferences —one, the National Home and School Club meeting — the other the Canadian Education Association meeting at Regina. In each, the topics ranged from the all-provoking theme of statistical costs on education to the curriculum and to the dynamo of the system — the teacher. Three things were of common interest:

(1) That the public finally got what it demanded.

(2) That the Course of Study must be enriched by meeting the demands of the times within the specified field covered.

(3) That the public were willing to pay to the uttermost that the youth of 1937 should receive better, broader and more useful instruction than had been the heritage of their parents.

The Quints Are Beginning to Talk

Each of the Famous Five Can Say About 15 Words in French

Callender, Ont.—Each of the Dionne quintuplets can now say about 15 words in French, Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe said this week.

"The babies can ask for a drink of water if they want one, and can also make their wishes in other regards known," Dr. Dafoe said. "If they want to go outside to play they can get the idea across to their nurses without trouble, but their vocabularies actually only include about 15 words at present, although we expect to have them talking better when they are three years old."

The Quins will celebrate their third birthday May 28.

They speak French only, Dr. Dafoe said, but when they can use their tongues fluently they will be taught English.

The babies are well aware of their individual identity, and if Annette, for instance, is addressed as Cecilie by a confused nurse or visitor she will shake her head hard, almost shout, "non, non" and point to Cecilie. They are all familiar with their own names and those of their sisters, Dr. Dafoe said.

He said they did not know how to ask for something to eat, or how to say they were tired "because they are fed at regular times and put to bed at regular hours, so they never get hungry or sleepy except at the proper times."

"As far as their talking goes," Dr. Dafoe said, "you must remember that children of multiple birth never talk at an earlier age.

"All along we have been expecting the Quins to be able to say quite a few words by their third birthday, and they will be able to do that. Already they know the usual 'good morning,' 'how do you do' and so on, and I think by their third birthday they may surprise everyone."

WHEN HE DOESN'T FORGET

The employer, according to Wilfrid Heighington, is in danger of becoming the forgotten man. Workers generally seem to be satisfied if he turns up once a week to do his stuff on pay day. — Toronto Globe and Mail.

New Regulations Demand Separate Beverage Rooms

From April 1st Hotels Must Have Two Rooms—One for Men—One For Women—Municipalities Given Right to Set Closing Hours By By-Law

TORONTO.—New and far-reaching Liquor Control Board regulations which require all Ontario hotels with authorities to operate two separate and distinct beverage rooms —one for men only, and the other solely for women, except where attended by bona fide escorts—were announced Sunday night by Liquor Commissioner Edmond G. Odette as effective from April 1.

These regulations, which have been designed to eliminate as far as possible "mixed drinking" with its attendant abuses, of which there has been considerable complaint of late, have been mooted for some time. Actually, notification of their preparation has been for some weeks in the hands of hotel proprietors.

"They all have had ample warning of what we intend to do," said Mr. Odette, "and if on April 1 they have not altered their premises to conform with our requirements there will be no renewal of their authorities for the forthcoming year."

May Set Closing Hour

A second set of regulations, which also come into operation on April 1, vests in the municipalities the right to declare by by-law whether the beverage rooms in their midst shall close before 12 o'clock midnight, the hour prescribed by Provincial regulations.

"There will be no closing of beverage rooms before 10 o'clock at night," said Mr. Odette, "but if any municipality feels that they should be shut by 10.30, or 11, or 11.30, say, all they have to do is to pass a by-law and submit it to the Liquor Control Board, and we will do the rest. A municipality, for instance, might desire an earlier than 12 o'clock closing on some particular night. That's all right with us. From the first of the month they will have the authority to go about getting it."

Inspection Tightening Up

In view of the fact that there were no amendments to the Liquor Control Act itself at the recent Legislature session, Mr. Odette is taking regulatory action to tighten up on inspection and other angles of the board's administration.

"Things are working very smoothly now," he said last night, "and our inspectors are keeping a very close check on conditions. At the present time they are looking over the hotels, listing any which have made no move to meet our April 1 demands."

Want Province To Share Half Of School Costs

Ratepayers Adopt Platform At O. E. A. Sessions in Toronto This Week

"Develop the school and save democracy" was the keynote of the new platform adopted by the Ont. School Trustees and Ratepayers' Association meeting at the O.E.A. in Toronto this week. Planks in the platform reflected the emphatic desire of the association to shape the provincial school system to meet modern needs and conditions.

High lights in the platform were the proposals that the government should carry fifty per cent of all school costs to equalize the burden between different municipalities, standard diplomas for entrance to business and technical schools instead of matriculation standards, and that a minimum salary of $700 a year be guaranteed to rural school teachers.

The platform adopted by the association was:

We believe:—

1. That equal educational opportunities should be given to every child in Ontario.
2. That 50% of school expenditure should be borne by the State.
3. That greater co-operation between school boards should be fostered in the interest of boys and girls.
4. That a Province-wide medical examination should be given at least once each year during the elementary and secondary school life of the child.
5. That a permanent record should be kept of every school child throughout his elementary and secondary school life.
6. That a more practical course should be provided for all primary and secondary schools leading to a standard diploma which would be recognized by business firms, agricultural colleges and the other practical professions.
7. That our teaching profession be assured of a greater tenure of service and at least a minimum salary of $700.000 and greater freedom of citizenship.
8. War being the greatest menace to civilization and democracy, every effort should be made by teachers to encourage international peace and to teach the truth about war.
9. That every effort be made to encourage a better class of moving pictures and that all educational films should be stamped.
10. That assistance be given by the Federal Government to the Provincial Governments for the vocational training and employment of youth.
11. That all real property be based on a Provincial equalized assessment.
12. That we make a thorough study of the unit of administration for the purpose of securing the greatest economy and efficiency in our educational system.
13. That every effort be made to increase interest in education in order that our citizens may be well prepared for life.
14. That there be the greatest possible co-operation between our Association and the Department of Education.

Urges Women's Work for Women

MONTREAL.—Canadian women are urged by Mrs. M. M. Cutherland, Ottawa, of the National Employment Commission, to reorganize their activities and prepare to undertake "women's work." Advocating "women's work for women," Mrs. Sutherland told members of Montreal Women's Club: "Unless we can get it, we shall find ourselves out of occupations."

Women's responsibilities was to recognize the fields that are theirs. In the past, making of textiles, nursingand teaching activities. When those activities went outside the home, women followed along, the speaker said.

It is up to us to reorganize our own work and get our women prepared to undertake women's work. The trouble with house work is that no one have been trained for it — neither the girl who tries to do it nor the mistress who tries to direct the girl.

"The wonder to me is that more homes are not broken up in the first year or two by inexperienced young wives. We need more training for the girls and for the women."

World's Greatest Plague Being Overcome

Not so many years ago, consumption was the world's greatest scourge. It is still a deadly menace but not to present extent, as also effective means which have been taken for its prevention and cure.

The physician, the dietitian and the sanitation expert have all combined and with the aid of the sun and fresh air and rest, have materially checked the great inroads which tuberculosis made upon our population.

The National Sanitarium Association operates the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives, the Toronto Hospital for Consumptives and the Queen Mary Hospital for Consumptive Children, which combined have a total capacity of just over 1,000 beds. They are thoroughly equipped and have all facilities for the modern treatment of this disease, and it is largely through their efforts that the death rate from consumption has been so greatly reduced.

These hospitals are not operated for the well-to-do but are maintained solely for the poor who are afflicted with tuberculosis and are without means to pay for their treatment and care.

It requires a great deal of money to operate these institutions, far more than they can hope to receive from statutory allowances, and it is only with the cooperation of many generous friends that they can continue to carry on.

Many thousands of dollars will be needed to cover the shortage on operating this year. Will you please assist by sending a contribution to the National Sanitarium Association, 223 College Street, Toronto 2.

"To will what God wills is the only science that gives us rest."—Longfellow.

PEEL JUNIORS' DRAMATIC SERIES

The Streetsville group are being coached by Arthur Arch, and their presentation will be "The Darkest Hour". Terra Cotta group are putting on "Sauce for the Goslings" and the coach is Rev. A. N. McMillan, of Norval.

Bolton group are being coached by Mr. B. F. Corley and Mrs. Henry Wilson, and will play "Elizabeth Refuses". Ebenezer group will offer "The Purple Bedroom" coached by Mrs. I. J. Lawrence, of Woodbridge. The Trinity group are playing "The Reading of the Will", and Miss M. E. Morrison and Mrs. Sanderson are coaching the play.

Railroader-Actor

Roy Emerton (above), English actor who played Moody, the railway contractor, in the Gaumont British epic of Canadian Pacific Railway construction through the Rockies, "Silent Barriers", found himself right at home in the part when he went to the C. P. R. mountain division on location. The division was by no means new to Emerton who with his brother Percy served the railway there in 1912, Roy, the actor, as a fireman on "pusher" engines, and Percy as a roundhouse hostler at Revelstoke where much of the film's local color was filmed. Roy Emerton was a popular figure during the filming of the Canadian railway epic among the railroaders, many of them former associates.

Ground Sloth Numerous Millions of Years Ago

Ground sloths, strange lumbering beasts that the first human inhabitants of this continent may have hunted, were immigrants like the men, but they came from the opposite direction. Human migration came from the northwest, from Asia; ground sloths came earlier, and from the southwest, from tropical America (where the strange race of beasts had their first home.

Sloths lived long in South America without appearing on the northern continent, because through millions of years of the earlier part of the Age of Mammals there was a wide area of sea between North and South America.

When this closed over, perhaps thirty million years ago, intermigration of animals began between the two continents, and the first sloths appeared in North America. These developed four distinct genera, which ranged in size from a six-month calf to a short-legged elephant. The last of them became extinct a relatively short time ago; the skeleton of one of them, found in New Mexico and now in the Yale museum, still has its ligaments and part of its skin.

In South America also the group survived until the coming of man. Far down in Patagonia, in a cave, there were found large pieces of skin of one of these animals, with its coating of hair still on it, together with the sloth's skull. The cave also yielded evidence of human occupation while the sloth was still alive.

Great Rocky Region Made Up of Oldest Known Rock

The great rocky region that extends all the way from northern Ontario into northern New York forms a single structural unit of the earth's crust and is made up of the oldest known rocks. Geologists do not pretend to place a particularly accurate estimate on its age in years, but one figure, based on the amount of radioactive materials in some of its minerals, is one and one-half billions of years, says Science Service.

This great rock mass, known to geologists as the "Laurentian Shield," contains some of the world's most valuable metal ore deposits—among other things, the world's principal source of nickel, as well as much gold and silver. These as well as the predominantly granitic makeup of the rocks themselves, are evidences that the formation came into being by the slow solidification, far underground, of tremendous masses of volcanic magma, which were subsequently exposed to the light of day by the weathering away of the mountain ranges that once stood above them.

Mosque of the Roses

InConstantinople, or Istanbul, as it is called today, is an exquisite little church known as Gul Djami (Mosque of the Roses), probably built in the Tenth century, when the city was a Christian one. Here, in the middle of the Fifteenth century, on the night before the Turks took the city, the Christian emperor and his patriarch passed the night praying before the final dawn, and when the Turks entered they found the church still garlanded with roses, and so it has been called ever since.

Ancient Flint Implements

Many old flint implements which have been found in the British mines are preserved in the British museum. With them are some of the picks—fashioned from the antlers of deer—which the old flint-miners used. A lump of clay is still sticking to one of these primitive picks, and on it is the thumbprint of the Stone age miner who used it. Scotland Yard's finger-print collection, extensive though it is, has nothing to equal this, for the print must be at least 4,000 years old!—Answers Magazine.

Stanley Falls on Congo River

The Stanley Falls on the Congo river mark the termination of the Upper Congo's northward flow, and change the course in a 60-mile curve to the westward. The falls are not of great height—the total fall is about 200 feet—but they effectually prevent navigation between the waters above and those below except by canoe. The first five cataracts are close together, there being only nine miles between them. The sixth fall is 22 miles down stream, and the last 26 miles beyond.

Dove and Pigeon

The words "dove" and "pigeon" are practically synonymous, but in ordinary usage "pigeon" is a somewhat broader term and is applied to all birds belonging to the family columbidae. Both terms are applicable to the domestic pigeon and to various wild species, but some of the smaller species of the family are specifically called doves, such as turtledoves, mourning doves, ground doves, to distinguish them from the larger species more commonly called pigeons.

City of Long Winters

Magallanes, in Chile, and the surrounding country is, by ordinary standards, a barren land. Its hillsides yield sufficient pasturage for great flocks of sheep, but little agriculture is possible. The few trees which decorate the neat little plaza of the city are cherished and carefully guarded for their rarity. The winters are nearly nine months long. The bitter climate has made of the natives a long-suffering, sturdy lot, independent, thrifty and hard-working.

The Open Column

The County of Peel Agricultural Society agreed, Saturday, to start all over again. A new board of directors was elected, led by J. W. Crashley, Brampton, who seemed anxious to take the responsibility of going out and battling against the toughest financial situation in which the society has ever found itself.

David Moran, who unofficially acted as mediator between Miss Jean Craig and the society, presented a list of terms, which insist that the society must pay $1,050 cash, sign a new mortgage for five years for $7,000, with interest at five per cent, must arrange for the retirement of the arrears of taxes, and must guarantee payment of $400 on the principal of the mortgage each year. Many of the members thought that this was too heavy a load for the fair to carry, considering the fact that gate receipts have been cut almost in half in the past few years.

Crashley and a younger board of directors than the one appointed at the beginning of the year, however, seemed to think that these financial obligations could be overcome. Crashley, in fact, went to the extent of saying that, if the board could not meet the terms, and raise the necessary funds this year, then the board should pass out of existence.

There is a microscopic flaw, however, in the financial arrangement pictured by Mr Moran. He suggested that, in raising the $1,050 cash to meet the first of Miss Craig's terms, the grant of $500 from the County of Peel could be utilized. This grant has not been paid, in recent years, until after the fair had been held, and it is quite possible that others of the county councillors may differ in opinion with Mr. Moran as to whether the grant should be paid so early in the year. Members of the agricultural society were very dubious as to whether there would be enough money on hand to operate a fair if this grant was absorbed before the gates of the fair grounds opened in September.

To give Crashley credit, it should be pointed out that he was largely responsible, last year, for the appearance at the Brampton fair of a splendid class of light horses, which would have provided more entertainment for the crowd than the trotting races, had his jumpers been displayed on the track instead of relegated to a wind-swept field where few people cared to brave the bitter wind to watch them.

ANOTHER SUCCESS FOR EASTERN STAR

Last Friday evening Peel Chapter No. 96, Order of Eastern Star, held a very successful at home in the Odd Fellows' Hall, Streetsville, there being nearly two hundred people present.

Quite a number of tables were engaged at bridge and euchre.

The New Harmony Orchestra supplied excellent music for the dancing.

The winners at euchre were: Mrs. W. Faulkner and Mr. R. K. McMillan; and for bridge, Mrs. Wix Atkinson and Mr. W. H. McCaugherty.

The draw for the silk lace table cloth was won by Mrs. Harry Wolfe.

The Worthy Matron, Mrs. Harry Wolfe, and her officers did everything in their power to give the guests a good time, and everybody went home satisfied with the success of the evening.

BRAMPTON

At a special meeting in the Peel County building Saturday members of the Peel County Agricultural Society launched a drive to enable them to retain the use of the fair grounds, and continue the fair which has been a yearly event here for the past three-quarters of a century.

In accordance with a request from Miss Jane Craig, who holds the mortgage on their grounds, the members dismissed the entire personnel of their newly elected executive and elected a new board. The move was the condition on which the mortgagee, who threatened recently to deprive the organization of the use of the grounds because of unpaid interest and principal payments, consented in a recent communication to reopen negotiations for continued use of the land and buildings.

Miss Craig consented to allow the society to hold its fairs in the Elliot Street grounds providing it would make a payment to her of $1,050, pay the tax arrears on the property, and make out to her a new mortgage for $7,000 for five years at 5 per cent.

The new officers elected were: President, J. W. Crashley; first vice-president, Alec McKinney; second vice-president, William Bouvaird: directors, Brampton, L. J. C. Bull, J. W. Crashley, W. A. NOTICE TO RETURNED SOLDIERS

(Copied from The Legionary, Toronto, March, 1937)

Join the Legion!

Editor, The Legionary:

Permit me space in the Forum to state my case and extend thanks to Canadian Legion Branch No. 139 of which I am a member. My little home was destroyed by fire in December last, and my family and I were left without a place to sleep. Kind friends, however, came to our aid and I need hardly say we were deeply grateful.

I had been paying for our old cottage out of my small Imperial pension and had not been able to afford having our belongings insured. I had been under the impression right along, however, that the house was insured and that the premium was being deducted from the payments made by me on the principal. To my surprise I found that I was going to be cheated out of my rights, and I had no money or other means of fighting my case. Then the Legion came to our assistance. The president put the case in the hands of our Legion Branch lawyer, who got the case settled to our satisfaction. I don't think I could have succeeded on my own, and my family and I are very grateful to the Legion.

My advice to every ex-service man is: Join the Legion! It certainly is a good thing there is such an organization working for the benefit of us veterans and ready to fight for us, whatever the case may be. The best of luck to the Canadian Legion and its splendid magazine, The Legionary.—W. J. Tracy, late Driver, R.F.A., South Africa and Great War, Streetsville, Ont.

David Cantelon Apple King

At Work on Slabpile as Dominion was Born

Since Then Millions of Dollars of Apples Have Passed Through His Hands; Bought and Sold 200,000 Hogs; Still in Business at 89.

By W. G. TRESTAIN

Printed by request.
From London Free Press

CLINTON, March 10—Said a former Clinton banker: "If I had two per cent. on the turnover in Dave Cantelon's business since I've known him, I'd be one of the richer men in Ontario today."

David Cantelon, 89, one time "Apple King of Ontario," who has bought and sold at least $5,000,000 worth of farm produce in the last 50 years, is still buying and selling. He cast a shrewd, humorously twinkling eye over The Free Press roving reporter who called on him at his Clinton home.

"I know who you are," he announced in the mist of a pump-handle handshake. "I see a piece of your face in the paper every day."

The idea of an interview appealed to Mr. Cantelon as a good joke. He laughed heartily. He would not go so far as to admit all the stories told about him were true but some of them "maybe."

At Work at Confederation

"I was working on a slab pile in a Hay Township sawmill when Canada went into confederation," he said. He was born in Goderich Township and stayed there until 20 years old. At one time he ran a grocery store for "about two years." Once he had been foreman on a well digging gang operated by a man called Radford. They dug 35 wells and it was about the hardest work Mr. Cantelon could recall undertaking.

"After I got into the apple buying, I lost $80,000 in one year," he announced cheerfully. Friends say he was in a crowd when a telegram was delivered telling him of a loss of several thousand dollars on one shipment. Mr. Cantelon read the telegram, threw it away and clapped a friend on the back.

"How's the election going out your way?" was his response to word he had lost a fair-sized fortune.

David Cantelon has been reeve of Clinton five times, commissioner of the municipality after it reverted to police village status six times, and warden of his county in 1914. He has done business in nearly every part of Ontario, buying hundreds of barrels of apples around Newbury, Arkona, Strathroy, Thedford and Forest.

Bought Many Hogs

"I've handled a lot of hogs and lambs, too," he said. He estimated he had sold at least 200,000 hogs.

"I go out buying Tuesdays and Wednesdays, load Thursdays and other days I spend in—my office." He put a particular emphasis on "my office" and his eyes twinkled suspiciously. Friends explained tha his "office" is the sunny parts of Clinton's main business corner. Here Mr. Cantelon has met his farmer business associates through the years and transacted thousands of dollars worth of business.

Business, the veteran merchant said, was not what it used to be. Truckers and small "in-and-outers" had broken up the field until markets had lost stability. Lack of proper customs protection was a serious matter, in his estimation.

"Everybody knows I'm a dyed-in-the-wool Conservative," he chuckled. He denied vehemently that he had ever voted Grit. He was against Hepburn policy and particularly with regards "repudiation" of electric power contracts.

"How long would I last in business if I backed out every time I saw I would lose money on a deal?" he wanted to know.

Recently he had found an old Clinton voters' list of 1882. Only three of the names mentioned were still known to be living. These were John Wiseman, ex-customs collector; Edward Floody, now of Toronto, secretary of Huron Old Boys' Association, and himself.

Wrecked Three Times

"You know," he said, "St. Paul was shipwrecked three times. I have been land wrecked three times. I was in two motor accidents and one train wreck."

He believed the most important thing for a long happy life was "moderate, temperate living." His friends say he has been an exponent of his own theory.

"I haven't missed a meal in 50 years," he added. "I've been four times 'across the pond.' I've swung a cradle and driven oxen. 'My father helped cut the first road through the Huron tract. I am the centre one of 13 children, all dead but me.'

As for his future, Mr. Cantelon gave a hearty laugh.

To Stay in Harness

"I'll stay right in harness until I drop dead; the doctor says its work keeps me alive. There's nothing I like better than getting out to talk to the farmers and have a laugh over some good stories," he said.

The younger generation was "not so bad."

"Most of the people I do business with now are the third generation younger than myself. About 90 per cent. of them can be depended on—their word is good."

He shipped the first carload of apples into Winnipeg. A few years later he had to dump hundreds of barrels into the river when the market collapsed following United States "dumping."

The thing he would like to do best was "to go on making an honest living."

"I've lost a lot of money and I've made a lot—during war it was astonishing the business I did," he added. He said it was the way of business, sometimes money was made, sometimes it was lost. There was no use worrying about it either way.

"Come and see me when I get to be 90," he told his departing guest.

INTERMEDIATE SCHOOLS

Chas. Hersom

Anyone who has watched public school pupils out on the playing field and noted to what extent the big boys and girls monopolize the games will see in this alone a good argument for keeping the pre-adolescents by themselves.

There will also be an opportunity for pupils in the intermediate schools to start foreign languages, algebra and elementary science at an earlier age, which would be well.

These schools would not be a mere shadow of the American junior highs. In the first place, the junior high school, being a recent innovation, is housed in expensive buildings, erected during boom times when lavish expenditure was the order of the day. In one American city there is, for example, a school having a basement containing 80 separate compartments for shower baths. Each compartment is divided into two parts, a shower and a dressing room, with hair drying equipment, etc. It is not to be wondered that the cost of education in that city is high. It is for each of the various communities in Ontario to determine whether they wish their intermediate schools to be housed in marble palaces.

For two or three years after "entrance" the children will be enabled to continue their education at home. For despite all that we hear about the modern home and how badly it falls down on its job, some of us still believe that most boys and girls in Ontario are better at home up to the age of fifteen or sixteen than elsewhere.

In rural communities there is little hope for establishing intermediate schools unless the unit of administration is enlarged. The minister of education for British Columbia states that both from the view of economic administration and educational efficiency, Ontario could effect considerable gains by adopting a larger unit, township or county, of school administration. School surveys have established the fact beyond reasonable doubt that the small, three-trustee unit of administration, as found in rural Ontario and some other parts of Canada, is one of the most potent factors contributing to education and economic waste in a publicly-controlled system. This is backed by general experience. He goes on to say too that as the cultural centre of the dominion, it seems incredible that Ontario should long remain satisfied with its mid-Victorian vehicle of school control, namely, the petty board of school trustees in thickly populated rural areas.

Benefits of the application of the Hadow scheme are seen already in England. The children in a reorganized area are making greater progress than in the district that has not yet been changed over. In East Suffolk, for example, the people realize what an immense boon, educationally and socially, the new senior schools have become. East Suffolk is a rural community Education is moving on. Are we going to lag behind?

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON II.
The Sin of Adam and Eve
Genesis 3: 1—4: 26
Printed Text—Genesis 3: 1—15
Golden Text—The soul that sinneth, it shall die.—Ezekiel 18: 4.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

Time.—We do not know when the temptation of our first parents took place. The date commonly given is about 4000 B.C. All we know is that there were no human people before Adam and Eve and all mankind on earth today descends from them.

Place.—The Garden of Eden, the exact location of which is not known.

"Now the serpent was more subtle than any beast of the field which Jehovah God had made." —That more than the serpent was present is suggested by the speech and the reasoning powers displayed, but it is rendered certain by a comparison of Rev. 12: 9 and 20: 2, where the serpent is identified with Satan. That Satan was the real tempter is additionally assured by John 8: 44; 2 Cor. 11: 3; 1 Tim. 2: 14; 1 John 3: 8.

"And he said unto the woman." —The tempter addresses the woman as the more susceptible and unguarded of the two creatures he would betray. Undoubtedly, the woman was alone, and, while the point need not be stressed, it is when we are alone that temptation most powerfully assails us.

"Yea, hath God said, Ye shall not eat of any tree of the garden?"—Satan begins his temptation, and this should be most carefully noticed by attacking the word of God.

"And the woman said unto the serpent, Of the fruit of the trees of the garden we may eat. But of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die."—To begin with, the woman made a great mistake in arguing with Satan. She should have deliberately demanded that he leave her presence—Be subject, therefore, unto God; but resist the devil, and he will flee from you. (James 4: 7). As soon as we begin to argue with Satan about the word of God, we shall be compromising with the sin into which he would lead us.

"And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die."—This is the first lie told in human history; others were soon to follow. This denial sounds as strong as possible: the brevity and completeness of the expression make the contradiction absolute.

"For God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as God, knowing good and evil." —Satan here appeals to the woman's pride, and, at the same time, leads her to almost hate God, for having as he would insist, cheated her of life's highest privileges. Satan promised her two things if she would eat of this tree: that her eyes should be opened, and that she would be as God, in that she would know good and evil. Satan himself had fallen from his high place in heaven because he attempted to be as God. (Isa. 14: 12—14; 2 Thess. 2: 4).

"And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was a delight to the eyes, and that the tree was to be desired to make one wise."—St. John speaks of "the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the vainglory of life" (1 John 2: 16). The first is here to be found in the phrase, "good for food"; the second in the phrase, "a delight to the eyes"; and the last in the phrase "to be desired to make one wise." Christ's three-fold temptation in the wilderness involved these three elements.

"She took of the fruit thereof, and did eat."— She did this deed. Satan did not do it for her, the tree did not do it, the garden did not do it, her environment and circumstances did not do it, and God did not do it. It was surely not her heredity that led her to do this deed. This deed was her own personal, willful, responsible act, and the blame of it must rest on her forever.

"And she gave also unto her husband with her, and he did eat." —Eve was given to Adam as a helpmeet: instead she here exercises her power over Adam, and takes advantage of his love and high regard for her in leading him into the same sin in which she had just indulged. There was every reason in the world why Eve should not have yielded to this temptation. She was not bound by any previous habits of indulgence. God had distinctly given her a command not to do what she did do. God had given her a command for life. The temptation came through an animal beneath her, not through an angel above her, and, finally, there was not the slightest threat on the part of Satan to force her into this sin.

"And the eyes of them both were opened.." — Thus far the promise of Satan was kept, but never did Eve dream that the consequences of her sin would be what she now discovered them to be.

"And they knew that they were naked; and they sewed fig-leaves together, and made for themselves aprons."—A sense of shame, a consciousnes of guilt now possessed our first parents, who, up to this day, knew nothing but innocence. They had a knowledge of sin, of personal guilt, of broken law which was never to leave the human heart, and never will until the redeemed ones of God are in glory.

"And they heard the voice of Jehovah God walking in the garden in the cool of the day: and the man and his wife hid themselves from the presence of Jehovah God among the trees of the garden." — The voice of the Lord which they heard in the garden was either "the noise of his foosteps (cf. Lev. 26: 12; Deut. 23: 14; 2 Sam. 5: 24); or the thunder that accompanied his approach (cf. Ex. 9: 23; Job 37: 4, 5; Psalm 29: 3, 9.); for the sound of his voice, as Calvin and others think; or, probably, all four." And Eve hid themselves between the trees of the garden, because they knew they were guilty of sin and had disobeyed God, who was now approaching them.

"And Jehovah God called unto the man, and said unto him, Where art thou?"—This is one of the saddest and yet most precious verses in the Bible. It is the first question ever asked by God in the Holy Scriptures, and it was asked, not that God did not know where his sinning creatures were, but that he might get them to confess where they were.

"And he said, I heard thy voice in the garden, and I was afraid."—This is the first occurrence of the word "fear" in the Bible. It will be found again and again as human history is recorded. But the voice from heaven, often through angels, and, ultimately, through the Lord Jesus Christ, is 'fear not', providing man accepts God's gracious redemption.

"Because I was naked; and I hid myself."—Sad it is to note that man's first word to God, as far as the divine record goes, was a lie. Man did not hide hmiself because he was naked, for he was created naked, and often before this he had fellowship with God and never had thought of hiding. Furthermore, in this case, he was not naked, for he had devised for himself a covering to hide his nakedness. The truth was that he hid himself because he had sinned, and was afraid of God, but he would not acknowledge it.

"And he said, Who told thee that thou wast naked? Hast thou eaten of the tree, whereof I commanded thee that thou shouldest not eat?" Thus God at once points to Adam to the true cause of his nakedness and intimates God's cognizance of his transgression.

"And the man said, The woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat." It is cowardly of Adam to attempt to blame Eve for his fall, as if Eve's giving him of the fruit of the tree was any reason why Adam should have partaken of it.

"And Jehovah God said unto the woman, What is this thou hast done? And the woman said, The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat." Let particular attention be paid to what the woman said regarding her sin: The serpent beguiled me. Literally this word means deceived, and clearly indicates that Eve knew she had been tricked by the devil, and that she had not obtained by her sin the things which Satan had promised her. Every man can testify that sin is the great deceiver.

"And Jehovah God said unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, cursed art thou above all cattle and above every beast of the field, upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shall thou eat all the days of thy life." The serpent is allowed no trial. This is not Satan's initial sin. This sentence has a literal application to the serpent. The curse of the serpent lies in a more grovelling nature than that of the other land animals. This appears in its going on its belly and its eating the dust.

"And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed: he shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel.' This is the first promise and prophecy of Christ in the Scriptures and, as Dr. A. T. Pierson well said: 'As the oak is germinating in the acorn, and the eagle in the egg, all subsequent Messianic prophecies of the Old Testament are here in germ. There is sacredly added, in the whole afterglow of such prophecy, one idea that is absolutely new, other predictions growing out of and expanding this germinal prediction.

Movie-radio gossip

Edgar Bergen, the ventriloquist who has become such a favorite on the Rudy Vallee radio hour, has joined the wonderful array of comics, opera singers and dancers that Sam Goldwyn has lined up for his Goldwyn Follies. Bergen's skill as a ventriloquist was developed when he was just a youngster. He liked to play jokes on his mother, making strange voices call to her from various parts of the room. Later he worked his way through Northwestern University giving shows at college parties.

Apparently Sam Goldwyn won't be happy until he signs up simply everyone of note in the entertainment world for his Follies company. Over in London he has put Vera Zorina, sensationally successful young ballerina, under contract. You may have seen her in person, for last year and the year before she toured the United States, playing in one hundred and ten cities with the Monte Carlo ballet company. She won't just dance in Goldwyn pictures, but will be groomed as a dramatic player.

Jane Withers just dares any kidnapper to come around her house threatening her now. In addition to her usual bodyguard, a Texas Ranger who looks as if he could rout an army singlehanded, her father is usually around and he has been sworn in as a deputy sheriff, complete with guns. Furthermore, there is an electric signal beside her bed which rings a bell in all the police stations near Beverly Hills. Everybody is betting that the mischievous Jane will never be able to resist pushing the button just once, just to see the police come dashing to her rescue.

Joan Crawford has launched a new style, wearing old-fashioned bead bracelets that match the color and design of her print dresses . . . Sonja Henie cancelled the rest of her personal appearance tour and hurried back to Hollywood to make pictures. Cost of Living Shows Slow Upward Trend

OTTAWA—The cost-of-living index of the Department of Labor continued its gentle upward trend in February, the coming issue of the Labor Gazette will show.

The cost per week of a family budget of staple foods, fuel, lighting and rent was calculated at $17.12, as compared to $17.04 in January, $16.58 for February 1936, $16 for February 1935, $15.41 for June 1933 and $22.12 for February 1930.

The wholesale price index was 83 at the end of February, compared to 81.6 at the end of January, due largely to a rise in the price of iron and steel and certain non-ferrous metals. The wholesale index was 72.5 in February 1936, 71.8 in February 1935, 63.5 in February, 1933 and 93.9 in February 1930.

Farm Problems

Conducted by
PROFESSOR HENRY G. BELL

with the co-operation of the various departments of Ontario Agricultural College

QUESTION:—"What is considered the best way to handle manure so as to get the most out of it? Someone advised us to leave the manure in the barnyard until you could draw it out and plow it under. We have a spreader, and this year we drive up on the pile with the horse and stone-boat every day and as there is not much straw in it the pile is frozen too much to use a spreader like I see some farmers doing this winter. Would it be better not to drive on it so it could heat, and be able to draw it out frequently?"— A. S. G., Oxford County.

ANSWER:—Regarding the handling of manure: If you can keep it fairly well compacted in the barnyard, so that the liquid manure is not lost, you will retain the largest amount of plantfood in it. I believe it is all right for you to drive on the manure pile to keep it fairly well compacted. If you have the labor to take it out in the Spring, as soon as the weather will permit, you should get good results by handling it this way.

QUESTION:—1. What would you recommend for top dressing of Fall wheat this Spring (Fall application of 150-200 lbs. of 2-12-10). What is the most economical and effective —Ammo-Phos. Cyanamid, Sulphate of Ammonia, and Nitrate of Soda?

2. Is it possible that a sandy clay loam with lime stones in it can be lacking the very lime necessary for plant growth?

3. Could I expect, under fair growing conditions, a good yield of barley by using about 4-25-20 in available plantfood in fertilizer on light sandy clay loam, high, western slope along the river, the soil not very productive, plowed last summer. To add some more nitrogen and kill the mustard, I intend to top dress with 50 lbs. of Cyanamid. Would like to know if this would be very harmful to the barley?

4. Has Cyanamid any advantage over Sulphate of Ammonia? Can it be mixed with Superphosphate and Muriate of Soda. Nitrate of Soda is immediately soluble and there is danger that you may lose some of it if heavy rains come immediately after it is applied. Sulphate of Ammonia is likewise soluble, but to a large extent has to wait until the soil warms up sufficiently for bacterial action to change the Sulphate form of Ammonia to Nitrate in which form it is taken up by the crop. Sulphate of Ammonia is a little slower than Nitrate of Soda, and the results are prolonged.

Ammo-Phos would add Phosphoric acid, as well as Nitrogen, which you have already added in the 12 per cent in your 2-12-10. Cyanamid gives best results if it is worked into the damp soil, therefore I would recommend it as a top dressing for wheat.

2. I have known soils with limestones in them to be lacking in available lime for crops, but this is not usually the case. Would it not be well to send us a sample of the soil (about ½ pint) so that we may test it and tell you whether it needs lime or does not. Mail the sample in a little cotton bag, addressing it to the Department of Chemistry, O.A.C., Guelph, Ont. Please write me at the same time as you send the sample. There is no charge for the testing.

3. 4-25-20 would be a well balanced fertilizer for barley. It is a little higher than double 2-12-10, and 2-12-10 has been found in our tests and by many others to be best adapted for production of malting barley on a medium to sandy loam soil.

A top-dressing with 50 lbs. Cyanamid to kill mustard would be in the right direction. It will not be permanently harmful to the growing barley. It may turn a few of the leaves yellow, but the added nitrogen will help the barley recover from this temporary setback very rapidly.

4. Cyanamid carries 22 lbs. of nitrogen and 10 lbs. of lime to the 100 lbs. It is therefore distinctly alkaline in its action on the soil, while Sulphate of Ammonia is decidedly acid in its action on the soil. Cyanamid cannot be mixed in large quantities with Superphosphate. If it is so mixed, the lime of the Cyanamid will revert or turn back the soluble phosphate in the Superphosphate to the insoluble form. Cyanamid can be mixed with Muriate of Potash without any ill effects.

GARDENING

By GORDON L. SMITH

The old idea of planting all the vegetable seed in one afternoon is a hang-over from pioneer days when both seasons and time were limited. Only a few vegetables were grown in the early days. Seedsmen did not have the variety to offer, and the average man regarded the garden as part of the farm where one crop was about all that could be expected.

No Excuse For Running Out

But all is changed now. Experts point out that there is no excuse for running out of lettuce early in the Summer, for example, when after the season for the leaf variety head lettuce could be grown, and then during the hot weather the Cos type.

The latter is a compact, conical-shaped type which defies the heat. Like the head variety, it should be started fairly early, probably a week or two after the first leaf lettuce is sown.

And this range of variety runs through almost all vegetable classes. There are early, medium and late corn, peas, beets and scores of other vegetables. There are different sizes and shapes to suit various uses, such as salad material, pickling, canning, etc.

Easily Grown Flowers

A brilliant garden of flowers, even the kind that the neighbors will regard with envy, is not a difficult creation. True, there are some of the rarer varieties of roses, lilies, gladioli and similar things that require skill and not a little amount of luck. But for the average man or woman, with only a limited amount of time, space and money, there is really a wide range of variety, color and height. Many of these things are almost as easily grown as weeds. Once planted, and possibly thinned, they will flourish despite neglect and insects. In this category will come cosmos, marigols, alyssum, calliopsis, batchelor buttons, calendulas and portulaca.

Good Seed Aid To Good Crops

During two successive years, 1934 and 1935, the Ste. Anne Experimental Station, P.Q., has collected random samples of Banner oats from farmers of the surrounding district and carried on yield tests in direct comparison with samples of first generation registered Manner. In all, a total of 111 farmers' samples have been grown, in comparison with 16 lots of registered seed. These tests were conducted und uniform conditions of soil, methods of handling, etc., in both years.

The analysis of the non-selected samples made by the Dominion Seed Branch showed that 45 per cent. were discarded as being unfit for seeding. This same analysis revealed that the quantity of grain required for sowing an acre of land contained on the average 1,327 seeds of noxious weeds, 6,931 seeds of other weeds, and 28,141 seeds of useful foreign plants. The samples of registered oats used as checks were analyzed similary and declared free of noxious weed seeds and of useful foreign seeds.

The samples of non-selected oats gave an average yield of 68 bushels per acre while the control samples from selected and registered oats yielded on the average 88 bushels per acre. In other words, the yield of the non-selected group was 23 per cent. less than that, of the selected and registered group. These plots were under observation in order to determine the percentage of smut. The diseased heads were pulled out as soon as the first symptom of smut was noticed. This observation enabled us to determine the number of smutted heads per acre which was found to be 17,859 on the average of the non-selected samples and 1,077 for the selected and registered samples which had been treated with formalin.

The smaller yield of the non-selected group is attributed especially to the large content of foreign seeds in that group. The proverb "we reap what we sow" is still true, although it is very old, for when weed seeds are grown in such large quantities yield of grain is reduced accordingly. Weeds also absorb a large quantity of water from the seed, that would normally be available to the crop. The efficient cleaning of seed grain is therefore very urgent and there are still too many farmers who do not seem to realize its importance.

Another factor partly responsible for the low yield of the samples collected from the farmers, is the prevalence of smut. Smutted heads do not produce grain and it is therefore necessary to treat the seed against this disease. Those who make a practice of treating their seed against smut do not hesitate to say that the increase in yield and improved quality of the crop more than compensate for the cost of treatment.

Quints Worth $765,181 Today

TORONTO. — Lollipops and cod liver oil, cold cream, corn syrup, hair ribbons and a dozen other products have made the Dionne quintuplets' fortune. Motion pictures and news photos gave them most of the $765,181.86 they have or will soon have in bonds and bank accounts, but absorbent cotton, aluminum dishes, dolls clothing and cookies did their share.

Details of the way the famous babies' fortune has been built up were disclosed yesterday in a return tabled by the government in the Ontario legislature at the request of the Conservative opposition. It was a baby balance sheet, showing 24 contracts pouring $861,148.39 into their tiny hands while expenditures of $95,996.53 were made on their behalf.

ACTUAL FORTUNE $573,765.05.

Their actual fortune at present is $573,765.05 and there is $287,383.34 owing from various manufacturers whose products have been endorsed. In addition there is an unascertainable amount coming to them from percentages of sales of products.

The period covered in the balance sheet is from the time the first guardians took control July 26, 1934, two months after they were born, to Jan. 31, 1937. The present guardianship under which the babies are wards of the King went into operation in June, 1935.

Contracts made since then under the supervision of the guardians — Welfare Minister David Croll, Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, Judge J. A. Valin of North Bay and Oliva Dionne, their father—have brought them most of their fortune. The first guardianship collected only $30,590.72.

LARGEST CONTRACT

Largest single contract that has been made on behalf of Annette, Emilie, Cecile, Yvonne and Marie is the $300,000 one made with Twentieth Century Fox Films for three feature pictures. Twentieth Century paid $50,000 for another feature-length film —the first. Two pictures have yet to be made under the $300,000 contract.

A contract with newspaper enterprise association for "still' pictures brought the babies, who will be three years old May 28, $12,333.19 from April 1, 1936 to Dec. 31, 1937.

Of the expenditure of $95,996.53 the guardians spent $57,654.97 on the four buildings that are dotted around the Dafoe nursery property near Callander and on improvements to the property.

The other $38,341.56 was spent on household expenses, salaries of nurses, guards, orderlies, housekeepers, Dr. Dafoe's secretary, a secretary-treasurer for the board of guardians. There were audit fees and travelling expenses for the secretary-treasurer, W. M. Flannery of North Bay, and for government officials who negotiated contracts for the quints.

Dr. Dafoe received professional fees of $200 a month from May, 1935, to Jan. 31 last, the accounts show. In addition he was paid $537.17 in expenses. Nurses and guards were paid roughly $100 a month.

$200 TO PARISH PRIEST

The quints, Roman Catholics, made a contribution of $200 to their parish priest over a nine-month period and their parents received $100 a month from them as well as a $1,000 present on the quints' second birthday.

In cold Northern Ontario the quints spent $638 on coal last winter and $675 this one. The butcher presented a bill for $101 for meats over an 18-month period and was paid off. An electric iron cost them $100 and a sign painter got $116 for putting up notices around the nursery.

The quint telephone and telegraph bills added up to $281 and several government departments who did work for them billed them for expenses of $281.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas blasts up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 36c

1,526 Divorces In Can. During the Year 1936

Increase of 150 Over 1935; None On Prince Edward Island

There were 1,526 divorces granted in Canada in 1936, 1,486 being granted by the courts of seven provinces, while 40 were granted by the Dominion Parliament. Thirty-six of the 40 were granted to applicants residing in the Province of Quebec and four to wives residing in Ontario whose husbands were residents of Quebec.

The increase over 1935 was 150 or about 11 per cent. The following were the divorces by provinces in 1936 with the 1935 figures in brackets: Prince Edward Island none (1), Nova Scotia 41 (52), New Brunswick 38 (36), Quebec 36 (26), Ontario 511 (463), Manitoba 179 (145), Saskatchewan 79 (60), Alberta 209 (209), British Columbia 433 (384).

Up till 1924, Canada's divorce statistics differed from those of most other countries in that they showed a majority of divorces granted on the petition of the husband, but in that year wives obtained over 51 per cent of the decrees granted. In 1925 husbands were again slightly in the majority, but from that year onward wives had the larger proportion, rising to 64 per cent in 1936, this condition being probably due to the passing of the Divorce Act of 1925 which removed certain anomalies that formerly operated to the prejudice of wives.

As among the nine provinces, British Columbia showed the highest percentage of divorced persons in the population while Quebec showed the lowest, with Prince Edward Island very close to Quebec. In that province one divorce was granted in 1913, one in 1931 and one in 1935.

The number of divorced men in Canada at the census of 1931 was 4,049 and divorced women 3,392. In 1935 the number of divorced men who remarried was 814 and divorced women 696. The number of divorced men who married divorced women in that year was 94 compared with 85 in 1934 and 63 in the year 1933. The indication is that the number of divorced persons remarrying is increasing with the number of divorces.

Damage to Roads by Trucks

As to damage to pavements by trucks, the opinion recently offered in these columns was not that of the Sentinel-Review, but of R. M. Smith, who for many years has been deputy-minister of highways for Ontario. The statement was made at Tillsonburg in April 1932. It took a good part of Sunday afternoon to find it in the files, of which fact we trust The Times-Journal will be duly appreciative. Here it is:—

"There is also the connection that we are building highways for the truck, and the truck is a competitor putting the railroads out of business. They contend we build a much higher type of highway because of the truck. As a matter of fact that is not the case at all. We are building a high type of road because of the traffic it must take, to start with, and we must anticipate climatic conditions. The Toronto-Hamilton highway has a surface today almost as good as when built. We have a pavement west of here that shows the effect of climatic conditions in the vicinity of Blenheim. There are fractures on the surface and it is only going on its second year. To all intents and purposes it was heavy enough—and certainly bus and truck traffic has not turned it up—but there are breaks in the surface even now."—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

Real-Life and Stage

This should be placed somewhere near the top of the list of queer coincidences.

Professor Henry Alexander, of the English department of Queen's University, Kingston, was playing the part, in a play at Convocation Hall, of a convict who escaped from Dartmoor and was later recaptured by the police.

On the same day at Dartmoor, England, Henry Alexander, a convict, who had escaped from the prison, was captured by the police.

Not only was there an identity in names and in prison, but the captures in the play and in real life were the same, both taking place in deserted huts.—Queen's Review.

Demand Good For Canadian Cattle

Britain Could Also take More Cattle, Says Floud

TORONTO. — The United Kingdom could absorb all the store cattle Canada would like to send and could do with a lot more Canadian bacon, Sir Francis Floud, British High Commissioner, assured a large gathering of stockmen, farmers and exporters at a luncheon meeting of the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair Association here this week.

Sir Francis spoke on some aspects of the Anglo-Canadian trade agreement as applied to Canadian agriculture. He believed the interests of the farmers of the United Kingdom and of Canada could be harmonized. Those interest on both sides of the Atlantic were most vital and stabilizing factors in the economy of the two countries.

Pointing out the first clause of the new agreement continued to Canada the right of free entry to the United Kingdom for the great majority of the Dominion's agricultural products, the High Commissioner directed attention especially to its provisions respecting cattle.

Canada was permitted under the agreement to send to the Old Country market also at least as many fat cattle as in recent years and last year there was a considerable increase. It was desirable, however, that British imports of this class be kept at a fairly even level, for the regulation of the home markets.

MORE BACON WELCOME.

While a strong effort was being made to increase production of bacon in the United Kingdom, and imports from foreign countries had been reduced considerably, more Canadian bacon, up to the maximum set by the agreement, would be welcomed. Canada benefitted greatly with the preferential arrangements in respect of this product.

As to dairy products, Canada also received preferential treatment from the United Kingdom and would continue in that advantage should it be found necessary to raise the barriers against inportation of this class of foodstuffs.

Sir Francis reminded his hearers the British farmers had been hard hit and the Government found it necessary to guard their interests in every way possible. At the same time, the United Kingdom was a great importing country. Half the country's food had to be brought in and Canada with other Dominions was enabled by the preferential agreement to take every advantage of this trade.

The meeting took the form of an Easter service. Mrs Adams gave the Bible reading (for Mrs. J. Dolmage.) Mrs. Caslor read a paper on Easter thoughts. Mrs. W. Watson took the devotional part. Mrs. O.R Church took the chapter in the study book. Report on the Temperance convention was given by Mrs Watson. There was a very favorable report from the Treasurer, Mrs. Temple, also from the supply secretary, Mrs. John Dowling. Roll Call by Mrs. James D. Steen. After the business was transacted, we were favored with a guitar duett by Mrs. W. A. Hamilton and her daughter Wilma. The meeting closed with the benediction, after which a most delicious lunch was served by the hostess.

Rev. E. S. Ottley

Good Wishes by St. Paul's Anglican Church, Bloor St., Toronto.

It is with deep regret that we have to announce that one of our Assistants, the Rev. E. S. Ottley, will be leaving us at the end of April. He has been appointed Rector of Trinity Church, Streetsville, During his stay with us he has won a place in the hearts of the people of St. Paul's and made an able contribution to the work of the Parish. His efficient work has been evidenced in all departments, especially in our Sunday School and in supervising the many organizations that centre around our Parish Hall. This congregation will uphold him in their prayers and follow with interest his work in Streetsville, in which we wish him God's richest blessing.

Rev. Mr. Ottley will take charge of Trinity Church the first Sunday in May.

Now as April has arrived it reminds us that warmer weather should be approaching which the clovers and wheat very much need. From the present appearance of the wheat it does not look too promising.

Alf Myst fell through a hay loft at Mr. Cavanaugh's recently and badly bruised one of his heels. The drop was ten feet and he alighted on one foot. His many friends are pleased to know his injury is much improved

The amateur contest, which was held in Bethel Church on April 1st drew a large crowd. Some fifty entrants took part. It was a varied program and very difficult for the Judges to decide. Many of those who took part displayed some real talent. Mr. Victor Hall filled the position of chairman very ably. The judges were: Miss E. Lawrence, Sheridan; Mr. Fell, Oakville, and Mrs. Shipp Agerton.

We welcome Mr. F. Hutchins back to our burg again. He underwent a critical operation in Hamilton Hospital some months ago, from which he feels very much improved in health Mr. and Mrs Hutchins have been staying in Hamilton and Toronto since the operation owing to Mrs Hutchins health. She is remaining in the city a little longer.

One of our bachelors was among the lucky ticket holders in that world wide known race track of the Emerald Isle. Never venture never win.

What saith the Scriptures?

The Lord is not willing that any should perish but that all should come to repentance—2 Peter 3:9

Village Council

Streetsville Council met Monday evening, April 5, at 7.30.

All members present, Reeve S. H. Foster presided.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted.

Mr. H. E. Cook, made a report to Council on the bill for $385.00 being fees for Streetsville pupils attending Etobicoke High School during 1936, which had been forwarded to Streetsville for payment. As the amendments to the high Schools Act which sets forth that each municipality is responsible for the cost of their pupils attending outside school, does not take effect until January 1, 1937 the bill for 1936 should be paid by the County of Peel. From January 1, 1937, however the Local High School Board will be responsible for the fees of pupils attending schools outside the municipality, providing the subjects cannot be taken at the local school then the parents of the pupils attending schools outside the municipality must be responsible for the fees of such pupils.

Dr. Montemurro and V. C. Johnston addressed council re matter of relief.

Council decided to adopt daylight saving time for the summer and authorized the Reeve to issue a proclamation for the observance of same, for the period April 25 to Sept. 26.

The following accounts were passed for payment: H. Alan, $9.00; Geo. Duller, $18.00; W. Leslie, $13.50; F. McClintock, $39.90; J. Morrison, $9.50; Thos. Farrell, $4.00; D. A. Hewgill, $13.60; C. H. Falconer, $16.50; C. Cantelon, $41.00; Cooksville Dairy, $1.00; L. M. Ramsay, $5.00; Dadds Bread, $1.92; H. Lee, $4.00; Carload Groceterias, $26.25; MacPherson Store, $1.29.

Members of the Legion waited on Council and offered their assistance in arranging a fitting celebration for Coronation day, May 12. After discussing the matter it was decided to ask all organizations in the village to appoint a representative to act on a central committee who would have power to organize and carry out a suitable celebration for the day. Council will give their full co-operation to project.

There being no further business council adjourned.

Snider's

The "Brighten the Corner" Mission Band of Wesley Church held a special meeting in the S.S. room on Wednesday during the Easter holidays to which the mothers and friends were invited. Several potted plants and Easter lilies decorated the room and a picture of Miss M. Scrimgeour, the missionary adopted by the band, was placed on the piano. The president, Miss Phyllis Fish, presided during the opening exercises. The worship service was conducted by the leader, Mrs. E. F. Wilson. The A.B.C. of Missions, a missionary play, was presented by several members in costume. Alfred Bentley, dressed as a herald, with trumpet, announced each representative from the different countries as they entered. Those taking part were Phyllis Fish, Connie Thomas, Eva Pickering, Barbara Royle, Dorothy Post and Wallace Pickering. Shirley Pickering, suitably garbed, recited the story of a tailor in India. "Jesus Loves Me", sung in Japanese, by all the members was a feature of the programme. Rev. Mr. Lovering, who was present, spoke a few words of encouragement. Miss Betty Dunn, Islington, played the accompaniment for the singing. The leader was ably helped by her assistant, Miss Eileen Pickering. The funds in the treasury were augmented by four dollars. Sandwiches, cookies and cocoa were served after the meeting to all present, numbering fifty.

On Sunday afternoon at Wesley Church, Mr. F. A. Forster, received congratulations and best wishes from fellow members on attaining his eightieth birthday. Mr. Forster occupied his former seat at the organ and the congregation were delighted to hear the sound of his familiar touch on the keyboard and also to hear his tenor voice in the last hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee." The other hymns were "How Firm a Foundation" and "Holy, Holy, Holy" chosen by himself. During the course of the service Rev. Mr. Lovering conveyed the thanks of the congregation to Mr. Forster for his years of faithful work in Wesley church and best wishes for the future. Mr. Forster still plays the piano in the Sunday School and takes an active part in the Bible Class.

Miss Evelyn Lunau, R.N., who underwent an operation for removal of the appendix in Guelph hospital, is now recuperating at her home, base line.

Miss Lillian Sibbald has returned to her home in Norwich after spending the Easter recess with relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Fish entertained after four o'clock on April 4th in honor of the eightieth birthday of Mrs. Fish's father, Mr. F. A. Forster. About fifty guests of the family connection were present. Among those who attended were Dr. and Mrs. J. M. Forster, Oakville; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. L. Forster, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. F. Haines, Cheltenham; Mr. and Mrs. W. Duke, Mono Mills; Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Lunau, Oakville, and Mrs. J. T. Walker, Sask.

Miss Lillian Sibbald and Miss Grace Fish attended the concert at Massey Hall last week, given by the Secondary Schools of Ontario during the O.E.A. convention.

We are pleased to report that Mrs. G. Bentley, who has been ill at the home of her sister, in Port Credit, was able to be brought home on Thursday last.

Codfish Distinguished by Five Prominent Fins

Although the papa codfish is in no wise admired for his beauty, he can be distinguished by his five fins—three dorsal and two anal, plus a barbule which is found beneath his pugnacious chin. A barbule, by the way, is the fish equivalent of a whisker, notes a writer in the Boston Herald. Sometimes this denizen of the deep attains a weight of 100 pounds; but even in smaller size he is in demand for both the market and the table. The roe of the mama cod has been estimated to contain from 4,000,000 to 9,000,000 eggs, thus indicating a reproductive power intended to provide a supply far in excess of our present-day needs.

The cod is found all over the north Atlantic and in Arctic seas, but he has never been known to wander into the Mediterranean or other semi-tropical waters. Rocky coasts, submarine ledges and sand-banks appeal to him and he seems to frequent them most. He also likes the cool green depths and the largest of his kind are found in 25 or 50 fathoms of water (150-300 feet, to landlubbers).

Despite his sacredness, the cod has a very ungentlemanly voraciousness and lives only to eat. The more he eats the better he likes it, and small fish, soft-shelled sea delicacies and other tender morsels of the sea serve to satisfy his ravenous appetite.

Halley's Comet So Named for English Astronomer

Halley's comet was so named for Edmund Halley, English astronomer, notes the Indianapolis News. He discovered that the orbits of the comets of 1531 and 1607 were similar to that of 1682, which he himself observed, and thereupon concluded they were the same. He predicted the comet's return about 1758, and called upon posterity to record and verify his prediction. It arrived at perihelion on March 12, 1759.

Investigation showed many references to the periodic appearance throughout the Christian era. In 1835 it returned, and was next expected in 1910. While yet some 300,000,000 miles distant, it was photographed on September 11, 1909, by Professor Wolf of Heidelberg. For months afterward it was invisible to the eye; later it developed rapidly and was a spectacular object when it reached its greatest brilliance in May, 1910.

Fame of Ferdinand de Lesseps

November 19, 1805, saw the birth of Ferdinand, de Lesseps at Versailles, says Pearson's London Weekly. He was educated for the diplomatic service, in which he was engaged for many years. In 1854 he produced a scheme for a canal across the Isthmus of Suez. He obtained a concession, a company was formed, and in 1860 the work began. Nine years later the canal was completed, and de Lesseps became honored and famous.

But in 1888 he undertook the construction of a Panama canal. From the beginning everything went wrong. The funds were grossly mismanaged, while malaria and yellow fever killed off the workmen. In 1892 de Lesseps and the directors were brought to trial for betrayal of trust. De Lesseps was sentenced to five years' imprisonment, and though the sentence was soon quashed, he died, ruined and broken-hearted, on December 7, 1894.

Gold Discovery in Alaska

Gold was first discovered in Alaska in 1848 in the gravels of Kenai river by P. P. Doroshin, a Russian mining engineer, who was then making an examination of the mineral resources of the district for the Russian-American company. In 1850 and 1851 Doroshin, with a working force of 14 men, prospected the gravels of two streams entering Kenai river between Kenai and Skilak lakes and those of a third stream tributary to the latter lake. Gold was found nearly everywhere in the gravels examined, but not in commercial quantities.

The Great Dismal Swamp

The Great Dismal swamp, a unique natural feature located near Portsmouth and Norfolk, is one of the attractive spots of Virginia. Once the rendezvous of pirates, highwaymen and runaway slaves, and later infested by moonshiners, the swamp has much of interest. One of its canals was dug by order of George Washington, who planned development of the area. It is a wild morass, the home of deer and bears, and there is virgin timber still standing.

We Don't Know All!

To assume the pose that we are above mistakes is absurd; better far admit most frankly it we occupy a prominent position before the public, that we make mistakes, many of them, and we expect to go on making them so long as we live. This will dispose of any claim to infallibility, but it will place us on much firmer ground, and help men to realize that we are just as human as they. This, in itself, does not alienate men, but rather draws them to us.

Early Transiantic Travel

Early transatlantic fares did not include food at all but simply transportation and water. In those times passengers had to bring their own supplies, usually consisting of crackers, ham and similar nonperishables. In 1790, a 270-ton ship carrying 400 transatlantic passengers, only two kettles, each containing three gallons, comprised the total cooking equipment for passengers.

Love Huntress

By H. GLYNN-WARD

Claudia Townsend meets Dick Whalen at a hockey game in Seattle one night. Her interest in Dick infuriates Wallace Bornell, a rich young lumberman, who wants to marry her. Wallace, determined to get Dick out of the way, offers him a job with Mr. Braddock, manager of one of his lumber camps in British Columbia. Claudia, meanwhile, persuades her father to give Dick a job in his office. To settle the matter, she and her father go to Victoria for a few days. Claudia wires Dick on Friday to tell him that the job is his, but when the telegram comes, Bornell manages to intercept it.

CHAPTER III.

When Dick received no word from Claudia that night, he went gloomily up to bed. There was a faint hope, of course, that she might send word in the morning.

In the morning, however, there was nothing in his box.

Then Bornell telephoned. "What, no word from the lady fair?" he asked in a bantering tone. "Come, come, Dick, better give it up and say you'll go up north for me? Oh, by the way—we're prepared to pay your fare if you stay till spring. . . Why, certainly, Dick. That's all right, old fellow. . . . Now, be down at the depot at 12 o'clock sharp for the Vancouver train, won't you?"

Dick Whalen turned away from the telephone booth disconsolately. He had committed himself to Bornell's offer.

Even then, he waited until the last possible minute. Finally he had to call a taxi to get himself and his grips to the station.

"Nothing for me yet?" he asked as he paid his bill at the desk.

"Nothing at all, sir," was the answer.

Dick told the manager to hold any letters for him until he forwarded an address. Then he went to the station to meet Braddock and they boarded the north-bound train.

They took the night boat out of Vancouver, going up the British Columbia coast to Prince Rupert. Lovely as the voyage was, Whalen tramped the deck in lonely boredom.

Every beat of the propeller was taking him farther away from the girl who had played havoc with his senses. He had given her his entire trust, and now— she had let him down.

• • •

Braddock, unlike Dick, was in a gay mood. He was a big, paunchy man, with a fleshy, hairless face, and small eyes. He spent most of his time in the smoking-room, playing poker and drinking.

Whalen preferred the open deck and sea wind, but he could not altogether escape conversation with this man who was to be his immediate chief. The Bornell lumber interests naturally came up as a subject of talk.

"Some of the biggest holdings in North America," Braddock said.

"What particular kind of timber are you taking out now up at Burns Lake?" Dick asked.

"The best of it is blue spruce," Braddock told him.

"For aeroplanes?"

"Sure! The best blue spruce on the continent is shipped from our camps up there."

He was glad to have a newcomer to impress with his importance. Dick listened politely.

At Prince Rupert they took the train, a two-day journey up the valley of the Bulkley River, to Burns Lake. It was a lonely country, snowbound now, of mountains, forests, and frozen lakes.

• • •

Burns Lake boasted two or three general stores, a garage, and some offices, but the village life centered round the one inn. Here Dick and Braddock were to spend the night. In the morning a sleigh would take them to the camp, which lay some ten miles out.

Dick breathed in the frosty air and felt exhilarated in every nerve. He bought himself a thick knitted jersey, a mackinaw coat, a fur cap, high loggers' boots and a stock of thick socks.

He took only necessities with him when they started out before the sun was up in the morning.

With Dick's adoption of regular lumberjack's address, he noticed that Braddock's manner underwent a subtle change towards him. It was "Whalen" now, without the "Mister."

The fast horses took them easily along a trail which led through a seemingly endless forest. At last they came to great logged-off stretches showing that they were drawing near to the camp. Then they reached the camp itself.

A lumber camp was no novelty to Whalen and he sized this one up as a large, prosperous one. There were the usual buildings—cook-house, the bunk-house, office tool-shed, barns for the horses, barns for their feed and store-sheds.

"Guess we'll put you on to scaling," Braddock told Dick.

"Very well, sir, but I haven't done it for some time."

"Well, we'll see how you get along at it. You go out with the boys this afternoon and get wise to what we are doing here. Whalen. When they come in to dinner I'll see the man that's scaling now and put him onto something else."

"How far off are they working at present?"

"Most of 'em across the lake. We have all o' 40 men here. There's a corp'a teams coming in now with fat loads'"

• • •

Whalen sauntered out to watch teams come up dragging their huge loads of poles. The lumber was first class, evenly matched and straight.

It was almost noon, so he went over to the cook-house. There he found the inevitable Chinese cook, with a white helper. He watched the cook bearing out great dishes of steaming meat and potatoes.

"You have lots to do here, John!" he said presently to the cook.

The Chinese cook looked back nervously, then smiled amiably at him.

"Oh, yes, yes, heap plenty work here! You come stay, yes?"

"Sure. Looks like a good camp."

The Chinese chuckled. "Maybe," he said.

Dick raised his eyebrows questioningly. When a Chinaman says maybe, he usually means no! But just then the crew trooped in and the cook hurried off..

They were a tough-looking lot, Dick concluded as he glanced round him—men with scarred faces and furtive eyes. They took little notice of him beyond a first curious glance.

After dinner Dick donned snowshoes and went off with the others to a wide ridge where the rest of the teams were working. There were piles of lumber ready to be loaded.

This was the valuable stuff, Dick saw at once, the precious blue spruce that Braddock had spoken about.

It was a busy scene. This would be rather a jolly adventure, Dick told himself, if only his mind were at rest about Claudia.

Next day Dick was cornered by a man called Moriarty, the man whom he had displaced as scaler.

"You got nerve," the man snarled. "Comin' up here an' buttin' in like this?"

The words were nasty, and the man's jaw was thrust forward close to Dick's.

Dick turned on him quickly.

"If you got any kick coming, go to the boss. I take a job that's offered if it suits me. I don't want any trouble with you, but if you're looking for a fight, you'll get it!"

War Brought Trade Boost

Port of Halifax — 900 Vessels Called in 1778-1781 Period

HALIFAX. — Nine hundred seagoing vessels of all descriptions entered the port of Halifax during the American War of Independence period between July, 1778, and November, 1781, according to Provincial Archivist D. C. Harvey in his annual report tabled with the Nova Scotia Legislature.

The original list of ships, giving the names of the crews and the passengers carried, is now in the Archives here. It was published as part of the annual report, "for the light it throws upon Nova Scotian sea-borne trade during the middle years of the American War of Independence when the headquarters of the British army were in New York and Halifax was the commercial emporium of British North America."

An analysis of the list of vessels shows that Lunenburg, Liverpool, Chester, Yarmouth and Barrington kept up most frequent communications with Halifax. During the period, Lunenburg ships made 286 round trips, while Liverpool craft followed with 124.

"Halifax itself seems to have done little more than send out an occasional vessel to fish, to transport hay or to carry despatches," the report comments.

The list further "illustrates the extent to which prizes of war that had been condemned in the vice-admiralty court were utilized as the nucleus of a shipping fleet in the outlying ports before shipbuilding became an industry in the province.

"It will be seen from this list that 70 prizes or recaptures were sent out from Halifax to various ports, chiefly in Nova Scotia and the West Indies, but also to Quebec, Newfoundland, London, Glasgow and even to Madiera, and Azores and Gibraltar. It should be noted also that the first vessel to leave the province on a whaling voyage was a prize ship, the brig 'Jenny' under Stephen Atwood."

You Bet Your Life

Writes the Vancouver Sun:— If a man were to bet $17,000,000 against $1 that he could toss a booklet into the air, and catch it as it falls, he certainly would be thought to be foolish.

He probably would win, but the small gain would not be worth the huge risk.

By the same token, the pedestrian who risk all the remaining minutes of his life just to save a single minute by crossing the street recklessly, is an exceedingly foolish man.

In a booklet, "You Bet Your Life" that it has just issued, a prominent insurance company uses the above illustration, among others to demonstrate the folly of gambling with your life.

Urges Co-operation In Making Home

D. G. McCullagh, of University Department, Speaks On Matrimony

Toronto.—The foundation of a happy married life is built on understanding co-operation and the sharing of confidences, D. G. McCullagh of the department of social science, University of Toronto, told the class at Central Y.M.C.A. taking the course in education for marriage and parenthood.

Man should realize when contemplating marriage, if he is not independently wealthy, that he will have to give up certain things to some extent and he should ask himself whether he is prepared to give these up for love and affection. "If you don't feel that you can pay the price of marriage don't get married," asserted Mr. McCullough.

Mr. McCullough suggested the interested couple should make a study of one another's expenditures before entering any contract.

Mr. McCullough saw no reasons why a bride should not continue going to business if she so wished.

"It grieves me to learn that many men refuse to discuss financial matters with their wives," said Mr. McCullough. "Many men after the first week of marriage will give their wives $12 or some such sum a week, but never a word as to what it is for. If you are not going to treat your wife as an equal it is time to snap out of it.

"If you don't have an understanding in a year or so your wife will just tolerate you and you will be bound together by your children."

He advised that however humble the home was during the first five-year period it was preferable to sharing it with in-laws. "A man likes to be able to come home and take off his coat and sit down and talk alone with his wife without relatives or someone else being present," he said.

A Town Rent Collector

The town council cannot exercise too much care in selecting a man to see after the collection of the rents of the 156 houses now on their hands. These rents have to be paid, and the men applying for this position may as well know what they will have to do, and what will be expected of them.

Woman's World

By Mair M. Morgan

GOES OVER BIG

When you take three very delicious foods such as coconut, custard and pie and put them all together with capital letters, you can't help but get something special such as Coconut Custard Pie. Because each part of this three-in-one dessert is a delicious food in itself, it is three times as good when all are served together.

It certainly goes over big with everyone from father to the children and their expressions of pleasure when they find Coconut Custard Pie is on the day's menu, are very genuine. It is one of those desserts which are a delight to behold. It will not upset young digestions and is good for growing children because there is real food value and nourishment in this dessert.

Be sure that your ingredients are the best and particularly the coconut. If it is not fresh and moist, the whole flavor of the pie will be ruined. Fresh, moist, tender coconut can be purchased from your grocer in sealed cartons or tins and only the freshest coconut can make the pie taste right. When you know this secret, you will find Coconut Custard Pie much in demand in your household so be prepared to make it often and well.

Coconut Custard Pie

4 eggs, slightly beaten; ½ cup sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, 3 cups milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1 cup coconut, premium shred.

Line a deep 9-inch pie plate with pastry rolled 1-8-inch thick, allowing pastry to extend 1 inch beyond the edge. Fold edge back to form standrim; flute with fingers. Combine ingredients in order given. Pour into pie shell. Bake in hot oven (450° F.) 20 minutes, then decrease heat to moderate (350° F.) and bake 10 to 15 minutes longer, or until knife inserted comes out clean.

"Pep Up Fish Day"

Fish makes a tempting party dish. In the seasoning, one may attain quite appetizing effect from the use in cooking, and in sauces, of such simple seasoning agents as prepared mustard, worcestershire sauce, ketchup, chili, tabasco, onion and vegetable stock preparation, while orange and lemon, grapes, pimiento cups and olives give a range of flavor possibilities that add immeasurably to any fish under the sun.

Very little imagination is used in the average home in the saucing and serving of fish. Yet garnishing is quite a trick, and color has its importance, for food should be as enchantingly and becomingly garbed as the maples in their Fall costumes.

If you are planning a party, surprise your family and guests by serving them fish. Take two halibut steaks. Dip your steaks in finely sifted bread crumbs, seasoned with salt and pepper and a little worcester shire, and fry them in salad oil. The oil cooking is splendid, for the fish does not stick to the frying pan, does not burn or smell, and cooks and browns to perfection.

For the sauce, make a light-textured cream sauce, using two tablespoons of butter and one tablespoon of flour to two cups of milk, or one and a half cups of milk and a half a cup of cream or evaporated milk, well seasoned with salt and pepper and paprika and about a teaspoon of worcestershire sauce. If you wish to be particularly festive, add a can of shrimps, cut them fine and add to the sauce. Cooking the whole for half an hour, beating it while cooking . . with the egg beater occasionally. Garnishings can be added at will: grapes, slices of orange and lemon are appetizing.

Fish, if nicely prepared, is a dish any cook may be proud to serve. It can be used in so many ways. Fish with fish, fish with fruit, fish with crisp salad, with mushrooms, with onions and peppers and sweet herbs. Nature is not narrow-minded. She provides the fruits of the earth . . . and combined with a little imagination, fish day can be made as thrilling as a Neronian banquet.

And in addition to its ability to please our palates, fish has also the power to satisfy our thyroid glands by furnishing plenty of iodine. Sea foods are most excellent providers of this necessary element and it was even reported several years ago that the presence of salmon as an important part of the bill-of-fare of an Indian village in the Northwest was sufficient to account for their freedom from simple goitre, while throughout the surrounding country the white people, who failed to use the salmon which came up the stream to their doors, were almost all afflicted. Thus in inland regions, where simple goitre is a danger, the taste for sea food is a valuable one to cultivate and the use of it, wherever it is available, should be encouraged.

Pants Will Soon Be Conventional Costumes for Women

Russell Patterson, Artist and Designer, Believes Skirts Will Seem Outlandish in the Near Future

HOLLYWOOD—Trousers for women long ago passed the fad stage in the movie colony, but now they have the official blessing of a noted artist and designer, Russell Patterson, of New York.

"Men used to wear skirts, too," Patterson said. "The time is near at hand when skirts for women will seem as outlandish as they would now for men."

He predicts women soon will wear trousers for every phase of life, formal and informal. He said they will be adopted by business women, and presently they will be as correct for evening wear in public as they are now for morning wear in private.

"Not the present type of 'slacks'" Patterson said. "There will have to be some fancy work done. But essentially, pants are going to be the conventional costume for women, and it will be soon."

FROM GIRL TO WOMAN

GROWING girls are often sufferers from female irregularities, headache, backache or nervousness. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the vegetable tonic to give your daughter at such times. Mrs. A. Chickie of 175 Catharine St. So., Hamilton, Ont., said: "When growing into womanhood I became pale and thin, had not much appetite, suffered from headaches, pains in my back and cramps. Mother gave me Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and I took it until all feminine disturbance was corrected. Soon my appetite improved, I had better color and all pain as well as the nervous feeling disappeared. I think this 'Prescription' is a splendid medicine for growing girls." New size, tablets 50 cents, liquid $1.00.

Small Town Has Advantages

Industries are beginning to turn to the towns and small cities of Ontario as the most logical places in which to locate. For instance, the town of Hanover has just secured a branch plant of the Swift Canadian Company, St. Mary's anticipates the coming of a textile plant, and Barrie is looking to the acquisition of an aircraft factory. Nearer home, Delhi and Tillsonburg have both secured large tobacco processing plants, and it is only a few years since Simcoe acquired the American Can Company which has proved such an asset to the ton. In the past the big cities have monopolized most of the new industries, but the thoughtful industrialist today realizes that the smaller community, with low taxation and ample railway and highway facilities, offers the most attractive location. It is time that the smaller places of Ontario made known more generally their many advantages for industrial plants.—Simcoe Reformer.

10,000 Telegrams

Over ten thousand telegrams were sent by passengers on British express trains during the first year of an experimenting scheme organized by the railway companies and the post office. The majority of them probably referred to articles overlooked at the last moment.—Brantford Expositor.

Must Be Ready

Canadians and Americans are much exercised over whether it will be possible for them to keep out of a new European war, if one starts. How much more cause, then, does England have for alarm! She is not separated from Europe by 3,000 miles of ocean, but by 30-odd miles of English Channel. The airplane, as Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin has said, has made the Rhine her real frontier. Like it or not, she has to be ready for trouble.—Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph.

What's In a Name?

Every once in a while one comes across a coincidence that is intriguing. Down in New Brunswick, when Evelyn Frost was struck by a skidding car, it seemed appropriate that she should be driven to hospital by Leo Blizzard. We are not told whether the weather was stormy or not, but we were glad to conclude that persons with cold names can be warm-hearted. — Windsor Star.

School Pupils Fewer

Just recently the old stone school house a couple of miles west of Walkerton was destroyed by fire — that is to say, all the wood in it was burned and only the stone wall remained. When the school was built, sixty-odd years ago, there were 100 pupils on the roll. When the school met death by fire, its roll numbered just 20 pupils. This gives some idea of the depopulation of the rural parts that has gone on during the past half-century — Oshawa Times.

Safety In Industry

From an article on safety first principles and safety first appliances as used in modern industry it is learned that in the last twenty-five years 250,000 lives have been saved and 25,000,000 disability accidents prevented; accidents that were sure to happen if the old trends had been followed. The chance of the workman who leaves his home in the morning with a dinner pail prepared by friend wife arriving home again to tell her how it tasted, is today just twice what it was twenty-five years ago. Too bad highways couldn't be put in the industry class. — Port Arthur News-Chronicle.

THE EMPIRE

A Depressing Outlook

The birth rate has fallen so low as barely to replace the existing population, and more people are leaving the country than are entering it. The living, swelling and fertilizing human stream of earlier years is settling in a pool of stagnation. This is impressively shown in the latest official statistics. In the nine months ended September 30, the latest figures available, the estimated increase of pakeha population was only 1,438, or .09 per cent. No impulse toward growth and expansion is discernible here, and, if immigration is put off into an ideal future, then the Dominion's days of progress are done. Mr. Savage (the Prime Minister) hopes however, "to make New Zealand prosperous enough and solid enough to attract immigrants." All will wish that day may speedily come, but meanwhile New Zealand is losing more people than she gains. The latest official figures show that, in the eight months ended November 30, permanent departures numbered 2,507 and permanent arrivals 1,696, a loss on balance of 811. In other words, three persons went away for every two that came to stay. The way out of this population dead-end will not be found by waiting for the good time coming. Might not well-planned immigration lessen rather than increase unemployment? — Auckland News.

Genius Likely To Be Husky

Gifted Children Grow Faster Than the Average

NEW YORK. — A genius in the popular conception, is a hothouse product. Frail, thin, nervous, he never can be pictured gracefully balancing on skis or at home on the tennis court.

Relatives pamper him; the public regards him as a museum piece.

But Professor Harvey W. Zorbaugh, who directs the New York University clinic for social adjustment of the gifted, has come to his rescue.

Contrary to the public notion, he says, the individual with leanings toward genius is well-rounded and likely to possess superior physical development.

Gifted children, he says, grow faster than average, walk earlier, sit up sooner and are larger than normal.

Gifted children, he says, walk on the palms of their hands and soles of their feet like a bear—at an age when other children are crawling about on hands and knees.

Not all "bearwalking" children will be geniuses, nor do all geniuses "bearwalk" in infancy. Surveys made by Dr. Ales Hrdlicka of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington merely show that "bearwalkers" are more likely to have great mental superiority.

Gifted children not only display mental aptitude along one line, but rate higher than average in all types of intellectual tests.

They play amicably with other children, often stepping into leadership in group games.

"Fire-Bug"

SARNIA.—Police are patrolling the St. Clair River front here following a series of fires which investigators term the work of a "fire-bug."

Discovery of some oily waste, apparently taken from the journal boxes of railway freight cars near the scene of the outbreaks, prompted Inspector E. L. Jordan and Investigator P. S. D. Harding of the Ontario Fire Marshal's Department to express on opinion the fires were of incendiary origin and the work of one person.

The fires broke out at intervals. Three occurred in the yards of the Laidlaw Belton Lumber Company and caused damage estimated at $2,000. Others were in the old Grand Trunk freight shed, in a small frame building owned by Samuel Lampel and a sixth in the Sarnia Ice Company's horse barn. All occurred within two hours.

Last Winter Mail

CHURCHILL.—The mail man headed for the Arctic this week.

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police dog team left here with a full load of first-class mail for many northern outposts, including the British Canadian Arctic expedition now wintering at Repulse Bay, on the Arctic Circle at the top of Hudson Bay.

This will be the last mail delivered to the north from here until a boat sails for northern ports about Aug. 1.

Farm Minister Acts Also As Pilot

QUEBEC.—Hon. Bona Dussault, Quebec Minister of Agriculture, has no intention of confining his activities to the soil, he declares.

The Minister is a steamer pilot by profession and plans to pilot the steamship Manchester Port up the St. Lawrence to Montreal when she arrives from overseas in a few days.

"It will give me a rest," the pilot-legislator said.

Radio-Phone For Ships

OTTAWA.—To cope with perils of navigation on the Great Lakes the Government is seeking to have radio-telephone stations installed between the Head of the Lakes and Kingston, Lieut.-Commander C. P. Edwards, Chief of Air Services, announced here.

Ships which do not feel they can afford a wireless operator to carry on wireless code transmission probably would be willing to instal telephone equipment if there were telephone stations easily reached on shore, Mr. Edwards said. A regular operator would not be necessary and any member of the ship's crew could call for help in time of emergency.

Canada's War Memorial

OTTAWA. — The National War Monument will be erected in Ottawa some time this summer, Works Minister Cardin told the House of Commons this week.

The monument, the work of the March brothers, has been completed in England for many months. One reason for not bringing it to Ottawa has been the conflicting views on where it should be erected here. The Minister said the Government "will have to make up its mind pretty quick because it will be erected some time this summer."

The monument probably will be placed in Connaught Square, in the downtown section of the city, which eventually will be a wide plaza.

Threaten Strike in May

LONDON.—Autobus conductors and drivers theeraten to clog the Coronation machinery by calling a strike for early in May unless their present 8-hour working day is cut to 7½ hours. Ernest Bevin, General Secretary of the Transport Workers' Union, confirmed his organization had given the bus company a month to make up its mind. Employers indicated a willingness to discuss the matter, and it was believed a crisis would be averted.

Merits of Latin

TORONTO.—Attacking the proposed courses of study for secondary schools on the grounds that Latin was not included as a first-year subject, Prof. C. B. Sissons of Victoria College charged that the revised courses were the greatest propaganda for private schools that had been promoted "in our day."

It would be turning back the hands of the clock" if the program went into operation in its present form, he maintained, craving the right for a school Principal to be allowed to choose between Latin and French in the first year.

Dr. George F. Rogers, Chief Inspector of Secondary Schools, replied it was likely permission would be granted to substitute Latin for French if a teacher craved it. But he did not think it would be a good thing to do.

"We are not trying to kill Latin but to help it. We are trying to keep away from it a lot of pupils who are not congenitally disposed to Latin. A classics man, a principal not far from Toronto, tried out the experiment and found that the pupils in the second year made more progress in Latin because they were a selected group," Dr. Rogers said.

The plan is to make French a compulsory subject in the first year; then in the second year, if the pupil has a taste for languages, he may take Latin.

45 Hotels, 12 Clubs Lose Beer License

Continued Violation of Rules Despite Warnings Given As the Reason.

Forty-five hotels and twelve clubs will not be allowed to renew their beer and wine licences, it was announced April 1st by Chairman E. G. Odette of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario.

Continued violation of rulings of the board, despite numerous requests and warnings that regulations be strictly regarded, causes the cancellation of the authorities of most of the hotels, Mr. Odette stated.

Decision of the board, after careful study, that the clubs were being operated, "for purely pecuniary gain" caused cancellation of club authorities, he said.

In the case of a "very few" of the hotels, applications for renewals will be considered if structural changes of the premises are made.

The hotels are scattered over a wide area, ranging from Timmins and Sault Ste. Marie to Eastview and Thorold. The complete list, as released by Mr. Odette, follows, listed alphabetically under their municipalities.

Would Avoid Future Blasts

U. S. Authorities — Whole Nation Follows Quiz in Texas

NEW LONDON, Texas. — The blast which killed 455 school children and teachers here has made the nation explosion-conscious.

Governmental and schol authorities throughout the nation have resolved that those deaths shall not be in vain.

The military court of inquiry in session 200 feet from the scene of the catastrophe said at the outset of its hearing its purpose was not to fix responsibility on some person or persons, but to determine the cause if possible so a recurrence might be prevented.

Henry Wallace, secretary of agriculture, authorized Dr. David J. Price, nationally famed explosion expert with the Bureau of Chemistry, to assist in the investigation. Dr. Price took an active part in the questioning of witnesses.

From Chicago came William R. Mecklind, supervising engineer for the board of education there. He said he was sent here to learn all he could about the disaster so he might determine if any corrective action was needed in the nation's second largest city.

Marvin Hall, Texas fire insurance commissioner, and several members of his department were listening to the testimony. The State Department of Education sent Fred Horne, its superintendent of plant construction.

Dr. E. P. Schoch, gray-haired University of Texas chemistry professor, who has been investigating explosions for 20 years, came at the request of Governor James V. Allred of Texas to assist the military court.

Home-Made Biscuits Are Still In Favor

NEW YOR—The old feminine wile of intriguing a man with home-made hot biscuits, in line with the maxim about "the best way to a man's heart," is back in style in the United States.

So say the six women contenders for this year's title of "national cooking champion," at the Women's National Exposition of Arts and Industries.

"The "best woman cook in the nation" will be named after a "cook-off" by teams of two in a model kitchen. Three of the six finalists who won regional contests for submitting well-balanced "average American menus" are in their twenties.

Canada Will Enter Show At Glasgow

OTTAWA—Canada will be represented in the British Empire Exhibition to be held in Glasgow in 1938, the Department of Agriculture disclosed recently.

The Canadian pavilion was one of the outstanding features to be seen at the last great show held at Wembley in 1924-25, it said. Huge crowds are expected to witness the Glasgow show, for, with better facilities in transportation the 1901 record at Glasgow of 11,000,000 visitors will be greatly surpassed, said the department.

Water Supplies

Should Be Tested In the Spring—Especially In Rural Districts

TORONTO. — With the coming o' Spring, attention should be given to school water supplies. There are 631 rural and 319 urban public schools in Ontario. The Separate schools number 588 of which 470 are rural. Thus there are in all, 6101 rural schools in the Province. In most of the rural schools the water supply comes from a well in the school grounds. There may be ample opportunity for pollution of the well water.

The startling history of illness and death in a family in the vicinity of the little town of Madoc, where a farmer and his four children died presumably of arsenical poisoning as a result of the use of water from the farm well; where the farmer's wife and later the deceased's brother suffered from prolonged illness, due to the same cause, is detailed in current issue of the Canadian Health Journal, by Prof. Wyllie. In the case referred to , the source of arsenic resided in the porous rocks through which the ground water filtered to reach the well. The water was bright, clear and sparkling. It had no visible impurities. Examination disclosed the presence of arsenic in considerable quantities.

Occurrences of this particular kind are said to be extremely rare. Unfortunately there is not a similar rarity in the occurrence of disease, such as typhoid fever, carried by well water. All that are needed to start a conflagration are a local source of infection, the spring sluicing and the well water is polluted.

There are ample facilities in Ontario for the examination of school water supplies. There are public health laboratories in all quarters of the Province whose business comprises the examination, without expense, of public water supplies. It is the job of the local health officer to protect the children of the community he serves. The health officer should obtain a supply of containers from the nearest public health laboratory carefully take samples of the well water of every school in his municipality and send the samples to the laboratory for examination. If, after all this warning, the health officer fails to do his duty in this respect, it is time that another health officer should succeed the delinquent one.

More Kissing Need Of Modern Home

Affection Between Parents, and Parents and Children Is Essential For Mental Health.

TORONTO. — "It is better to have a cold in the head than in the heart. We need to get back to the old fashion of kissing and a little more demonstration of love in the home where its stabilizing force is a great need, Dr. H. R. Brillinger of Hamilton, told the Home and School Section of the O.E.O. in an address on Mental Health and Parent Education.

In charge of one of the mental health clinics established by the government in an effort to get at the cause of mental disease in the province, Dr. Brillinger stated that close to 60 per cent. of all mental illness is believed to originate because of bad mental habits or unhealthy ways of thinking. Many people meet almost incuperable life difficulties and overcome them because the most of their mental habits are healthy. Others develop mental illness under relatively slight worry or strain because they are handicapped by an unwieldy load of unhealthy mental habits, he stated.

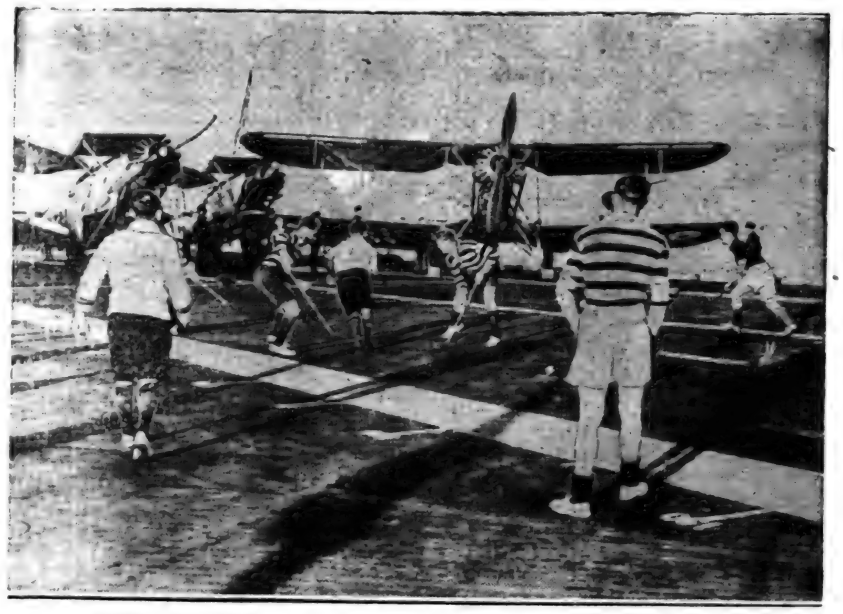
FATAL DOUBT

To prevent mental illness, a feeling of security, interest, and freedom to develop, were necessary for the child, Dr. Brillinger stated, saying that in a survey in mental work, he had found that while children usually admit they love their parents, very few are sure when asked if their parents love them. The answer he invariably gets is that they do not know. It is not enough that their physical needs be provided for. They need demonstration of affection, praise recognition and encouragement for healthy development, he stated, condemning for its evil effects on the child, parents' quarrels and threats to leave each other. Security in discipline was recommended to eliminate possibility of hatred and defiance.

"There is nothing youth needs so much, today, as an active interest in healthy realities. This can best be stimulated by success and praise. One of the parents' most important functions is to give the child plenty of success and praise and keep him busy, allowing him responsibilities in the family routine and making him feel a necessary part of the home," Dr. Brillinger averred.

RESPONSIBILITY IMPORTANT

Many parents, he said, hate to see their children grow, building up strong emotional bonds calculated to keep the child close to them always. There are a host of mental patients in our hospitals today because they have developed habits of over-dependence By all means, parents should encourage their children to take responsibility as soon as they are able, thus developing self-assurance, leadership and backbone, and security and mental health.



Describing the modern home as an area covering fifty miles in any direction, Mrs. B. W. Langworthy, President of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers of the United States, spoke on the home as an index to national life at luncheon preceding the afternoon session.

Honesty, courtesy, common decency and hospitality were among certain things that, if not learned in early life in the home were never learned the speaker affirmed. Hospitality should not mean entertaining the bridge club twice a year, but a welcome for the child's friends that he brings home. If there isn't enough food to go round, say so frankly, she advised, and have the children share what there is equally. Of courtesy, she said: "We are so discourteous to children that it is a wonder they ever learn any courtesy. The only way to teach them in on a fifty-fifty basis."

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

Put Your Pictures to Work

INASMUCH as the purpose of a photograph is to be looked at, did it ever occur to you that keeping prints of lovely pictures in a desk drawer, in a box or on the shelf of a closet, as too many amateurs do, utterly defeats that purpose. To be sure, they may be taken out once in a while to show to friends, but, as far as giving pleasure is concerned, the pictures might as well never have been taken, if they are kept out of sight. Even when mounted in a photo album, they are not allowed to do the full duty that they might.

Of course, it is impractical to keep all your prints constantly in view, but why not keep some of the choice ones out in the open and at the same time beautify your home? Having them enlarged and framed is one obvious way, but here are three more ideas for doing this which are not difficult to execute and which will afford you continuous pleasure in wholesale fashion.

Do you remember the fad for trays lined with cigar bands back about 1905? The modern and certainly much more dignified variant of that scheme is a "photo tray" with a design worked out in your best snapshots. The prints are mounted on a board beneath the glass cover. Any amateur craftsman can do such a job easily. There is a fascinating evening's work in selecting the prints and arranging patterns. It is a challenge to your ingenuity and artistic taste. If you happen to be a hobbyist in flower pictures, you can use them to make a flower design of great beauty.

Another idea is to make a "photo-lampshade." Prints or enlargements should be made on single weight paper and pasted on the shade as your artistic ideas dictate. Better for this is to have your negatives or enlargements printed on the special translucent photographic paper that is coated with emulsion on both sides and practically produces a transparency.

Another and somewhat more elaborate way to keep your pictures in view is to make a snapshot bedroom screen. Contact prints or enlargements are trimmed to a uniform size and paste-mounted on panels fitted into the screen frame. This idea is capable of infinite variations. The screen can be a veritable family history in snapshots or it can tell of a memorable vacation, pleasure cruises or trips abroad. A big enlargement on each panel of the most significant or outstanding picture of the selection gives a striking effect.

CONTROLLING TUBERCULOSIS

Everyone knows about diseases that at one time caused great loss of life and that have been brought under control in the last thirty or forty years as a result of modern public health methods. Typhoid fever is one illustration. Twenty-five or thirty years ago, it was not uncommon for cities to have death rates from typhoid ranging as high as 60 or 75 deaths out of every 100,000 living persons; to-day, it is almost a disgrace for a city to have a death rate of more than one or two per 100,000, and in many cities rates for typhoid for the last year were less than one.

Yellow fever is another plague of a generation or two ago when whole cities were quarantined because of it.

Diphtheria, the killer of children a few years ago, is to-day becoming a rare disease. Many communities have not had a death or even a case of diphtheria in several years, thanks to modern methods of immunization against this disease.

Smallpox, that scourge and terror of our forefathers, is now seldom heard of. And so it goes, these dread diseases which once decimated the population, are now practically eliminated.

Tuberculosis is still far from being conquered, but it is encouraging to note that more progress has been made in conquering this enemy during the first thirty-five years of this century than in all the centuries that went before. The death rate in Ontario in 1900, shortly after the National Sanitarium Association was organized, was estimated at 160 per 100,000. To-day it is 37.

It is a splendid showing and with the goal in sight we hopefully enter the last lap of the race, but as everyone knows, the last lap calls for the greatest effort and if we are to succeed in gaining the complete mastery over this plague as has been gained over others, we must strive as never before.

Given the necessary financial support, the Muskoka, the Toronto and the Queen Mary Hospitals for Consumptives will continue to lead the way.

Holsteins Make Good Showing

Peel County Holstein Breeders have made a splendid showing in the early March production reports received from the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. Honey Brook Abbekerk Pontiac, a mature cow sired by Sir Artis Pontiac Plus, bred and owned in the herd of G. Percival Leslie, Georgetown, is officially reported with a year production of 21227 pounds of 3.64 per cent. milk 773 pounds fat, milked twice daily. Dewdrop Jemima Abbekerk, a four-year-old cow in the same herd, also appears in the list with a year production of 15317 pounds 3.75 per cent. milk, 574 pounds fat.

Schuiling Pontiac Dekol, a mature cow in the Credholme Farm herd at Streetsville, is also well up among the higher producing animals for the first part of the month, with a 305 day production of 15065 lbs. 3.68 per cent. milk, 554 lbs. fat, milked twice daily.

In addition to the above, there is of course the Canadian championship record of the 3-year-old Glenlonely Woodbridge Echo, owned by Roy Barker of Woodbridge, particulars of which went forward in an earlier report.

BOOK REVIEWS

William Perkins Bull, K.C., is one who when he puts his hand to the plow never turns back. Some years ago he set out to publish a history of his native Ontario county, Peel. He has kept at it, the sequel to his search and research carried on so persistently and carefully being the publication of several very fine volumes. Just now the latest has appeared under the title, "From Humming Bird to Eagle." It is a book for the bird lover, for the ornithologist, but not for the taxidermist. The author loves live birds and tells that "save for some western and maritime species, almost all Canadian birds, native and transient, have been found somewhere in Peel, at one time or another." As a reference book it cannot but have a very fine value. The wild pigeons which our fathers told us darkened the skies, the screech owl which joined with the nymphs and fairies to frighten little folks, the wild turkeys and the waterfowl are all there with a full accounting of their part and place in the life of pioneer days—and later. As with the other volumes this is issued through the Perkins Bull Foundation.

The movement had its origin in certain of the farmers' institutions and the public schools of Ohio, Illinois and Iowa in 1899, relates a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, and is now a part of the co-operative extension system of the United States Department of Agriculture and state agricultural colleges. Dr. S. A. Knapp of the federal Department of Agriculture gave it impetus at the time of the coming of the boll weevil by stressing the demonstration work of boys and girls in the South as a means of improving rural home conditions, and teaching diversified agriculture to meet the problem brought about by this pest.

In 1914 increased funds from federal, state and county sources stimulated the movement, which spread rapidly into all the states.

The club work of the boys and girls is promoted by county agricultural agents, home demonstration agents, county club agents, and the agricultural and home economics extension specialists of the federal and state co-operative agricultural extension system.

The club was named by O. H. Benson of Iowa, in 1904, who was at that time a county superintendent of schools.
